Boost Aviation

"If my slight stimulated women's interest in flying, even though it did not really aid aviation, I believe it was completely justified," said Amelia Earhart in a recent lecture at the Institute of Arts and Sciences. "You are much safer going over fifty miles an hour in an aeroplane than in an automobile. When you do your traveling by air, sometimes within the next two years, remember that I told you so."

State
"Mourning Becomes Electra," which its producers, the Theatre Guild, will present at the State Theatre on Friday, December 16th, is considered by many critics not only Eugene O'Neill's greatest play, but the greatest play ever written by an American.

It is divided into three parts, each part being a complete play by itself. They are called "Homecoming," "The Hunted" and "The Haunted." As with O'Neill's earlier great success "Strange Interlude," the performance starts at 5:30 in the afternoon. At 7 o'clock the audience is permitted an hour for dinner, and the final curtain descends shortly after eleven.

The picture at the State Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday is "The Conquerors," a magnificent, entertaining document of America's travail in bitter times and sweet. Starring Richard Dix and Ann Harding, the film depicts, on a truly epic canvas, the economic growth of the United States from its trading post era, through three distressing periods of depression, to the present time of mass production in industry.

TEXTBOOK BY METCALF INTERESTS EDUCATORS

Zoology Textbook Uses Rats to Illustrate Principles Instead Of Frogs

The recently published textbook of zoology written by Dr. Z. P. Metcalf, professor of zoology at N. C. State College, has aroused considerable interest in educational circles as it is the first text to use a mammal as a study type instead of the usual simpler vertebrate, the frog.

Rats have been used in the first-year laboratories at State College for several years to illustrate the principles of the science. This innovation was so successful that the principle was used by Doctor Metcalf in writing his new text. The anatomy of the rat is more nearly like that of man than that of the lower vertebrates. The entire book is generously illustrated in an effort to make more lasting impressions on the students of the practical applications of the science. Nearly one hundred pages are devoted to a consideration of the relation of zoology to the world of everyday affairs, so that the student may better appreciate the broader aspects of the science as applicable to the fields of eugenics, sociology, psychology and agriculture. The entire text is the result of years of practical application and testing of its outstanding features by Doctor Metcalf and his associates at State College.

"You're telling ME they're Milder?"

EVERYWHERE I go, I have to listen to the same thing. 'Try Chesterfields. Honestly, they are milder, and you simply must try them!'

"Me... try Chesterfields! Why, I haven't smoked anything else. That's how important mildness and better taste are to me!"

"No wonder Chesterfield smokers are so enthusiastic."
