2,000 attend belated Brent Road party

Partygoers at Saturday's Brent Road bash. The party was better attended than the one held on Aug. 26.

◆ Approximately 2,000 students clogged Brent Road Saturday night. Fights marred the party.

Spain Stephens and Jimmy Ryals
News Editors

People arrived in a trickle initially, but by 1 a.m. Sunday, Brent Road looked much like it usually does on the first weekend of the school year: crowded.

Capt. D.A. Inman of the Raleigh Police Department estimated that 2,000 people attended the block party Saturday.

Party witnesses contacted provided this rough timeline for the evening: people began arriving around 9 p.m. and the party peaked between 11 p.m. and 1 a.m.

Fights began breaking out at approximately 3 a.m. and police cars, transportation vans and an ambulance began arriving between 4 and 5 a.m.

Inman said that police monitored the Brent Road area all evening, though he said that they were not there whole night. At this point, 12 partygoers are facing charges, most of them alcohol-related. Inman said that 8 or 9 of those 12 were arrests.

More charges could be forthcoming.

results of the fighting at the party.

One of the fights at the party resulted in an ambulance being called to 522 Brent Road. Inman said that a girl had been punched in the side while trying to break up the scuffle.

Rex Hospital officials said that they "treated quite a few" people from Brent Road and that the cases were "scattered throughout the night." They could offer no further information.

"Guys were really hostile and fights were going on for no reason," said Justin Howell, a sophomore in mechanical engineering. "I saw one guy grab a bottle and smash it on another's face."

Howell said that at one point, crowds surrounded a Geo Tracker travelling down Brent Road. People climbed on top of the car and sprayed beer into it.

Sean Lawlor, a senior in criminal justice, said the fighting coincided with the arrival of a concentrated police force.

"When the cops show up, there's more trouble, because everyone gets mad — fights, mouthing off, arrests," said Lawlor.

Senior sociology major Tara Holbert witnessed some of the fighting.

"It's just those few people who can't control themselves when they're drunk that ruined it for the rest of us," Holbert said.

Tittle earns Goodnight-Glaxo Wellcome professorship

◆ Charles Tittle, a new professor in the sociology and anthropology department of CHASS, has been named the Goodnight-Glaxo Wellcome Distinguished Professor in Social Sciences.

Ayren Jackson
Staff Writer

The College of Humanities and Social Sciences has awarded Charles Tittle the Goodnight-Glaxo Wellcome Distinguished Professorship in Social Sciences.

The endowment is the university's first to be eligible for aid from the C.D. Spangler Foundation matching grant program. Tittle, holder of the newly endowed faculty seat, is a new professor in the sociology and anthropology department.

Tittle's teaching and research experience is extensive. He earned a master's degree and a doctorate in sociology from the University of Texas, and has taught at universities such as the University of Indiana, Washington State University and Florida Atlantic University, where he taught for 18 years.

"Tittle will enormously enhance the already established graduate, undergraduate and research programs," said Matthew Zingraff, associate dean of research in CHASS. "He is a distinguished professor who provides an exceptionally good fit within the sociology and anthropology department."

Tittle currently teaches a section of SOC 206, a social deviance course.

"It's an honor to be named the Goodnight-Glaxo Wellcome Endowed Chair," Tittle said. "This position provides me with flexibility and support within my teaching and research efforts."

Ann and James Goodnight and the Glaxo-Wellcome Foundation provided the funds for the Goodnight-Glaxo professorship. The C.D. Spangler Foundation and the General Assembly Board of Governors Distinguished Professors Trust Fund manage the funds.

C.D. Spangler, a former president of the UNC System, established the program in 1997 to aid in establishing endowed distinguished professorships at the 16 universities of the UNC System.

In accordance with Spangler's provisions, the combined state and private funds are used to establish a $500,000 endowed chair within the arts and sciences department. In addition, a newly recruited distinguished faculty member must fill the endowed chair position.

The length of the chair term is five years, renewable for a second five-year term.

The Glaxo-Wellcome Foundation was founded in 1986. The foundation's goal is to support state and national organizations that enhance the overall outlook of health and education in general.

Glaxo-Wellcome Inc., a Triangle-based company, is the main contributor to the foundation.

Ann Goodnight, a 1967

NCSU graduate, is a new member of the NCSU Board of Trustees. She is also a member of the CHASS Advisory Board. Goodnight said that she is continuing efforts to increase college loyalty and to increase awareness of CHASS's donations to society.

"The department is absolutely delighted to have Tittle here with us," said William Clifford, head of the sociology and anthropology department.

"He has so many positive things to offer the students, faculty and staff, and the entire community of NCSU."

Web site to offer career guidance for all ages

◆ An NCSU professor in the College of Education and Psychology has updated the Career Key Web site to include aids for choosing an appropriate major and information on training and salaries for many careers.

Mica Parker
Staff Reporter

If you had visited the Career Key Web site three years ago, you would have seen bright cartoons encouraging young people to go to college.

Today, it is a different story, thanks to one N.C. State professor and his team of students.

Dr. Lawrence K. Jones, a professor in the College of Education and Psychology, developed the Web site in 1997 to help middle school students in career development. For this reason, Jones designed the site with cartoons and animated graphics to appeal to young children. This year, however, the site received a complete makeover to appeal to people of all ages.

"The first change was an overhaul of the appearance of the Web site," according to Jones.

"This was one of the major changes," he said. "We changed the background and used a different font. We wanted to give it a more professional look."

Jones and his students also dramatically altered the Web site's structure.

"We brainstormed for about four or five months about the structure," said Jones, "and this resulted in the division of the Web site into three different sections entitled 'You,' 'Us' and 'Others.'"

The content of the Web site has also been improved. Along with Jones's Career Key measure, students will now find other career-planning aids located in the section entitled "You."

For example, a section on choosing an appropriate major has been added. Also, each suggested career provides a link to the Occupational Outlook Handbook, which gives the average salary and required training for that particular career.

Parents and counselors will also benefit from this section.

"It gives advice on how parents can help their children make good choices and how [these choices] affect their decisions," said Jones.

Along with providing more information, there was a strong desire among the site's creators to give visitors a more dynamic experience.

"We wanted to let the visitors express their own ideas, so that the people who use the site would be helping to create the site," said Jones.

This is where the "Others" section comes in. In this section, students can express their opinions about the Web site. There is also a space on the site for students to post their hopes and dreams for others to see.

Technical developments have also been applied to the Web site.

"It is fixed so that you can navigate the entire Web site without scrolling," said Jones. "This way, you barely have to use the keyboard at all-just the mouse."

While Jones is thrilled about the chance to reach students through the Internet, he admits that it can be slightly overwhelming.

"It's a terrific opportunity, but you have to be extra responsible," said Jones. "You don't have editors, so you have to make sure you spell correctly and make sense. You're your only critic."

Jones said that some other problems have surfaced, as well.

"Basically, we need more money," Jones said. "We have other ideas for the Web site that we can't go through with because of a lack of funding."

Jones and his group would like to purchase software that would keep track of the demographic statistics of the site's visitors.

"We want a profile of who is actually using the site," he said.

The experience has been an overall success, however. Since its makeover, the Career Key Web site is rapidly growing in popularity.

"Yesterday, we had 4,400 hits," said Jones.

School counselors all over the country are linking it to their own sites, and Jones is currently receiving emails from grateful students.

"I never dreamed I'd be able to do this," he said. "It's a very powerful feature to be able to link students to this information."

Students can visit the Career Key Web site, which is a free service, at www.ncsu.edu/careerkey.

Senate to budget $30,000 for student organizations

◆ Student Body Treasurer Michael Anthony unveiled a new finance packet at last week's Senate meeting that will enable student organizations to access funding procedures and submit bills online

Robin Worrell
Staff Reporter

N.C. State student organizations can now access financial assistance information online in the form of a new finance packet that Student Body Treasurer Michael Anthony presented at the Student Senate meeting last Wednesday.

The packet instructs student organization representatives on how to submit finance bills to senators who can then sponsor the bills and request funding for the group's projects, activities or events.

"Senate is allocating $30,000 for funding student organizations this year," said Gary Palin, chairman of the senate's academics committee.

Representatives can download the fall 2000 finance packet and submit their finance bills at the Student Government home page (www.students.ncsu.edu).

Becky Hartman will now be party ordinance." After distributing copies of the petition before, they got a preliminary total 1,575 signatures on it during the party.

"We thought a second Brent Road party would be a good time to rally support from students against the City Council ordinance," said Borwick, a senior in computer science.

Borwick and Claywell, a senior in environmental design in architecture, hoped students would see the party also as a protest of the ordinance. In this sense, Borwick felt the gathering was "a big success."

Claywell said people were at first hesitant to sign the petition Saturday night, but around 11 p.m., partygoers became more willing.

"We've examined the ordinance," Claywell said. "There's a lot of fault with it."

According to the petition, the problems with Raleigh City Ordinance 2000-848 include:

"The ordinance does not take into account students' input concerning social gatherings, helping Anthony handle financial decisions. A senior in business management, Hartman was appointed by the senate Wednesday as the new Student Body Comptroller.

More appointments will be made at this Wednesday's meeting, as new senators will fill the 32 empty seats.

Jen Guthrie, a freshman in biological sciences, sat in to observe the meeting. One of the 68 students interviewed last week, she will find out Wednesday if she will fill a senate seat.

Those who are appointed will attend a mandatory retreat over the weekend, along with every member of Student

"The ordinance goes against students' right to assembly."

"The ordinance is put together in a way that targets 'the interest of young adults;'" and

"The ordinance 'is worded in such a manner that it could be used to eliminate the vast majority of social gatherings of young adults.'"

Borwick said the next big step in the fight against the ordinance is to get it repealed, and to make sure the "average Raleigh citizen is aware of what happened" surrounding the entire Brent Road issue.

[Councilman Benson] Kirkman is supposed to support students," said Borwick, who added that the ordinance was pushed through over the summer when fewer students were in Raleigh.

"We're being misrepresented," said Claywell. "The mass isn't being heard because of a few people."

Though police presence at the party was light compared to the police force at the first Brent Road paper, Claywell said law Government.

"The whole purpose of the retreat is training," said Palin, also chair of the senate committee of fall appointments.

Among existing senators, committees were assigned to handle specific issues, including committees of finance, government operations, tuition and fees, academics, campus life, diversity and university affairs.

In other business, Student Body President Harold Pettigrew read a statement of thanks by Claude McKinney in response to the Student Government's act honoring his service as Centennial Campus Coordinator.

enforcement "probably should have been there" later in the night, when several altercations took place.

Claywell said students from Meredith College and Peace College have offered to gather signatures on the petitions at their own schools. In addition, some NCSU students will try to get more signatures on the Brickyard, after which they will present these figures to the City Council.

Claywell admitted that it will be hard to gain support for the movement. He is still adamant about it, however.

"We're not advocating underage drinking or destruction of property," said Claywell. "This is about student advocacy and addressing the rights of students."

Staff reporters Richard Morgan and Andrew Buchert also contributed to this story.

Anthony handed out a budget and requested volunteers for a building and planning committee, which will be making a fundraising resource page for the Web.

Anthony introduced a program bill allocating money to fund a live, on-campus version of the ABC television show "Politically Incorrect with Bill Maher," which will take place at NCSU's Stewart Theatre on at 8 p.m. on Oct. 14. The event will be broadcast on the College Television Network and will include Bill Maher.

A government bill for the fall 2000 football ticket distribution policy was also introduced by Anthony. It lays out specific rules and regulations, prices and pickup dates for this season's tickets.

Student Senate President Conen Morgan assigned these new bills to the finance and campus life committees, respectively.

The Student Senate meets Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. in the second-floor Witherspoon Senate Hall.

Agendas and details about senate and Student Government are also available on their home page.

TECHNICIAN'S VIEW

The $175,000 question

In case you were living in a certain part of the first week of school, the city of Raleigh put their controversial new "nuisance party ordinance" to the test and cracked down hard on N.C. State's off-campus, back-to-school party at Brent Road at Brent Road. Any hint of a party was totally destroyed by a massive, 500-person police presence that started at about 4:30 p.m. and ended when the last signs of the party had been wiped out. The entire night cost the city $175,000.

But last Saturday, 2,000 students had a party at Brent Road. Raleigh Police Department Capt. D.A. Inman described the party as "very orderly," overlooking the fact that the party was in direct violation of Raleigh City Ordinance 2000-848, the so-called "nuisance party ordinance." The police attempted to play down the fact that the students and residents of the Brent Road area engaged in a blatant disregard for Ordinance 2000-848 by talking the party up to the NCSU football team's victory over Indiana. But what does that mean for the police? That a nuisance party is OK as long as it's in reaction to an athletic victory? Or, on a more basic level, that some nuisance parties will face Brent Road's aggression while others will face Brent Road's apathy? Can there be "very orderly" nuisance parties?

Yes, RPD succeeded in issuing 12 charges, including 8 or 9 arrests. But overwhelmingly, the naked truth is that the city has shot itself in the foot over Brent Road and nuisance parties in general. Saturday's lack of police presence can only demonstrate one of two things: 1) that the police force lacks the funds necessary to fight nuisance parties with the vigilance displayed on Aug. 26, or 2) that the police lacks the dedication to fight nuisance parties with the vigilance displayed on Aug. 26.

Either way, the police have over-painted themselves into a corner whose boundaries are marked by the city's own hollow threats and flimsy strings of red tape. The Brent Road situation is not an issue of whether or not police should crack down on nuisance parties. The issue Brent Road raises is how any police force can be expected to douse the spirit of any college town. Agreement and disagreement over the fact that Ordinance 2000-848 exists are beside the point, that now that it does exist, it is impossible to enforce.

To live up to the demands of Ordinance 2000-848, the RPD would have to be able to provide round-the-clock surveillance of every street in Raleigh every day of every year. It is impossible. In the face of last Saturday's student victory at Brent Road, the police force's Aug. 26 "victory" at Brent Road only proves that a crackdown is possible when the police force is as actively involved in the gossip grapevine of parties as students. Unless this university's First Year College gets absorbed by the RPD, the chances of Raleigh's never seeing another "nuisance party" are about as likely as the chances of Raleigh spending another $175,000 to stop one party on one night.

A word on 'model' citizens

John Sico
Staff Columnist

Recently while strolling through the food court at the mall, I caught myself looking at an attractive girl that seemed strangely overdressed for the setting. In this case being overdressed also meant looking like she was on her way to get her groove on at the Cantina. Upon closer examination, I discovered that this girl looked to be extraordinarily juvenile and prompted me to investigate the cause. A disc presented itself in the form of a small bag being clutched in the hand of each of these scantily clad youngsters. Emblazoned on the bag in big purple letters were the words, "Steven Magazine Model Search."

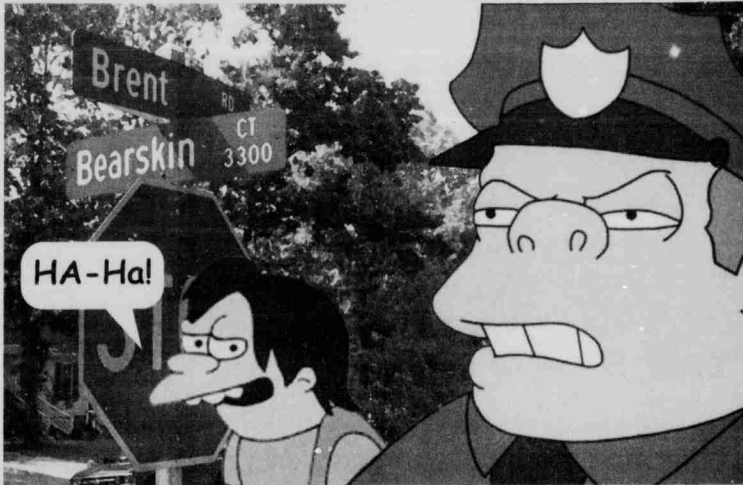

Evidently there was some sort of big event at the mall that gave young people a chance to strut their stuff down a little portable runway for an opportunity possibly win a modeling contract. So, a chance at being a model in a nationally distributed magazine was what prompted these girls (apparently at their parents' consent) to parade around the shopping center in clubwear.

Striving to be a model that thousands of people look at every day and compare themselves to is understandably a desirable thing. I do not have a problem with that desire. My complaint is that in order to be noticed, these young girls were willing, even excited, to show off their not-yet-developed bodies.

Maybe it's different because I am a male, but I do not recall a time in my life when I was so eager to prance around in my skivvies. Even if, at 2 years old, I had wanted to do such a thing, I seriously doubt that my parents would have allowed — much less participated in — such an activity. I think that at 12 years of age I was much more concerned with trying to convince my parents to buy me Ninja Turtle action figures than getting them to drive me to the mall to become the cause of jealousy of the masses.

The appeal of modeling to these girls reveals a sort of cycle. Gazing at these pictures in magazines causes the aspiring models to want to be no longer the one

Selma, Alabama; population: you

Bryan Proffitt
Staff Columnist

Fire bombings, voter fraud, intimidation and threats; man, the '60s were a mess for democracy. Well, 37 years later, Joe Smitherton is up for re-election and up to his old tricks. In the Aug. 22 vote, Smitherton received 4,345 votes to his opponent James Perkins Jr.'s 4,065 and Yusuf Salaam's 1,019. This tally was tight enough to lead to a runoff between Smitherton and Perkins on Sept. 12. Smitherton edged out Perkins, a black businessman, in 1996 by 365 votes.

No matter how close Perkins gets through the people continue to mandate that Joe Smitherton is their man. Upon closer review, however, the perpetual election of this man has little to do with a mandate by the people and a lot to do with voter fraud and intimidation. Leaders of the "Joe Must Go" campaign have been subject to police officers preventing them from voting, switched registration sites, fraudulent absentee ballots, trifles and death threats. Two activists recently had their cars set on fire. The federal government and State District Attorney, unfortunately, continue to pay no attention. This behavior has been going on for years and will continue until this man is removed from office.

Why is this corruption allowed to happen in today's enlightened society? It continues to happen because we have managed to convince ourselves that we are headed. We put ourselves on the back for electing a few black senators, a few female judges, and enforcing a few non-racist laws. We allow ourselves to feel comfortable because we "have a black friend." This is the year 2000, people, and it is still necessary for thousands to march on Washington to end racial profiling and police brutality. We haven't erased any prejudices.

Selma can happen anywhere. We, in North Carolina, cannot cry foul and look down upon Alabama as we continue to elect Jesse Helms every four years. Just a few months ago, a woman had her knees severely damaged in an assault by the police right here in Raleigh. And she was the one charged with assault! Our cafeteria is staffed and our dorms are cleaned by people of color, yet our high-ranking administrators and public officials are still as lily-white as a party at the Regans'.

We are all Selma, Alabama. So pay attention to the news tomorrow as people flock to this troubled city to ensure a safe and just run-off.

Do your best to find some information from somewhere other than NBC, CBS or ABC, as they most certainly will not be paying attention. This could prove to be a beautiful example of people of all ages and shades of skin working together to fulfill Dr. King's dream.

'Miracles' of modern science

Manav Tandon
Staff Columnist

So I woke up this morning and guess what: I was late for my first class (I stay at home). My alarm clock didn't perform its job because the storm last night took out the power for a little while. Anyway, I went to the bathroom, did my business there, took a shower, and then got dressed. When I got in my car, I discovered, at the worst possible time, that it wasn't in peak condition. Somehow I got a jumper cable and a kind neighbor's car to jump-start the aged engine.

Finally, I was on my way to school. As I drove on a side road, I noticed a lump right ahead. As I got closer I realized it was a little squirrel, run over by a careless driver, or perhaps a sadistic one, and then by subsequent drivers who were too busy talking on their cell phones and listening to the radio to pay any heed to the poor creature. I swerved around the creature to avoid running over it, even though it was long dead and crushed beyond recognition. Perhaps the squirrel was going to get some food for its offspring, and had chosen a bad time to cross the road; or perhaps it was an offspring searching for its mother, unaware of the dangers involved in crossing a road. It didn't matter anymore, and I soon forgot about it.

I was halfway between my home and college when I got stuck in traffic. Was it an accident? Nope. I soon found out that the traffic lights on an intersection about a mile ahead had gone haywire, apparently due to the same storm responsible for my late awakening. And even worse, I got stuck behind a dinosaur of a pick-up truck that kept ejecting black fumes at my windshield. The scene was one of utter chaos: horns honking, tempers flaring, inconsiderate and irresponsible drivers trying to make their own routes through the mediums and the road-side. I thought: no nuclear weapons or space lasers required, just take out the traffic lights of an entire city, or state, or country, and the citizens will be paralyzed.

By this time, I was already 20 minutes late for my first class. I wondered how much longer would the traffic continue in this manner. And then, I heard a sound that, at any other time would have sent shivers down my back, was music to my ears. A police car drove around the paralyzed traffic and into the middle of the intersection. Within minutes the traffic was finally moving, although it moved so slowly that I could have reached college faster walking on foot.

Well, I finally reached college 40 minutes late for my first class. It was unnecessary to even try to go to my first class now. I got a national newspaper and went to the library to kill time until my next class. The newspaper was full of poignant news: some terrorists had blown up an apartment complex in Moscow with RDX; several species of animals and birds had become extinct because of deforestation in the Amazon rain forests; global warming was threatening to inundate hundreds of thousands of people in several small islands in the South Pacific; several African tribes were slaughtering each other with the help of modern, automatic weapons; and North Korea was using its nuclear weapons to blackmail Western nations. And that was just the first section!

Fortunately, I didn't get a chance to read the rest of the newspaper since my next class was only a few minutes away. After attending all my subsequent classes, I went to a lab to work on a project. Two hours into the project my computer froze. Unfortunately, the lab I chose was in the library. I went searching for a computer administrator, and ended up calling the Hillsborough building. The instruction was simple: turn off the computer, wait 10 seconds, turn it on again. If only I had known that 45 minutes earlier. The computer came back on fine, but all my work was lost. I didn't want to spend another two hours in the lab.

On my way back, I got stuck in traffic again. It wasn't the traffic lights, they had been fixed already. It was an accident. Some woman had been talking on a cell phone in one hand, and enjoying a meal from the other. The result: she would never talk on a cell phone or eat anything ever again. The traffic wasn't paralyzed as before, and I was home within minutes. I turned on the TV, and the news was on. The current topic was "Echelon," a spy satellite built and maintained by the English-speaking countries of the world for the exclusive purpose of monitoring every phone call and email message in the world. The news on another network was on the recent developments in genome research and the possibility of using the knowledge to create perfect human beings. The news on yet another network concerned the creation of a robot with the ability to evolve into a smarter and more powerful one without human intervention.

And I thought to myself: "Ahhhh... what a wonderful world!"

Women's soccer falls 1-0 to Davidson

◆ N.C. State will open its ACC season Tuesday against Virginia.

Willie at freshman Danielle Erikson took the ball deep into State territory and ripped a shot past Pack goalkeeper Kristen Skinner at the 34:27 mark of the game. It was the first goal scored against Skinner since she took over for sophomore Gretchen Lear, who has missed four games with a separated shoulder. Skinner, who registered seven saves for the game, had not allowed a goal in 340:11.

Wildcat goalkeeper Winnie Corrigan posted six saves for her second shutout of the season.

State controlled much of the action once again, firing 16 shots to Davidson's 10. Freshman forward Lindsey Underwood led all players with five shots taken, while senior forward Shannon Tully took three for the Wolfpack. Each squad recorded three corner kicks for the game.

"We really controlled the ball well again tonight," Kerrigan said. "We outplayed them and outshot them, but just couldn't get the ball in the net. We did get good performances tonight from Katherine Warman and Lindsey Underwood, which was encouraging. They did a good job of sustaining the attack for us up front."

and the match's momentum — the Pack cruised to an easy win in the fifth and final game. Top performers in the match were Greene (nine kills and 16 digs), Kreager (15 kills) and Williams (11 kills and 10 digs).

In its fourth and final match of the tournament, the Pack defeated Campbell. After each team won a game relatively easily, the Pack fought hard to take the third and fourth games. The Pack received notable performances from senior Meredith Price (17 digs) and Stambaugh (25 kills) en route to victory.

The Pack took third place in the tournament and had three members on the All-Tournament Team, which was voted on by the five head coaches. The players that received this honor were Kreager, Stambaugh, Price, Karolina Zelinka of Rice, Nil Kalagoglou of Rice, Katie Sherwood of Radford and Abby Jenkins of Campbell. The tournament MVP was Laura Marcuson of Radford.

State names swimming coach

Jennings "Brooks" Teal was named head swimming and diving coach at N.C. State on Friday.

Teal comes to the Wolfpack from James Madison University, where he has served as head coach for men's swimming since August of 1993.

While at James Madison, Teal led the Dukes to Colonial Athletic Association championships in six of his seven years at the school, including three Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference championships in 1994, 1995 and 1997. Teal was also named CAA Coach of the Year in 1997 and 1999.

"I'm just very happy to be a Wolfpacker," Teal said. "I'm very excited to be at N.C. State, working with all of the great people at that university. I'm really anxious to get started as soon as possible because this opportunity is simply a dream come true for me."

Prior to his tenure at James Madison, Teal served as assistant coach for the men's and women's squads at Indian River Community College from 1990 to 1993. During that period, Indian River swept the National Junior College Championships in 1991, 1992 and 1993.

A native of Tarboro, N.C., Teal was employed by the Raleigh YMCA as the Aquatics

Director from February 1983 to September 1989. As a head coach at the YMCA, Teal directed the 120-member squad to national recognition. In 1988, he led his club to the National YMCA Men's Championship, a team that featured three national record holders, two relay national record holders, numerous world-ranked swimmers and future Olympic gold medalist David Fox, who swam for the Wolfpack from 1990-1993. He was also named North Carolina Coach of the Year in 1987 and 1988.

Teal was promoted to Director of Competitive Swimming for the YMCA in August 1989 and directed a 160-member squad and coordinated major competitive events of 500 participants.

Teal, who has coached swimming at many levels since 1974, was the head coach of the Rocky Mount Swim Team (1976-83), Tarboro Swim Club (1975-82) and served as an assistant coach for the Raleigh Swim Association (1974-75).

Indiana fires Bob Knight

Bob Knight's temper finally did him in.

The Indiana basketball coach, already in trouble for a history of misconduct, was fired Sunday by the school for a "pattern of unacceptable behavior."

University president Myles Brand, who announced the firing at a news conference, called Knight "defiant and hostile" and said the coach had shown a "continued unwillingness" to work within guidelines of the athletic department.

Knight had been warned in May about his behavior during three tumultuous decades at Indiana, where he won three national titles as one of the game's best coaches but also one of its most volatile. But his behavior became even worse since then, Brand said.

The final confrontation came last week when Knight grabbed a student by the arm to lecture him about manners at Assembly Hall.

The coach had been ordered to abide by a "zero-tolerance" conduct policy, which included no "inappropriate" physical contact with students.

"He did not fulfill the promises he gave me," Brand said.

Knight had the option of resigning but refused, the school president said.

Brand stressed that Knight's run-in with 19-year-old freshman Kent Harvey on Thursday was not the only reason for the dismissal of the 59-year-old Hall of Fame coach.

"If that was the only instance that took place you would not be here today," Brand told reporters.

long pass that Tabor collected just in front of the 18-yard box. Tabor's shot went past Long Island's keeper, Orville Jackson, but missed the net by less than a yard.

In the first overtime, the Blackbirds had two corner kicks that resulted in good shots on net, but Watson made the stop both times.

State had its best chances of the game in the second overtime. Four minutes into the period, Tabor fed Kyle Smith in the box, but Smith tipped the ball just wide. Three minutes later, State's Hiroki Kawase rifled a shot that Jackson tipped just enough to cause the ball to ring off the post.

"[Hiroki] did well," Olivencia said. "He's been injured for the past two years, but he came in [Saturday] and he showed some nice little flashes. It was nice to see him out there."

State dominated the first 75 minutes of Friday's game against Butler, but was unable to capitalize on its numerous scoring chances. Butler led the scoring off when Mike Mariscalco scored at the 7:54 mark. State's Israel Mejia answered 28:02 into the game after Baldwin beat two Butler defenders and put a nice cross into the box.

After being outplayed the first 30 minutes of the half, Butler scored two goals in an eight-minute span to take control of the game. Nick Pantazi scored both goals for the Bulldogs. Damon Butler added a goal off a header for State.

"We played pretty good, but we didn't come out with the results we wanted," Olivencia said.

Midfielder Michael Karim and defender Eric Kaufman missed both games with injuries. Tarantini said the earliest both could return to action is Sunday, when the Pack hosts Maryland.

this year." Randle El personally accounted for 321 of Indiana's 476 yards of total offense in the Hoosiers' 41-38 loss to State. Besides completing 14-of-27 passes for 240 yards, Randle El also led his team in rushing with 81 yards on 14 carries.

"He's a great athlete," safety Adrian Wilson said. "He's like a little squirt bug out there, running around the field. We can't catch him, and it's hard to get a bead on him. He can do it all."

Randle El's versatility created all kinds of havoc for the Pack defense. On the first play of Indiana's second possession, he found wide receiver Jerry Dorsey for a 57-yard touchdown pass to put his team up 14-3.

Indiana used its quick-strike weapon again early in the second quarter to take a 21-3 lead. Randle El rolled out to his right and launched a pass downfield into Versie Gaddis' hands for a 70-yard touchdown play.

The Pack tried numerous times to put pressure on Randle El but only managed one sack. Every time State seemed to have him for a loss, Randle El either scampered away or pitched to running back Levron Williams, who gained 69 yards on 10 carries, on the option.

Randle El's ability to elude the rush made life difficult on State's secondary. The defensive backs had to make sure he didn't take off but also had to respect his arm.

"We've got to stay on our man, stay on our keys," Wilson said. "We can't worry too much about what he's doing back there."

Indiana even experimented with moving Randle El around, positioning him at flanker and bringing backup quarterback Tommy Jones into the game for two plays in the second quarter. The move, which Amato anticipated earlier in the week, netted a yard, but Randle El's mere presence on the field was something State had to be aware of.

Randle El got his yards, yet State ended up with the win by keeping him and the Indiana offense out of the end zone in the fourth quarter. The Pack defense held fast when it had to, giving the offense a chance to win the game.

"If they score a touchdown, it's over, maybe, who knows with these kids," Amato said. "But the defense rose to the occasion and allowed them to kick a field goal, which kept us in striking distance."

AROUND THE ACC

Northwestern 38, Duke 5

The Blue Devils have played 120 minutes worth of football and still need a map to find the end zone. Duke's defense hasn't done much better, giving up 38 points for the second consecutive week.

Virginia 34, Richmond 6

Quarterback Dan Ellis racked up 336 yards of total offense in the Cavaliers' rout of the Division I-AA Spiders. The win evened the Cavs record at 1-1.

No. 16 Clemson 62, Missouri 9

Clemson forced six turnovers and outscored Missouri 34-0 in an 8:33 stretch that began in the second quarter to run its record to 2-0.

Maryland 17, Temple 10

Tailback LaMont Jordan was held to 62 yards rushing, but the Terrapins still managed to defeat the Owls for the fourth time in as many seasons. Temple was flagged for 15 penalties in the loss.

North Carolina 35, Wake Forest 14

The Demon Deacons led 14-10 at the half, but the Tar Heels scored 25 unanswered points in the second half to take the victory.

No. 2 Florida State 26, Georgia Tech 21

The Yellow Jackets, who entered the game as 22-point underdogs, gave the Seminoles all they could handle again. The defending national champs used a career-high 443 passing yards from Chris Weinke to extend their winning streak to 14 games.

Antwaan Randle El accounted for 321 yards of total offense.

Volleyball splits again in weekend tournament

◆ The Wolfpack holds its own at the N.C. State Outback Invitational.

David Hobgood
 Staff Writer

The Wolfpack spent yet another weekend competing in an early-season tournament and came away from the N.C. State Outback Invitational with the same results as last weekend by splitting their four matches.

The Pack (4-4) defeated Florida Atlantic (15-11, 8-15, 8-15, 17-15, 15-9) champion Radford (13-15, 15-12, 15-17, 4-15) and high-powered journey runner-up Rice (9-15, 10-15, 16-14, 15-7, 9-13).

In its opening match, the Pack gave Radford everything it could handle through the first three games. However, following a fourth game meltdown, the Pack ended the tourney opener in defeat. Some of the Pack's top performers were sophomore Tara Greene (11 kills and four digs), senior Stephanie Stambaugh (11 kills) and junior Charece Williams (10 kills and seven digs). In the nightcap Friday, the Pack played host to high-octane Rice in a five-game thriller. After splitting the first four games, the Pack dropped a heart-breaking fifth game to halt its bid at an upset. Although it was unable to secure victory, its loss to the Owls was an excellent experience for the ever-maturing Pack.

The Pack received several impressive performances in this match. Some of them came from sophomore Katie Kost (17 kills), junior Alison Kreager (13 kills and 15 digs), Greene (13 kills and 28 digs) and Stambaugh (12 kills).

The Pack started the second day of the tournament with a bang in a five-game showdown vs. Florida Atlantic that was quite possibly the most exciting match of the tournament.

Led by the solid play of Stambaugh, the Pack jumped out to a great start winning the first game. The second and third games didn't go as well for the

"Cardiac Pack" victorious again

◆ N.C. State pulled off an improbable fourth quarter comeback Saturday to beat Indiana 41-38.

Jeremy Ashton
 Sports Editor

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — The "Cardiac Pack" has officially been reborn.

One week after going two overtimes to beat Arkansas State, N.C. State (2-0) made up a 12-point deficit on the road in the final 4:29 Saturday to beat Indiana 41-38.

Freshman quarterback Philip Rivers, who completed 31-of-52 passes for 401 yards and tied a school record with five touchdown passes, tossed a 47-yard touchdown pass to wideout Koren Robinson with 54 seconds left for the go-ahead score. Indiana had an opportunity to tie the game at the end of regulation, but sophomore Terrence Holt, who blocked two punts last year against then-No. 17 Texas, knocked down Andy Payne's 37-yard field goal attempt. Junior Adrian Wilson fell on the loose ball, leaving the Hoosiers and most of the 30,151 in attendance at Memorial Stadium stunned as the Wolfpack bench emptied onto the field in celebration.

"It's about the most unbelievable thing I think I've ever been around," a visibly exhausted Chuck Amato said following the game. State found itself trailing by nine with 6:06 left when the 100th pass of Rivers' young career was picked off by Indiana linebacker Joslin Goodman and returned to the Pack 12. But the Pack defense limited the Hoosiers, who gained 476 yards on the day, to a field goal, putting Indiana ahead 38-26.

"You'd think after that we're going to shut down, the offense is going to shut down, it's over," Rivers said. "But we kept fighting. The 'D' sucked it up and took care of our mistake, my mistake actually, and held them to a field goal to keep us in the game."

Rivers immediately responded by taking the Pack 70 yards on two plays. He connected with Robinson for a 39-yard gain and, following an offside penalty against Indiana, hit tight end Willie Wright in the end zone to trim the lead to 38-33 with 3:27 on the clock. State recovered an onside kick on the ensuing kickoff, but the play was nullified by a false start penalty, one of 11 penalties called against the Pack. On the re-kick, kicker Austin Herbert booted the ball deep, and State forced the Hoosiers to go three-and-out, giving the Pack the ball on its own 22 with 1:54 remaining.

The game-winning drive almost stalled before it could get going. After gaining just two yards on three plays, Rivers' fourth-down pass to running back Ray Robinson fell harmlessly to the ground, seemingly clinching the game for Indiana. But a defensive holding penalty

"Obviously, I've got to be careful what I say, but have you ever, as long as you people have been reporting on college football, seen anything like that?" Cameron asked reporters following the game.

The Pack moved the ball to the Indiana 47 on back-to-back completions from Rivers to senior Eric Leak and Ray Robinson before the freshman quarterback found Koren Robinson deep to give State its first lead of the game.

"I was just running," Robinson said. "If they can't keep up, they can't keep up. I was just going to get the ball."

Rivers tried to go to Robinson twice earlier in the drive only to have the ball. Rivers said State tried the play a third time because the Pack thought it could exploit Indiana's safeties. "We knew that if we could get those safeties' hips turned one way or the other, it was a touchdown," Rivers said. "That's why we kept running it. It was the same play actually the three times we went deep."

Robinson's touchdown put State up by just one, meaning Indiana could still win the game with the field goal if the Pack wasn't successful on a two-point conversion. Another false start penalty on the initial attempt pushed State back to the 7, but Rivers eventually found Wright to put State up by three. The field-goal issue almost became a moot point when Derrn Graham found daylight on the kickoff, but James Walker rushed him out of bounds at the State 44. The Hoosiers drove down to the 20 and used their final timeout with seven ticks left on the clock.

State appeared headed for overtime for the second consecutive week when Payne, who converted 8-of-9 field goals inside 40 yards last year, lined up for the potential game-tying field goal. But Holt blocked through the line on a designed play to block the kick and preserve the Pack victory.

"I was just thinking before he called the play, if he called middle block that I was going to go up there and try to touch my mother that passed away a couple of years ago," Holt said. "So, I just jumped as high as I could and blocked it."

Wright said that the Pack dedicated the game to Keegan Weir, the team's starting center, after he was lost for the season with a

Indiana QB runs wild in loss

◆ N.C. State won the game Saturday, but the Wolfpack never could get a handle on Antwan Randle El.

Jeremy Ashton
 Sports Editor

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — N.C. State realized that it was going to have its hands full Saturday with Antwan Randle El.

The Indiana quarterback entered his junior season as a Heisman Trophy candidate and is the only player in Big Ten history to accumulate 5,000 yards of total offense by the end of his sophomore year. The Wolfpack knew what to expect after watching film of Randle El torching opponents with his ability to throw and run.

Despite all the preparation, State never quite found an answer for Randle El.

"That quarterback is just something special," N.C. State head coach Chuck Amato said. "I'm glad we only have to play him one time. I hope we don't see anybody else like him the rest of the season."

In Saturday's game, neither the Pack nor the Blackbirds had

State (0-2-2) outplayed the Blackbirds during the overtime periods despite playing a man down due to a red card incurred by midfielder Lee Baldwin early in the second half. Friday in the Duke adidas Soccer Classic, State lost to Butler 3-2. "[Saturday], with 10 guys, we played better than we played the whole season," said head coach George Tarantini. "[Friday] was a very tough loss. I thought we played pretty well."

Duke won the Classic with a 5-0 win over Long Island, and a 6-0 victory over Butler. Baldwin and Pack keeper Mitchell Watson were named to the all-tournament team.

State came into the tournament needing some positive momentum after struggling in its own tournament last weekend. The Pack gave up eight goals in two games, losing to Elon College and tying High Point.

"The way we've been playing has been a disappointment to us, the university, and especially our coach," said senior co-captain Nick Olivencia. "We're just trying to go out and give it our all, especially for him. We're just trying to win now for our coach and for ourselves."

In Saturday's game, neither the Pack nor the Blackbirds had many scoring opportunities in the first half. Things opened a bit in the second half after Baldwin was served with his second yellow card at the 57:53 mark, causing the Pack to go a man down.

With 12 minutes remaining in regulation, State had a golden opportunity to score. Olivencia fed forward Matt Tabor with a
