Capt. Frederick E. Phelps

United States Army (Retired)

APTAIN FREDERICK E. PHELPS, U. S. Army, was born at Saint Mary's, Ohio, October 8, 1847.

His father was a lawyer, but owned and worked a large farm near the town, and Captain Phelps early learned to work. In the winter he attended the village school.

In 1865, he received an appointment as Cadet at the United States Military Academy at West Point, graduating June 15, 1870, number thirty-seven in a class of fifty-eight.

He was appointed Second Lieutenant in the 8th U. S. Cavalry, to date from June 15, 1870, and after spending his graduation leave of three months at home, joined his troop at Fort Craig, New Mexico, where he served until July, 1871, when he was transferred to Fort Bayard, New Mexico, where he served until December, 1875, with one leave of absence (sick) in 1874. From December, 1875, to June, 1876, he was employed in building the U. S. Military Telegraph Line from Sante Fe, New Mexico, to San Diego, Cal.—the first line built south of Sante Fe, or in Arizona.

His regiment had meantime been transferred to Texas, where he joined it and served with it from 1876 to 1888, except 1884 to 1887, when he was on duty at the A. and M. College of Kentucky, at Lexington, Ky.

During this time he served at Forts Brown, Ringgold, McIntosh, Clark, Del Rio and Davis—all forts along the Rio Grande, and constantly engaged in scouting and patrolling the country against Indians and Mexican marauders.

He was engaged in fights with the Apache Indians at Mount Graham and Horse Shoe Cannons, Arizona, in August, 1871, and at Saragossa and Sierra Carmen mountains, Old Mexico, in 1877 and 1878.

In 1879, he was promoted First Lieutenant, 8th Cavalry, after nearly nine years service as Second Lieutenant, and, finally, was promoted Captain 8th Cavalry, September, 1889, after nineteen years service as a Lieutenant.

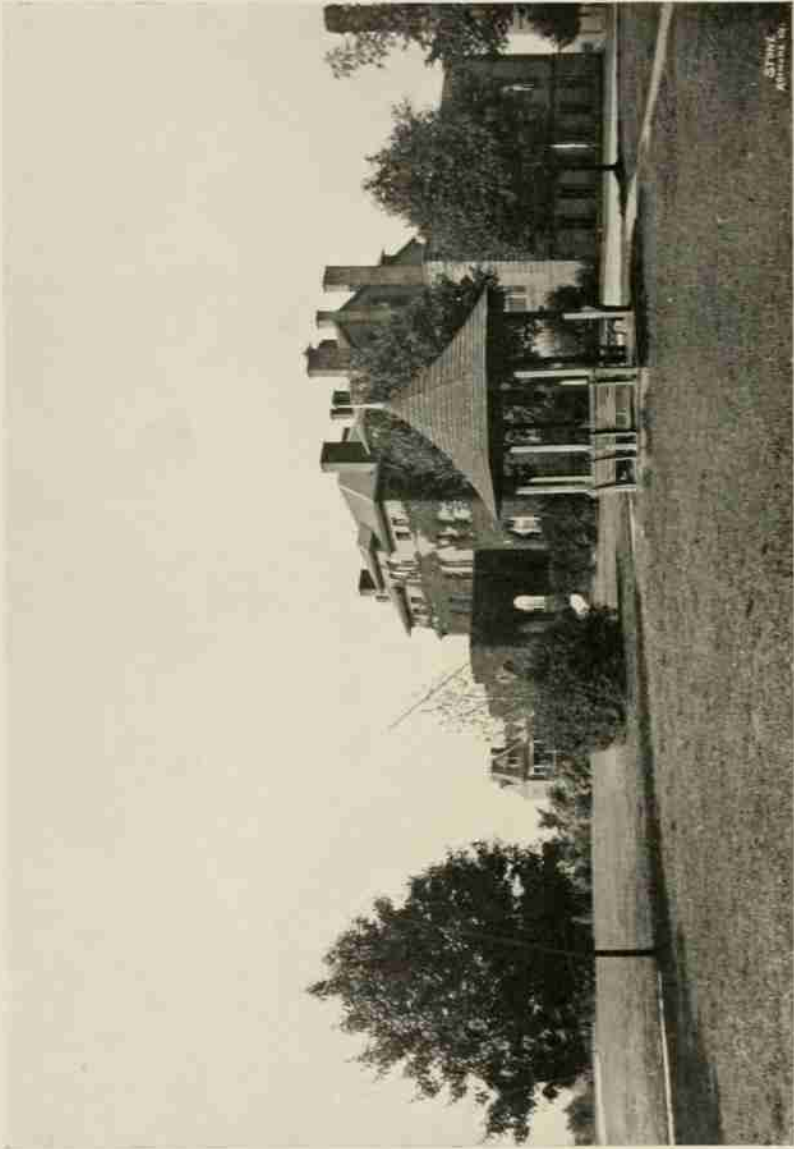

In 1888 he accompanied his Regiment in the longest consecutive march in this country—from Texas to North Dakota—2,000 miles, and taking four months.

His station was Fort Yates, North Dakota, where he was on duty until July, 1890, when failing health caused him to go on sick leave, and he was retired from active duty April 20, 1891, for "Injuries received in line of duty," settling at Urbana, Ohio. Here he went into the manufacturing business until July, 1900, when the War Department detailed him as Instructor of Military Science and Tactics at the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, at West Raleigh, N. C., where he is still on duty.

EDITORIAL

After months of weary work and many disappointments, it is our pleasure to present to its readers this the second volume of the AGROMECK.

In the preparation of this volume many sacrifices have been made, and it has been our earnest endeavor to make it reflect credit upon our institution. However, we realize the annual is not what we had planned for it to be, and has many defects, but we offer no apologies, as we have done the best we could.

We wish to express our indebtedness to the advertisers, to the Artist Club for its generous help, and especially to a member of that club, J. B. Lynch, to whom this volume of the AGROMECK owes whatever attraction it may possess. We also wish to express our appreciation of the financial aid rendered by the President, Dr. G. T. Winston, and of the unfailing aid of Prof. D. H. Hill, in getting out this volume.

Senior History

LOOKING back over our college career, we see many reasons why the Class of 1904 should be proud of its record. It is not the purpose of the historian to record every incident of our life at A. and M., for to do so would require more space than that allotted him. So it is only some of the more important events in which '04 has figured that he shall mention here.

As a class we have been free from most of the divisions and strifes so common in all college organizations. In electing our officers for each year, we believe we have chosen the men who were best suited to lead the class for that year. In scholarship we have established an unprecedented record for this College, as nearly one-half of the men on the honor-roll for the whole time we have been here were members of '04. In proportion to the number of members we have had more on the honor-roll, and have made fewer conditions, than any other class that has ever matriculated at A. and M.

On the athletic field we have been represented by some of the best athletes the College has ever boasted; and whenever the Athletic Association has been in need of money, '04 has given cheerfully.

There were sixty-one of us who registered as Freshmen in the fall of 1900. We were practically exempt from the kind of welcome(?) usually extended to new students at college, perhaps more on account of the awe inspired in the hearts of the Sophomores by a new Commandant than by us. Of course a few of our men sang or "bear-danced" a little, and it is even possible that one or two may have gotten their complexions slightly(?) stained, but we were comparatively free from all forms of hazing. Within a month after entering college, we were well organized, with Harding as our President, and had mustered enough courage to have a class foot-ball team on the field, which defeated the Sophomores. This was the first and only time in the history of the College that a Freshman team has beaten a Sophomore team.

It was about this time that a social reception was given in our honor in old Watauga Hall by the three upper classes, an occasion long to be remembered by some of our fellows as the opening of their "calicoing" careers in Raleigh. By means of this and several other receptions, given by various churches in Raleigh, we were made to feel pretty well at home in the Capital City by Christmas. However, we were not sorry when Christmas came, so we could go home and relate the many adventures which had befallen us at college.

After Christmas, we returned to college, determined to make even a more glorious record than we had made during the previous fall; and as a result of this determination we were well represented by Gulley and Miller on the College unc, Miller doing all the pitching for the first team that season. We put out a class team, which again took the honors from the Sophomores, and aside from the fact that there were a few (!) conditions registered against us, we closed our Freshman year at college with more than usual credit. We were the first class to enter the College since the standard for entrance had been raised, and as we were only a few months behind the Sophomores, these wise (?) men had freely predicted our early and complete failure in scholarship. But instead of a failure, we had taken an enviable position in this phase of college work.

Our number was reduced to fifty-three when we re-entered College the next September, but these fifty-three realized that they had a reputation to sustain; and that their intention to sustain this reputation was carried out is shown by the College records for that year. With J. Y. Hedrick for our President, and twenty of our members drilling awkward squads and wearing corporals' chevrons, we had little doubt but that we were the most important body on the "Hill." We have never learned the exact grounds on which the Commandant saw fit to make any of us corporals, but it is certain that there were no prouder nor more self-important set of fellows in College at that time than we. And even now, when all the higher cadet officers are filled by members of our class, we are forced to believe that the College could not run without the CORPORALS. It was during the first term of our Sophomore year that the College suffered two great losses in the death of Mrs. Susan C. Carroll on the 6th of September, and the burning of Watauga Hall on the night of November the 29th. Mrs. Carroll had been Matron of the College since its foundation in 1889, and had endeared herself as a mother to every student in College. The title, "The Students' Friend," engraved on the marble tablet, placed in the Hospital by the students in her memory, conveys but a slight idea of the love and esteem in which all held this noble woman.

The Watauga fire, a few months later, destroyed our kitchen and dining-hall, and many of the boys rooming in the building lost all their books and clothing. It looked at first as if the College must close its doors, but Dr. Winston did not see things that way, and in a few days the cooking and eating were going on in the chemical laboratory rooms in the basement of Main Building, just as if Watauga had never existed. To be sure we were in somewhat cramped quarters, but it was much better than closing College at that time of year.

With our Junior year came new duties and more work in the class-room, but we had lost that sense of self-importance peculiar to Sophomores, and were beginning to take a more sober view of matters. We began to realize more fully than ever the importance of steady application to lessons and duty; and instead of feeling the College could not get along without us, we were learning that we were receiving all the benefits and the College bearing the burden. Our enrollment was forty for this year, and we elected Rogers President. Our prospects for the year were as cheerful as at the beginning of any previous year, and but for the loss of three of our best men, the entire year would have been a pleasant one for us. Rogers, Hedrick and Foster went home during the first term. Gulley and Gaither represented our class on the best foot-ball team the College has ever put on the gridiron, and Miller represented us on the baseball team.

A. and M.'s first track team was organized this year, and though the meet we had arranged with Wake Forest was cancelled, we held our own field day, the result of which was that the Juniors won more points than any other class, and thus the College championship. In scholarship we were even more successful, as one-half of the men on the honor-roll were Juniors.

Now we have again returned to College, and this time we have registered as Seniors. We are somewhat disappointed at the sensation produced at being a Senior. Until this year we have always looked upon Seniors as great and learned men, and to be a Senior was a high ambition which we dared hardly breathe to our most intimate friends. But alas! Commencement Day is rapidly approaching, when we must leave College and offer ourselves to the world as men. Shall we be worthy of the title, and will the world accept us as such? Have we formed regular and business-like habits? Have we so conducted ourselves as to win the respect and confidence of our teachers and fellow-students? Have we been square and honest in our dealings? Have we learned to take defeat as an incentive to greater effort? Have we learned to obey as well as to give orders? The opportunity to do and learn these things has been before us for four years, and the future success of each man must surely depend largely on the manner in which he has treated this opportunity.

That every Senior may attain the highest success in his future life and be an honor to his Alma Mater, is the final wish of

THE HISTORIAN.

FAREWELL.

Four years ! how fast the time has flown,
Too soon it seems to say " goodbye " ;
And though our college course is done,
We fain would linger, linger nigh.

Four years ! ah, pleasures they have brought
To us who must now go away ;
What joys we've had with new found friends,
Those friendships in our hearts will stay.

Not all was pleasure ; many a time
When first we met, our hearts repined,
Before in friendships holy bonds,
Release from longings we did find.

Ah, yes ! 'tis hard to say adieu,
Oh ! A. and M. our college dear ;
Our sweetest thoughts shall be with you ;
And now we leave you with a tear.

A tear, perhaps ; but life's ahead,
Let others come and fill our place ;
Forth to the battle we must go ;
Farewell ! we leave you now in peace.

Class Prophecy

THE SPRING OF 1924 had been unusually warm, and so it was on the night of the 25th of May I was lying on a hammock on my piazza, at my summer cottage, "Infinity," on the seashore. My wife and family being away, and I having no one with whom to converse, my thoughts began to wander. Soon I happened to think of the date of the month. Now what happened to me on the 25th of May? Suddenly I remembered that it was the anniversary of my graduation day. Yes, twenty years ago that very day I had proudly stepped forward to receive my long-hoped-for diploma. Twenty years ago that very night had she, whom I now proudly speak of as my wife, attended the Commencement dance with me. These thoughts gave rise to a wave of pleasant memories of my college days. I thought of my Freshman year, its trials and hardships; and of other circumstances more cheery and refreshing. I wondered where that valorous band of thirty-five youths were, and what they were doing.

* * * * *

Going into my private study, I observed a large number of letters on my desk. I read them, and they were like this:

DEAR B.:—Upon graduation, I returned to my native heath and began to cast eyes about me for some dignified pursuit which would be in keeping with my calm and stately demeanor. This I could not find, so I concluded that I would evolve one for myself. Hence my name is now famous for having inaugurated the Anti-Mulo-Electro-Mechanico system of farming. My success shows what a man can do, even tho' he grow up under the shadow of the sheltering palm.

Yours,

NELSON ADAMS.

DEAR B.:—After years of deprivations and starvation, the common reward of a wandering musician, I came to the conclusion that music should be made for man and not man for music. At this time my inventive genius asserted itself, and I conceived a most remarkable instrument, which is known to the world as the Automatic-Tuneless-Claro-Tromnetti. The soul-inspiring music which we get from this instrument is of a very wonderful variety. It can only be compared to the combined tunes of a saw-mill, a braying mule, a pig in a fence, with the assistance of the sounds from an A. and M. radiator early on a cold morning. I am now organizing a trust to manufacture this most wonderful machine. How much stock will you subscribe for?

Yours,

H. L. ALDERMAN.

DEAR B.:—Soon after leaving College, I accepted a position with the Rubifoam Co., and while working in their laboratory I discovered an antidote for the liquor habit. My antidote is a sure cure and is guaranteed to do away with dispensaries. It is to be manufactured by a gigantic trust, of which I am the head. The chief offices of the trust will be at Auburn, Raleigh and Method, with a small branch office at Oberlin.

Yours sincerely,

E. C. BAGWELL.

DEAR B.:—There is little need that I should write much, for each period of my checkered career has been attended by deeds of conquest and achievements not equalled by any bill-poster known to man. Knowing that my talents were not at all developed by my course at the A. and M., I continued my classical studies at various institutions of the country, everywhere being recognized as an accomplished scholar and orator. After a long period of recuperation from a condition of nervous prostration, induced by hard study and overwork, I became a very successful lawyer. My original commentary on the Laws of Finland are much sought after. Several years spent in organizing the new republic Afghanistan, and was fondly called the "Great Shiek Heap-Talker."

Yours,

E. P. BAILEY.

DEAR B.—After trying many trades, we have at last found one for which we are well suited. We are engaged in a profitable business in Paris. Our present occupation, while not requiring very much English, Political Economy or Physies, does require an exceedingly accurate knowledge of Mechanics of Material, also of Calculus, as we have numerous delicate measurements to make. We are designers of fashionable habiliments for the feminine sex. We have scores of calls from many beautiful damoselles, all of whom we wait on with our enchanting grace.

Yours truly,

THE BARBER BROS.

DEAR B.:—I take my pen in hand to let you know that I am still endeavoring to be an orator, although I am Anson County's most prominent agriculturist; I take great interest in politics, and occasionally I address my fellow-citizens upon the economic issues of the day. My addresses are listened to with profound interest, owing to the firm democratic principles which are enumerated in them.

Yours of old,

W. A. BARRETT.

DEAR B.:—Having heard that the satisfied man never rises, I decided that if I were to become a great man, I must begin by being dissatisfied. First I became dissatisfied with our form of government, and led a reform movement, but was defeated in my purpose. Next I tried to consolidate all the Christian religions into one, with myself at the head, but this also met with disaster. I am now trying to obtain a charter for the Woman's Suffrage Syndicate of the Congo Free State.

Yours truly,

T. ELDRIDGE.

DEAR B.:—I have just returned from New York, where, at the meeting of the Housewives' Association of America, I debated with some of the most able members as to whether a broom or a dish-rag is of the most use to the housewife. I am now preparing a paper on "Which was first, the chicken or the egg?" I am sending you under separate cover my celebrated tract entitled, "The Whys and Wherefores of Predestination as Applied to Christian Science."

Yours truly,

J. W. FARRIOR.

DEAR B.:—We-l-l, I'm pretty busy, but I will spare the time to tell you what I am doing. Of course, being a many-sided and broad man, I am engaged in several different kinds of business, such as selling shoes, socks, soap and calendars. Of course you know that I am the most successful farmer throughout the State. All my farming implements are of the latest pattern, and were all won by me in essay contests, which fact goes to prove that it is a good thing to be able to write well. Business keeps me occupied, but at times I leave it and give myself over to pleasure. At these times I always add some choice bit to the literature of the world. My recent book, "What a Great Man I Am," will vie with Scott in its delightfulness of style, and with Carlyle in its philosophy. My military knowledge is recognized by my fellow-citizens, as they have elected me sixth corporal of the North Wilkesboro Light Infantry. Women always admired my military bearing, and as this position enables me to wear a uniform, I have accepted it. I was once supposed to be generally green, but now my general information on all subjects is the wonderment of the country. I could tell you of many more of my triumphs, but modesty prevents.

Yours truly,

W. W. FINLEY.

DEAR B.:—Ever my greatest fault was being in love, and this finally became chronic, in that I am now the figurehead of a family. Among numerous domestic duties, I find time to experiment along the lines of my cherished idea, that the quality and nutritive value of food depends upon the length of time it is masticated. However, I have not so well grounded this belief in my family as to lessen my grocery bill.

Yours,

G. W. FOUSHEE.

DEAR B.:—Experience is costly, and therefore must be sold for a high price. I have experience as a foot-ball player. This experience cost me many a broken bone, bruised shoulder, arm, leg, etc. Hence you find me selling my experience to Yale, where I have reached my cherished ambition as football coach. Most of my time is spent in coaching the team, but at odd times I devote myself to literary pursuits, such as writing college songs, class yells and etc. My work, both as coach and in literature, has been highly criticised, and I am expecting a large increase in my salary. The women are still bewitched by my entrancing smiles.

Yours truly,

E. W. GAITHER.

DEAR B.:—Having just finished my sermon, and feeling much spiritual contentment, I now turn to more earthly things. As was long ago predicted, I am a servant of the Lord. This is quite a bit up the ladder of fame from the worldly occupation of a peanut vendor. Having endured four years of temptation while at college without being led astray, I realized that I was capable of ministering to mankind in the most acceptable manner. Among my congregation there is a large number of fair women, who are attracted to the church by my most charming grace. These ladies, strange to say, pay more attention to my learned dissertations than they do to their neighbors' dress.

Yours in the faith,

P. S. GRIERSON.

DEAR B.:—The extensive experience on the gridiron has taught me just how pigskins should be scrambled. Knowing from experience what food is necessary for those who have wasted their brains away by too close application to study, it naturally became me to put in practice some of my profound knowledge upon the preparation and disposition of food. So I have at last reached a lofty and exalted position in this new science. I am consulting chef for the Waldorf-Astoria, Yarboro, and Hotel de Skinner.

Yours truly,

J. P. GULLEY.

DEAR B.:—As you know, my business ability was remarked upon during my college days—so it was after my graduation. For some time I was traveling salesman for the great manufacturer of alphabet blocks. Seized with an ambition to compass the whole field of knowledge, I went on the stage, starring in the great melodrama, "Love and a Cigar," achieving instantaneous success, especially with the cigar. Retiring at the end of the season, I had a short and brilliant career in local politics, at one time serving as chairman of the Board of Directors of the Pitt County Board Reservation. At last I gave up all future successes to marry an heiress, but refusing to agree to obey her, during the ceremony she broke the match. I grew weary, and tried novel writing. Soon I am to leave for Manchuria, where I will be patronized by a Russian princess of that country.

Always remember,

JARVIS B. HARDING.

DEAR B.:—During my college course, I noticed upon several occasions that the text-books were incomprehensible to the ordinary student. Hence, with my accustomed desire to better the condition of my fellow-man, I set to work to write a set of text-books on Engineering subjects. My work, which has lately been finished, can easily be comprehended by a child six years old. I am awaiting the criticisms of the press.

Your friend,

Geo. H. HODGES.

DEAR B.:—Goldsboro being too limited a field for rightful appreciation of my celestial music, I sought a broader and more appreciative field in which to display my talent. After many adventures, I finally reached Silver City, Col. I recently entered into a long-distance musical contest. I was sure of winning, as I played "Marching Through Georgia"; but one of my competitors played "Beyond the Gates of Paradise," and as they would not let me in, I lost. I leave in the morning for Nickleboro, where I hope to have better luck.

Yours of old,

BRANTON F. HUGGINS.

DEAR B.:—I really have a great deal of business to attend to, but will try to tell you what I have been doing these last twenty years. You know it was ever a great desire and ambition of mine to manage a political campaign, and I may say that my desire has been gratified—Gee! I've been asleep two hours. Well, anyway I am managing Thomas Brass's campaign, and I am sure he will be elected. He is running for street-hand, and if he is elected I shall credit it to my political sagacity. Well, I must go out and politic some more.

Solong,

HILL M. HUNTER.

DEAR B.:—Soon after the termination of my inhibition of knowledge in the year '04, I answered a letter seen in an International Marriage Correspondence Bureau from a fair princess of Japan, who was just sailing for San Fran., and received the following by wireless telegraphy: "Meet me in 'Cisco December 5, and you shall be my king." I did not reach the city until December 6, on account of difficulty in Utah, and have been disgusted with womankind ever since. My scientific enthusiasm has led me into many adventures. In one of them I tested the effect of hypnotic suggestion on a grizzly bear, and was rescued in a somewhat disorganized condition. I have lately attained much distinction by my literary production entitled, "My Impressions of Things in General," which will settle all hitherto disputed points in the scientific world.

Let me be remembered,

JESSE M. HOWARD.

DEAR B.:—My extensive and comprehensive knowledge of poultry has led me to seek broader fields for the putting in practice of my knowledge, than those offered by North Carolina. So I am now in the Philippines, where I am High Cockorum of the poultry yards for the Cavite Cock Fighting Association. My presence here seems to have imparted unusual vigor to the cocks, since we have won every main since I took charge. Needless to say the owners are much pleased with my services, and already I hear talk of doubling my already large salary. The dazzling brown eyes of a Philippine maiden have long since made me forget the very existence of the co-eds of our Senior year.

Yours truly,

WM. KERR.

DEAR B.:—Having surveyed all available routes till there was nothing left to survey, I suddenly found myself without occupation, with a wife and a goodly number of small "Abes" to feed. 'Twas now that my unlimited experience in society for the first time became of any use to me. At this time the social columns of the New York Herald were about to be discontinued owing to the lack of a competent editor, so the position of social editor was offered me. My intimate knowledge of the ins and outs of the social realm made it possible for me to make this department a great and lasting success. My accurate knowledge of construction problems enables me to easily dissect the most carefully constructed plot of a foreign nobleman against an American heiress.

Yours sincerely,

E. E. LINCOLN.

DEAR B.:—My mechanical engineering education has proved of much importance to me, since it enables me to easily direct the working of my vast peanut-picking plant at Laurinburg. All the machinery in my plant was designed by myself.

Your old friend,

J. FAIRLY McINTYRE.

DEAR B.:—Height I have, but wealth I have never obtained. My destiny as finally read to me was to be an addition to the side-shows which travel with Walter L. Main's enormous aggregation. I am the living skeleton, the only one of the kind the world has ever seen. Of course my occupation does not require much exertion, for if it did I could not fill it acceptably either to myself or to my employers. The St. Mary's girls still admire the gracefulness of my bearing and the enchanting waviness of my hair whenever the circus exhibits on Cameron's field. It is almost time for the evening performance to begin, so I must close.

Your sincere friend,

JAS. McKIMMON.

DEAR B.:—While at college I was always well acquainted with diamonds, so it was natural for me to follow up my acquaintance, and here I am in South Africa in search of diamonds. While I do not now run around the corners of diamonds, I have married a Zulu maiden, and am well established under the bamboo tree.

Yours truly,

J. A. MILLER.

DEAR B.:—Finding that the energetic life led by a civil engineer was not alluring to me, I decided upon something that was more suited to my temperament. My new vocation was that of an author. Remembering that it was a difficult thing for some people to understand a joke, I decided to write a series of books on the subject. My works are known as "The Dissection of a Joke," "The Construction of a Joke," "Key to Jokes." These volumes are all 8vo. and cloth bound, and sell for 25 cents per copy. Help!

Your old friend,

WM. F. MORSON.

DEAR B.:—It has been said that to be a successful playwright one must have had actual experience along the lines which he wishes to portray. Most certainly my extensive experience with and through knowledge of womankind most eminently fits me to be an exponent of love scenes. This I have taken up as my life work. The love scenes in the plays written by me have received great applause wherever presented, owing to their vivacity and realistic appearance.

Yours,

L. A. NEAL.

DEAR B.:—Being of a sympathetic nature and working to better the condition of the inhabitants of Western North Carolina, I have organized the Patton Automatic Rapid Transit Company. This company has for its main object the protection of the moonshiners. By means of it the oppressed vendors of the sparkling mountain dew are able to keep without the clutches of the revenue officers. Needless to say my moonshine friends keep me well supplied, so if you want to have a jolly good time,

Call on,

W. J. PATTON.

DEAR B.:—You will remember that I always wanted to be a military man, and I believe I can safely say that I am now one. I am Commander-in-Chief of the Army of Panama, which has almost as many men in it as I used to have in my old company at the A. and M. After I whistle taps at night, I leave my faithful soldiers to guard the camp and wander forth to conquer some fair senorita's palpitating heart. At the latter business I am a great success, as I had much valuable practice during my cadet days.

Your old friend,

F. C. PHELPS.

DEAR MR. B.:—Pap is off on a tour collecting funds to run this institution, so I take the liberty of writing you. Pap is now steward of the Home for Disabled Pugilists, and of course he is a good one, as he had much experience as steward of the Oakdale Club. Pap occasionally ventures into the field of literature, but is always forced into an ignominious retreat. His "Art of Boxing" is perhaps his best literary production.

Good-bye,

W. W. RANKIN'S SON.

DEAR B.:—My career of a student ended with my college days, and I regret to say I did not follow the lines along which I was educated. Now behold me conducting a general store at the cross-roads, where day by day I deal out coffee, sugar, calico, ladies' hose, etc. At night, with unselfish devotion to the betterment of the standard of voice culture of my county, I gather around me the country lasses far and near and teach to them the rudiments of voice culture. My instructions affect the heart as well as the voice.

Yours sincerely,

R. P. REECE.

DEAR B.:—I suppose I am the only member of our illustrious class whom the hand of fate has so cruelly kept just out of the ring of matrimony. It is indeed a terrible fate to be kept in that tortuous condition, but it seems as though I will never be able to better it. Once I had a chance, but alas! that has passed. Instead of speaking then in terms of loving endearment to her, who filled most of the requirements which I thought a wife should have, I waited for her who would fill them all, and alas! I am waiting yet. Fate is against me, and I seem doomed to live the remainder of my life as a crusty old bachelor, keeping bachelor's quarters and waiting, watching and longing for her to turn up.

Yours for old times' sake,

WM. RICHARDSON, JR.

DEAR B.:—Feeling that it would be easier to live by the product of the brain rather than by the practical experience gained on our College farm, I resolved on a unique scheme for my livelihood. Being something of a biologist, I cornered all of the insect pests of the country and am keeping them confined. To the farmers I sell insurance policies against damages to their crops by such pests. The results of my scheme are certainly gratifying to me. I am now engaged in formulating another scheme. I hope soon to bottle the weather and sell different grades of it.

Yours truly,

J. C. TEMPLE.

DEAR B.:—Being ever of an inquiring mind, I inquired as to why the magnetic needle is more affected by the north pole than the south pole. Receiving no satisfactory reason for a reply, I resolved to find out for myself. This necessitated a trip to both poles. While at the south pole, some capitalists of that district suggested that I organize a company to build a railroad from pole to pole. This I agreed to do, and am now surveying the route for it.

Sincerely yours,

JOE K. WAITT.

DEAR B.:—My great success in life I attribute to the magnificent training I received at college. I have been engaged in many different projects, all of which under the touch of my magic hand have turned out unusually successful. Having discovered the secret of aerial navigation, I designed my wingless auto air car, which is meeting with immense success. I am expecting to get rich on a soup filter which I have designed for use at the N. C. C. of A. and M. A. For diversion I will say that I have been organizing a movement for the amalgamation and dignification of the dead beats of America. Of course I will be critic of the literary branch of the organization. Lately I have been chaperoning a class of young people in their researches through the fields of Democracy, Plutocracy, Theosophy and Theology.

Truly yours,

M. E. WEEKS.

DEAR B.:—I will try to tell you of my most miserable existence. I am still tormented by the feminine sex, who, it seems, will never let me alone long enough to let me enjoy a peaceful smoke. I am never free from their sirenic charms, but am always at their beck and call, and its getting to be a big nuisance. Hoping you are having better luck, I am,

Sincerely your friend,

A. C. WHARTON.

Junior History

IT IS with no little trepidation that I assume the task of enumerating the deeds of the glorious class of '05. An apology is due the class for what I am about to write, because I feel that no man, be he what he may, can completely and without error tell of the progress and achievements of this noble array of Juniors. The class in selecting me should have chosen more wisely, for I can paint but an ill picture of our brilliant past.

We began our college career nearly three years ago, and those who first saw us on the Hill, truthfully said (no doubt) that we looked like an exceptional crowd of backwoodsmen. It was not long, however, before we proved to these same people that, even if we were disciples of the plow, we could as successfully follow the intricate paths which would lead towards Wisdom's Halls.

After our greenness had in part been both polished and rubbed off by the ever-willing Sophomores, we settled down to work, both as regards academic labor and in helping to build up college athletics. We delighted the professors by the aptitude and willingness with which we took hold of our various college duties and also captured the heart of the football coach by the interest we at once took in football. Two of our number—Shannonhouse and Richardson—made the college, while those who failed organized a class eleven, and when challenged to a game by the doughty Sophs., at once accepted, and though defeated we were neither discouraged nor disheartened. At this early period we began shaping our future and our first evidence of class spirit and originality was shown when we voted to separate ourselves from the first year short-course men so that our class was now composed of only the regular four-year Freshmen.

In the following spring, two of our classmates—Shannonhouse and Hadley—made the "varsity" baseball team, and our other baseball talent organized a class team which, on account of its strength, remained unchallenged. Finals soon rolled around, and after emerging from the clouds of battle we found three of our class-mates on the honor-roll.

The summer holidays soon passed, and we returned to our beloved College as Sophomores. We missed several familiar faces, but their place was in part taken by a few new men who at once entered into the life of our class. We remembered the polishing we received when Freshmen, and in return we thoroughly doctored up the new arrivals. The rats suffered, some say shamefully, but as gentlemen, we had to administer an all-sufficient dose.

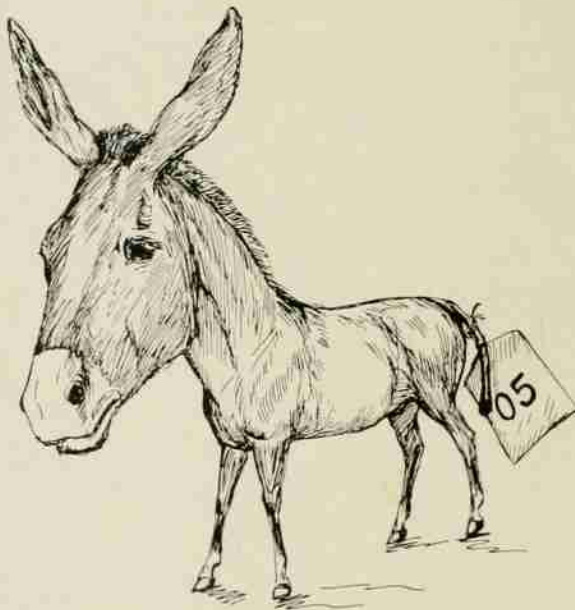

In baseball we again surged to the front, giving to the college such men as Hadley, Shannonhouse, Chreitzburg and Howle. And to the track team, Squires, Graydon, Howle and Seifert. This year we also put five of our members on the coveted honor-roll, and at the annual Leazar debate, C. W. Martin, the only contesting Sophomore, succeeded in winning the medal. His opponents were all Juniors, and this fact added that much more brilliancy to his victory.

Another summer and then back again, this time as stately, dignified Juniors. We again missed several familiar faces, but what was left was still the same loyal body as of yore. Four of our class-mates made the college football eleven—Squires, Sykes, Seifert and Hadley. Our class-team defeated the Sophomores 5—0, a fact which they were very sore over.

As to our future, it is difficult to make a prediction. Suffice it to say that we will in all things strive to outdo our previous efforts. We have tried to be leaders, to glorify the College as well as ourselves, and a glance at our past will convince even the most hardened cynic that we have not proved a failure. Class spirit has ever been our slogan, and as a class we have been the embodiment of all that class spirit implies. We have met discouragements and defeats as one man, shoulder to shoulder we have striven to excel, and will continue to strive. Nothing has yet daunted us, and if we in the future but equal our past, we can truly say that our college life has not been in vain. All honor, therefore, to the Class of '05.

HISTORIAN.

Sophomore History

CHAPTER I.

WHEN the last carriage had rolled up and emptied its seats in front of old "Watauga Hall," in the fall of 1902, there was left at the College a truly variegated band. It has been said of us that we presented a very "seedy" appearance; but as the tall majestic oak, with its spreading branches, springs from the acorn, so has the Class of '06 arisen from the "seeds" planted in September, 1902, to a body of intelligent young men, who are a credit to their College and State. During the small hours of the night on the third day after our arrival, we were suddenly aroused from our peaceful slumbers by a loud knock upon the door, and a stern voice said, "Open up, rats, we are coming in anyway." This was our first and only visit from our friends, the Sophomores. The Sophomores administered unto us what they termed the "college initiation." This initiation was very pleasant, and we enjoyed it exceedingly. To the members of our class who barracked in "Bloody Fourth," I wish to say that they deserve praise for the noble manner in which they postponed their initiation for an indefinite period. Following the little episode of our initiation into college life, we met and organized our class. The first man nominated was elected, of course. This is the rule among Freshmen. We, however, being wiser than our predecessors, elected our first President for a term of only one month.

After the election of our new class officers we felt more at ease, and hence soon began to take an active part in college life.

In athletics we have taken a most prominent and active part. On the gridiron we are exceedingly well represented, having four men on the College team. This alone is a record which any class might envy.

On the 27th of May we got our Corporalships. Those of us who received them will never forget the exhilarating sensation that came with the appointment. Wellington, in the zenith of his glory did not feel himself a greater military genius than did the Corporals of '03.

CHAPTER II.

In September we returned to College with the joy that comes from being hailed as "old men," a term which can be appreciated only by those who have experienced it. Oh! the greatness of it all.

Ours is a great class, not only in numbers, but in every respect; great in brains; great in looks; great in power; but especially great in rare modesty; we sometimes think that we are not only it, but he, she, and it. At the beginning of the year we could not help feeling under obligations to impart to the "new cadets" some of the valuable information so kindly given us by the students of the preceding fall. About this time our class created quite a stir in the grim routine of college life. Perhaps I had better not go into details, but was it not our duty to teach politeness, gentility, obedience, college ways to the "new cadets"?

The election of our new officers was not held until the middle of September; in order that we might have time to select the best men. Following the election of new officers came work. Those of us who were given the glory of corporals' chevrons were promptly set to work to impart to the "new cadets" that in which we ourselves were so proficient (?)—a proper knowledge of military tactics.

On the gridiron we were again well represented. Those of us who could not play, could root, and we helped to win some victories by our systematic rooting. We had the best class football team that has ever been in the College. Our first accepted challenge was to the class of '05—to the class who boasted a score of thirty to nothing in their favor. We fear that it would have been better had they not "counted their chickens before they hatched," for 'twas surely a sorely disappointed class which stood on the side lines and saw the superior playing of the Sophs. against the toughness and greater weight of the Juniors, hold them down to a score of 5 to 0.

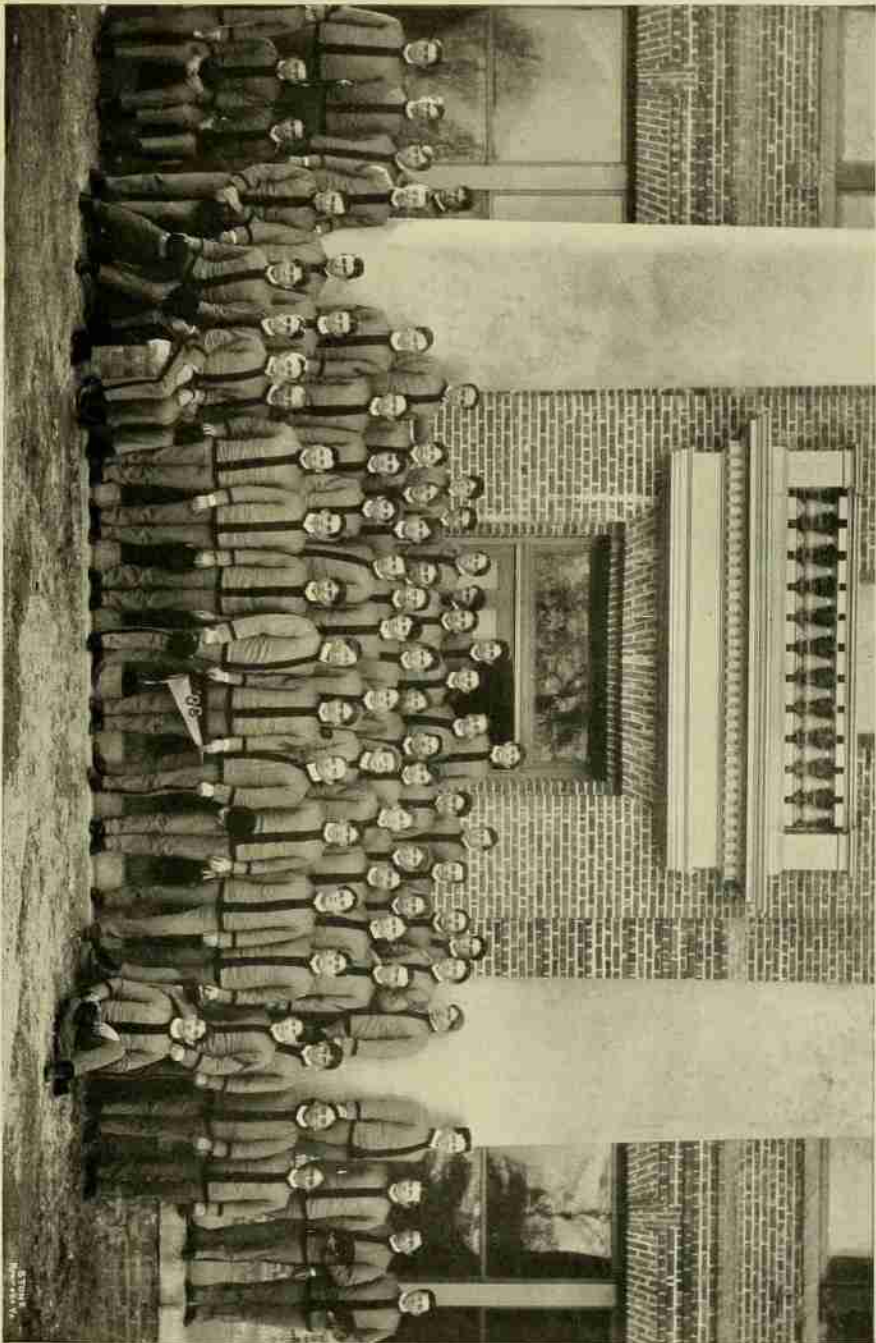

Christmas with all its pleasure and goodly numbers of holidays came, a welcome visitor, breaking into the hard study of the longest term in our school year. We welcomed the time, even as the little ones welcome the night when "Santa Claus" climbs down the chimney to their empty stockings. Yet it is not strange that this should be a time which is longed for by the college lad, for after his eyes have not feasted on the fair one of his dreams for something like four months, 'tis no wonder that he can hardly wait for the day when he may again take her little hands in his own and gaze with heavenly rapture into the liquid depths of her appealing eyes. After two weeks of indescribable pleasure, and a little deviation from the College grub, we returned to the College, better prepared to do the arduous work before us.

In January came our annual banquet, so dear to the hearts of loyal Sophomores. This was one of the most pleasant memories of our Sophomore year. We assembled seventy-five strong at the Yarborough House. Here there had been prepared for us a feast which the gods might have envied. The speeches and toasts delivered that night will become famous in the annals of the College. Raleigh certainly heard of loyalty to old "A. and M." that night.

Our history draws to a close. One month, and the session of 1903-'04 will be at an end, and finals will be upon us. The session has, I'll admit, not been without its trials, but the pleasures have far exceeded the trials, and in future years when we are no longer students of the College, we shall look back with pride and lasting tenderness to the year when we were Sophs.

Freshman History

AS 1903-'04, the first year of our college life, is slowly passing, and although our record is comparatively short, it is my duty, as Class Historian, to relate the achievements attained in so short a time.

In September of nineteen hundred and three, we, about one hundred and eight strong, came as knowledge-seekers to the A. and M. College. Although a small portion of the time allotted to us had been consumed, yet we have made improvements, and feel ourselves worthy to represent the Class of 1907.

After the first month of trials and nightly visits of our old enemies, the Sophomores, the boys became better acquainted and the class was organized with the following officers: Lynch, President; Carleton, Vice-President; Matthews, Secretary and Treasurer.

About this time the athletic season opened. Here our class holds an important position. We furnished the football teams, both College and scrubs, with good men, and still have a goodly number of promising candidates for later years. Also on the baseball, track, and tennis teams we are aiding in the upholding of our College colors.

Another organization in which we are taking an active part is the Glee and Mandolin Club. This club, although now in its infancy, promises to be one of the foremost in College. We can say that the success of the various clubs and athletic teams was due in no small degree to the material we furnished.

Our second step is about to be taken, and we can say a clean and pure record will represent us in the past year, and we hope that the records to follow will be duplicates.

The Class of '07

As I sit and ponder, ponder,
In my fancy all alone,
Comes a vision to my mem'ry
Of the faces I have known.

Oh, those faces, how I love them,
For each one recalls to me
Hours that we have spent together
When our hearts and minds were free.

'Mong the rest I see some boys
Rigged in uniforms of gray,
And there comes to me the mem'ry
Of my first dear college day.

It was on a day in autumn,
Just about nine months ago,
That we Freshmen came to college,
All its teachings for to know.

Ah! those first few days at college!
How we wished ourselves at home.
As we lonely, discontented
O'er the campus then did roam.

We were Freshmen, it is certain,
"Green" as any one could be;
But 'twas innocent behaviour,
Even Sophomores this could see.

Though they "guyed" us and they blacked us,
'Twas the best that could be done;
For it made us feel much stronger,
And it gave the Sophs. some fun.

And again I see in fancy,
As from mem'ry's cup I fill,
Here and there a corporal teaching
Us poor Freshmen how to drill.

But the days have swiftly flitted,
Yea, the months have rolled away.
With examinations 'fore us
We must never stop for play.

Now the Dr. gives us Physics;
Then another comes with Math. ;
English finds us most at fifty,
History failures! Captain's wrath.

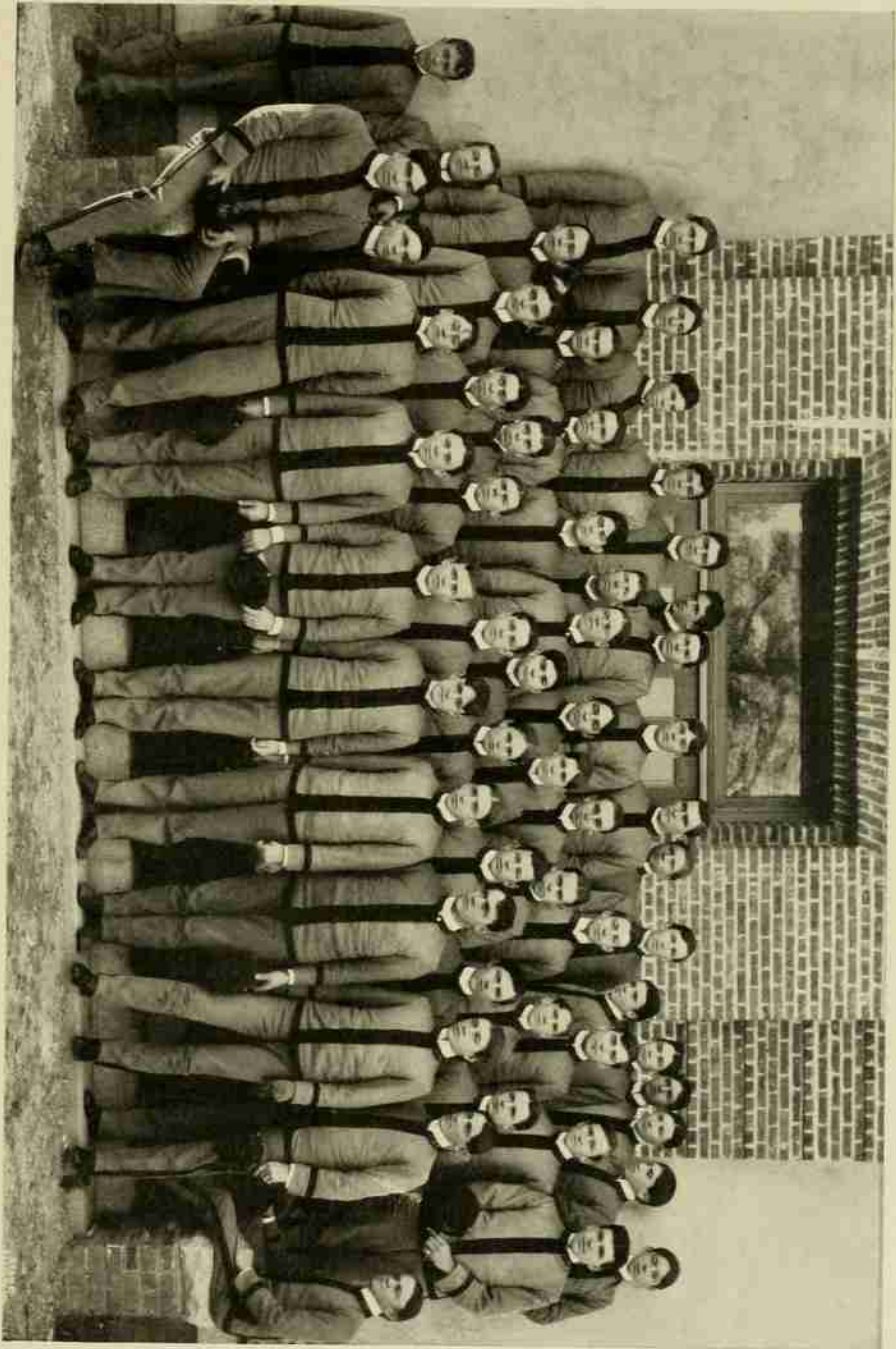

But the strife will soon be ended,
Soon the campus will be bare,
'Till another autumn finds us
With another Fresh. class there.

Though we've not been long together,
We have many friendships gained,
Which to break would be to sever
Heart strings real and never feigned.

As in going o'er a river
We reflections do espy,
So shall we reflect an image
On our College by and by.

Let us, then, be ever faithful,
Nor our College e'er forget ;
But remember if we're tempted
We were once a young cadet.

The Confidant

TALL came about as the girl had planned it should; the cozy nook surrounded by palms and ferns, the brilliantly lighted dancing hall in the distance, and the soft strains of waltz music that floated quietly in from the ball-room orchestra, and the pleading tones of the man she loved framing his proposal.

Danvers was a handsome young naval officer whose ship sailed next day for far-away Gibraltar, so this his last night to be spent for many months on his native shore was doubly dear to him because he was in the presence of the girl of his heart's desire. So they sat out the dances, those two, all in the flower time and the May-time of their love, enjoying every fleeting moment, their only desire that the future might extend on and on forever, and that they might drift on the waves of dreamy music that surrounded them till time ceased.

Kenilworth passing them hurriedly saw them in the shadows and heard a sigh. In a brief glance he had sized up the situation, and the existing state of affairs had brought him little pleasure.

Not many years ago he and the girl of the conservatory corner had lived in a quiet little country village, youthful and happy. He and Annie Louise Robeson had been sworn sweethearts from childhood up, and his every boyish wish had been to do her pleasure, and more than once in his youthful love-making he had looked into her gentle gray eyes and lost himself in their dreamy depths. But those days belonged now to the dead past, the past that treasured up in memory's halls so many gilded dreams of old, so many ideals that had had their little day and had passed away as they had come, easily. Still, during his four years at the Naval Academy, the dreams that had ever placed her above all other girls of his acquaintance had lost none of their old-time brilliancy, and hence it was rather annoying to him to find out when he had felt himself in a position to offer her his heart and his hand that he had passed forever out of her life. To find that after holding her in longing remembrance during the dull routine of his college years that he had only played the part of one whose boyish love and attention only went to make up a pleasantly remembered past. Kenilworth, however, accepted the situation with the logical calmness of a philosopher, until he found out the man whom the girl held highest in her affections, and then he raged inwardly.

"Danvers!" he exclaimed fiercely to his chum and fellow-officer, Jean McNair, as they exchanged reminiscences one day over their pipes of tobacco. "Of all the men on God's green earth, Danvers is the last one that a girl like her should love.

For of all the typical cads I've chanced to know, he is the most typical," he exclaimed.

And McNair would consent through the thick blue smoke. A man of few words, but a deep thinker, he had little speech to waste on so unpleasant a subject as Danvers. For during his stay at the Academy, Danvers had, by his overbearing manners and his lack of good form made many enemies in the cadet corps, and but few friends. So with this well-formed opinion of the man, it was little wonder that the love scene with the stage setting of ferns and palms brought to Kenilworth no pleasure. He, too, sailed in the morning in the same ship with Danvers. McNair was to sail in a week on a torpedo boat for tropical seas, where war seemed imminent. It was well on into the morning when the hall ended and good-byes were said all around. Kenilworth told Annie Louise good-bye with a fervor that surprised her and surprised him no less. "Don't forget, dear," he said softly, "that I love you ever and that I am always at your service"; and then he slipped away. Danvers' good-bye was much more fervid, for he had won the girl he loved.

In the days that followed the girl often recalled that night, and wondered what particular quality it had lacked to keep it from being one of thorough pleasure, only to be tinged with sadness at the parting scene. But she was unable to tell exactly why the night fell short of what she had expected it to be.

In the meantime war had been declared, and Danvers to whom she was engaged, and Kenilworth whom she had refused, were both stationed in southern waters, daily expecting battle with the Spanish cruisers that were bottled up in the harbor of Santiago. But the fortunes of war sent the cruiser on which they were stationed sailing around the Cuban coast towards the little port of Cardenas, a Spanish stronghold. And here a great pleasure was in store for Kenilworth, for in the fleet on the torpedo-boat "Winslow" he found McNair, now a spruce-looking lieutenant in the service. When McNair had come aboard the cruiser on a visit, the two comrades got together as of old, and at once began to exchange confidences.

"Yes," said Kenilworth, in answer to one of McNair's questions, "he hears from her every other day; they are engaged, I think, although it hasn't been announced as yet. McNair, old man, you don't know what it is to love a woman as I love her, and then to barely win her mere friendship. Do you?" he asked.

The depth of McNair's clear blue eyes clouded a little, and a yearning unfulfilled stole across his face. Perhaps he was thinking of some unsuccessful love affair of days gone by, or perhaps he was only musing upon the days that were to come. But when he spoke it was to say simply:

"No, Jim, I don't believe I do."

A few weeks later a day dawned that was to see the first blood of the war spilled in the naval service. That afternoon a dull, hazy mist hung canopy-like over the sea, and the distant shore line and the white sea-wall of Cardenas appeared a gray wavering streak stretched across the water.

The fleet had been shelling the town all the morning, and now a torpedo-boat was being sent in to attack directly the fort along the old sea-wall.

Danvers, the officer in charge of the forward deck of his cruiser, saw with his glasses a rather queer manoeuvre on the part of the torpedo-boat. The "Winslow" had steamed full speed into harbor, and had opened fire on the Spanish breastworks. The fire had been returned hotly, and now the torpedo-boat, instead of leaving the harbor was drifting, apparently helpless to either advance or retreat, broadside to the guns that peeped through the loop-holes of the fort. Danvers realized at once the trouble, and quickly ordered full steam ahead into the harbor. There the appearance of the cruiser was the signal for a perfect storm of shot and shell from the fort and the masked shore batteries, but the cruiser made her way safely, and soon had a hawser to the crippled "Winslow," and began to tow her out of the zone of fire. But Danvers standing on the deck of the cruiser and superintending the rescue of the torpedo-boat was struck by a piece of shrapnel and had to be carried below, and Kenilworth took charge. When they had gotten beyond the range of battery shells, Kenilworth went aboard the "Winslow" to ascertain the damage. He found to his sorrow that McNair was seriously injured, and that three seamen had been killed outright. And late that night a scene of sadness took place below the decks of the cruiser. For Danvers died, his last thought a wish for Annie Louise's happiness, his last words her name. And Kenilworth standing by his bedside turned away when the end came, his heart full of sorrow for the grief of the girl that he and Danvers both had loved.

McNair recovered rapidly, but it was many a day in the fleet before the memory of that fatal afternoon lost any of its first sadness.

In the meanwhile Kenilworth had written Miss Robeson a long letter of condolence, expressing his sympathy for the sorrow that had fallen a dark shadow across her bright life. She had answered in a sweet, sad way in keeping with her trouble. And thus between the two a correspondence had grown up that threatened to rebuild their old-loving relations, and hence Kenilworth grew happier as the days went on. McNair listened quietly to Kenilworth's outbursts of passionate love from time to time, and wondered what his chum's chances really were. And finally came the welcome news that the war was over, and that the fleet had been ordered home.

Five months later the unexpected had happened. Kenilworth had won the woman of his heart, and their marriage was to take place some time in the early fall. Life was now to him one grand sweet song, and Miss Robeson had never looked lovelier or seemed happier. Her wavy mass of hair, beautiful for the blending of burnished copper and beaten gold that its rich coloring contained, and her gray eyes with dreamy depths seemed even more beautiful than ever.

McNair was on the bridge of the torpedo-boat that was gliding out of the New York harbor, seaward bound, when the ship orderly handed him his mail, and in it he discovered an invitation to the wedding. He stood still for a long time after he had read it, gazing abstractedly at the rapidly fading shore lines and from thence on out to sea. The end of everything enjoyable in life had come to him with the message of his chum's coming happiness. He had loved Annie Louise dearly beyond all telling, beyond everything. Seeing from the very first, however, the hopelessness of it all, he had kept silent, acting well the part of the disinterested observer while the tragedy of his life was being played out before his very eyes. First Danvers and then his sad but glorious exit, and then Kenilworth, and now, and here he stopped and tossed the invitation overboard. It fluttered a white thing at the ship's side, rose on the crest of a receding wave, showed for a moment, and then was swallowed up forever.

The vessel was standing well out to sea now, and darkness was beginning to fall. An inbound steamer passed them, her port-holes a blaze of light; the red and green lights at her stern cast their rays upon the foam-flecked waves. One bell struck on board the torpedo-boat, and McNair turned and went below. Sky and sea had both grown black now, and in the brooding mystery of the depth of night the little boat cut swiftly and almost silently through the sullen waters on out over the pathless sea, a mere speck upon its vast bosom. ## The Military Department

PROBABLY no department of the College is so little understood by the public, and even by students themselves, as to its intent and its results as the Military Department.

The average citizen of our State, who has not visited the College, and who perhaps, nay probably, has never had an opportunity or inclination to investigate the matter, jumps at the conclusion that it is "all for show"; that it is "tyrannical"; "ties the boy down," and "makes his life miserable all for nothing." It has been often said: "I send my boy to be educated as an engineer, or as a farmer, and I don't see what the military has got to do with it." And yet probably no department does more for the development of the callow youth fresh from the farm or town, physically, morally and financially.

How did the Military Department become a part of the curriculum?

The Government, by bitter and costly experience has, more than once, learned the value of a small body of men trained and disciplined, who, in case of a sudden emergency, could help organize and train men.

To provide for this, Congress many years ago enacted a law that any college having 150 male students over fifteen years of age, who were uniformed and organized, could have an army officer detailed to instruct them in the elements of Military Science and Tactics, the Government furnishing the officer free of expense to the State or college, and also supplying the necessary arms, equipment and ammunition, only requiring that a certain amount of time be given for drill and instruction.

The Military Department of our College was established in September, 1893, with Lieut. Richard Henderson, U. S. Navy (Retired) as Military Instructor. The catalogue for that year does not contain the military organization, so it can not be ascertained how many companies there were, but as there were but 133 students, there were probably but two. The instruction consisted of Company and Battalion Drill and one Dress Parade weekly.

In 1894, there were 231 students and three companies. That year's catalogue states that the uniform was only required to be worn while actually at drill and by cadets on duty as Officer of the Day, etc.

In 1895, the Military Instructor was Lieut. N. H. Barnes (Retired), a graduate of the Naval Academy. The number of students had fallen off to 195.

In 1896 the number again rose to 247, with same instructor.

In 1897, for the first time an officer of the Regular Army was detailed, and Capt. John C. Gresham, of the famous 7th U. S. Cavalry (Custer's regiment), became the instructor. There were 255 students, and for the first time there was a Cadet Major—N. R. Stansel, a member of the Senior Class.

Captain Gresham established the Battalion on a solid footing and introduced many new features, among them being the Band.

The outbreak of the Spanish War caused him to be relieved, and Bradley J. Wooten, a graduate of the College, became Commandant. He had 258 men, and N. R. Stansel was Major.

In 1899, N. R. Stansel was the Commandant, and A. A. Huggins was Cadet Major. This same year there was a change in the Presidents, and Dr. George T. Winston became the head of the College, and under his vigorous management a new era dawned on the College, and especially on the Military Department. Having been educated at the United States Naval Academy, Dr. Winston realized the necessity of order and discipline, and in a single year the Military Department made great advances and became a prominent feature. The wearing of the uniform at all times became obligatory, as also attendance on all drills and classes, and in many other ways he improved and broadened the scope of the College.

September 1, 1900, Capt. F. E. Phelps, U. S. Army (Retired), became the Commandant, and still holds that position.

In 1900-'01 there were 275 students, and in 1901-'02 there were 324; in 1902-'03 there were 505, and this year we have at present (April, 1904) 520 students. Instead of the two small companies of 1893, we have six full companies, each having a captain, first lieutenant, second lieutenant, first sergeant, three sergeants, four corporals, and an average of fifty privates; besides a fine Cadet Band of 27 pieces, the best in the State. In addition to this there is a staff consisting of one Major, Adjutant (Captain), Quartermaster (Captain), Sergeant-Major, Quartermaster-Sergeant, and Color Sergeant. Drills are held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons of about one hour, and a Dress Parade on Monday. Guard Mount is held daily except Saturday and Sunday. The drill now includes a Company and Battalion Drill, Skirmish Drill and blank cartridges, Attack and Defence of Defiles and Convoys, all of which prepares the youth to handle troops.

The Captains and Lieutenants are selected from the Senior Class; the Sergeants from the Junior Class; and the Corporals from the Sophomore Class. These selections are made by the President on recommendation of the Commandant, and the men are selected by merit, taking in consideration interest and intelligence in the drill and tactics, correct habits and military bearing, and, other things being equal, class standing.

The uniform is handsome but not costly, being made by contract this year, costing $14.20 for the entire outfit. The cloth used is the cadet gray, being the same quality and color as that used at West Point. It is much cheaper than citizen's clothing, wears remarkably well, one coat and cap and two pairs trousers lasting one year.

The military discipline is firm and strict, but not oppressive. The students are taught obedience to proper authority, promptness in all things—that eight o'clock means eight o'clock, and not one minute after eight—a training invaluable in after business life. Students are also taught cleanliness and order in rooms, to have a place for everything and everything in its place, cleanliness in person and cleanliness in speech.

Absolute and literal truthfulness are always insisted upon, and lying, drunkenness and like habits are followed by prompt dismissal.

The regular habits required—all going to bed by a certain hour, rising at a certain hour and a fixed routine for each day, soon show their effect physically and mentally. The green, gawky country boy becomes erect, dignified in bearing, and it is a frequent remark, "What a change in a year."

At most colleges a boy, leaving his home for the first time, away from parental authority, controlling his own time and money, is left to his own devices, and so long as he does not absent himself from too many classes, no attention is paid to him, and he is left untrammelled to his own devices and often falls into habits that ruin him.

When there is a military rule, as in our College, he is under a kind but firm discipline from his first day. He is assigned a room, is required to care for it himself and keep it clean and tidy, the Commandant or Officer of the Day inspecting it daily, must be prompt at meals and classes, can only go outside the grounds at fixed times, stays in his room during study hours, and the regular routine soon becomes a part of his nature. He is taught that he has come to College, not to spend money and have what he calls "a good time," but to work, to study, to speak the truth, to be straight mentally, physically and morally—in short, to be the noblest thing on earth—a straightforward, honest, manly man.

SCRUB FOOT BALL TEAM

Foot Ball

THE FOOTBALL SEASON of 1903 was neither as successful nor unsuccessful as it might have been, and while we do not believe in post mortems, yet we think in justice to the team that some allowance should be made for our misfortunes at the beginning of the season. These misfortunes, stated briefly, were that we had two of our best players "laid up" for the season in the first game played.

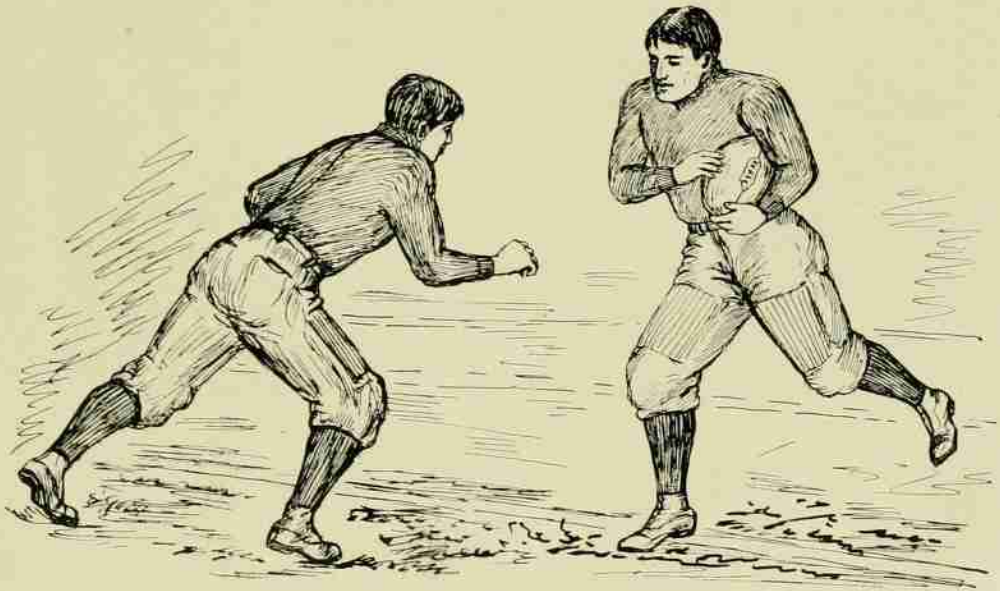

The season opened up with Guilford "on deck." The score very fairly indicates the work done in this game. This game did the team more harm than all of the others put together—Gardner and Darden being put out for the season. On October 12, we went to Lexington and played V. M. I. This game was more of a slugging match than a foot-ball game, and V. M. I. showed their superiority to the tune of 6 to 0. At V. P. I. we received our usual cordial welcome and courteous treatment, and while they ran up 21 points on us, yet it is safe to say that we played one of the best games put up during the season. V. P. I. was unusually strong during the season just past, and when we consider that they defeated the Navy 11—0, and the University of N. C. 21—0, the 21 points against us do not speak as badly as they might indicate at first glance. Our next game was with Clemson in Columbia. The boys played a splendid game, but were somewhat bewildered by Clemson's trick plays. While Clemson ran up 18 points on us, this does not indicate at all the relative strength of the two teams. We carried the ball the length of the field twice, only to lose it by heart-breaking fumbles. We seldom failed to make our distance against Clemson. After Clemson, we had the Kentucky game to look forward to. Kentucky had defeated Carolina 6—5, and we realized that a hard game was before us. The boys gave them the best they had in the shop, but that didn't keep them from scoring 18 points.

On November 14th, the South Carolina College team came to Raleigh, flushed with victories over Davidson, Georgia and Georgia Tech. The game had been in progress only a few minutes when South Carolina skirted our right end for a run of 55 yards and a touch-down. We were also held for downs in a manner that made the faithful rooters' blood run cold. However, in the second half we took a brace, and by terrific line breaking and off tackle plays behind magnificent interference, succeeded in making a touch-down, and succeeded in kicking goal, a thing which South Carolina failed to do. South Carolina's team was very fast, and played together well. The game with Richmond College was played as per schedule. This game was quite a surprise, as Richmond College had won eleven out of twelve games played and promised to give us "a run for our money," but in this we were disappointed, as they did not put up a game sufficient to make it interesting, and the average spectator felt that he did not get his money's worth.

Our schedule was played out as originally arranged, with the exception of our Thanksgiving game with Washington and Lee University. We had looked forward to this game with pleasure, as we were anxious to have the Washington and Lee boys with us, and were going to try to repay them for the many courtesies shown us while in Lexington. If it hadn't been for Washington and Lee, the Lexington trip would have been forever stamped in the minds of the boys as a nightmare. As it was, they did everything they could to make our visit to Lexington enjoyable. The game was cancelled on account of fever epidemic in Lexington.

The Scrub team made a splendid record, winning all of the match games played. A good schedule was arranged for them, and this served to increase interest; this resulted in greatly benefitting the first team. For what would the team amount to without a good scrub team to practice against?

A Revelation

IN THE SECOND YEAR of the reign of Winston I., there was born in the province of Hill, over which he ruled in his mightiness, a Class. And it came to pass that this class waxed fat on Algebra, Electricity, Steam and Calculus, to the amazement and wonder of the inmates of the household of the mighty Winston. And Winston I. wondered, and pondered, and called his household together, and spake unto them: "Go ye into the wilderness and open wide thine eyes and ears, that thou mayest discover why this my second child hath out-stripped the other, to my wonder and amazement thereof."

And the wise men of his household departed, that they might seek and find the secret thereof and gain favor in the sight of their master. And it came to pass that after three years of fruitless wandering, that part of the secret came to be revealed unto them. Now, while the wise men were in secret council, lo and behold! the heavens opened wide with a sound like the rolling of mighty thunder, and the wise men were afraid and trembled and hid their faces in their hands. But a voice spake unto them, saying, "Be ye not afraid, but listen that thou mayest hear the secret that thou desirest to know." And the wise men heard, and were no longer afraid, and they lifted up their faces, and, as was their wont, began to ask questions.

"Open thou thy lips, spirit," they cried, "and reveal unto us something of this wonderment!"

"What wouldst thou know?" answered the spirit.

"Tell us something of the members of this wonderful Class, oh spirit! that we may make a summation, and integrate and arrive at a conclusion, for surely this burden doth oppress us all."

And the spirit spake unto them, saying: "Listen, all ye wise men, and I will tell you of the members of this wonderful Class. Know ye all that in this class there is one honor that is desired by all, but in their desire they break not the commandment, 'Thou shalt not covet'; this honor is to be the most popular man, and this honor one George Foushee holds, to be treasured even unto the third and fourth generations. 'General Green' Finley hath the honor of being the most selfish man, the freshes man and the biggest dude, but these reflect upon himself little credit, and I say unto him, 'If thou desireth not these honors, mend thy ways!' And again I reveal unto you McKimmon as the laziest man, for is it not well known that he sitteth in the Capitol Square day by day—yea, even by night doth he wear his trousers out in this way.' Shame be upon ye for thinking Grierson the biggest liar, for I say unto you, he is the most angelic man, and all ye who do call him the biggest liar do make yourself a bigger by so doing."

"And the most studious man?" cried the wise men.

"Lincoln! but not Abraham," returned the spirit, "and well doth he deserve the name. The biggest bum is" — (saith the spirit).

"Hunter!" cried all the wise men, and the spirit said,

"Aye! And Hodges is the cheekiest man, and Neal the greatest ladies' man, for he hath looked upon many and found favor in the sight of all, and Bailey, the Captain of Co. F, is conceded by man to be the most conccited one, yet I say unto ye, that he should not be, for of all men Bailey is the one ugly man."

And it came to pass as the spirit talked he revealed unto them the name of a man who was willing to make any sacrifice for his fellow-man, yea, even to the discomfort of himself. "The most unselfish man," said the spirit, "is Reece, and the biggest bore is Gaither. And there is one among the Class who growls continuously, the greatest growler ye know to be"—

"Eldridge!" cried all the wise men with one accord.

"Know ye that Richardson is the best all round cadet, and Adams is dignity personified, while Miller is the best athlete. Yea, verily I say unto you, Harding is the biggest bluff, although Hunter, yearning for more distinction, runneth him a close second."

"And the most intellectual man?" cried all the wise men, as the spirit hesitated.

Again the spirit spoke and sayeth unto them, "His name is"—

But a voice as of a mighty thunder summoned him, the heavens closed, and the wise men heard no more.

The wise men returned and told their master, Winston L., all the things they had seen and heard, and he was exceedingly pleased, and he blessed them, and they gained favor in his sight.

When Do I Think of You?

When the glorious, beautiful sun comes creeping,
O'er the distant hill tops fleeting,
When the merry birds the highways throng,
And herald the new-born day with song,
    'Tis then I think of you.

When far away in some distant dell
I hear the voice of a chiming bell,
When o'er the meadow green is borne
The ringing blast of a shepherd's horn,
    'Tis then I think of you.

When deep in a cool, sequestered nook,
I hear the voice of a murmuring brook,
When late in the day the far-off west
In golden colors of light is dressed,
    'Tis then I think of you.

When the radiant silvery stars come peeping,
And into the darkness of night comes creeping,
When the crescent moon sails o'er the sky,
And from moor and fen the night birds cry,
    'Tis then I think of you.

The Biological Club was organized by the Agricultural students in September, 1901, and since that time great interest has been taken in the work. The membership has rapidly increased, and the thorough work being done along lines of biological research makes this Club an invaluable one. Two valuable hand microscopes are awarded as prizes each year, the contest being decided largely by the amount of original work and personal observation of the contestant.

S. S. MAUNEY .....	Corresponding Secretary

Motto:

"Whoever can make two ears of corn or two blades of grass grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, renders most essential service to his country."

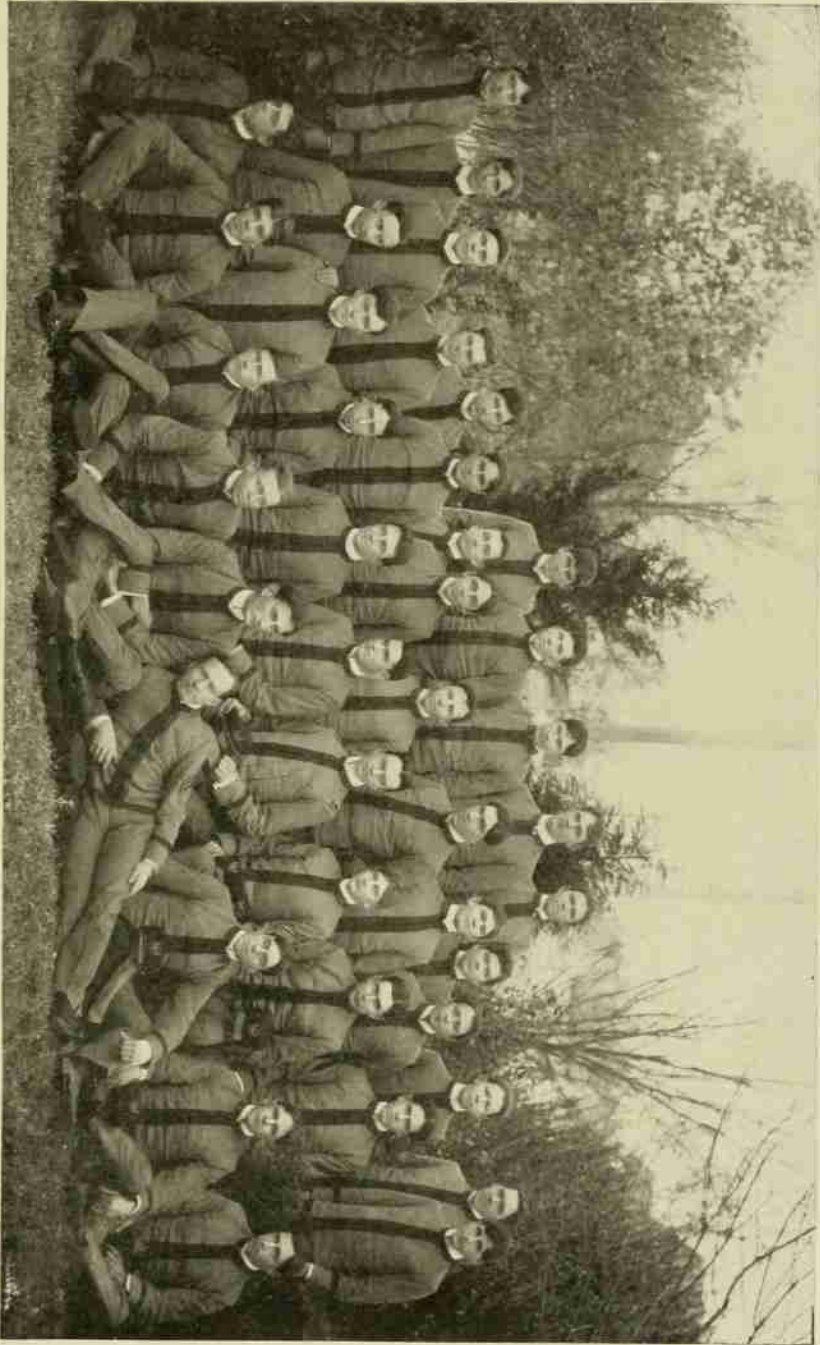

Early in March, 1902, the Agricultural students began to realize that to receive full benefit from the great opportunities being offered along agricultural lines, they must have an organization. Accordingly, they organized the Rural Science Club, to meet twice a month in Primrose Hall.

Since the organization of this Club, great advancement has been made in the work done by the members of the Club. The Club offers excellent opportunities for united study, investigation, and discussion of all matters, practical and scientific, relating to the improvement and success of the farm life of our State.

In connection with the work of this Club, a quarterly magazine, Agricultural Education, is published by an Editorial Board elected by the Club. This publication endeavors to increase the interest and influence of our Agricultural Colleges, and to aid the farmer boys in getting their much-needed training.

Through the valued assistance of our Professor, Dr. Burkett, several valuable prizes were awarded during the past year. The prizes and winning contestants were: Medal, for stock judging at State Fair, won by W. W. Finley; Five Dollars, for the best report of live stock exhibited at State Fair, won by F. R. Smith; Sharples U. S. Cream Separator, best essay on "The Middle South as a Dairy Section," won by W. W. Finley; U. S. Cream Separator, best essay on "Making of a Dairy Farm," won by Clarence Lytch; One Ton Commercial Fertilizer, essay on "Soil Fertilizers," won by L. A. Niven; Set of Rural Science Books, essay on "The Farmer's Library," won by R. F. Warren; Registered Jersey Bull, essay on "Formation and Management of a Dairy Herd," won by A. C. Wharton.

LIBRARY

FINLEY:—(On recitation, speaking of the distance which certain sounds may be heard) "I once heard the whistle of a railroad engine sixteen miles."

INSTRUCTOR:—"You must be mistaken, Mr. Finley; as you usually have a supply of wind, it must have been your own blowing that you heard."

CAPT. PHELPS:—"What was the legend of Romulus and Remus?"

FRESHMAN:—"It was a story of love and adventure."

"And when a woman's in the case,
You know all other things give place."—Winston.

PROF. N—— (at reception):—"Mr. Poindexter, don't you want me to introduce you to some of the girls?"

POINDEXTER:—"No, sir; I'd rather just look at that black-eyed girl in the corner."

PROF. N——:—"Mr. Poindexter, that is my wife."

"To himself a better friend than all the world besides."—Finley.

ST. MARY'S GIRL (at S. C. football game):—"Isn't Mr. Buckley full of life to-day?"

BUCKLEY (overhearing and turning quickly):—"First time I ever heard it called that."

OLD (on physics recitation):—"Doctor, what becomes of the light when you blow it out?"

DR. WEIHE:—"Well, the next time you blow out your light, you just watch it to see."

ORDERLY:—"Any report, Professor?"

MR. BRAGG:—"Yes, sir; Freeman for winking at co-ed. in wood-shop."
(Why does Mr. Bragg object?)

"They are witty to talk with,
Pretty to walk with,
And pleasant to think of."—Co-eds.

PROFESSOR (to "Little" Barber, who is stumped on calculus):—"Why, Mr. Barber! I thought it was your brother who said he was unprepared to-day."

HUBAND (in chemical laboratory):—"Professor, I want a brunette" (brunette).

INSTRUCTOR:—"We have only a blonde (co-ed) in this department."

CAPTAIN (on history):—"Mr. Taylor, sketch life of Hannibal."

TAYLOR:—"Hannibal was brave and wicked. His life was known as wicked."

CAPTAIN:—"Mr. Culbreth?"

CULBRETH (Fresh.):—"Hannibal was the daughter of a king."

"I must be cruel only to be kind."—Capt. Phelps.

"A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the wisest men."—Dr. Winston.

PASCHAL:—"Say, Foster, what kind of fruit grows on date palms? Is it cocoanuts?"

FOSTER:—"No—pineapples."

"One leg, as if suspicious of his brother,
Desirous seems to steal away from t'other."—Seifert.

DR. WINSTON (College roll):—"Mr. Miller is absent to-day. Where is he?"

PATTON:—"He's off with the football team, Doctor."

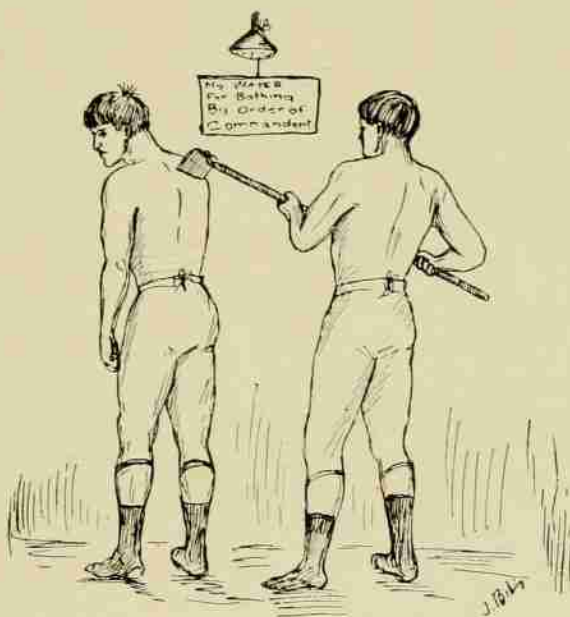

DR. WINSTON:—"Worse than that, gentlemen; he has the itch."

Though Waitt's his name, he never stops—talking.

"Learning by study must be won;
'Twas ne'er entailed from pa to son."—Morson.

"Never let yourself get worried,
Or hurried, or flurried."—Dr. Weihe.

"The hot blood of youth excuses their rashness."—Juniors.

THAT'S

General Greene can politic for Wharton's while the rest of the class sit around and gas. That's business.

Timothy Eldridge could keep from kicking if he wanted to, but he won't. That's stubbornness.

Dr. Winston can take a committee from the Legislature all over the College and make them believe the existence of North Carolina depends on us. That's pulling their legs for an appropriation.

Bagwell and McKimmon can get off a condition in English. That's easy.

Professor Riddick can take two straight lines intersecting at an angle of  $0^\circ$  and prove how far apart they are at infinity. That's incomprehensible.

Miller would rather play football or baseball than study electricity. That's preference.

Professor Wilson can buy a motor, have it put up, and then can't make it even turn over. That's throwing away money.

Professor Park, when he has a class in machine shop, can tell a joke on each member. That's embarrassing.

A boy comes here and stays ten weeks, lives in the loft, and by some unaccountable freak is termed green. That's the cow puncher.

Captain Phelps can go to the "Burgomaster" and tell exactly why he went. That's truthfulness.

Neal can write to three or four different girls and none of them ever suspect that he writes to another girl. That's duplicity.

Bailey can make more noise on dress parade than any one else, especially when St. Mary's is out. That's showing off.

The Senior Class can get up a hearty laugh at some of Professor Hill's jokes. That's wisdom.

Phelps can tell you the first thing you get when you fall in a pond. That's experience.

Hunter could get an overcoat of his own, but he won't as long as he can borrow Captain's. That's a good thing.

Alderman can take a tin can, some string and rosin and play "Washington Post." That's ability.

Professor Hill can go to a comic opera and then tear it all to pieces in a lecture on the English drama. Then why does he go? That's the question.

Harding can report all the captains absent from breakfast. That's authority.

Dr. Weihe can fail more Sophs. and Juniors than any one else on the Hill. That's revenge.

Gaither can make the Freshman think he can play football. That's bluffing.

Some men can average 61 and not get a flunk. That's a close call.

Morson can sleep more on class than any one else. That's natural.

Mr. Skinner can give us for breakfast a piece of meat. That's tough.

THE
SHARPLES TUBULAR DAIRY
SEPARATOR

...Mary's Calf...

MARY had a little calf,
Now please don't misinterpret,
For Mary was as plump a maid
As ere wore an encirclet.

But Mary loved this little calf,
For well she knew 'twould grow,
And vision of its future charm
Would cause her eyes to glow.

She dreamed of milk from chalk exempt,
Of cream so rich and sweet;
Of butter and of buttermilk,
To please the most elite.

All this appealed to Mary,
A sweet girl graduate,
With memories of her boarding house,
And what she drank and ate.

She learned at school 'mongst other things,
Which made her calf seem greater,
The worth of calves, and cows and milk,
And the Tubular Separator.

You see they used it in the school
With utmost satisfaction,
And thus the little Tubular
Gave Mary's calf attraction.

She tells her friends of all her hopes,
And adds with jolly laugh,
"Just keep the Tubular in mind
When admiring Mary's calf."

—BARNYARD STRIPLING.

THE most simple, durable and efficient Separator made. A recognized necessity in every home where cows are kept, and a general favorite with the wives and daughters, because it is so easy to turn, easy to clean, convenient to operate and such a labor saver. Thousands of them sold every year.

BRITISH EXHIBIT OF TEXTILE MACHINERY IN OPERATION.

...ed for a British firm from Oldham to install the most complete cotton factory exhibit of the World's Fair. This is to be seen in the northwestern part of the Palace
 ...tries. The operations demonstrated are those from the boll to the finished thread. The space occupied is seventy by eighty feet and the machinery is very heavy
 ...h. The cotton as delivered from the field is introduced at the western end of the exhibit, entering a gin which removes the seed from the fibre. A Creighton

BRITISH PAVILION.

At the intersection of Administration Avenue and University Way stands the Orangery, a reproduction of the banquet hall at Kensington Palace. It is of attempt at external ornamentation. In addition to the banquet room, which constitutes the whole of the Orangery, there are two wings, the north one of which superbly furnished apartments. Of these, the first, as the visitor passes from the long hall, is the Elizabethan breakfast room, furnished in oak, and decorated armor. The next apartment is the Georgian dining room, filled with genuine Chippendale mahogany. The clock is especially worthy of note, being more than Adams room beyond this is an English tea room and its furnishings are in satinwood of the celebrated Sheraton make. The last room is an exact reproduction reception room. Above a carved chest, 150 years old, hangs the latest portrait of King Edward VII. The south wing of the building is used for the offices of U
