DEJA VU vs. FSU

THE N.C. STATE FOOTBALL TEAM HANDED FLORIDA STATE ITS FIRST HOME LOSS EVER AGAINST AN ACC TEAM.

As soon as the final second elapsed in Saturday's contest, Levar Fisher (44) could only mutter three words: "Thank you, God."

Jeremy Ashton Staff Reporter

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — For the second time in four years, N.C. State made ACC history at Florida State's expense.

The Wolfpack upset the No. 10 Seminoles 34-28 Saturday, leaving the Homecoming crowd of 82,425 at Doak Campbell Stadium, aside from a contingent of Pack fans, stunned. NCSU, which entered the game as an 18-point underdog, became the first ACC team to beat FSU in Tallahassee since the Seminoles joined the conference in 1992. FSU had won 39 consecutive games at Doak Campbell against ACC foes.

The Pack also handed the Seminoles their first loss in a Homecoming game in head coach Bobby Bowden's 26-year tenure and ensured that FSU will not reach double-digit wins for the first time since 1986.

In addition, NCSU became the first ACC team to beat FSU twice. The Pack also beat the Seminoles 24-7 at Carter-Finley Stadium in 1998.

"This is a lot better because we fought for this one," said senior tailback Ray Robinson, who was also a participant in the 1998 win.

This win was especially sweet for NCSU Head Coach Chuck Amato, who was an assistant coach for 18 years at FSU.

"Coach Bowden grabbed me and congratulated me and said, 'Great playing Chuck, your kids executed,' and I cried," Amato said. "He said, 'Coach, you're supposed to be happy.' I said, 'I am happy. And when I'm happy, I cry.'"

Leading just 31-28 with 10:05 left in the fourth quarter, the Pack offense went on a marathon 17-play, 71-yard drive, consuming nearly eight minutes on the game clock. The drive finally stalled at the FSU 14, but kicker Adam Kiker hit a 32-yard field goal, extending the lead to 34-28.

With 2:11 remaining, the Seminoles made one last effort to avert the upset. Freshman quarterback Chris Rix calmly moved his team down the field, completing passes along the sidelines to his receivers.

"FSU got all the way to the State 14 with seven seconds left, leaving time for two more shots at the end zone. After Rix's first attempt fell incomplete, Pack cornerback Brian Williams tipped away a pass to Talman Gardner. As the ball dropped to the ground, the players and coaches on the State sideline emptied on to the field and began celebrating.

With the win, State also reached the six-win mark, making the team eligible for a postseason bowl game.

Students can vote online Monday and Tuesday for one male and one female candidate.

Ayren Jackson Assistant News Editor

After an intense application and interview process, the six finalists for the Leader of the Pack competition have been chosen. Though each finalist is uniquely different, they all share a similar love for N.C. State and its student body, in whose hands the final decision now rests. NCSU students will be able to vote on the winners on Monday, Nov. 12 and Tuesday, Nov. 13.

Additional information about the candidates can be found at students.ncsu.edu, and voting will be conducted online at vote.ncsu.edu.

On Nov. 17, during halftime of the Homecoming football game, all six finalists will be announced. The two winners, one male and one female, will each be awarded a $1,000 university scholarship sponsored by Student Government. The finalist with the highest overall GPA will also be recognized at this time. Three males and three females were chosen as finalists for the award, which is based on scholastics, extracurricular activities and personal expression. These finalists are as follows:

Jahan Brown

Jahan Brown is a sophomore majoring in Spanish. She is a Resident Advisor in Lee Hall, a member of the University Scholars Program, a member of Campus Crusade for Christ, a dance team member, a member of the leadership committee of the Impact Movement, Vice President for Campus Life, co-founder and mentor for Reach, Enrich and Diversity (RED), a Park Scholar, a member of the National Society of Collegiate Scholars, a member of the Sigma Delta Pi National Hispanic Society and a spokesperson of the 911 Relief — A Call to Action project.

"In the short time that I've been a student at N.C. State, the people — students, professors, everyone — have put so much into my life," said Brown. "I just want to give back to them."

If chosen as Leader of the Pack, Brown wants not only to enhance school pride through Homecoming planning but also to focus on fundraising for scholarship programs.

According to Brown, her greatest contribution to the university thus far has been her involvement in the 911 Relief — A Call to Action project.

"It was a big collaboration of organizations and I was able to represent them each and impact many lives."

Brown said that N.C. State is special in that it harbors a very diverse group of people — diverse in race, culture and interests. "Wherever I go from N.C. State the atmosphere will never be the same," said Brown.

Elizabeth Graham

Elizabeth Graham is a junior majoring in English education. She is a Resident Advisor and AC in Lee Hall, a committee chair in the Teaching Fellows program, secretary of the Students' N.C. Association of Education, a Merit Award recipient, a member of the University Scholars program, a member of the National Society of Collegiate Scholars and a member of the Golden Key Honor Society.

"I want to positively represent our school," said Graham. "I just want to be a role model and a voice for students' concerns."

Graham said that her "ram-bunctious" personality is similar to the friendly atmosphere that she has found on the NCSU campus.

"By being an RA, I have learned that I can help a lot of people and see them accomplish their goals," said Graham, who thanks her parents and one of her friends, Melissa Spence, for helping her get where she is today. "When I eventually leave N.C. State I will truly miss the student atmosphere and the friendliness of the students and the faculty that I meet each day."

Graham said that if chosen as "Leader of the Pack," she would not only fulfill all of her responsibilities with a smile, but she would also try to stress the importance of a positive attitude. In addition, Graham said that she would work hard to make a difference for the students.

"It is important to be confident in yourself," said Graham. "Your attitude can help you accomplish anything."

Katie Terry

Katie Terry is a senior majoring in business management and minoring in Spanish at Chi Omega sorority, secretary of the Order of Omega, co-president of the Society of Human Resource Management, a member of the Student Government's judicial board, a Chancellor's Aide, a Resident Advisor and property assistant at University Towers, a Student Ambassador and a member of the University Scholars Program.

"N.C. State is a great place to be," said Terry. "It has entirely changed my life and made me a better person."

If chosen, Terry looks forward to not only helping plan for next year's Homecoming festivities, but also publicizing the opportunities available for others at the university. Terry added that she hopes to demonstrate leadership by example for other students who are interested in getting involved on campus.

Terry said that by being involved in different aspects of the university from her sorority to honors programs, she has met many different people. In addition, Terry hopes to be able to represent all NCSU students.

"Being able to meet so many different people is my favorite aspect of N.C. State," said Terry. "I love N.C. State and the fact that I can make these connections that will last for the rest of my life."

"N.C. State and its many opportunities can give you the potential to do great things," said Terry. "Don't be afraid to get involved and try new things."

Reeves Anderson

Reeves Anderson is a junior majoring in chemistry, chemical engineering and political science. He is a member of the Student Government's judicial board, the news and opinion editor of Americana, and the undergraduate representative of the Scholarly Communication's sub-committee. In addition, Reeves is the Union Activities Board chair of the issues and ideas committee.

Anderson said he enjoys "being so close to some of the other students and student leaders and being in a community full of interesting and exciting people."

"I've tried to put my hands in all parts of campus development, and I grow with every different thing I do," said Anderson, who would like to see other students do the same thing.

"Take a risk and try something that's never crossed your mind before, and make sure what you're doing is something you love," said Anderson. "If you are an engineering major, take a Shakespeare class and see if it is also something you might enjoy."

If chosen as "Leader of the Pack," Anderson said he would focus on the importance of service to the campus and the community. He said students should try to get involved in different aspects of the NCSU community.

"I really want to bring recognition to the service opportunities that are available at N.C. State," said Anderson. "We should always try to give something back to the community that has given so much to us."

Michael Anthony

Michael Anthony is a senior majoring in business management. He is the Student Senate president, a member of the University Council, a delegate for the Association of Student Governments, a member of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity and the National Pan-Hellenic Council, a member of the African American Student Advisory Council (AASAC) and a member of the Student Center Board of Directors.

Anthony said he always tries to bring his charisma and positive leadership skills along with his participation into different organizations.

"I try to bring excitement to the organizations I am involved in, as well as energy and a passion to serve," he said.

"Everything about N.C. State, I am revved up about," said Anthony. "I love what N.C. State means to its students and the entire state of North Carolina."

If he wins the title, Anthony hopes to bring more recognition to the award.

"I want to help define the Leader of the Pack position through the Homecoming planning and perhaps implementing new ideas for the position," he said.

"I've met a lot of different friends — in classes, in Student Government, in other organizations," said Anthony. "I couldn't see myself at another school."

Through Anthony's experience in various organizations, he has become an advocate for campus involvement.

"It's important to get everything out of this experience that you can and to just live it up," said Anthony.

Jonathan Spencer

Jonathan Spencer is a junior majoring in psychology and parks, recreation and tourism management. He is a member of the NCSU cheerleading team, the historian and Caldwell Cup chair of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, a member of the NCSU Marine Corp ROTC, the president of the NCSU Semper Fi Society, member of Order of Omega, a Boy Scout troop master and a member of the Water Ski and Equestrian clubs.

"I try to exemplify a well-rounded Wolfpacker," said Spencer. "I don't want my experience here to be a mere interlude."

Spencer said that if chosen as the "Leader of the Pack," he would not only push school spirit but try to institute a mentoring program for all freshmen. "Something like Big Brother, Big Sister program where upperclassmen can give practical and much-needed advice to freshmen," he said.

Spencer, who has run three marathons since his enrollment at NCSU, said that his dedication and motivation are very important to him.

"I just try to make a difference and get other people involved at the same time," said Spencer.

Spencer's favorite part about being a student at NCSU is his involvement.

"I like being in different places all of the time," said Spencer. "One hundred hours in the fire keep the fire burning — that is my philosophy." Though Spencer agrees that school can be difficult at times, he would like to urge others to "never, ever, ever give up."

He added that "perseverance is what it's all about."

TECHNICIAN'S VIEW

Widening scope of war has far-reaching effects

AS THE UNITED STATES EXPANDS ITS WAR EFFORTS THROUGH THE FREEZING OF ASSETS, IT INVOLVES MORE INNOCENT PEOPLE WITH THE CONFLICT.

With the current war on terrorism, there are many things we don't know. What prof does the government have that bin Laden is behind the attacks? Is there a line we should not cross in our pursuit of retaliation? Why were we attacked in the first place? We are forced to have faith that our government is doing what it has to and only what it has to in order to win this war; however, as our war efforts become more broad-based, we begin to affect the lives of countless detached, innocent individuals. This can be seen through the government's plan to freeze the assets of terrorist networks.

The Associated Press reported yesterday that "Terror crackdown hits Somalia hard." The primary banking company, Al-Barakaat, for the country torn by hunger and conflict is on the list of organizations suspected of providing financial services to al-Qaida terrorists.

The banking company, which is the financial lifeblood of Somalia, closed down temporarily late last week after it found itself on America's most-wanted banks list. If the bank remains closed, it would spell disaster for Somalis. Al-Barakaat handles 25 percent of all financial transactions in the country each year. It owes businessmen in Mogadishu, Somalia's capital, $7 million alone, debts that cannot be paid if the U.S. puts a hold on Al-Barakaat money in America.

Although a permanent closing of Al-Barakaat could cripple Somali infrastructure, it is unclear what action the United States has taken against the bank and whether its closing would be absolutely necessary in the event of a U.S. crackdown.

No one wants this war to last longer than it has to. Conversely, no one wants to halt our war effort short of achieving our ultimate goal of wiping out current terrorist networks worldwide. If halting the assets of banks like Al-Barakaat is essential to the complete destruction of the al-Qaida network, then this is what we must do, even though it would negatively affect masses of innocent people.

We hear endless dialogue about the "new war," which must be fought on many fronts: physical, financial, technological, psychological, etc. As we expand our fight to each additional front (financial in this case), we are pulling more innocent people into this tangled conflict. Sadly, this seems unavoidable.

Derek Green, my leader of the pack

Decker Ngonang
STAFF COLUMNIST

This week I was struggling for something to write about until I saw Derek Green, number 73, fall on a fumble to get his first collegiate touchdown as I was watching the game from work.

I started to think about the Derek off the football field. He has been more than a leader of the pack; he has been the prototype student-athlete. He and I were on student council together at West Charlotte Senior High School. Derek being the student body president and me being the junior class vice president. We worked together for pretty much all of high school, yet he seemed to have time to juggle the needs of a high profile high school and be an outstanding offensive lineman for the West Charlotte Lions. He had to juggle planning pep rallies and planning for a big game. He bogged my mind by being in the top of his graduating class and being in the top of the Charlotte Observer's list of outstanding high school athletes. I never took the time during high school to think about exactly how much Derek Green juggled and how hard he worked at all of those things.

This brings me to college. Coming here was pretty darn scary. This is a huge campus, and until you get here and see everyone in a Brickyard, you can't even imagine such a place. I was stressing over school and all these different people and began to feel kind of lonely because there seemed to be no familiar faces.

West Charlotte High School was probably the biggest community in Charlotte, with everyone knowing each other and everyone hanging out with each other. This was so different from when I got here, and things are so strictly separated. One day I am walking through the Brickyard and I hear a familiar "Deck!" It was Derek Green. He talked to me for a while and asked me how I was enjoying school, classes, etc. It was a normal conversation, but it meant a whole lot more to a kid who was growing intimidated by this university.

Over the past three years I have been here in school, Derek has kept in touch with me and has always continued to check on how I am doing. He makes sure I am on the right track with what I want to do in the future and is never unwilling to answer my questions. To me, that means so much more than any of his other qualifications; it shows heart and commitment, two things that will create success in this world.

I know Derek Green, but a lot of you don't know Derek Green. He is more than the starting center who scored the first of many touchdowns in yesterday's historic win over Florida State University. Derek also is one of the most committed students at North Carolina State University. He comes from a family of scholar athletes, with two of his brothers playing varsity sports at Duke and George Washington Universities and excelling in the classroom.

In high school he was in the top 10 of his class; he held many academic scholarships and managed to organize the events of a student body. Here at N.C. State, he is the 1999 and 2000 recipient of the Earle Edwards Award for the highest GPA on the football team, and during his red-shirted 1998 season, he was named to the ACC honor roll. These facts boggle my mind and make me expect him to win again this year.

The feat of being intelligent and being an athlete is always said to be impossible. Derek, along with his teammates, practices six or more hours each day. He then must manage his schoolwork, eat and find time in the middle for sleep. The "normal" college student has problems sitting down to do their work for an hour, yet Derek makes the most out of every minute.

I thought his list of duties ended at football, but Derek finds the time and energy to be an active member of the distinguished Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity. The scope of his involvement in this school is so broad and is still growing. As we decide this week about who we are going to elect as Leader of The Pack, I simply give light to my leader of the pack. He has and continues to be a role model for me as a person in the classroom and a person outside the classroom.

We joke about the lack of academic and social commitment of athletes; well, I refute that on this occasion. As Derek continues to get better at football, he does the same in the classroom, and neither defines who he is but is a compliment to the person he is. In the coming year he will not only have pro teams looking at getting him, but he will have law schools, medical schools and grad schools throwing every more enticing offers to him. Thanks, Derek, for being that bar of achievement and for being a role model to a lot of young people back in Charlotte.

Dereker also wants to send his apologies to the FSU linebacker who had his ankles broken trying to catch Ray Rob on that run... go Pack! Send e-mail to Decker at dngongga@unity.ncsu.edu.

English rules

Shawn Barnes
STAFF COLUMNIST

[Editor's note: This column was first run online Wed., Nov. 31. It runs for the first time in hard copy today.]

At a school related conference this week-end, a well-fluorated speaker stated that there's a difference between English majors and Biology majors at the junior and senior level. Well, of course this is true; Biology and English majors are different, especially once they delve into their major. What the speaker was implying, as so many people often do, is that English, as a major, requires little to no work.

Biology majors study what makes the body work, how life is sustained and other highly important things that may lead to a career as an educator, physician or researcher. English majors study great literary figures, effective writing and editing skills and other highly important things that may lead to a career as a technical writer, journalist or Web site designer.

Although Biology and English majors are different, they are also very much the same in that they work hard in the field of study that they enjoy in hopes of attaining a particular career. It is ridiculous to suggest that humanities majors need not work as hard, or do not work as hard, as those in life sciences, computer science or any other major. It is also ridiculous to suggest that English majors are automatically going to become teachers.

Teaching is a fine and noble career if that's what you choose to do, but teaching is not the only option for English majors. English majors enjoy a vast amount of career options. English majors often write; don't forget that a good communicator is the basis of a good employee, leader or employer in any field.

There are many famous English majors working in fields that include entertainment, sports and business. Chevy Chase, Michael Eisner (CEO, Walt Disney), Cathy Gewisette ("Cathy" cartoonist), Stephen King, John Pivers, Stephen Spielberg and Joe Paterno (Penn State coach) are all English majors.

Just yesterday, while at my internship where I work as the editorial intern, I was busy editing an article from a freelance writer (probably an English major) when the financial guy stopped by to say hello. (The financial guy has entirely too much free time.) I was sitting in the conference room with red and green ink pens in reach and the article that was to be edited in hand. And the financial guy said, "Hi."

He said, "Oh, I'm sorry. Are you editing something?"

He said, "Oh, I'm sorry. It's hard to tell what you editors do."

Well, let me tell you what us editors do. We make people and their companies look good. When people submit articles for publication, the editor makes it readable to someone other than the author and the author's close friends. When a person or a company is being interviewed for a story, the editor makes sure their quotes are understandable, intelligent and reflective of the idea they were hoping to get across.

Every day that I attend my English-related internship, I leave being able to stand behind the work that I've done. Whether it's interviewing individuals for stories, writing features, editing copy, compiling leads, creating databases or replying to email queries, "editor types" stay busy, and editing is just one of the many facets of English. So when you're reading the newspaper, flipping through your favorite magazine, watching a compelling movie, surfing the web or scanning the back of a cereal box, realize that the words and stories probably came from an English major. English majors are also office managers, lawyers, counselors or any career you can think of. I never hear English majors downing the relevance of our majors. Maybe it's because we're secure enough in our majors that we need not make ourselves look better by putting others down. Maybe it's because we're smart enough to know that it takes all types of majors to make the world go around. No matter what, please stop insulting my major. I work hard as an English major. I spend many hours researching, writing, rewriting, designing and creating. English is not a slacker major; it's a vital university major like any other.

Chris Hickling
STAFF COLUMNIST

Last Wednesday, I broke the cardinal rule of journalism—I did not check my facts well enough. Campus Forum subscribers on Friday and the many e-mails I received have taken care of correcting my unintentional errors. I sincerely apologize for any mistake that appeared in my piece. Corrections are the only thing that a journalist should ever apologize for. While I do not apologize for my opinion, I know that I offended a large amount of the student body. I have nothing but admiration for my fellow students who step onto the field of play week in and week out. With both rigorous physical and academic schedules, our athletes are our most visible student representatives. In this role, they have continuously done a fantastic job. In the end, I ask that all students judge the whole of my work, not one piece.

The war on terrorism is heading into its second month. While the war against the al-Qaida is the most visible, the war is being fought on many different fronts, combating many different sources of terror. If President Bush is serious about eradicating terror throughout the world, there is one spot where he has yet to look, or to mention. Bush doesn't have to go that far to get there. He could take Air Force One and be there in an hour or two. Or he could take the scenic drive down I-85, get on I-95, past all those South of the Border billboards, right down to Ft. Benning, Georgia.

What's in Fort Benning, you ask? The Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation (WHISCC). Not too familiar with that name? Most people aren't. Up until January of this year, it was called the School of the Americas (SOA). The SOA is a training facility, sponsored by your tax dollars, for Latin American soldiers. At the SOA, these soldiers are trained in subjects like counter-insurgency, infantry tactics, military intelligence, counter-narcotics and commando operations.

So, what's wrong with trying to professionalize the militaries of our neighbors to the south? Using the training that our tax dollars pay for, SOA graduates have committed some of the most notorious and horrendous acts of human rights violations in Latin America. Included in the almost 60,000 graduates from the SOA are names like dictators Manuel Noriega and Omar Torrijos of Panama, Leopoldo Galtieri and Roberto Viola of Argentina, Juan Velasco Alvarado of Peru, Guillermo Rodriguez of Ecuador and Hugo Banzer Suarez of Bolivia.

The victims are usually the people who are trying to give a voice to the voiceless. They are leaders of education, leaders of religion—anyone who poses a threat to expose the truth. In 1980, four U.S. church women were raped and murdered. Three of the five people responsible were graduates of the SOA. A year later, on December 11, 1981, a group of counterinsurgents came into the El Mozote village in El Salvador and killed over 900 hundred civilians—men, women and children. Ten of the twelve people cited for that atrocity were graduates of the SOA.

Since 1980, people have come to Ft. Benning to stand in solidarity with their Latin American brothers and sisters killed by the SOA. This weekend, thousands will come to protest government-sponsored terrorism. In their hands, they will carry white crosses bearing the name of a person killed by a graduate of the SOA. For hours, each victim's name will be lifted to the sky by voices. The crowd of thousands will respond "present!" for "we are present because the victims cannot be." Last year, 10,000 people braved cold weather and rain to come to the gates at Ft. Benning. Ordinary citizens numbering 3,600 crossed the line onto the base, risking imprisonment to say to their government "Nunca Mas!"

Every year that this school of assassins stays open, 1,500 more students from 18 Latin American countries will be trained with your money. America now knows the pain of terrorism. We know the evil that it brings. Just like terrorists all over the world, the terrorists we train can be stopped. One of the more effective ways that we have hindered the al-Qaida is to stop their monetary flow. The SOA is no different. If we take away their money and take away their training facilities, we can stop the terror that we are growing in our own backyard. If terrorism is to be erased from the world, the School of the Americas must be closed. (Source: soaw.org)

AROUND THE ACC

Team	ACC Record	Overall
Maryland	6-1	9-1
Florida State	5-2	6-3
N.C. State	4-3	6-3
North Carolina	4-3	5-5
Georgia Tech	3-3	6-3
Clemson	3-4	5-4
Virginia	3-5	4-6
Wake Forest	3-4	5-4
Duke	0-6	0-9

Saturday's results:

Wake Forest 32, North Carolina 31
After trailing by 24 points at the half, the Demon Deacons stormed back to steal a win in the largest ACC comeback since 1992. Running back Tarence Williams rushed for 101 yards, and Quinton Williams knocked the ball from UNC quarterback Darian Durant's hand with 45 seconds left to seal the upset.

Virginia 39, Georgia Tech 38
The Cavaliers capped off a crazy, back-and-forth affair with a wild play to upset the Yellow Jackets. Wide receiver Billy McMullen caught a pass and pitched it to running back Alvin Pearman, who raced down the sideline for the winning score with 22 seconds remaining.

No. 10 Maryland 37, Clemson 20
The Terrapins broke an eight-game losing streak to the Tigers as the Mighty Turtles' defense intercepted four passes in the second half. The win, coupled with Florida State's loss, gives Maryland a good shot to win the conference title outright.

Duke 0, Bye Week 0
It's amazing, but the Blue Devils didn't lose this week.

Pack women cruise in final tune-up

◆ The N.C. State women's basketball team played well in a 103-59 exhibition win.

Justin Sellers
Staff Writer

Utilizing its strengths offensively and defensively, the N.C. State women's basketball team took control early and never looked back as it defeated the Remus Sport Exhaust 103-59 in exhibition play Sunday at Reynolds Coliseum.

Already leading 45-22 at halftime, the Wolfpack came out of the locker room looking to finish what it had started. State did just that, outscoring the Sport Exhaust 12-3 in the first four minutes of the second half. Continuing to dominate on both ends of the court, the Pack easily had its way with Remus.

"For our second exhibition game, I think that we're coming along," said head coach Kay Yow. "We're continuing to improve on things we feel like we need and want to do on our system. I liked our turnover-to-assist ratio. That was really excellent for this game. I like the way we are shooting the ball."

For the second game in a row, freshman guard Rachel Stockdale showed she is ready to play at the next level. Coming off an impressive 13-point debut on Monday night, Stockdale surpassed that performance Sunday, scoring in double figures for the second time this season with 19 points. She also added seven assists and two steals.

Much of Stockdale's offense came from behind the arc, as she hit five and missed only once from three-point land.

"I thought Rachel did an excellent job out there," said Yow. "She plays for a love for the game. Anybody out there can tell how she enjoys the game. She's working hard defensively."

State did just that, outscoring the Sport Exhaust 12-3 in the first four minutes of the second half. Continuing to dominate on both ends of the court, the Pack easily had its way with Remus.

Remus ended with three players in double figures in scoring. Agnes Doycinova had a game-high 21 points and added eight rebounds. Guard Simona Jurse connected on three three-point baskets to finish with 11 points, and Samantha Woosnam scored 10 points. The Wolfpack jumped out to an early lead right from the start, scoring nine points before Remus could manage any offensive production.

The Pack's defense also made it quite difficult for Remus to bring the ball up the court, forcing a total of 18 turnovers in the first half alone.

White State was handling things defensively, its success on the court stretched to the offensive side of the ball as well. Using an obvious height advantage, the Pack began to dominate down in the paint, hitting 50 percent of its shots.

As Remus began to double down on Chones and Moody, State swung the ball out to its perimeter shooters, who were consistently left wide open for shots, connecting on 6-of-13 for 46.2 percent from downtown.

"I loved the way we started the game," said Yow. "I think if you can go inside first, then that's going to help you win a lot more ball games. If you establish that strong inside game, then in a little bit, you're going to have some great looks outside."

"Then when they come back out, you already know you can come back inside. I thought we did a lot better job posting than we did in the first exhibition game."

er finish than the men. The No. 4 Wolfpack edged No. 9 North Carolina 45-49. No. 14 Virginia was a distant third with 86 points. No. 23 James Madison and No. 25 Duke rounded out the top five teams with 121 and 162 points.

The Wolfpack placed three runners in the top seven, led by the second place finish of sophomore Kristin Price. Price finished the six-kilometer course in 20:53. Megan Coombs and All-American Katie Sabino joined her near the front with fifth and seventh-place finishes in 21:34 and 21:39.

Freshman Josie Lauber made a huge leap forward in her racing by finishing fourth for State in 15th place.

"We needed someone to step up because Christy wasn't in the lineup, and Josie really did that today," said Coombs. "She ran a very strong race. That is really encouraging for next week."

Senior Beth Fonner was State's fifth runner, finishing 21st in 22:21. All five of State's scoring runners made the All-District team.

Beth Kraft and Janelle Vadnais also competed for the Wolfpack, finishing in 45th and 54th place.

UNC sophomore Shalane Flanagan won her second Southeastern District championship and tied the Furman course record with a time of 20:23. Virginia's Jennifer Owens and UNC's Carol Henry joined Price and Coombs in the top five with their third and fourth place finishes.

"We had some really good races today, and we had some really off races today," said assistant coach Laurie Henes. "We did a different work-out schedule this week, and it worked well for some people and poorly for others. We'll split it up next week, and we'll have Christy Nichols back in the lineup."

"We're going to get Megan, Katie and Beth back up there for next week, and we'll be fine. Josie and Kristin ran great today. There were some positive things today, so now we just need to work on the things that weren't so positive."

◆ Anthony Grundy, Scooter Sherrill and Julius Hodge scored 12 points apiece.

Matt Middleton
Staff Writer

In his final exhibition before opening the regular season Wednesday night, N.C. State fell to Global Sports 80-76 in front of an Entertainment and Sports Arena crowd still buzzing with excitement over the Wolfpack's football upset of Florida State.

Shooting ways that were all too reminiscent of State teams of the past plagued the Wolfpack, which couldn't seem to consistently knock down open jumpers.

On the flip side, Global Sports shot nearly 50 percent from the field and iced the game down the stretch with clutch free throws from forward Mark Davis, who finished the game 11-12 from the charity stripe.

"We had some wide-open looks, shots that I want our guys to take," said head coach Herb Sendek. "Tonight they didn't go down, and we didn't find a way on the defensive end to overcome them. We gave up way too many easy baskets."

Sendek shuffled a variety of lineups in and out of the game as 11 players logged 10 minutes or more, while no one played more than 25 minutes. This enabled the Pack to run a variety of traps and presses that, along with its defense, could still use some work, according to sophomore Scooter Sherrill.

"Tonight we learned that we got to work on our defenses and our presses," said Sherrill, who made the most of his 13 minutes on the court, scoring 12 points on 4-of-5 shooting from the three-point arc. "For some reason we couldn't stop them; they kept getting layup after layup."

The up-tempo, pressing style is something Sendek is intent on installing in this year's edition of the Pack. For a majority of the game, the Pack played without a true center, instead having athletic forwards like freshman Josh Powell and sophomore Marcus Melvin play the role of big man.

"It's a great style for us," said senior Anthony Grundy. "Sometimes it takes longer than expected to get it the way we want it to be."

That style also led the Pack to throw up 40 three-point field goals and connect on just 12 of them.

Sharpshooting guard Archie Miller had an especially off night, considering how deadly his shooting touch can be. The senior shot just 2-of-9 from the field, all three-pointers.

Junior Clifford Crawford came off the State bench and was able to use his quickness to penetrate the Global Sports' defense to hand out a team-high eight assists coupled with only two turnovers.

With the season opener right around the corner, Sendek believes that his team will use this game to continue to readily improve.

"Tonight will end up being a very valuable night for our basketball team," Sendek said. "In retrospect, we'll gain a lot from our experience tonight. This is a basketball team that undoubtedly will continue to get better."

SUNSHINE STATE SHOCKER

Ray Robinson (5) reached the end zone twice Saturday, including this 24-yard run in the fourth quarter, to lead N.C. State to the first ever win for an ACC team at Florida State.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Chuck Amato cried. Many of his players did, too. Fairytale finishes can have such an effect.

In a game that almost no one believed N.C. State (6-3, 4-3 ACC) could win, the Wolfpack did the impossible. It shocked No. 21 Florida State (6-3, 5-2) and the capacity Homecoming crowd, leaving Tallahassee with a 34-28 victory.

In a nail-biting, well-played battle that featured student Amato, vs. teacher, Bobby Bowden, Amato and his Wolfpack stormed into Doak Campbell Stadium and schooled the Seminoles in one of the biggest wins in school history.

It wasn't surprising that the tense game, which had all the makings of something special from the start, wasn't decided until the final play. With the scoreboard showing just three seconds remaining in the fourth quarter, FSU found itself on the State 14-yard line, trailing by six with one more down to play and one last chance to score a touchdown.

Chris Rix took the snap, scanning the field for an open receiver. The Wolfpack's Terrance Chapman broke through the offensive line, applying heavy pressure to the Seminole quarterback. Rix barely launched his throw before being pummeled by the Wolfpack's defensive end.

As the pass sailed through the air for what seemed like eternity, floating toward the back left corner of the end zone, State cornerback Brian Williams reached up, extended his arm and knocked the ball away from Seminole receiver Talman Gardner.

Finally, the game was over. A deafening silence swept over almost all of the 82,425 people in attendance. N.C. State had won.

"Nobody expected us to come here and win this football game," said a teary-eyed, emotional Amato after it was over. "But these kids, they saw that they could play with them at halftime, and I told them, 'You can play with anybody if you've got the will to do it,' and they sure did do it. I'm so proud of the coaches and the players."

Amato, his staff and players had much to be proud of on this afternoon, as the Pack handed FSU its first home loss ever in the ACC.

Ray Robinson, the Wolfpack's senior tailback who struggled through much of the first half of this season, had his third consecutive 100-yard game and concluded his stellar performance at FSU with two touchdowns and 106 yards on the ground.

And then there was quarterback Philip Rivers, who found the open man all afternoon, hitting 26-of-33 passes for 245 yards.

But what had to make Amato most happy, however, was the mental aspect of State's victory. The Wolfpack played its smartest game of the season, with Bowden and his team routinely confused as the visitors attacked the Seminoles in numerous offensive formations. The Wolfpack also shifted in and out of sets to perfection, executing its game plan exactly as it had hoped.

The defense, which has played extremely well during the last three weeks, provided State with enough big plays to keep FSU's high-octane offensive attack on the sideline and out of rhythm. With State holding a 21-14 lead late in the second quarter, it was the Wolfpack defense that provided what might

"Coach [Bobby] Bowden grabbed me and congratulated me and said, 'Great playing, Chuck, your kids executed,' and I cried. He said, 'Coach, you're supposed to be happy.' I said, 'I am happy. And when I'm happy I cry.'"

Key Play With three seconds left and the game hanging in the balance, Florida State quarterback Chris Rix heaved a pass from the State 14 toward the end zone for Talman Gardner. Wolfpack cornerback Brian Williams broke up the Seminoles' last-ditch effort, preserving the first ever road win for an ACC opponent against FSU.

Amato, State ride emotional wave

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Chuck Amato knew something special was going on by half-time of N.C. State's historic 34-28 win over Florida State Saturday.

Since they entered the ACC in 1992, the Seminoles had never been beaten at home by a conference opponent. Aside from Virginia in 1996, no ACC team had even led FSU going into halftime at Doak Campbell Stadium.

Going into the locker room at the midway point of Saturday's game, however, the Pack held a 24-14 edge over the Seminoles. "At halftime, I told them, I said, 'Men, all over America, Following Saturday's 34-28 win over Florida State, Jeremy Mebane (87) and the rest of the Wolfpack thanked the fans who made the trip to Tallahassee, Fla. The N.C. State pep band drove down to the game on their own funds.

right now, on every TV set, whatever station is on there, they're saying, 'An upset in the making in Tallahassee, Fla.'"

Amato said. "I told our players to call somebody up and tape this. There's only one that's usually good enough to finish in the top 20 to 25, and I know at least the top three of us felt good enough today that we could have run that if we really wanted to."

Head coach Rollie Geiger was pleased with his team's performance. "I thought we were incredible on the men's side. As a cross country coach, when you have five guys running together under control, it really doesn't get any better. They almost made it look like it was just a practice session."

The women's team, also running without one of their top five runners in two time All-American Christy Nichols, had a much closer and that's the greatest trophy you can have for as long as you live."

By the end of the night, Amato's players realized the history they had made, too.

The Pack ended the Seminoles' 39-game home winning streak against ACC opponents, their 25-game winning streak at Homecoming and their unprecedented 14-year run of 10-win seasons. State, which also beat FSU 24-7 at Carter-Finley Stadium in 1998, handed the Seminoles just their fourth loss in ACC play and may have ended their run at the top of the conference.

"Just to know I'm going down in history," said senior linebacker Levar Fisher, who played on the 1998 squad. "This is going to be a classic one day. It's going to be playing, and I'm going to be able to sit down and just look at that on TV and say I was a part of

Cross country dominates at Districts

GREENVILLE, S.C. — The N.C. State cross country teams went into Saturday's Southeastern District Championships with only one goal in mind — to qualify for nationals.

The top two teams from every region gain automatic qualifying bids, so the Wolfpack coaches felt they could still qualify even while resting some of the top runners. But not only did the men's and women's teams qualify, both of them won.

The sixth-ranked Wolfpack men placed six runners on the All-District team to easily win over No. 24 William and Mary, 30-72. No. 17 Wake Forest and No. 22 Duke finished right behind the Tribe in third and fourth with 82 and 86 points, respectively. Virginia rounded out the top five teams with 144 points.

State placed all five of their scoring runners in the top 11, led by the third place finish of Chris Seaton, who finished the ten-kilometer race in 30:31. All-American Chris Dugan placed fourth and was clocked with the same finishing time as Seaton.

Chad Pearson crossed the line one second and one place behind Dugan. Seaton, Dugan and Pearson have consistently performed as the top three Wolfpack runners all year.

Sophomore All-American Andy Smith was State's fourth runner. He finished in seventh place, only seven seconds behind Seaton. Ryan Woods rounded out State's scoring runners with an 11th-place finish in 30:51.

Devin Swann also received All-District honors by placing 15th in 30:56. David Patterson barely missed the All-District cut-off, finishing 26th in 31:25.

Sophomore David Christian, a regular top-five runner for the Wolfpack, sat out this race to rest for the NCAA Championships, which will be held next Monday.

William and Mary runner Sean Graham won the event in 30:15, while Duke's Sean Kelly finished second in 30:21.

"We all felt comfortable throughout the entire race, and we were in control the whole time," said Dugan. "If only we could get by with doing something like that at nationals. At nationals, 30:10 is usually good enough to finish in the top 20 to 25, and I know at least the top three of us felt good enough today that we could have run that if we really wanted to."

Chad Pearson (134) and Ryan Woods (138) helped the Wolfpack men to a first-place finish in Greenville, S.C. The women's team also grabbed the top spot at Districts.
