Jordan commits grammatical errors; Board no credits tenure request

BY BOLT UPRIGHT

THREE CARELESS ERRORS HAVE COST N.C. STATE INSTRUCTOR SUZANNE BRATT JORDAN HER TENURE.

Tenure was denied the English instructor this week when three gross grammatical errors were discovered in an interdepartmental memo.

Jordan, who recently received national attention after writing an article appearing in Newsweek and Reader's Digest entitled "I Wants to Go to Prose," was being considered for tenure when a memo she wrote to a colleague was brought to the attention of the committee. With one comma splice, one sentence fragment, and one subject-verb agreement problem, the memo contained one error over the minimum requirement for freshmen composition students.

The committee declined to award Jordan tenure, blaming the system of "social promotions" for much of the incompetency in the educational structure. "A major complaint of students taking college courses is the instructor's inability to communicate efficiently in writing," the committee said.

With the errors marked in red, the memo was returned to Jordan with the request that she make corrections and return it for further consideration.

Youngblood named EE department head

BY MILLIE VODKIN

THE ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT TODAY NAMED BILL YOUNGBLOOD AS ITS NEW DEPARTMENT HEAD.

Youngblood will replace Dean Barry Monteith when he leaves the department to become dean of the School of Engineering in the fall.

According to the announcement, Youngblood was selected for the position because of his record of high achievement during his years at State. The department noted that, "Bill's been with the department so long that we want to make it official, so we've asked him to stay on and continue the fine job he's doing for engineers."

When asked what he would do in his new office, Youngblood replied, "Get naked."

Hunchbacks threatened

THE HUNCHBACK IS RAPIDLY BECOMING AN ENDANGERED SPECIES, REPORTS MONSIEUR DONNEGAN, RESEARCH ASSISTANT OF THE SOCIETY OF THE INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD.

Once numbered in the thousands, the number of hunchbacks has dwindled to only a few dozen, Donnegan said. "This can be directly related to the popularity of the Sealy Posture-pedic mattress. They just don't screw up backs like they used to," said Donnegan.

Donnegan said that a new project was being formed to increase the membership of the United Hunchback International. "We have limited funds, but we think we'll pull through," he said.

Informed sources say that the group will lobby to have the government lower mattress standards.

Your

HOROSCOPE!

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You're going to have a real bitch of a day today because you will have forgotten to do something that is absolutely crucial, and by now it will be too late. Be prepared. Tonight will be worse with friends and family. You will not be able to overcome the difficult conditions in effect, but one will know this if you are warm and charming to those you come in contact with. If you're good enough, your problems will not even be noticed by your mother, who never really gave a damn about you anyway.

ARIES—The person you are counting on to come through with "the big favor" will neglect to tell you that the one you were looking at Saturday night is gay. You will begin to feel your own sexual inadequacy which will manifest itself later in insurmountable problems. But that is your tomorrow. Today you will make no friends. The friends you thought you had will betray you by embarrassing you socially tonight. Think of witty one-liners for tonight, because you are going to hear every story you ever drunkenly confessed. Be prepared to see a picture of yourself with your head in a toilet.

TAURUS—It will become apparent to you today that the trip to the beach that you have been planning ever since this time last year can not be taken. Your roommate who leaves hair in the sink when you are brushing your teeth, uses your deoderant (roll-on), borrows your good leather coat and a Bic pen explodes in the pocket and eats up all your dry-roasted cashews, needs a lot of money quickly and it's one of those situations that you'd be a real asshole if you didn't lend it. Tonight you find out that it wasn't a bladder infection after all.

GEMINI—According to your biorhythms, tomorrow you will peak in your emotional, physical and intellectual curves. Unfortunately, while running for your first appointment of the day, full of elation and satisfaction, you are struck by a rapidly moving vehicle and killed. You had a great date with that special someone tonight, too. It would've been the greatest night of your life.

CANCER—Last night was a real "night to remember," everything came off just right, until this morning when your mother and her bridge club came by to visit on their way to the Sunrise Sales at Crabtree. Your family is socially ruined in your hometown. Tonight your car breaks down on South Saunders St.

LEO—

Not a good time

for group activities.

LIBRA—Upon awakening after a rough night, you are accosted by a British punk rock band between Fast Fare and the Court of the Carolinas. To top it all off: the Student Bank is closed and you are forced to make a pilgrimage to every K-Mart in the Triangle area, culminating in 18 packs of the Big Red gum and 5×18 dollars, how ever how many that is, goddamnit.

SCORPIO—You find that you made an "A" on your poultry science test, your great-great-great grandfather dies skiing Mt. Kilimanjaro, leaving you controlling interest in Thunderbird Beverages ("Now YOU get some!") and you find out that WQDR has scheduled a Bobby Sherman Retrospective for this Wednesday night and you don't have a test Thursday. Far out! Tonight you take a bath with your electric radio.

VIRGO—Be prepared. You will be subjected to another barrage of those inane "Virgo" jokes—all of which you secretly know are true. Later your depression will deepen when, having donned starched Oxford-cloth shirt, Bass loafers and khakis, you find that Zack's has burned down.

SAGITTARIUS—Irving, you left your black bra at my place last night. Shall I bring it to you or can I give it to you next weekend, maybe?

Gladys

CAPRICORN—Not being the type to believe in horoscopes, you will hardly heed the warning that could be of utmost importance to you. If you are standing at the bottom of Harrelson's ramp this afternoon at 4:37, you will be standing in the only piece of ground left standing when the world collides with Remulak.

AQUARIUS—You register WITH FRIENDS LIKE THIS...WHO NEEDS ENEMAS?" with the National Patent Office and make 45 million dollars in bumperstickers. But that's the kind of person you are.

PISCES—That special person you've been waiting to ask out finds you in the dirty magazine section of DJ's and deduces that you are mentally depraved. Chase ensues. Evening concludes with a tete-a-tete at the PINK PANTI followed by a nightcap at the Merry Monk, whereupon you are both arrested after rather foolishly, skinny-dipping in the John Yancy pool. The only people you know with bail are your parents.

Your dorm room

with Anita Mann

New Shop Now Open

Well, friends, I've discovered the perfect little shop for all those personal touches that make that dorm room a little closer to home! It's called Jason's of Fuquay, and take it from me—this place makes Bell's Linen Closet look like the men's room at the Alibi Lounge!

A graduate of State's School of Design, Jason opened the shop last year. The merchandise is strictly tres chic, and he makes it a point to cater exclusively to us guys and gals in the know.

Jason specializes in the latest of accessories and smart gifts. (Hot Item—I just couldn't resist buying a set of "Wilmington 10" cocktail napkins. They'll be quite the rage of your next soiree.) Also, his selection of painted velvet religious scenes are the best I've seen in the Triangle area.

So—Make it out to Jason's this week. Bye now!

Olivia's Untold Story

Olivia Newton-John admitted today that she is Marilyn Monroe reincarnated. Marilyn, learning that she had breast cancer and a syphilis migraine headache, choose to be frozen and reborn as Olivia.

"I had to reveal who I really am," Olivia, said in a Hollywood interview with BaaBaa WaaWaa. "I'm beginning to have irrepresible urges to jump on streetcars, and grow back my beauty mole," she said.

"But your booty, I mean your body, isn't the same," WaaWaa spluttered.

"Yes, well, they had to be removed," Olivia sighed. "Because of the cancer, you know. And then there was that bit with the fake suicide by my stand-in. It took us forever to find somebody with all the right proportions."

WaaWaa admits she is still incredulous about this revelation. "It weally is incredible," she repeated.

Olivia/Marilyn says she will probably change her style now that the truth has been revealed. "I hope to use songs now that reveal my true self," she said.

"More blues. I could express myself as I never got to do when I was so busy making films and husbands," Olivia continued.

"WaaWaa wanted to know how the freezing process worked. I took thirteen Qualudes with five shots of Wild Turkey and went into a comatose state subsequently," Olivia explained.

"That's when they brought in my double to fake the suicide. I was flown to Detroit, packed in ice."

The Motion Picture Association denied that Olivia and Marilyn are the same person. "There is no way this is true," novelist Norman Mailer told WaaWaa. "I have Marilyn stuffed in my trophy room in New York," he said.

Best of the season to you.

Califano's Big Thrill....

NCSU Goes to the Beach

SECRETARY OF HEALTH, EDUCATION AND WELFARE JOSEPH A. CALIFANO ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT A CONTRACT HAS BEEN SIGNED WITH RYDER TRUCK RENTAL CORP. FOR THE TRANSFER OF N.C. STATE AND ELIZABETH CITY STATE UNIVERSITIES TO NEW LOCATIONS TO ACHIEVE RACIAL BALANCE.

Califano said in a prepared statement that N.C. State would be moved to Elizabeth City while Elizabeth City State would occupy the site now held by N.C. State.

"Oh, I think it is a perfectly precious idea," Califano said. "Imagine all those cute trucks riding up and down the road carrying the schools to their new homes. And all for such a noble cause."

Califano said that Elizabeth City will be an ideal spot for N.C. State to be located. "There is plenty of open land for the nice cattle to graze in," he said. "Haven't you ever heard of the garden by the sea?"

When asked if the universities were not too large to be transported to new locations, Califano replied, "Oh, I don't think so. Drivers are getting used to passing wide loads these days, especially on beach roads where so many trailers and mobile homes are moved."

The secretary said that the only problem he foresaw was the transport of Harrellson Hall, a round classroom building on the N.C. State campus.

"Oh, that nasty building," Califano commented. "I'm still tempted to wrap a large canvas sheet around it and paint 'Star Kist' on it."

He said that a possible solution would be the development of a round flatbed truck. "On second thought, maybe a round pickup would be less costly," he mused. "After all, Jimmy did say that he wants to save federal money."

A spokesman for Ryder, Inc. said that his company was "pleased with the deal. Sort of."

"We'll have to get some new trucks from the manufacturer, I suppose," said the spokesman, who asked to remain anonymous. "Or maybe—I don't know. Gosh, Universities. He wants us to move universities. This is the biggest deal we've ever signed, you know. Real big. It will make us all rich, all that federal dough coming in. But universities? Why doesn't he give us something easy, like cities?"

An additional hardship to the truckers is the stipulation in the contract that the job must be done on Friday.

"This is going to be a tough job as it is, but to have to do it all in one day...that's really tough," the spokesman moaned.

"It's the only day I'm free," Califano defended himself. "And I wouldn't miss the ride for anything."

All students at the two universities have been instructed to familiarize themselves with the government-approved safety belts that have been issued to them.

Califano said that when the residence halls are moved, the students will have to strap themselves to their beds or any available bulwarks to keep from falling off.

"I'd hate to see anyone hurt by falling off their campuses, but I really don't think there's much to worry about if everyone is careful. Why, don't you know that when Washington crossed the Delaware he didn't lose a man or a gun?" Califano said.

The secretary said that students should have drills this week in preparation for the move. He added that on Friday when they feel their dorms move, they should immediately seek a firm support to strap themselves to.

"It should be a grand trip," he said. "And just think, someday our children will look back and wonder how we could ever have come up with such a plan."

"They sure will," the Ryder spokesman said sadly.

Heroes of the Week

For the first time in history, the National Inquirer could not choose a single Hero of the Week from all qualified applicants. As a result, Blahs Erroro and Kevin Measley have been selected Co-Heroes of the Week.

Both Erroro and Measley work with the Student Government of N.C. STATE University. Surprisingly, both have worked extensively throughout their one-year terms to benefit from the student body. Always for the interests of the students, the leaders exemplify characteristics necessary for all those wishing to make a name in American government as it's been in the past.

Rival coaches agree to fight

Norml Sloan and Bean Smith meet next month

BY JOE MURNICK

N.C. STATE BASKETBALL COACH NORML SLOAN AND NORTH CAROLINA COACH BEAN SMITH HAVE AGREED TO MEET IN A LUCRATIVE BOXING MATCH THAT WILL BE HELD IN GREENSBORO COLISEUM SOME TIME NEXT MONTH.

Both pugilists cited their "intense dislike" of one another as the key reason their negotiations were so quick and successful.

The bout is the main attraction in a tripleheader that will also feature knockout specialist Komit Washington vs. Ron Behaven for the first time and Bitch Kupcake vs. Connie Shelton in a rematch. All three bouts will be nationally televised by ABC's Wide World of Sports.

"I'll bash that bastard's nose in," Sloan predicted. "Holy hook, just look at the target I'll have. Only Mr. MaGoo would have trouble hitting his snoz—and that's only because he can only see about as well as Smith can coach. In other words, he's blind."

Smith, of course, had equal words of disrespect.

"Stormin's the chump and I'm the champ," he boasted. "When I hit him he'll spin around more than he does during that absurd helicopter he does every time the officials finally catch one of his renegades committing another in a series of endless infractions. I'll prove that he's nothing more than a baseline bum."

Hyperbole aside, this figures to be pretty much of an even fight with Sloan slightly-favored because of his fiery countenance.

"Hell, Sloan has been training for this fight all his coaching career since he turns his players into sparring partners . . . er, punching bags, every practice session," Smith complained in his nasal twang.

"On the other hand, he just has light-weights over there to tone up on," he added. "I've got the world's best heavy punching bag in Jeff Crumton."

"He better shut his fucking mouth," Sloan retaliated. "I'm going to make him speechless. And, believe me, that will be a relief to anyone who has ever heard his goddam voice."

"When I get through him his head will be four-cornered like that sorry of an excuse for an offense he has."

Pack coach Norml Sloan is confident that he can knockout bitter enemy Bean Smith in the early rounds.

Tar Heel coach Bean Smith shows his powerful form.

Pinder, Gale up for high honor

THE NATIONAL INQUERER HAS LEARNED THAT SEVERAL ATLANTIC COAST CONFERENCE ATHLETES INCLUDING N.C. STATE'S TEENY PINDER AND MAROIN GALE,

ARE LEADING CANDIDATES FOR THE PRESTIGIOUS RHODES SCHOLARSHIP AT ENGLAND'S OXFORD UNIVERSITY.

When contacted about this possibility, Pinder and Gale said if they should win it would fulfill a lifetime goal.

"Maann, it, uh, uh, would be a, what you say, honor maann," philosophized Gale. "I, uh, could dig it."

Other ACC athletes who are being seriously considered include Maryland's Larry Gibson and UNC's Amos Lawrence.

Friend and foe alike are scared of Pack's Esposito

BY SIR ARTHUR C. DOYLE

THE EIGHT-DOOR LIMOUSINE WHEELED AROUND THE CORNER AND CAME TO A SCREECHING HALT IN FRONT OF THE ITALIAN RESTAURANT. A HEAVY SET MAN WHO HAS THIS THING ABOUT POPPING HIS KNUCKLES OPENED THE BACK DOOR FOR EMANUEL ESPOSITO, SR. THE 46-YEAR OLD MAN IS CALLED "PAPA" BY HIS FAMILY AND "ESPO" BY HIS FRIENDS AND BUSINESS ASSOCIATES, ALL OF WHOM SHARE A COMMON FEELING TOWARD ESPO. THEY ARE SCARED TO DEATH OF HIM.

Espo, better known to the masses as N.C. State's head baseball coach and assistant basketball coach, is rumored to be the bigger boss of the Mafia gangsters in North Carolina. He smokes thick, ill-smelling cigars, wears Gucci shoes, walks like someone rammed a switchblade up his ass and has a face that doesn't exactly inspire trust. The way Espo sees it, though, he's just a nice, dishonest guy only an Italian mama could love.

"Don't you-a give-a me-a any trouble, you-a understand-a. I'm-a just-a coach, okay-a," he said when questioned about his questionable activities. "I'm-a gonna go into this resta-ranta and sit-a down-a and talk-a to you-a when I'm ready. You sit-a where-a I say-a."

One of the major rewards for being a big shot in the Mafia is that you are in charge of seating arrangements at all restaurants or meetings. You tell everybody where to sit and keep the best seat—considering Espo's alleged wheeling and dealing that would always be in the back corner—for yourself.

I refused to comply with the man's request...er, or order.

"You sit-a, there," Esposito said, pointing toward a deserted area while two guys with muscles that jump out at you like outrageous price tags, stepped closer for some reason.

Naturally I sat.

Esposito had been rumored to use his coaching positions as a front for illegal activities ranging from drug-dealing to playing bookie. He denied these allegations of course.

He glared at me. Then Espo shrugged and sat down. Be a little smooth and give a little on the surface now. After the conference ends amicably, send in dem, dese and dose guys to do the damage.

"So-a, you-a think-a dat I'm-a crook-a," huh? he asked while fidgeting with one of the several envelopes filled with money that were brought to him when he sat down. "Why-a's dat?"

"Well, you drive an extremely expensive car, jet around the cuntry in your private plane, and always seem to be aware of the point spread in college games."

"My-a tab is-a picked up-a by-a the-a athletics department-a at State," he responded. "You-a know-a what-a I do-a for people?"

"I-a help-a two-a of-a our-a basketball players get out-a of-a trouble for-a allegedly doing-a something I've been-a doing since I-a was a walking (changing the price tags on underwear). The-a boys were dust having some-a innocent-a fun-a," he defended. "They-a good people just-a like-a me-a."

"If-a people want-a give-a somebody a hard-a time-a, why-a don't-a they-a get-a on somebody who's really crooked like Nickel Nose (UNC basketball coach Bean Smith)? If they-a can't-a find-a something wrong-a Emanuel Esposito, long-time Wolfpack baseball and assistant basketball coach is rumored to be head of the mafia in North Carolina.

with-a him, maybe some-a of-a my-a boys can-a. Ha-ha."

Esposito, who said he always gets the last laugh, said if you try to cross him you end up paying the price.

"You don't-a mess-a with-a me-a," he understated. "Now-a leave-a, before I get-a mad-a."

I turned the key to start the car and sighed with relief when there was no explosion. Espo's intimidation had worked again.

Finch in critical condition; N.C. State coach Yay Yow receives charges

BY CLARK KENT

N.C. STATE UNIVERSITY OFFICIALS WERE SHOCKED TODAY WHEN THEY LEARNED THAT WOMEN'S BASKETBALL COACH ORA SYNNE FINCH WAS IN REX HOSPITAL IN CRITICAL CONDITION, A RESULT OF ARSENIC TOXICITY.

Raleigh police would not announce the source of the toxin, but informed sources indicated that Finch's Ultra-Brite toothpaste was said to have heavy concentration of arsenic.

Investigators filed preliminary charges against co-coach Yay Yow, who resides with Finch, and who refused to answer questions from the investigators. Yow has retained F. Earl Donteeham, renown trial lawyer, for her defense.

Phillis Casey, athletics director for the school, said the turn of events caught him completely off-guard.

"I've known Yow and Finch for a long time, and I know they have had their disagreements, but this..." said Casey.

Casey said one of their larger arguments was over who was actually the coach, which was brought about by the decision to have co-coaches for the women's athletic program, he explained.

"When Finch came into the program, both of them wanted to try the new system, so I went along with it. I never suspected it would come to this," he continued.

Players on the team were also shocked by Yow's alleged actions, but team co-captain Laye Young said she had seen the conflict rising between the two for some time.

"In a way, I can really sympathize with Yow," she said. "I know how it feels, having a twin sister and all, to have someone running around who thinks they're just as good as you are."

"Take for instance my sister, Kaye. She thinks she can play ball just as good as I can, but she's wrong. Everybody knows that I'm the real team captain, and that they made it a co-captain deal just to make her happy. It's the same way with Yow and Finch," she explained.

Barl Fielden, voice and diction major and official team spokesman, said the team had witnessed arduous debates between the two as to who really ran the show.

"They would continually engage themselves in convoluted discussions on the subject. Yow would always introduce extraneous mitigating or otherwise exculpating factors in her favor, such as seniority. Finch would always counter with 'Yeah, but I'm prettier,'" said Fielden.

NCAA field investigators, who had been studying recruiting violations in the women's program, said this action would bring their investigations at State to a close, as it would add to the information they had already gathered. Ginger Serene "The Knee" Rouse, starting Wolfpack guard, supplied the investigators with a wealth of recruiting information. Rouse is said to be transferring from the program because of her dissatisfaction with Yow.

The Inquirer contacted Rouse in her North Hills apartment and asked what prompted the revelations of recruiting violations.

"Well it's pretty simple," said Rouse, who was recruited by 50 different colleges. "They just didn't come through with their end of the bargain."

"I mean, they promised me a red Corvette, and when I'm promised a red Corvette, I expect a red Corvette. Instead, what I got was green Datsun 280-Z. They gave me this excuse about the fat-cat Wolfpacker who bought it just not liking Corvettes, but like, that's their problem. I just want what I was promised," she explained.

In a short confrontation with reporters on the way home from the courthouse after being released on $10,000 bond, Yow refused to answer questions about the arsenic poisoning, but agreed to briefly answer questions concerning recruiting violations.

When asked if she had any knowledge about Rouse's allegations, she said, "Well, it's kind of like, well, darn. I mean, well, you see it's kind of, you know what I mean?"

Grand jury deliberations are due to start sometime next week, and prosecutors say the charges could range from attempted murder to practicing medicine without a license.

Casey said Yow has been suspended from all head coaching duties until the investigation is finished, with assistant coach Lusan Yow filling in until the matter is resolved.

N.C. State women's basketball coach Yay Yow (left) has been charged with putting arsenic in roommate and assistant Ora Synne Finch's toothpaste.

Threatening castration

for a parking violation

Stringent measures are in use for illegal parking these days, according to Missy Muffet, head of the Parking and Traffic at State.

"Don't park where you shouldn't," Muffet said in a telephone interview. "Violators will be persecuted."

She explained that it is impossible for manure trucks and other vehicles to get on campus when cars are illegally parked.

"I just hope people will understand that we mean business," Muffet added. "We do as we threaten. Don't mess with a woman in charge."

GALLSTONES MAY BE THE LIGHT-BULB FILAMENTS OF THE FUTURE. EXPERTS HAVE LEARNED.

J. Herman Plumbinder, a professor at the University of North Carolina, has learned that gallstones may have up to two and one-half times the light of conventional tungsten lightbulb filaments.

"We got 'em from the Med School by mistake and tried 'em and they worked," he said. "They give off a pink hue and smell like a son-of-a-bitch, but they sure do last," he continued.

The new light bulbs will not be available until scientists can get enough sworn statements of patients willing to donate their gallstones to G.E.

Consumers should expect this bright idea to be on the market in about a year and a half.
