John Chester McNutt

For six years you were with us, an integral part of our college life. Six years is but little more than a student generation, but you have made a place among us that is becoming increasingly difficult to fill. Not all teachers have the gift of being the friends of their students. Not all teachers are blest with a winning smile backed by a personality that commands respect and obedience with a hearty good will.

Your best success is our reward; our best success is yours.

To

honored and respected by faculty and students as a teacher of men, a moulder of ideals and a friend of the college this the fourteenth volume of the Agromeck is respectfully dedicated

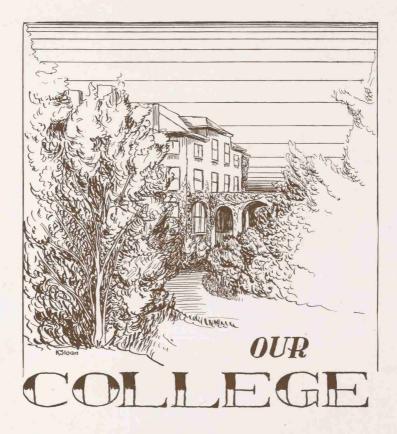

The function of a college annual is, and ever should be, an expression of the life and conditions existing at the institution which it represents. We have made it our aim to portray, not only the environment in which North Carolina men live, but also the habits and activities of those who constitute the great student body of this institution. Our goal has been to greet you with a truly representative AGROMECK.

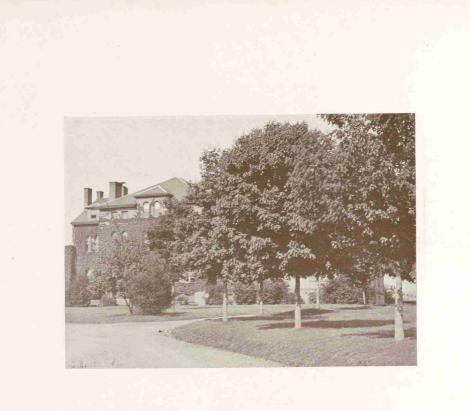

Through the Years

Through passing years our thoughts will turn To scenes we've known so long; To memories dear of college days, With boisterous yells and merry lays; To our friends—the happy throng.

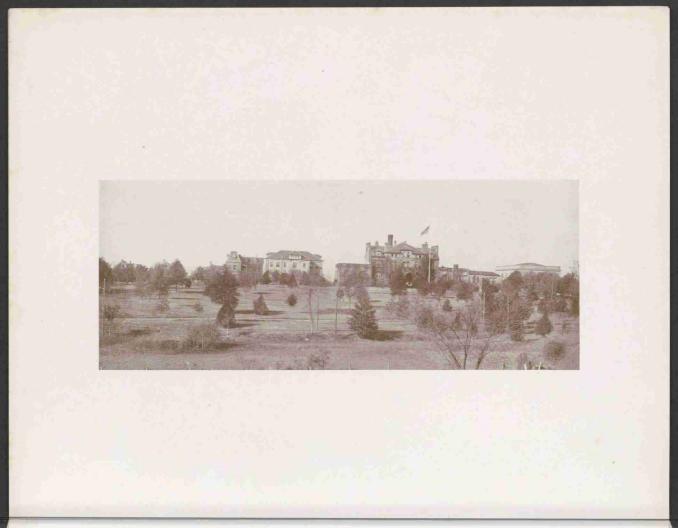

The boys, our friends, we see them still, Though many years have passed; We see the forms of those we met; Their voices linger with us yet; Fond memories of the past.

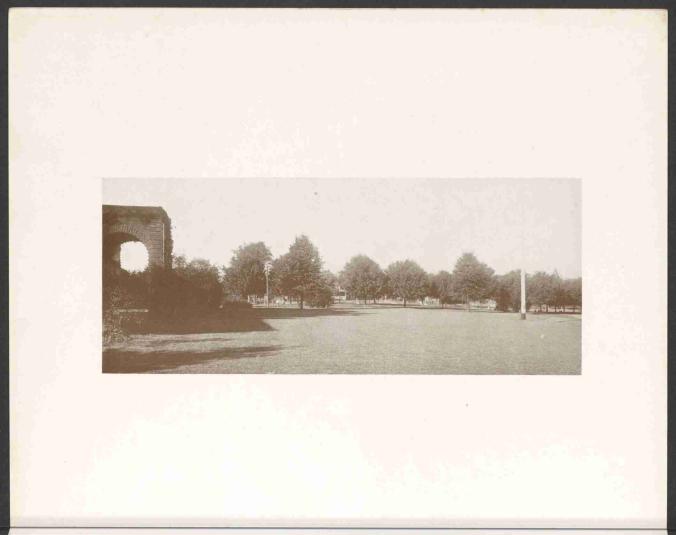

Turn back, O time, yet once again We're boys. Though old and gray, We'll live again our college days With boisterous yells and merry lays; Though years have passed away.

Senior Class Poem

AG-RO-MECK

> Four years have passed since first we sailed Out on the stormy main To gather gems from seas and isles, And priceless treasures gain.

At first our crew was large and bold, Our bark was strongly manned. We roamed to fathom every sea, And visit every land.

But ah! Alas! for every wave And every wind that blew, Some comrade's name was taken from The number of our crew.

The rocks and waves and angry tides Were ever in our realm, But strong the pilot—A. & M. Was master at the helm.

But ah! Alas! the voyage is done; We've crossed the angry tides; We know our pilot and our crew,

And other things besides.

We've known defeat and how to fail, And thoughts akin to pain,

And now we know success will come To those who try again.

Four years we've striven to gain the port With many a victory won, But now 'tis time to toll the knell; Our college days are done.

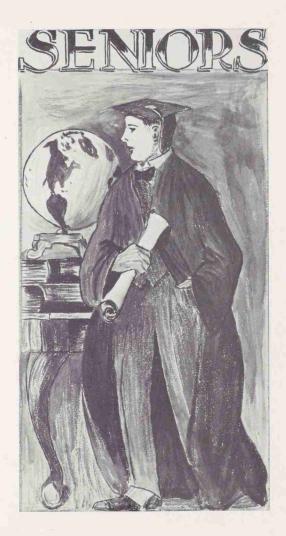

Classmates, I will not say good-bye; I only say adieu

To happy college days now passed, And turn to ventures new.

On memory's tablet wreathed with gold I shall remember you.

With love and faith go bravely on, And to yourselves be true.

POET

History of the Senior Class

September, nineteen hundred and twelve, witnessed the registration of the largest Freshman Class thus far known at the College. With trepidation we came hither, green and awkward, but with the conceit (which we soon lost) that we were already well acquainted with the province of all knowledge. Two hundred or more, we gathered together under the guidance of the Seniors then in college, and organized ourselves with the election of representative class officers. Then we entered into our collegiate career with as much zest as our homesickness would permit. Now, as we fast approach the finis of our sojourn here, it is gratifying to feel, without undue conceit, that ours is a class of which the College will ever be proud.

In the classroom, we have acquitted ourselves creditably, judging from the prominence of our men in the monthly honor reports. The fact is noteworthy that there are nearly one hundred of us here as candidates for graduation—making ours by far the largest graduating class in the history of the College.

The Class of Sixteen has been quite prominently represented on the athletic teams for the last four years. We contributed to the gridiron four great players—Cooke, Anthony, Mc-Henry, and Seifert. To the baseball team we gave three brilliant players—Winston, Russell, and Terry. We are proud to number with us Mason and Lindsay, basketball players of worth. And in track events, Millwee, Goodson, Jennette and Johnston have made enviable records.

Contrary to current reports, hazing has been suppressed during our stay here; and, generally speaking, the discipline has wonderfully improved about the campus.

In retrospect, our college career has been a pleasant experience and a most profitable one. The prospects of the future are brighter by our stay here. With the happiness of completing our studies, there goes the sadness of departing.

> Ah, we are sad to leave thee, Sad for aye to part, Sad, dear class, to leave thee, To sunder heart from heart. Ah! fare thee well, our Alma Mater, Fare thee well.

"Ab" is the youngest boy in our class. During his first years of college life he aspired to the high honor of Major, but later he decided that he had rather manage the basketball team. In this capacity he served very well, but he needed some one to remind him that his team was going away and to be sure to carry the ball. Forgetting all this, he is held in high esteem by all members of his class, and by the fair damsels in Raleigh and elsewhere. Most of us think that he is a little too extravagant with his vocabulary, though some say that his cloquent flow of words is his most coveted accomplishment. When "Keg" feels oratorically inclined he has a meeting of the Freshman Class called, and goes up to make them one of his "little talks." He does not confine his oratory altogether to the Freshman Class, either, for at Senior Class meetings his opinion on any topic under discussion is always heard, and is sometimes welcome.

Although "Cutie" hails from the land of Cole Blease you would hardly know it by judging from his college spirit. He is quiet and unassuming, and is liked the better by his classmates for being so. He is a great lover of the "quid," and we would suggest his name for the "National Order of Nauseating Chewers." His "O. D." job delights him as a toy would a child. He rarely ever talks; but when he does, he says something worth while. Another of those Raleigh boys, but never a member of the "Bushwomen," as he considers himself a perfect gentleman and somewhat of a ladies' man. He is the smallest man in the Senior Class, and when you see him going down the street with Rogers you have a perfect image of Mutt and Jeff. Baker is a hard worker and ranks near the top of his class in grades. He is one of the few C. E. Seniors who have no bad habits.

"Bake" can't be satisfied with his daily from Greensboro, but with the help of "Roachy" Robinson he entered local society. We predict dire results should this news ever get to Greensboro. But we can only hope for the best as he is an all-round good fellow, his only fault being his mania for collecting what he calls "bad debts." For further particulars concerning this mania, we refer you to "Frenchy" Williams.

"Jerry" likes a joke, and enjoys nothing better than to rag "Turp." When it comes to judging cattle he can distinguish a Holstein cow from a Jersey every time. He was a member of the intercollegiate stock judging team chosen to meet V. P. I. at Richmond. When not otherwise engaged he enjoys a game of Rook(?) with "At," "Phonny," and "Greenie."

they year, we are inclined to believe that he has lost bis hear to some member of the fair sector. We have the some sector is a some sector of the sector of the past year, we are inclined to believe that he has lost his heart to some member of the fair sex who lives in Charlotte. "Johnnie" hails from Morehead City where he spends his summers selling bathing suits and Coca Cola. He is sometimes known as "Two-per," but he says this is wrong for, instead of getting two letters per week, he gets three, and in addition to this, he has reserved the right to use the Y. M. C. A. telephone every night from eleven till eleven-thirty.

We just had to call him "Jimmie" because that was the only thing that would fit him; and besides, that is what they call him at St. Mary's. He is a good football player, and has pulled our team out of many a hard place. "Jimmie" sings as well as he plays football. He is said to be as indispensable in St. Mary's choir as he is in the main building, or in Prof. Browne's classroom. "Britt" has made many friends through his good disposition and friendly ways. After trying to convince Prof. Riddlek that three times eight is eighteen he discovered that his new system of mathematics had failed; now he is inclined to believe that it really is equal to twenty-four. In '13 he was our star on the diamond, and we regret that professionalism kept him from continuing his fine work. His advice to Freshmen is always to notice the price on the window of a picture show before asking the lady if she would like to go.

Brooks started in the Textile course, but he soon decided that farm life suited him better. He comes from the land of the sweet potato, and if there were a Chair of Sweet Potato-ology in the Faculty he would probably be chosen for it. (This is all that can be said since he refuses to permit the publication of the more intimate details of his college life.) There is not a better student in our class than this man from Stem. He is quiet, and never talks on class till he is called upon, but when he answers he is usually right, and the fellows have learned to ask "Tommy" if they want to know anything. He holds no grudge nor spite against any man, and he never dissipates more than to engage in a game of "setback" occasionally.

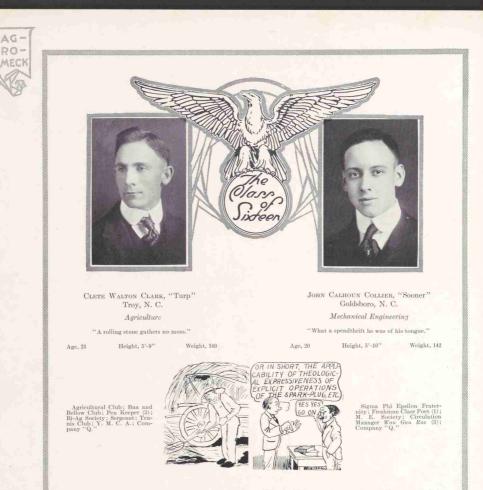

"Buck" graduated at Wake Forest in 1911, and after three years of watchful waiting he decided on a policy of Agricultural preparedness and cast his lot with the Class of 1916. When he leaves college he will be an expert in at least one thing—making out irregular schedules. He has the ability to express himself well—an accomplishment that will be of value to him in teaching or in demonstration work. This man will come nearer making you see a thing his way than any other in the class. If he cannot convince you by the argumentative method, he will some other way; and most of us prefer the argumentative method. For the last three years he has been trying to prove that he is the best outfielder in college. He came to us from Virginia, but since that state has gone dry we are in doubt as to whether he will go back.

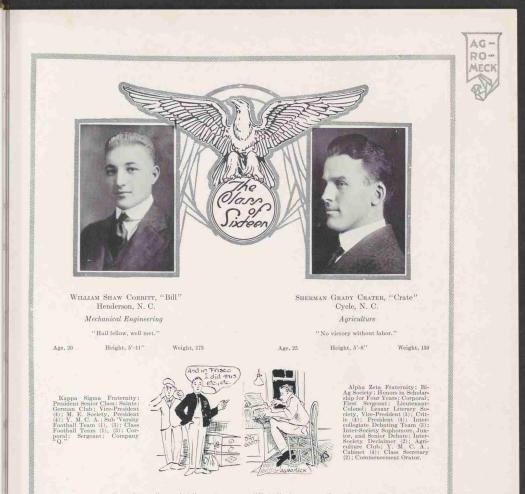

"Vie" is one of the "locals," and it has been rumored that at one time he was a member of the terrible "Bushwomen." He is naturally a smart fellow, and this, together with his "line," is responsible for the enviable record he has made in his work. He is the only representative that the Mechanical Division had on the football team, but he stayed in the game for four years.

Cherry registered a year ahead of us in Electrical, but later decided to take Civil. He is always interested in the Registrar's record of make-up work as he never lets his school duties worry him when there is anything happening in Raleigh. "Peg" is very quiet, and is rarely ever seen telling jokes, but he is always among the throng as the most enthusiastic listener when any one else has the floor. When not at the college, if you wish to find him we refer you to the Smoke House in Fayetteville street.

We do not know whether there is any moss in the wheat fields of South Dakota or in the pine forests of Alabama, but "Turp" has been there just the same. He says the principal pastime in the harvest field is to spit on a grasshopper and see him scald to death. In addition to achieving honors in college, he has done much practical work. "Sooner" is a regular member of Congress, and is given credit for having the best "line" of any man in school. He is a "king" among the ladies, and takes a lot of pride in the fact. No one loves a joke better than "Sooner," and his ready wit and keen repartee make him one of the most popular men on the campus. Taken all in all, he is a splendid fellow and as good a classmate as any one could wish.

Here is one of the best all-round fellows in our class, and for that reason we chose him to pilot us through our Senior year. He has shown himself a versatile leader in all that the class has undertaken. In addition to his quickness in his class work, he was the star of the class football games last year. His travels have been very extensive, but to the sorrow of his associates he seldom (?) ever speaks of them to any one.

"Crate" always stands well in his classes, for if there is something he does not know, he dazzles the instructors with such brilliancy of rhetoric that they mark him a 100 before they can recover. After knowing the Colonel, who says that nothing good can come out of Yadkin? As a matter of fact Yadkin grows good men if they are not very tall.

"Sammy" has distinguished himself as being the only cherry blonde among the C. E. Seniors. He has no bad habits, is a hard worker, and does not hesitate to own up to what he does not thoroughly understand. As a ladies' man he is not very well known in Raleigh, but near Wilmington we know of "two angel eyes" of which he constantly dreams. At the beginning of his Senior year, in order to get a pull with the Faculty, he attempted to establish a new rule by asking the Seniors to put out their lights after eleven p. m.

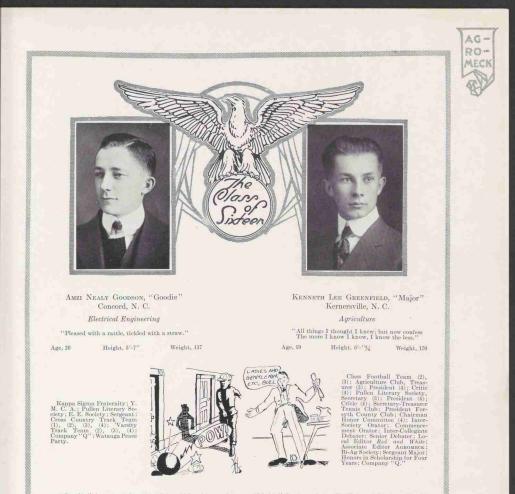

"Bob" came to us during our Sophomore year, having spent one year at the University. He at once became one of the class stars, while his weight and good head work earned him a berth on the 'Varsity Football Team. He is also musically inclined, as can be seen by visiting St. Mary's Chapel on any Sunday evening. Some say that he goes there just to see the girls, while others contend that he really can sing.

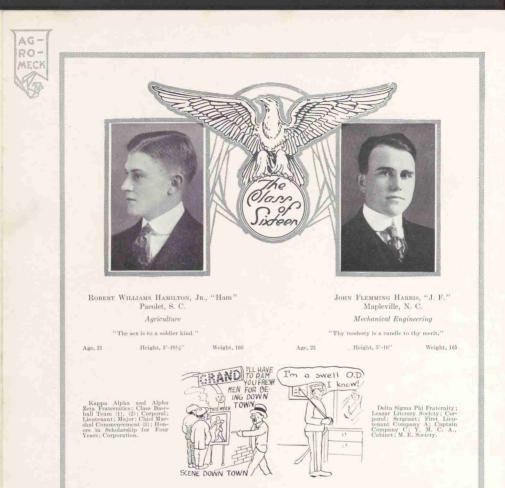

When asked where he expected to go to finish his veterinary course, John A. drew his questioner a little to one side and pointed in the direction of Farrior Stock Farm: "You see that clump of trees?" he asked in a husky voice. "Well, when I get through I am going right there." But his veterinary training will be useful when he gets to nursing those pigs and ponies. "Ned" is the champion question asker of the class. Some one conferred the title of Archimedes upon him during his Freshman year, but "Ned" fitted him better. He and "Frenchy" Williams still dispute over who won the hundred yard dash at one a.m. September 21st, but we believe the odds are with "Ned." He is also the champion strong man of the class, having astonished every one by breaking the record at shot-put with no practice at all.

"Jack," hailing from the mountainous section of the State, is a typical mountaineer in habits; but physically he is rather too small to carry out his plans without help. He believes in giving every man an equal chance no matter how many beggars there may be; and if this is done, always look for him near the front. "Jack" has never been known to speak to a girl, no matter how good looking or attractive she may be; and still we don't believe he will walk more than two blocks out of his way to keep from meeting any member of the fair sex. "Zeb" is one of our best-natured fellows. His laugh can be heard across the campus any day. He excels in any kind of practical work such as "fixing" drainage maps. He is hard to beat when it comes to stirring around and getting things done. He is a thoroughgoing sportsman and it is rumored that he expects to take a knapsack and gun and go on a camping trip soon after commencement.

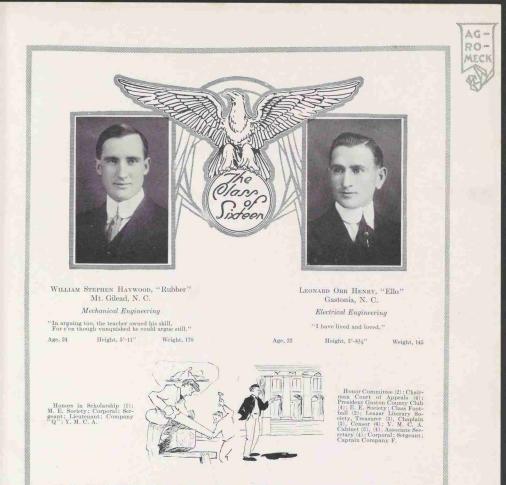

"Goodie" has won fame for himself by his untiring efforts to keep order (?) in Watauga Hall after the lights have gone out. He is also a track man, having been on the squad for the last three years. His ability is by no means measured by his size, for he is one of the smallest men on our team. "Major" is one of our hardest workers, not only in the classroom, but in the various activities of student life. He loves a joke and his keen repartee is feared by his opponents. During the earlier part of his college career he was too busy to be interested in the gayeties of the social world, but by the help of his friend Ritchie he is now moving in the stellar circles of society.

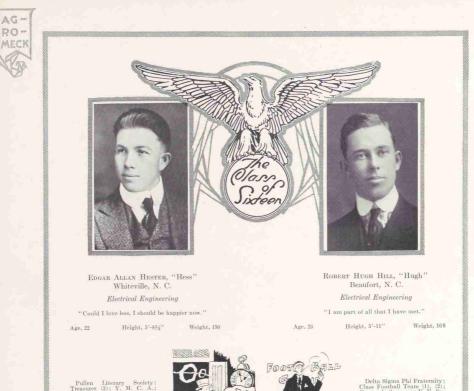

Here is a member of the "old school," a genius in all text-books, an advocate of militarism, and as good a fellow as can be found. "Ham" hails from the swampy bottoms of the Pacolet where Blease-ism reigns supreme. With India ink and bi-chloride of mercury as his toddy he wabbles the famous duckstep all about the campus. He swears by the State, his true allegience to sand-lapping.

Here is a fellow of whom it can be truly said "There is no harm in him." He is one of the besthearted fellows we have ever known, and a friend to every man on the campus. He has a particular fondness for Math., having taken each course from one to several times. Although you would never suspect it, he is quite a sport among the ladies, and can usually be seen with one or more at our different athletic contests.

"Rubber" is Prof. Ellis's right-hand man, and he has a great future before him as a mechanical engineer. He likes the school so well that he has spent five years here, but there is nothing like grim determination to pull a fellow through the hard places. He is a good student, sincere in his beliefs, and when comes twice to Sunday once. If you wish to know once he knows a thing he cannot be changed.

"Ello" enjoys the distinction of being captain of the color company of the regiment. We believe that he was enabled to win this honor, only by the aid of certain conferences held each and every Sunday night. He says that every other night in the week how cigars sell in Norfolk, ask "Ello." He knows.

"Hess" is an all-round good fellow. He claims to never have been in love, but the way he comes in at two a.m. after a trip to the city proves his statement to be erroneous. His chief occupation is writing letters to his queen, and between times he writes experiments for "Buzz." He neither smokes nor chews, and says he would not use profanity if it were not for John Williams and Tom Holmes. He is a fine student of electricity, but hydraulies is his specialty. Hugh hails from the place where they grow sailors, and a good one was spoiled when he came to college; but we are glad he came with us. He attained the honor of managership for the football team during his Senior year, and no one doubts that he did as much for the team as any one could have done. May he do as well in all he undertakes.

Ralph studies barely enough to make "ones" on all his subjects, and spends the rest of the time among the ladies. His only disappointment in college was that he did not get a captaincy so he could have a sponsor in the AGROMECK. Miss —— well, we had better not mention her name; some of the others might be offended. "Tommy" is a typical Goldsboro product—long, lean and lazy. He is especially noted for blowing his harp on every occasion. He has even been known to carry it on class in order to soothe "Buzz" when he became obstreperous. He has taken special courses at St. Mary's and at the postoffice, with electrical engineering as a side line. Still he is undecided whether to get rich making brick out of Wayne County mud or to become a burden to the engineering profession.

"Doe" is an all-round good fellow as well as one of the best students in our division. He is always in the best of humor, and is always in for anything that the rest of his classmates will do. However, he has opinions of his own, and when his mind is made up on any question he stays by his convictions till thoroughly convinced that he is wrong. The rule that nearly all heavy weights are humorous holds true in this case. "Tubby" appears never to lived as ad day, no matter if he is working calculus or walking to church on Sunday morning. There is one lesson he has mastered thoroughly this year: always to carry his calculus book on class. He hopes to prove to the Faculty in the future that a heavyweight can stand the heat of labor longer than has been predicted.

college. Not only did he dive into a marble-bottomed pool, containing six inches of water, and escape unscathed; but he succeeded so well in his campaign against noise in Watauga Hall, where he reduced the denizens of Paradise Alley into a state of submission well nigh unbelieveable, that he was sent to Main Building where he is conducting another campaign against noise and its attendant evils. In the earlier part of his college career he developed into a track star, but gave up the cinder path to devote more time to his studies. We often see him pulling off a real good joke on "Tubby," who replies with one equally as good. Every Saturday night he is due in Clayton for the purpose of relating the stories of love to one of the teachers there in the high school.

"Toey" hails from the "Land of the Sky." He has always been a faithful student, and ready at any time to render one a favor. "Promptness is a rare virtue" with him, especially at the Mess Hall. He seems to be heart whole and fancy free, but for some reason he frequently comes away from the postoffice wearing a broad smile. We wonder why. "Toey" will be heard from in the chemical world. "Vic" won fame as a track man by winning the cross country run. Our advice is never to take a Sunday afternoon stroll with him. If you do you will come back with eyes starting and your tongue hanging out—in short, he is built for speed. He is a good worker, and is much interested in live stock.

"Pee Wee" is little, but he is game to the last inch. He thinks he can do a great deal more than he really can. After taking part in all the college activities possible he finds that he has taken on more than he can manage, so he lets his studies drop. As editor of the Red and White he has shown that he is a writer of no mean ability, and as a textile student well, he was too busy to show us his real worth in that line. "Bill's" ruby hair is the pride of the Senior Electrical Class. The only thing he admits being afraid of is a girl, and even then he has been known to speak to one without his face turning redder than his hair. He is an all-round good fellow, and has never been known to do anything worse than to participate in certain mysterious midnight meetings of the Watauga Peace Party.

You can never tell what Rex is going to say next, but when he says it it is usually worth saying. It is rumored that when they have a big night up on the "Roof Garden" Rex has the biggest time of all the crowd. One would not think that he is much of a sport among the ladies, but you can never tell what a girl is going crazy about. Foremost among his qualities is his ability to attract the ladies. He likes nothing better than to visit Raleigh on Mondays and watch the parade of "fine feathers." "Blondie's" greatest trouble during his Senior year was to decide which girl he wanted for his sponsor. He has an inquiring turn of mind, and a disposition that pleases the ladies. He studies some occasionally, and makes good grades.

If there is anything "Opie" does not know about it must be girls, and right now we have our doubts about that. As business manager of the Red and White he has shown that he possesses business ability and good judgment. He has always been an enthusiastic worker for college athletics, and his work is telling in this year's basketball quint. We predict a great future for this boy. Although he hails from Providence, Rhode Island, he has as much college spirit as any of us. When it comes to celebrating a victory or "pulling off" something Charlie is usually to be found in the thick of it. As the originator and executor of our "college teas" he has been very successful. Though he has failed so far to win the coveted A. M. C. monogram, it can be said of him that he tried long and hard.

"Joe" studies fairly well, plays basketball very well, and salts down Freshmen excellently. He is a little bashful, but in spite of this he is striving to become a ladies' man, and from the letters he is taking out of his postoffice box daily, he is meeting with tolerable success. "T" Nelson says that "Joe" promises to be a prominent man in the Textile Industry, but he has too much of a "boot" on the Prof. for that statement to count for much.

"Rusty" is said to be the original discoverer that Wilmington Street leads to Peace, and later on he discovered which one leads to Meredith. He is one of the hardest workers in the class, but says that he has never been able to make as good grades as in his Sophomore year when he spent most of his time at a sister institution. There is nothing like inspiration, you know.

When the ladies see "Saps" they ask at once, "Who is that tall, handsome gentleman?" "Shorty" can't help liking them when they like him, and nothing gives him so much pleasure as to assemble a few of his friends and tell them about his love affairs. When it comes to romantic meetings with beautiful maidens, he has been there. He is much looked up to wherever he is known—that is by all under seven feet.

"Mill" is more at home in a track suit than anywhere else, and he is one of the best "two-millers" in the South. His team mates thought so much of his ability that they made him captain of the team in his Senior year. If you want to find him just ask for Goodson, and you may be sure that "Mill" is somewhere near.

Here is a man who is naturally very silent, but if you wish to hear him talk, just get him started on his friend "Lillian Lee." He is quiet, easy-going, and has but one dissipation—sleeping on Saturday mornings. Menzies was a member of a class previous to ours, but he had to drop out for a while. Since he has joined us again he has made a worthy follower of the banner of '16. Miller entered a year ahead of us, but decided to drop out to take up the mechanics trade for a year. He is a lad who really gets pleasure out of work, and he is usually pleased, for from seven till eleven you are sure to find him in his room with a book before his eyes. His hard work has won him the nickname of "Studd," and honors in scholarship as well. All mathematical subjects are interesting and easy to him, but English forces a different idea into his head.

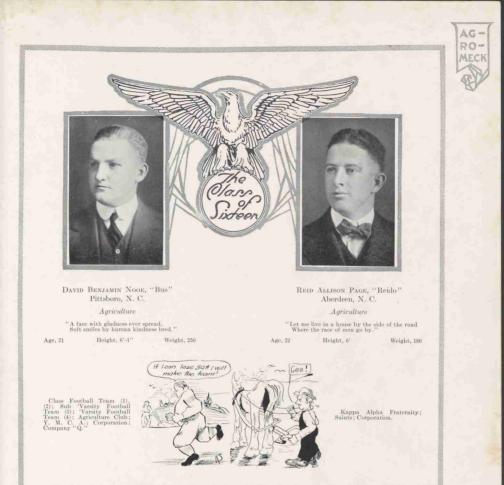

"Goose Teeth" is the name by which he is known, but this is a misnomer—it should have been "Chicken Teeth," for it is said that he knows the exact location of every chicken roost for miles around. He has decided to make a specialty of lighting negro churches when he has finished school because black absorbs so much more light. He is a valued member of the Watauga Peace Party, and has done much to restore order in that noise-infested region.

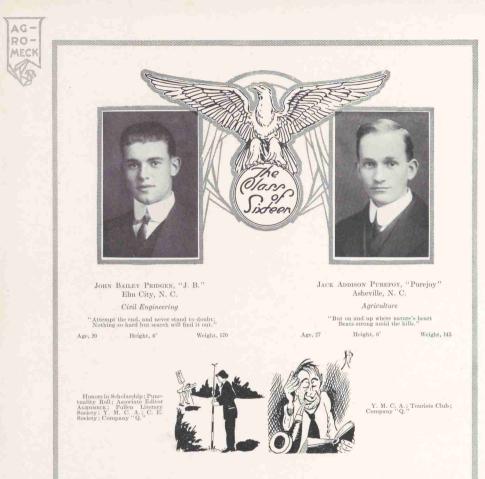

Every year there is a hot contest in college for the championship of "Ladykillers." "Frog" is champion this year—won the title in a walk, a pigeon walk at that. If there is anything he had rather do than dance it is to go down town on Monday morning, or to Cameron Park any time. "Frog" regards studying as a kind of dissipation, and of course he never dissipates. He is very much liked by us all.

"Ed" first registered with the Electrical division, but he heard the call for workers in the Textile indutry, so he cast his lot with us. He is a good-natured lad, and we had anticipated a great future for him in the Textile world; but his camera claims his first service. His industry in the field of photography has won him the title of "Tyree II." We believe he aspires to the position of official photographer for A. & M. AGROMECK. Our dumb animals have here a friend indeed, but we doubt whether he follows his profession. "Red" thinks too much of the farm and a lively time to devote his attention to the needs of the four-footed animals. He believes in living while life lasts, and is one of the leading sports of the class. Incidentally, he is as hard as a rock, and will beat you up if you offend him.

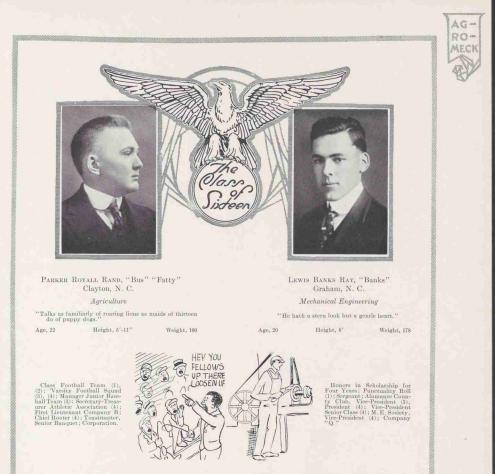

"Bus" has increased in popularity as he has gained in avoirdupois. He is the pride of Chatham county, and has equal esteem for that region. His great trial during his college days was obeying Coach Hegarty's command: "Three times around the track, Big Boy." During his Senior year his morals have been badly corrupted by the company he keeps. On one occasion he was caught awake at eleven o'clock p. m. "Reido" is a friend to all, but he is really known by few. To this the ladies can attest, for during his varied college career he has successfully resisted their charms. His habits are mysterious, and many are the strange tales he tells of his experiences. To win his heart, praise the Sand Hills, the Seaboard Railroad, and the Cadillac automobile.

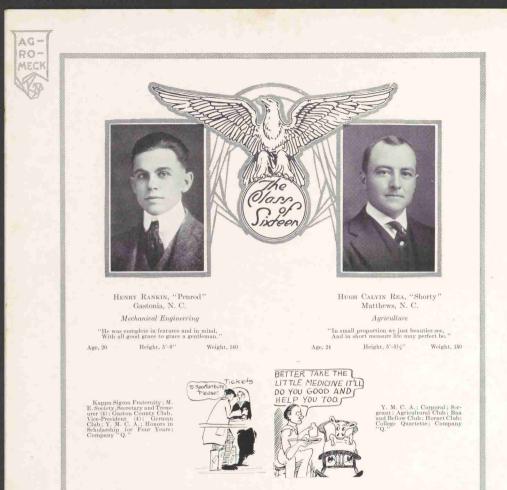

"J. B." from his first arrival on the campus has proved himself a most ardent student—not often sacrificing pleasure for school work. He has distinguished himself in scholarship. When not on class he may be found in Fayetteville Street, in case he is not polling for Mann. He finds great pleasure in the perusal of certain "billet d'amour" written in a lovely round hand from sunny Florida. While the reformers are advocating free textbooks for school children, why not have free barber service for college men? When an "everyday" beard gets shaved but once a week it is time to get busy. Aside from this "Purejoy" is a good fellow, and enjoys his pipe immensely. He and "Zeb" Gardner are fast friends, but they will have an argument occasionally.

"Fatty" is preëminently an athlete. On the gridiron he is a leader in putting pep. and life into the team. In recognition of his active interest in athletics, the student body elected him Chief Rooter. His hearty laugh can be heard on the campus most any time, but that daily letter from "the lady" brings the "most pleasantest" smile of all. "Fatty" is something of a sport, and when he wears a derby, a cigar, and a cane he is quite a distinguished looking fellow.

Don't be fooled by his quiet and gentle look, for "Banks" has a will of his own as he has shown many times since coming here. He could not be induced in any way to wear the Freshman cap, and in his Sophomore year he proved himself to be an artist of some note by the way in which he decorated the tank with our class numerals. Taken all in all, he is a good student and a good fellow, which really counts for most.

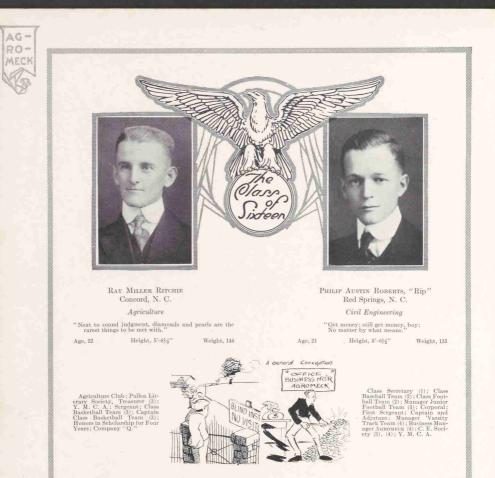

"Penrod" is without doubt one of the smartest fellows in our class. He is one of those fortunate fellows who does not have to study, even to get out of math. exams. Although there is a certain attraction in Spartanburg that occupies most of his time now, he still upholds his record as a student. He is quiet and unassuming, but he is one of the most popular men on the campus. He swears by his friend Bill, with whom he can be found every evening attending his regular class at the "movies."

"Horse doctoring" is the profession chosen by this son of dear old Mecklenburg. He should be a great favorite with animals which have any appreciation for music. Even human beings forget their lesser troubles when listening to him sing. He is a leader in the Senior Vet. class, and makes good grades in the Biology department when all signs fail.

"Vie" came to the "land of the long leaf pine" from northern Ohio, and since then he has adopted this as his home. We wonder if the lady in the case is not the cause for the change. He is a hard worker, not only in the classroom, but on the athletic field as well. He held down the position of quarterback like a veteran. Always, everywhere, he is a friendly good fellow. Wallace has been with us only three years, as he began his college career at Wake Forest. During his stay here he has made a reputation for himself on the gridiron that will have a very prominent place among the athletic records of the college for years to come. On class he often has his own opinion on subjects, no matter what the book says, and many times it is hard to convince him why he is right or wrong. As floor manager for the German Club he has proven himself to be a leading man in society as well as on the gridiron.

When it comes to making dates in Raleigh for his backward friends, Ritchie is there with the goods. It is rumored that he has a bad case of "Meredithitis," but we hope for the best. When it comes to that subject, no one is more conscious of his unworthiness than he himself, which is a bad sign.

"Rip" happens to be the lucky man who figures that he will get rich out of the AGROMECK this year. As adjutant of the cadet battalion "Rip" shows himself to be a military man of high rank, although he is rather small to be heard at a great distance. He makes good grades even though he does most of his studying after eleven o'clock at night. During the earlier hours he is too busy to permit study to interfere with his college life.

"Greenie's" specialty is public speaking, and Literary Society and Agriculture Club work. He is a born organizer, and is a leader in all the organizations of which he is a member. He takes great interest in live stock, and was a member of the stock judging team in his Senior year. It gets his goat to say: "On to Richmond." Ask him why.

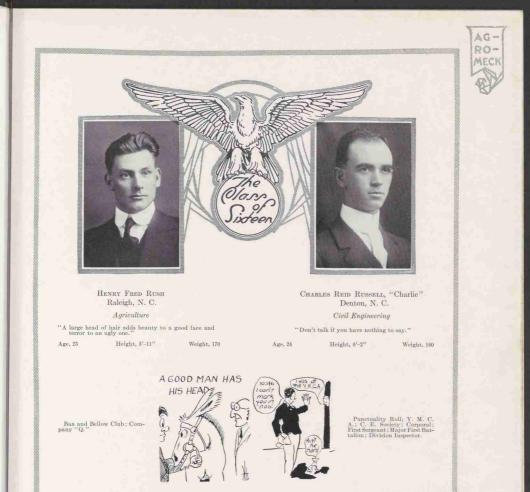

"Roachadore" earned his name by his anxious inquiries as to the best method of hair culture. We are proud to announce that he has, at last, produced a full grown roachadore which, although a little unruly, answers his purpose admirably. He has lost his heart on several different occasions, but always finds it in time to prevent matrimonial difficulties. He is one of the class wits, and is always making remarks that no ordinary man would think of.

"Rog" is a tall, sandy-haired lad who believes in work when it is time to work, and enjoys the pleasures of life when his work is finished. He has made good grades while here, but he still remembers Sophomore physics as his best friend during his Junior year. He banks his success in Civil Engineering on the fact that he has yet to find water so deep in this part of the country that he cannot drag his chain across and still have a dry coat when he reaches the other bank.

"Jimmy" for the past year has proven to be an author, and some of his poems as well as his prose works are very interesting. In the class football games he starred as one of the strongest men in our line. He seems to have won for himself a home somewhere in Raleigh, where he spends most of his off hours. One of his chief pleasures is to work out the stresses in the members of a roof truss under the most complicated conditions.

When Fred begins to shift around in his seat as if it were red hot, you may brace yourself for an illumi- by the Freshmen. He holds the record of the class nating elucidation. His chief joy is to "pull" something on John Farrior when they are dissecting some departed equous being. After Fred takes his D.V.M. he will be a successful practitioner, for he will not only treat the animal, but he will explain things sat- His only hope is that money will not be as hard for isfactorily to the owner.

Major is well known by all of us, and especially in enforcing rules, as a man must have more than one foot inside his door to be marked in at inspection time. Charlie missed his calling in Civil Engineering, as he is more interested in military work. him to get as was a sponsor.

"Gus," although a good student when he works, is very good looking, and considers himself a regular are light among the ladies. A final grade of 60 looks as good to him as 100, since all he wants is credit in the Registrar's dictionary. He is in his element when leading his band in dress parade, especially when the college girls are present. It would be hard to tell who will be the first of the '16 Class to marry, Gus or K. Sloan; as it now stands, the odds are on both sides.

Here is a good-hearted fellow who has only one enemy, and that is his work. He is one of the few men in the Mechanical Division to get an office in the Regiment, and he takes great pride in that fact. He is making his home in the city during his Senior year. It is rumored that the reason for this change of residence is that he can now be nearer his heart's desire.

"Casey," by hard work, has won fame on the gridiron. He was chosen by many fans this year as All-South Atlantic end. In the classroom he has not been so successful, but still he passes the majority of his work. "Casey" is a society man, but he seems to have trouble in finding a girl. On one occasion in his junior year, under cover of night, he secured a chicken and sent it as a precious gift to some fair lady at Meredih, and then failed on the secret word of love. Sharp came from Northwestern University to join us in our Junior year. He is too busy with other activities of college life to be bothered with much studying, nevertheless he makes pretty good grades. "Eagle" gets in everything around college there is to get in, from bathtubs to photographs. With a little financial compensation we believe he would even get in love. He has a very exalted opinion of his own opinion, and does not mind expressing it—sometimes it really is very good.

As a Freshman "K" was distinguished from the rest of us, since it took only a two-cent stamp placed on the back of his head to bring him to A. & M. However, since that time he has proven to be a hard worker and has gained his share of the honors in scholarship. He amuses himself on classes, especially English, by drawing cartoons, and some of them are very good. He claims Asheville to be the best town in the State. It may be the scenery that he likes so well, but we have a good reason to believe that the dream of love was what carried his heart to the mountain city.

"B. P." is one of our easy-going fellows who has never cut a class or missed an inspection. When not on class or in the library he can usually be found in his room studying. He attends strictly to his own business, is a good student, and is always willing to help a fellow out of trouble. He has no bad habits, but he and "Tommy" will engage in a game of "setback" occasionally.

"Jeff" came to us in our Junior Year from Trinity, and he has proved himself a man of good qualities and a good student. He is inclined toward agriculture, fertilizers and soils being his specialty. Most of his afternoons are spent in taking the ladies to ride. He says his frequent visits to Durham are on "business." "Rabbit" joined us in our Senior year, having been out during our Junior year. He says he is inclined to be studious, but he just cannot find time to study. He does, however, study every night from eleven till eleven thirty if he gets back from town in time. The remainder of his time is spent in going on class and driving slowly (?) about the campus in his Ford, alias the "White Elephant."

Tatum, a tall handsome lad, is an arc light among the ladies, especially when has a chance to mention the secret word of love in some coxy corner. On one occasion his love affairs became rather complicated when two of his ardent admirers who were receiving the same information compared papers. In class he has gotten good grades, and has also made a good showing as cadet captain. He holds the honor of our division in being the pet of the Faculty on all occasions. Were you ever on the A. & M. campus at midnight or after? Did you hear a long drawn out cry of "All's well!"? That was "At." He is extremely popular with the ladies (else why do they let him stay so late at night?) He is known to make frequent trips to Clayton. We wonder why. "At" makes good grades for one who neither "legs" nor studies.

"G. W." is quiet, modest, and unassuming, but he works hard and prizes loose "ones" from nearly all his teachers. No ladies' man is he, and that girl who hears the momentous question from him, if she is wise, will say "yes." He is one man who will be remembered by all who know him as a perfect gentleman. For a picture of a perfectly carefree sport you should see "Jake" some Saturday night with his thumbs through the armholes of his vest and a large eigar in his mouth. At other times you will find him working away in the Entomology Lab., tending his flock of Watauga lambs (?), haranguing his Literary Society, taking care of his Mess Hall, or any one of a dozen other things that he has to look after.

Here is a Morehead lad who believes in boosting his home town, and really at times if you listen to him you believe that Morehead City is the only summer resort in the new world. By his neatness he has won the honor of being chief architect for R. I. Poole, C. E. He is a regular subscriber to a twice-a-day pamphlet issued in letter form from one of the girls' colleges at Greensboro. When any one is desirous of knowing the pronounciation, definition, or spelling of any word that is too unusual to be listed in Webster's work, they call on "Doc." He is usually seen with his pipe, and has even been caught chewing tobacco; but he does not chew much except on special occasions. When he graduates the force at the Registrar's office will miss him, but Johnston County will be the better off.

When it becomes absolutely necessary for a man to get to class on time then Harry will be there on time, but not before. "Frenchy" is "Ned" Fontaine's most dangerous rival for championship in the hundred yard dash but for a slight accident "Frenchy" would be champion today. He likes nothing in the world better than his pipe, girls not excepted. Still it is not very hard for him to get a girl, but awfully hard for him to keep one. He has had three or four during the brief time of our acquaintance.

"Peter" hails from the famous "Cape Fear Section," but he claims Fayetteville as his home. He joined our class in our Sophomore year, coming here from Davidson. During the first part of his Senior year he enjoyed the "lightness" of society right much, but now he is too busy with Dan T.'s problems to eare much for the lesser pleasures of life. He is a member of our "suicide squad."

"Winnie" came to college to take baseball and probably a little Textile Engineering on the side, but he rose to stardom on the gridinon as well as on the diamond. His chief interests are baseball, football, and the ladies; he is always seen with one of these three. His chief disinterests are piques, notebooks, and promptness; he is never seen with any of these. "Winnie" is a good mixer, probably due to the smile that is always emanating from his countenance.

"Phonny" is one of the brightest men in our class if he would only study. The much-dreaded Economics is his forte. His grade on that subject, conservatively estimated, is 99 44-100 pure. He likes the farm, but there are two things he will not do under any circumstances—pick cotton and pull fodder. As a farmer and a sturdy horse-sense leader in his community he will be a success.

Senior Class Prophecy

AG -RO -MECK

After a furtive glance around the room to see that my wife was not present, I tilted my chair back, placed my feet high on the mantel, and opened one of the latest "best sellers." The book appealed to me, not only for the story, but also because it had been written by an old college-mate, "Pee Wee" Kennedy we called him in those days, but Mr. W. A. Kennedy, the noted author, now. I had only read a few pages when I noticed that the fire had taken on a peculiar appearance. Imagine my great surprise to find on closer observation that the fire had disappeared entirely, and a small plate glass window had taken its place.

I could barely perceive objects through this window at first, but gradually they became more distinct and a rather strange sight met my eye. On a rude wooden platform stood a man who, although his voice was at first inaudible to me, was trying by means of voice and much gesticulation to persuade the vast mob around him to do something. Finally his voice reached me just as he was ending his speech, and these were his words: "And now gentlemen, if there be one among you who suffers from rheumatism in any form let him come forth, procure a bottle of this Greenfield-Crater ointment at the unprecedented price of two dollars; and if at the end of ten days he is not cured I will refund his money and donate a new tendollar bill to his oldest child. And now, gentlemen, the Harmony Quartet will sing a few songs for your entertainment." As he finished speaking four stylishly dressed men stepped from behind the curtain, and believe me, I experienced a shock when I recognized the old "Electrical Quartet." They were all there, "Jimmie" Bonner, "Rab" Sumner, "Bob" Davis, and "Tom" Holmes, just as they were in the old college days.

The scene shifted and I sat gazing into the lobby of a fashionable hotel. Two men were standing in front of the desk seemingly engrossed in their conversation when the door opened, and who should stroll in but "Shorty" Frazier? The men at the desk were evidently expecting him for they turned to meet him, and lo! they proved to be "K." Bloan and "J. B." Pridgen. Neither had changed much except that "K." was a great deal more orpulent than when I had last seen him. After a few minutes of conversation the three entered the dining room and busied themselves with the excellent repast provided. Finally "Shorty" broke the silence: "Say K., I saw 'Batty' last night, and he is very much elated. You know he and 'Sam' Credle made a fortune out of that big Limestone Dam contract, so they have decided to retire, turning the business over to Beatty's boy, Marvin, Jr., who graduates at A. & M. next year."

"That reminds me, Johnnie, why can't we do that? Our boys are nearly old enough to take the business and 'J. B.' can train them. Let's retire, I'm tired of working," was Sloan's sally.

"Nothing in that for me," broke in "J. B." "Let's drop business and go see 'Gus' Russo, now on at the Grandby in a swell singing and dancing act with Charlie Russell as a comedian." "I'm on," answered Johnnie, "soon as I can 'phone the wife." With that they left the room, and scene again grew indistinct.

From a brilliantly lighted dining room to the dim illumination of a monastery corridor is quite a change, and stronger eyes than mine would have found it hard to distinguish the three black-cowled figures that slowly approached me. As my eyes grew accustomed to the darkness I recognized them. At first I could hardly believe what I saw. It couldn't be my old friends, "Doc" Rea, Ed. Murray and "Hump" Wharton! But it was. As they passed, I heard "Hump" say: "Well, brothers, at last I have found peace far away from the frivolities and petty annoyances of society life." And then Rea answered saying: "Yes, it was only yesterday that "Frog" Morrison was brought to our hospital a complete nervous wreck, caused, so Dr. Rush tells me, by the many exasperating incidents so peculiar to the society man. How thankful we should be that we have escaped a like fate!" "Amen," murmured Ed.

A.G ---

But what's this I see? A long, straight, stretch of modern road, and in the distance a smooth curve around which a small car is swinging at a terrific speed. As the car draws nearer I see it is a Ford and the driver is none other than "Casey" Seifert. Suddenly a loud halloo is heard from the roadside, and "Casey" shoves the brakes. The Ford responds immediately and stops just as a tall, lean man steps from the side of the road. " 'Lo 'Casey,' how's the dope business this trip?" "Fine as ever, 'Bus.' I got two new customers down Cardenas way. 'Phonny' Withers has built a new store on the south corner of his big farm, and 'Blondie' Kime's oldest son is starting a general emporium down at the cross-roads. Blondie's son told me that his father had decided to sell his farm and go west to join 'Greenie' Robertson, who is running a big cattle ranch out there."

Just at this moment a little pickaninny came up: "Massa Rand, yo wife say fo you to come fix that mechanical churn right away." With a "So long, 'Casey,'" "Bus" set out toward his home and the churn.

A glittering array of surgical instruments, a beautiful horse securely strapped and lying helpless, while in one corner of the room is a man talking hurriedly over the telephone. "Hello! Hello! Who is that? 'Ham,' this is Neely talking; get 'At' Taylor and come down immediately. Must operate on a horse and I'm not sure what ails her. What? Yes, both of you get the usual consultant's fee. Come at once."

After a few moments of darkness the lights flashed back and I was gazing on a familiar scene. It was Charlie's lunch room, crowded as usual. Students were gathered around the stove gnawing "ham ands" and smoking cigarettes. Presently the door opened, admitting another student, who said: "Duck the cigs fellows, here comes Fessor Moore." Then "Goose" walked in. He had not changed a bit. From the conversation which followed between him and Charlie, I learned that "Goose" had accepted an instructorship in the English department and was looking forward to becoming dean of the college in a few years. I also learned that P. Snead had been connected with the electrical department, but he had resigned to enter into partnership with "Ned" Fontaine in the house wiring business.

Boom! A terrific explosion, and as the smoke cleared away I saw Jeff Stanback with a triumphant smile wreathing his usually grim countenance as he closely examined the fragments of a shattered steel sphere. Turning to "Vie" Rice, who had just entered the laboratory, he said: "Vic,' we're famous. This last run of explosive is exactly what we have been working for all these years; and now when we sell this formula we'll be able to pay Ralph Brooks that long deferred visit down on his southern farm. And believe me, from now on it is the country life for mine."

The next scene presented to my wondering gaze was a large wooden structure with a porch extending all the way around the building, while across the entrance was an arch bearing these words: "Fuquay Springs Hotel, D. B. Nooe, Proprietor." As I gazed "Bus" stepped from the doorway followed by two rather chubby children. "Hey, Buck, let me have four quarts of your best cream. We have a bride and groom with us at the hotel, and they want the best to be had. By the way, the groom is one of our old elassmates, J. A. Purefoy, and the bride is a queen. My wife's real jealous. Come in and meet them." Without a word "Buck" crawled out, hitched his horse and followed "Bus" through the open doorway.

I was next given a glance at a modern rural landscape. It was just at twilight, and as the darkness descended over the scene the bright rays of electric lamps pierced the night here and there. A large touring car came up the smoothly surfaced drive and swung around a broad curve, stopping just in front of the garage. The occupants alighted, and imagine my surprise to see "Shorty" Millsaps and "Doe" Wellons. As they strolled toward the house, "Shorty" told of how much he had improved his home by installing the Millwee-Goodson system of electric lighting. Wellons, it seems, was contemplating installing this same system on his own large farm, but with his usual precaution he had driven over to see what success "Shorty" had had with the system on his farm.

As time passed I seemed to be gazing into a strange land. On all sides were men, men of every nationality and every color, all making their way toward a small square house surrounded by guards. Then I realized that I was having a vision of pay day at City Point. The man dealing out the cash was none other than "Jimmy" Rowe with the old time smile still in evidence. He reached behind him for a few more greenbacks to pass out over the counter to the men in front. Horrors! The money had given out! He snatched the window down, and then pandemonium broke loose. The men, deprived of their pay, became brutes, and were just breaking into the shack when a high-powered car, driven by our dashing Menzies, came through the mob and stopped in front of the paymaster's door. The money was quickly transferred from the car to the pay-station, and the mob was soon quieted. Then the vision passed.

It is the day of the great swimming contest, and on the program of the man who sits in front of me I see the names of the swimmers of national fame who will compete in the races for the day. Heading the list is the name of Charles Briggs Malone, the world's champion swimmer. Underneath is a list of the honors he has won, but the list is too long to be added here. As I allow my eyes to wander over the vast assembly I see George Webb and George Whitson renewing their old acquaintance, and incidentally introducing their wives. I found that Webb was road engineer for Guilford County while Whitson was a "ducky dear" and chief engineer for the city of Asheville.

I must have dropped asleep, for presently I found myself in the little city of Warsaw, the guest of the mayor, who proved to be none other than "Big Bill" Kennedy. After an excellent supper we retired to the porch and there, surrounded by the smoke of our cigars, we swapped reminiscences. He told me of some of the boys who had drifted out of my knowledge. "Roachie" Robinson had gone to Brazil and constructed an immense power plant which supplied the current for the development of the great phosphate mines discovered there by "Toey" Johnson, whom every one knew to be the greatest chemist of the age.

Fred Baker is now manager of the Southern branch of the Bell Telephone Company. He is living in—. Just at this moment I awake to find myself staring through the window at an essentially rural scene. As far as the eye could see lay broad fields newly furrowed, and as I gazed a huge tractor drawing a gang plow slowly labored over the brow of the hill. Perched on the seat of the tractor, piloting it over the fields, was "Turpentine" Clark, while "Jerry" Bason was riding the plow and busily engaged in manipulating the various levers. On they AG-RO-MECK came, slowly but steadily turning the brown furrows over, and when at the end as they turned I noticed on the side of the tractor these words: "Holt-Ray Steam Tractor." I wondered if Dean Holt and Banks Ray were the manufacturers, but the plow had been turned and the tractor started down the furrow again and I was alone.

Before me was a broad expanse of ice-covered territory across which three motor sleds came at a rapid speed and slowed to a standstill quite near me. As soon as the sleds stopped the occupants tumbled out, and were soon busily engaged in setting up instruments, taking readings, and making calculations. After some time spent in this occupation they built a fire, and on removing their furs I recognized "Rip" Roberts, "Tubby" Howard, and Earl Jennette. "Rip" was speaking, and I learned that these three were making a preliminary survey for a pole to pole transportation line, such a thing having been made possible by Henry Rankin's invention of a steel pile that would hold in any kind of soil. A great deal of the success of this road would be due, it seems, to the development of the motor sled into an efficient commercial machine by "Sooner" Collier.

As they were preparing to crawl into their sleeping-bags, the scene changed and I beheld the interior of a handsomely appointed office. "B. P. Smith, Supt.," were the words which met my eyes as the door swung open to admit a gentleman of distinguished appearance who, after a hasty "Good morning, Mr. Smith," sank into a chair facing the man behind the desk. "Good morning, Mason, I suppose you have come for the prices on that last lot of engines. If you will excuse me for a moment I will get them." With that he pressed a button at the side of his chair and immediately it began to descend, and soon it had passed completely out of sight only to ascend again to its former position after a few minutes. "B.P." did not seem disturbed in the least; but noting the puzzled expression on "Joe's" face, he smiled, saying, "Quite a handy device, this chair elevator. 'Tom' Brooks, my room-mate at A. & M., invented it, and he and I have made a fortune from its sale. By the way, Joe, we received an order a few days ago for some textile machinery from an old friend of yours, 'Bottle' Anthony it was. He is superintendent of several of the largest mills in Shelby, and I find that his rating in Bradstreet's is A-1."

At this moment the door opened again, and who should rush in but "Joe" Ardrey. Without stopping to close the door he rushed over, grabbed "B. P." by the hand and cried: "Give me five, chief, give me five! I have enough orders in this little handbook to keep this whole darned factory working overtime for a whole year. Just for an example, I'll show you the order I got from 'Ab.' You know C. S. Abernethy, the one that owns all those garages down in North Carolina."

He had just started to read the first item when everything again became indistinct and I could hear the roar of water and the clanging of machinery, so I was not unprepared for what I saw. Water was swiftly flowing down an ever narrowing gorge at the end of which stood a huge cantilever derrick swinging an immense bucket over to the hillside, where it was filled with rocks, then back over the gorge, dumping its cargo into the rushing stream. I noticed two men standing in the doorway of a rudely constructed shack high up on the hillside. One of them stood with head bent as if listening to what the smaller one said, but suddenly the tall one turned and, with one stride he was half-way down the hill, shouting over his shoulder as he ran: "Baker, go get 'Vic' and that other mechanic. The derrick's broken loose again." In a few moments Baker reappeared, followed closely by "Vie" Champion and John Harris. Down the hill they went to join the tall one who proved to be "Long" Rogers. And the last I saw of them "Vie" and John were climbing up over the derrick tower.

The light grew dimmer, and in a few minutes I was looking into the interior of a comfortable and happy home. A man and woman were sitting at a table, while from an adjoining room snatches of music mingled with bursts of girlish laughter fell upon the air. The man turned to speak to his wife and I saw that it was Reuben Tatum. But it was not the same Tatum! Love had softened the old harsh lines in his face, and he positively radiated joy. After some little remark he turned, picked up his paper and began to read. I glanced over his shoulder and saw an item that caught my eye at once. It read as follows: "Bonnie Boy Wins Handicap. Bonnie Boy, a two-year old gelding, bred on the farm of Mr. P. McK. Williams, Jr., wins the big handicap race. This is the third time that Mr. Williams's farm has produced a winner." Well, I mused, who would ever have thought that Peter would have been a breeder of race horses? AG -RO -MECI

I was about to let my eyes drift off the paper when I noticed a large half-page advertisement. "Get your picture made by J. W. McLeod," were the words which surrounded a large halftone cut of our handsome "Rusty."

The scene shifted from this vision of a happy home to a terrifying spectacle of savage warfare. In the center of a scene was a town throbbing with industrial activity. From the left a horde of black, half-naked savages edged closer and closer to the town. All seemed lost when from the right a company of khaki-clad men appeared with a slight attempt at formation. On they came at double-quick, routing the savages and saving the town. It was all over before the men in the town realized what had happened. The company reformed, and at its head stood "Wananish" Hester, while the second in command was no other than his college room-mate, "Frenchy" Williams.

The command had been given to march, when a tall man stepped out of one of the small buildings and pushed through the crowd to where Captain Hester stood. Hester glanced at the man, then seized the proffered hand and exclaimed: "Well! Well! 'Wally' Riddick! Of all men, what are you doing down here?" "Me?" Wallace answered. "I'm down here running this copper mine with the assistance of one Clay Dwight Brittain, who is at present taking his siesta. Come up to the office and take a little grape juice for thy stomach's sake." "I am with you," Hester replied. Turning to his company he called: "Williams, take charge of the company."

I then found myself gazing upon quite a different scene. In a small room three men were gathered about a table, heatedly discussing what appeared to be an important question. Several times I heard the words "senator," "president," and "congress" ring above the hum of the general conversation, and finally one man arose with determination showing in every movement and said: "No matter what happens, I shall nominate for president at tomorrow's convention that noble friend of the people, Jacob Osborne Ware." The speaker was Ray Ritchie, and the other two men proved to be Ralph Hodges and "Vie" Johnston. From what I could gather they had found politics easier than farming, and after many years they had become bosses of the Democratic party.

The sky overhead was dark and the whole world seemed enveloped in clouds, and, as I watched, the rain began pelting down. A man stood on the corner of a busy street, protected from the rain by a huge umbrella which half-way concealed his face. There he stood calling his wares to the passing multitudes. "Cheap umbrellas and raincoats for sale! Buy a Kantleak and keep dry." He had succeeded in making several sales when a cop accosted him; "Bull," said the cop, "you'll have to move on." As the street merchant turned away, I realized with a shock that I had seen the meeting of two old college mates, "Bull" Sasser and "Bill" Corbitt.

A beautiful sloping beach covered with bathers, in the background a brilliantly lighted pavilion where the couples were gayly whirling to the music of a large orchestra, was the next sight to greet my gaze. Behind the counter of a large refreshment shop stood "Sammy" Bennett, seemingly happy and content; and at the doorway of the bath house R. L. Kelly was busily engaged in collecting the bath tickets of those preparing to enter the surf.

> Now the scenes began to shift more rapidly, and at first a large stable comes into view. On the stable in large letters appear the words: "Farrior Pony Farm." Next I see a comfortable country home, and is that Zeb Gardner standing on the porch? As I live, there's Roy Carlton and "Ello" Henry directing the construction of a big transmission line. Who is that making such funny gestures over that transit? Oh I see now! It's Cherry. No wonder he is mad. I would get mad too if I had to survey a railroad to suit as cranky a boss as "Studd" Miller.

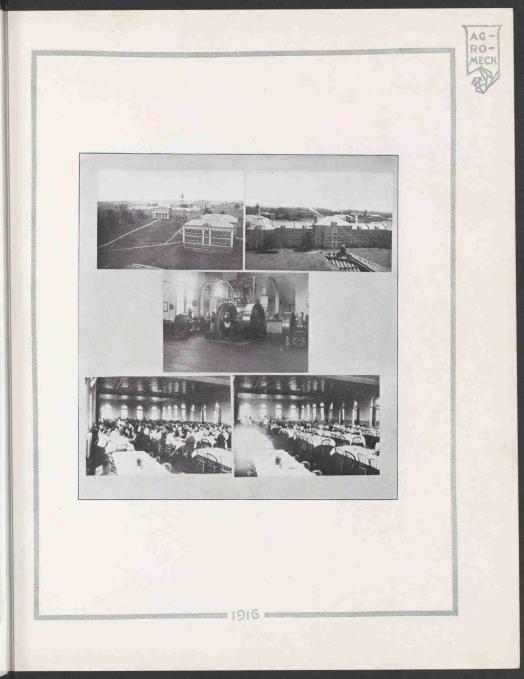

> As the scene shifts, I catch a glimpse of the Lindsay Manufacturing Company, and there is "Opie" in the window examining a piece of dress goods. Another glance reveals a man who resembles Reid Page climbing from an auto at the steps of a magnificent country home, and the scene changes just as a woman rushes from the door to greet him.

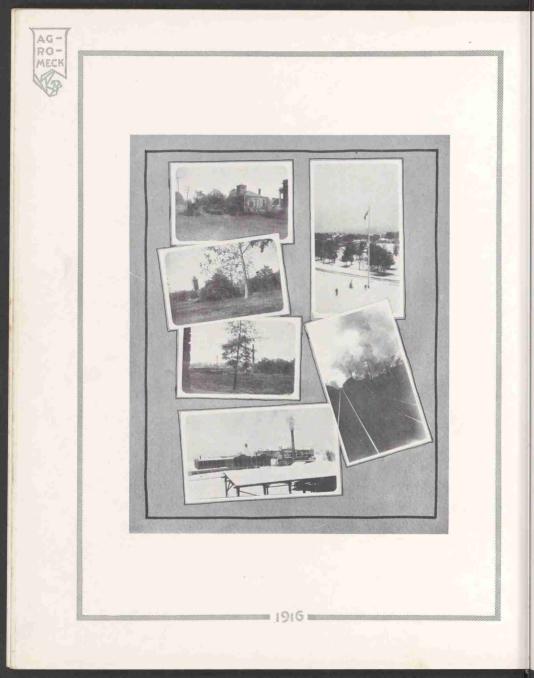

> Next I am given a view of the Sharp Textile Supply Company, and in the private office bearing the word "Manager," I see the men at the head of the company, Sharp and Winston.

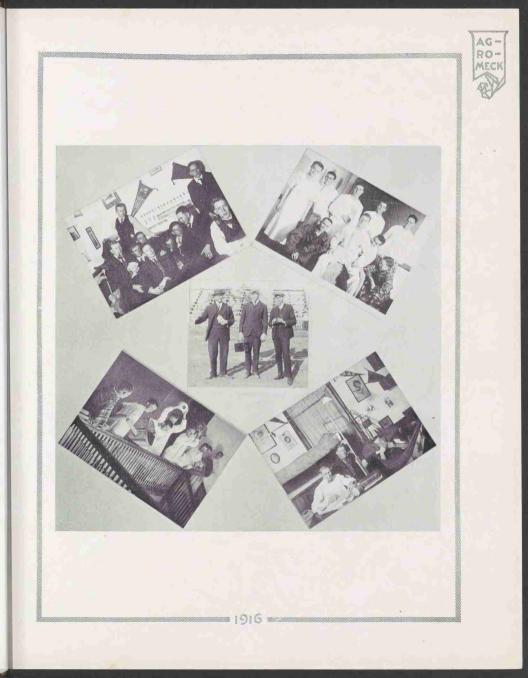

> Again my gaze wanders out over rural scenes, and in the distance I see the broad acres of my old friend J. H. Speas, while nearer I see the little home and happy family of G. W. Underhill.

> But now the lights grow dim, the magic glass dissolves, and I lazily prepare to finish my novel when my ear is smitten by discordant phrases. I turn to find my wife preparing for war, so I gently remove my feet from the mantel and assume a conciliating expression. Suddenly something crashes into my ribs, and I open my eyes to find "Bob" Davis beating a tattoo on my side while 'Fessor Browne is demanding the answer to a question I never heard. Once more I have fallen asleep on class.

Junior Class Poem

Awake! Pan, with thy lyre arise, Throwing thy joyous tunes into the skies. Set the revolving spheres asway; Play the Juniors a little lay.

O Juniors! in these closing days include This wondrous year of solitude. Like one, who from a dreamer's quest, Leans on his oars and rests.

Thinking all the while of the binding ties; O year of memories! That bind us to the class, and now The responsibility of Senior lies heavily upon our brow.

I see the stand where all the Seniors meet To cast down at thy feet The scepter of power, and may the test Bring us no bitterness.

Let your glory flame in every sphere and clime, That they may deem you, Ah! sublime. And in your glory may you then forget Old failures, lost love, and regrets.

Junior Class History

"In the beginning" there were two hundred and forty; but the chosen few are left.

It was in the year 1913 and the month of September that two hundred and forty Freshmen were delivered to the grinding hands and watchful eyes of the A. & M. Sophs. Just like all other Sophomores, they were built and not born. They are a mechanical mixture, and Darwin's "Theory of Evolution" does not apply to these animals. They attended to our registration so that no material would escape their hands. They located our rooms before we did, and gave us many warm receptions. We were called on whether we would or not, and they seemed to enjoy each visit. Strange how well we entertained! Between their calls we studied, and, as most of the class made the required grades, we are glad we came.

In September, 1914, we returned and took upon ourselves the duties of the Sophomore class, and beneath our colors we resolved to perform these duties as well as we knew how. First, we made a wise choice in the election of Artz as president. He knows the right thing and does it. In the second place, we took up club, classroom, and society work, and gave to each fellow his share regardless of his course or acquired habits. Third, we obtained sufficient amusement and gave our Freshmen their just dues. It is a mistake to say that Sophomore never study, for many candles were burned before the required amount was crammed away to pass the spring examinations. These were passed, and then—we were Juniors.

The chosen ninety-four have reached the third year of our class history, and with an entirely different attitude we began our work in September, 1915. Each man realized as never before his opportunity to make the most of his time. And under the leadership of W. K. Scott, our class, as Juniors, has made a record to be proud of.

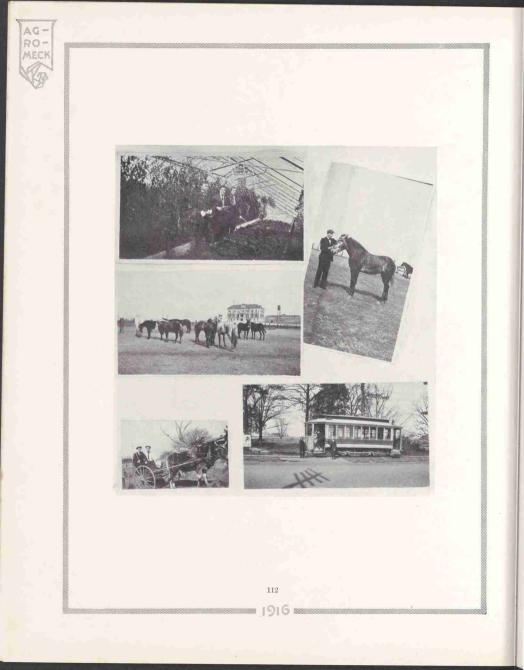

It is proper to mention briefly a few of our accomplishments during the three years of our existence as a class.

To football we have given Tenney, Van Brocklin, Sullivan, MacDougall, Young and Artz; to baseball, Wheeler, Gammon, W. M. Johnson, P. Johnson and Wooten; to basketball, W. M. Johnson and Temple. We have also been well represented in track athletics. Mac-Dougall, Scott, Gant, Millsaps, E. S., and others of the class have won honors on the cinder path.

Our class has also furnished men for other departments of college work. Scott was a member of the debating team which met Auburn last year. This year two of our members, D. A. Monroe and J. F. Williams, Jr., triumphed over the debating team from Auburn. We have also contributed many names each month to the honor roll. All things considered, we are very thankful for what we have been able to accomplish.

> Obedient to the orders of my class I've tried to write a poem that will pass; And yet to tell the truth I'm quite disgusted With the whole job; my head's near "busted." I never knew so many friends incarnate, That could so rend a poet laureate, And so in lines heroic I must sing Ere the befrighted muse from me takes wing. Our class came here in the good year '14. Freshmen were we, simple, and verdant, and green. Our football team, it tied the other classes; And most of us won flunk slips or else passes. As Sophs. since '15 we have crammed and boned; And for our various faults we have atoned. Also we've won the football championship, And formed a quint that's mighty hard to whip. In two years we reach the parting ways, And then, in truth, begin our working days. Perhaps we'll fight mosquitoes in Panama, Or likely sift the sands of Zanzibar. But 'nough of speculating on our fate While two long years do yet before us wait!

Sophomore Class History

AG -RO -MECH

The present Sophomore Class began its career as Freshmen September 3, 1914, with a larger registration than any previous class. During the first few weeks we lived in constant fear of those "bloody" Sophomores of whom we had often heard, but after becoming acquainted with them we found that they were merely boys, and actually friendly. As Freshmen we made a splendid record, both in literary work and in athletics, honors of which we are justly proud. We left old A. & M. last spring, after having finished our examinations, and returned strong in numbers last fall.

Naturally the first duty we attended to last fall was to decorate the campus with our class numerals. The Freshmen, at first, were alarmed at this move, but after learning the meaning of what had been done their fears were allayed. The dignity of the class at once arose to the full meaning of the term, Sophomore.

In athletics the Class of 1918 is inferior to none. We gave the football squad the following men: W. F. Townsend, M. T. Hinson, M. S. Ramsaur, J. D. Eborn, C. Park, R. M. Barden, W. B. Cross, C. E. Cooke, J. J. Sykes and W. H. Robbins. In addition to this, one of the best Freshman football teams ever seen on the campus came from our class. We held the Sophomores and Juniors to a tie in our Freshman year, and this year we easily captured the class championship by defeating the Juniors 13 to 0, and the Freshmen 26 to 9. Warrenton High School, also, by a score of 12 to 2, went down in defeat before our team. In basketball we stand nearly as well as in football, as is shown by our defeating Atlantic Christian College, Raleigh High School and Cary High School last year; while this year Wakelon, Cary and Raleigh Highs have already suffered defeat at our hands. All indications point to the best team in college. The class baseball team, which took both games from the Wake Forest Freshmen last year, has furnished some good men for the Varsity.

The Class of 1918 not only brought many athletes to college, but men who have distinguished themselves in literary work as well. Among the latter the following are worthy of mention: R. A. Crowell, W. T. Combs, C. P. Lowrance, L. Kiser, W. K. Keeter and W. L. Trevathan. These men have represented the class in the Red and While, the literary societies, and in various debates.

Now as we note the activities of the school, the Class of 1918 as a whole has shown much college and class spirit. May this spirit abide with us throughout the coming years.

Freshman Class Poem

Hope of the dreams we have dreamed in the past; Here in college we're landed at last. And now we're trying our best to be Studious young Freshmen at A. M. C.

Fresh from the country as green as can be, We're very small fish in the college sea, But most great men began very low, And we expect to be great, you know.

"All right, Freshman, some water quick!" This we have heard till our hearts are sick. With the Sophomores this is our occupation For which we receive no remuneration.

But stick to it, Freshmen, and do your best, And when June comes you'll be in for a rest. Though now we are Freshmen through and through, Next year will find us Sophomores too.

Freshman Class History

AG-RO-

> On September 2, 1915, two hundred and seventy-five men were registered in the Freshman class at A. & M., exceeding somewhat in number any previous registration.

> The first month passed slowly for us, for we lived in constant fear of the upper-classmen. After a short time, however, we knew each other better and felt more at ease. We found that the upper-classmen were kind to us, and we soon began to feel at home and settled down to hard work.

> On September 11, we held our first class meeting and elected Mr. H. B. Chapin to lead our class for the ensuing year. Mr. J. B. Clute was elected vice-president, and Mr. A. K. Lincoln, secretary and treasurer. At our next meeting we elected officers as follows: F. F. King, Honor Committee; W. D. Vanderburg, manager of football team; and H. A. McGinn, captain.

At the suggestion of the Senior class we adopted the plan of wearing Freshman caps. A red cap with a white button was selected to be worn at all times on the campus.

In athletics we have made a good showing. We furnished three monogram men for the 'Varsity Football Team, besides having a large number on the squad. In the class games we lost to the Sophomores, but not without putting up a strong fight.

We were back on the campus early in January after the Christmas holidays, fewer in numbers, but wiser and more determined to make the term count for something in every way.

> At this time when the question of military preparedness is occupying the foremost place in the minds of our leading statesmen and lawmakers, and when the future policy of our nation, to a large extent, rests upon the preparedness issue, A. & M. is contributing her share toward the solution of the problems of military training. With our three years of training for every able-bodied student, we should be able to enroll a large number of men in the proposed reserve force.

> The training given at A. & M. consists of both close and extended order drill. During the first term the time is devoted to close order work in units ranging as high as the battalion, and to teaching proficiency and dexterity in handling the pieces.

During the second term extended order drill is taken up, and the student is made acquainted with actual field operations so far as is practicable. Definite field problems are worked out, and practical instruction is given in advance guard, flanking, and patrol duty. The troops are instructed in forming battle line under ideal conditions, and under imaginary fire.

The practical work is supplemented by a course in theoretical Tactics given by Lieutenant H. F. Spurgin. Illustrations are used and individual instruction is given when conditions warrant.

Record of Athletics

To a very large extent the best means of advertising a school or a college is through her representation on the athletic field. At A. & M. care and attention are given to this work, and we find as a result that our athletes have received consideration from some of the biggest schools in the Southeast. As in former years, we have supported four branches of athletics, and in each we have stood out prominently as a leader.

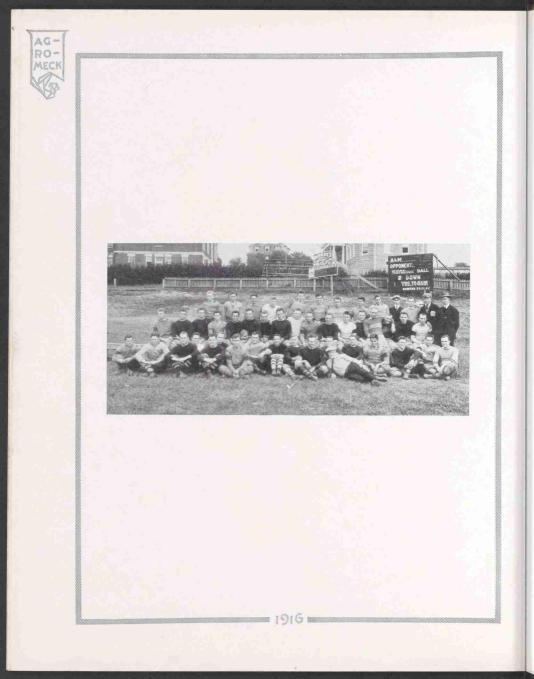

In basketball we do not stand quite so high as either of the other three branches of athletics; but the team of 1915, confronted with one of the hardest schdules ever made in this section, came out with a record that is not to be overlooked.

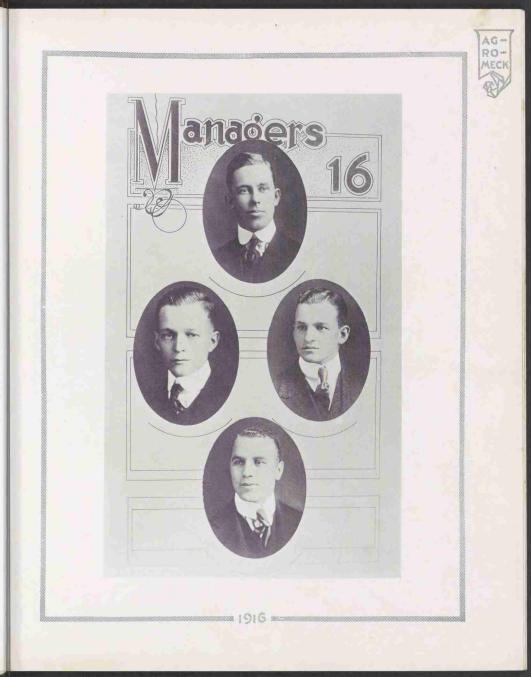

Track work has now developed to the extent that we are now the rivals of the best schools in this division. Though we lost to V. P. I. last spring, all A. & M. knows that we are progressing very rapidly in this line of athletics.

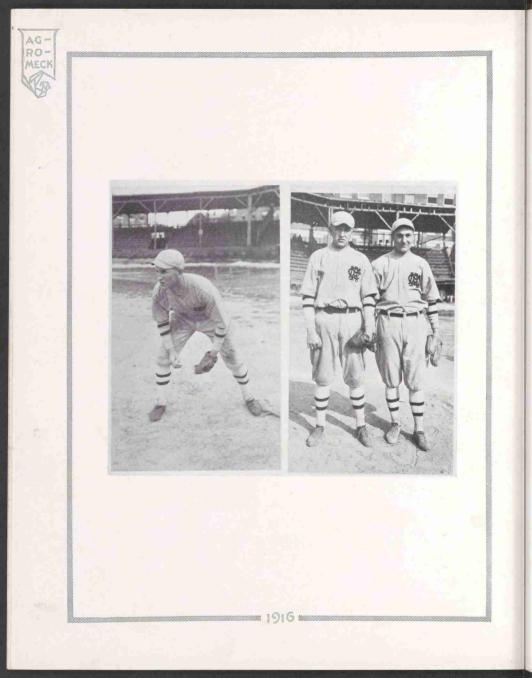

The baseball team of 1915, coached by Dr. Fred Anderson, made a record that will be remembered as a repetition of those made in previous years. We lost only three games during the whole season, and these were to schools that rank as the best in the North. One very noticeable thing about baseball at A. & M. is that never in the history of the College have we put out a team that could not be called good.

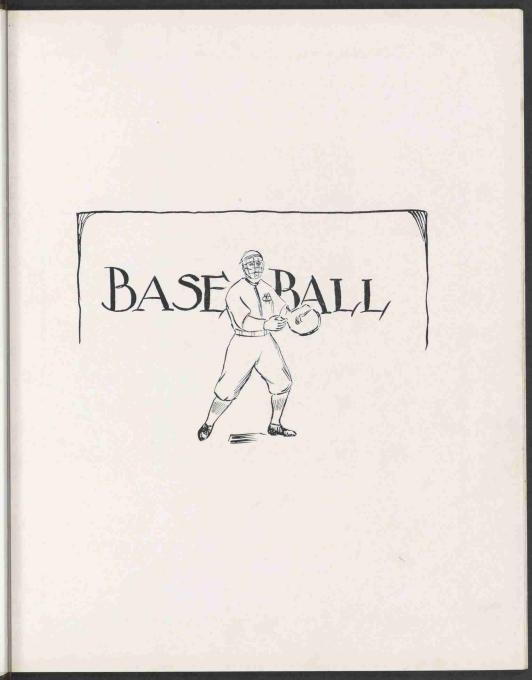

We hesitate to mention our football record as made in 1915. A. & M., the school that for years has been considered the pacemaker for the whole South Atlantic Division, was undoubtedly weak. Sullivan, one of the cleanest men that ever worked on the A. & M. gridiron, returned in early fall. He with Riddick, a South Atlantic man, MacDougall, and Seifert back in school, we confidently expected a repetition of the record of 1913—South Atlantic Champions. The season opened fairly well, and for a time rapid progress was made. Seemingly the team reached her playing zenith when the Naval Academy was encountered and a victory of 14 to 12 was recorded for the Red and White. After that, injuries as a beginning, and a realization that we were not coached to meet the attacks of other teams played, caused a noticable slowing up. Georgetown defeated us near the end of the season, and then Washington and Lee administered a crushing defeat on Thanksgiving Day. Thus the hopes and expectations of a successful football season for 1915 were buried forever.

So military movements began. Up Fayettveille street advanced the in-vaders with a victorious cry of "Wake 'em up" on every lip. Near the conter of the street was found that in a street was found that in a street was found that in a street was found that is a street was found be street was found to be street was found to be street was found to be street was street where the opnosing forces met No-where the opnosing forces met Nowhere the opposing forces met. No-body knows who fired the first shot, however, the gallant troops met bravely and according to gossip, the "War" could have been stopped right here and still have held the reright here and still have held the re-cord for fistic encounters on RAL-EIGHTS principal thoroughtare. The advance of the Wake Forest forces up Fayetteville street also caused the Kaiser's Belgium record to be sent shimmering. The "Peace at any price" delegates were on hand early. You know them-the RALEIGH "Discoats". What is up to the two ano use, the fight went on. Eggs were fying fast and furlous, coming from both sides of the streets. Some were of the opinton that the aero squadron lies, first ngain weit, off. on spice verse both sides of the streets. Some were of the opinion that the aero squadron had made its appearance, while oth-ers said it was masked batteries. After about its nither the strength intrace and not be the strength intrace and not be the strength peace delegration carried the night with the Techs retreating up Fay-streville street. The Wake Forest battalons gatherde their scattered forces and prepared to again a time process and prepared to again a time selves and prepared to the strength and many prepared to the strength or Hargett and Fayetteville the selves and prepared for trench fight ing and extensive military move-ment, were vident over the entre-vancing up Fayetteville street. The way that Wake Forest bunch waded into the intrenched Tech forces would have made "Der Kitchner and "gates Over" accord batteries were also taking up the bombardment and egg shrappel was fying like con-tend strengt by high like con-tend strengt by high like con-tend strengt be high your by an automobile being pulled from under the wheels. Another student suf-fered several broken teeth. The peace boat with the bluecoats as crew the "Ner" just it. Just they stopped-bed the fighting across the creek. "Comparitive calm prevailed over the entry front" after this engage-teen with the Tech forces retreat in with the Tech forces retreat of Neredith with mighty few of the candles burning. The battle was next taken up on the north side of the capital, where the outh side of the capital, where the north side of the capital, where where again in order. After recon-noltering and considering the advice orbitring and considering the advice walk, but not before some unknown party had got in some Mexican am-bush stuff and spattered more good hew fruit. This was accom-forces gathered and took "trans-ports" for other ports, The Wake Forest crew scattered over town and comparative calm prevailed again over the waretricken area. The in-over the waretricken area. The in-train, leaving the occupied tertroory without a garrison. So everything train, leaving the occupied teritory without a garrison. So everything is a terground, and a construction official way of the second second second official way correspondent, "Compar-ative calm prevails without anything important to report." But RAL-EIGH people have been more em-phatically covinced that Sherman was not joking when he gave his ophion of the war.

Billie gets a flunkslip, Then a letter from his Ma; Next a talk from Dr. Tommy, And a jack-up from his Pa.

Billie feels so awful lonely, Evil thoughts with him abide; First he thinks of fightin' and murderin,' Then concludes on suicide.

Then he borrows a fellow's pistol, Seats himself upon the bed, Puts the flunkslip down beside him, And the pistoi to his head.

But at this nigh-fatal moment, Comes his room-mate, raising sand, Saying, "Hello, Billie, boy, Have you seen the Grand?"

Now if you should have the pleasure And to the Grand should go, Gaze up toward the front 'cause Billie's on the bald-head row.

Dr. Harrison—Mr. Donnell, please parse this sentence. "Stallings loves somebody."

Donnell—Well, Stallings is a noun because it's the name of a thing; loves is a conjunction because it joins Stallings to somebody, and somebody is a verb because it governs the noun.

To You

To you:

Who have slapped me on the back, Lured me to sit upon a tack; Who told me that I need not fear, Turned around and drank my beer; Who have bragged upon my silks, Beat me out of chocolate milks; Stole my money, won my bets, Beat me out of cigarettes; Then you try my hair to curl, Beat me out of my best girl; Told me secrets, it's a fact, Cussed me out behind my back.

Analytics

Teil me not in countless numbers, Analytics develops the mind! For the brain's not dead that grumbles At the loci of a line.

Analytics is deep, and useless, But the "Dip" is still our goal, So we strive to overcome it, But we long to leave the fold.

Living alumni oft remind us, We can pass and join their line, And departing carry with us Useless junk crammed in our minds. C. B. M. (With apologies to Longfellow)

- Commandant: What is the use of barbed wire in defense?

Weatherly: It is fine to knock off bullets.

Retrospect

Our task is complete, and it is with a genuine feeling of relief that we turn the finished book over to our supreme critics—our readers. We have not attempted to produce a master-piece, but we feel that the thoughts and scenes depicted here will long continue to ive in the hearts of all who cherish our Alma Mater. If this volume of the AGROMECK shall help to keep alive these memories it will have accomplished its mission.

We wish to express to our co-laborers our appreciation for their assistance in this arduous task, and we place upon the shoulders of those who were negligent their part of the blame for our shortcomings.
