casion that graduation is. A few years ago, a song was written which could have been used, had not its verses been too long, and its music consequently drawn out. "Daddy" Price, anxious to give the song prominence in the college community endeavored to teach it to the freshman class. He found that the students were not in favor of the song, and therefore could not be influenced to learn it. The tune was "Where the Winds of Dixie Softly Blow," a stirring hymn, with a forceful sentiment, the words and music of which were Drue Softly Blow," a stirring hymn, with a forceful sentiment, the words and music of which were written by students. It is doubtful whether many students have ever before heard the song mentioned, even though they may often have wondered at the continued and constant use of our fighting song. Major Price is anxious that the school have a song which would combine the spirit of our present axi.

which would combine the spirit of our present and mated cheer and the unsuccessful hymn. Students are asked to hand any original verses or material which might be used in a song to Dad Price. He has offered to write music for the song if sary.

Those poetically inclined will find room for expression, and those having musical tendencies will discover here an outlet for such tunes as may have come to them seeking a place with others.

NAMES FOR STREETS

The action of two of the prominent honor fra-ternities on the campus in working toward the naming of college streets and buildings, should be lauded as a step toward the establishment of harmony between organizations which have in the past merely been outstanding by themselves. Heretofore discussions areas concerning the nam-

Heretofore discussions arose concerning the nam-ing of streets through the campus, but the matter was invariably set aside to be considered later. The necessity for designating roads by name is self-evident. Since time immemorial the human being has here second the second has been assigned a name, and cities and towns, large and small have too their lanes, by-ways, paths, alleys, boulevards, roads, avenues, and streets called by name in order that they may be easily discerned.

At the beginning of the fall term next year a new group of boys will be present on the campus who will perhaps feel that they should do something of will perhaps feel that they should do something of benefit to their school, but because of the strangeness of college life, and an inability to foster up the necessary initiative they will be at a loss where to begin their activities. These freshmen will be over-flowing with questions and suggestions, and will be everywhere, examining everything in their effort to get acquainted with their surroundings. They will surely immediately remark at the lack of names for the roadways through our campus, and will be anxious to remedy the difficulty. Here is a most helpful activity which a student can enter. helpful activity which a student can enter.

At the beginning of the fall term, the TECHNICIAN will contain a map of the campus whereon streets and courts will be outlined, together with any outstanding features. Students will be asked to give their suggestions for names. Other leadership organizations and students in-ested in the project should foster the move as onstructive step in the upbuilding of our campus.

The Forestry Club at State College has gon record as favoring the Honor System. This is the first time that such a move has been made by an organization of its type, and the society is to be comorganization of its type, and the society in about a mended for its action in helping to bring about a more perfect Honor System in this school.

CAMPUS SPORTS The amazing increase in the popularity and inerest in intramural sports during the past year may be counted as one of the most favorable trends in the constantly changing campus life. For nine years there have been intramural programs, but not until this year has there been such an extensive program, so much fan talk, and such keen competition. The establishment of a point system and the awarding of cups has stimulated the sports a great deal. The increase in interest has attracted the serious consideration of administrators and student leaders and many discussions have been held as to how to enlarge the program still more to care for the needs. This trend places State College in the van of similar movements throughout American campus life, and great credit is due Mr. J. F. Miller, who has worked faithfully in his capacity as director with his firm belief in the vast value of his work to the student body. The Interfraternity Council has taken advantage of its opportunity to help by voting to donate the cup awards to the fraternity which wins the annual all-sport championship.

l-sport championship. The TECHNICIAN has carried news of intramurals in the belief that they were interesting to the campus and this view evidently is shared by other college papers. Nothing of more tangible value exists than this healthful, spirited play whose advantages are open to every student. The ideals of athletics are more nearly fulfilled than through the spectacle of a few superior recruited students performing while the other fifteen hundred or so look on.

Intramurals are an integral part of education, meeting physical needs and furnishing a wholesome, democratic outlet for the play instinct. Sport here in untainted and constructive, deserving the comendation and support of all interested in the mendation and support of all interested in the velopment of the better campus life.—H. A. THE THREE HUNDRED

THE THREE HUNDRED In a short time three hundred students will step out beyond the border of their activities for the past four years, and will suddenly be confronted with something new and strange. They will begin with the acid test immediately, in an endeavor to find work, and the majority will be sadly disappointed at the unfriendliness of a seemingly familiar world. These graduates are going out into a world, shorn of the very essence of life; a chance to make a decent living by the work of hands and brains and brate power. This is indeed a tragic thought, and more hving by the work of hands and brains and brute power. This is indeed a tragic thought, and more so the fact that thousands of others will accompany these men in their search for employment. The ardent optimist has had his day, and his statements have continued to give hope to the help-less. Now the reconstruction period has begun, as preached by the optimist, and although men are coing hask to work over day the suring is detained. preached by the optimist, and although men are going back to work every day, the revival is destined to, be long and tedious. Men who left college four years ago are still seeking employment, and in ad-dition to these are the many who were piled out in, the intervening years, holding high hopes which were immediately shattered upon the quest for work which was not available.

Money from the coffers of State and Natio governments, from the pockets of parents, and from every known other source has been used in the training of these students, and now when the individual embarks upon his career it is found that avidual embarks upon his carefully gleaned cannot be the knowledge he so carefully gleaned cannot be put to use in achieving that goal toward which he has labored diligently during the past. It is a seemingly hopeless state of affairs but there is always that ray of light somewhere in the destrose

CHEERS

Considerable agitation has been prevalent regarding organized cheering at sports events. This subject is trite but its peculiarity lies in the fact that it is a constant matter for discussion, through open forum letters as well as orally.

letters as well as orally. After the baseball game Saturday, a graduate of the school spoke of the poor spirit which was shown by those students present in their lack of enthusiasm during the game. This man, who is familiar with traditions of the college, and has watched the ex-citement demonstrated by generations of students dwindle to its present place, was deeply concerned with the slovenly, carefree attitude that has taken the place of the energetic actions of students of the place of the energetic actions of students of the past. Concer ncerted action should be taken in the fall to bring back the shouts and cries that once aided to oring victory to our teams and gave players so ncentive for a spirited action. bring

BOOK KNOWLEDGE

The textbook is gradually replacing the lecture s a means of gaining an education. The necessity for a professor to explain those difficulties which will necessarily be encountered be-cause of the writer's failure to make himself clearly understood, or the student's lack of understanding will constantly be seen, however.

Would those students who cannot return to school Would those students who cannot return to school next year realize the power that lies within a book, and continue their search for knowledge there, they will find that their college education can be tided over, and although college dances and friendships may be lacking, their express purpose in coming to college will be realized.

ve you heard the new the le campus lately? It is on Ha on the campus lataly? It is one themes song that everybody is giad to sing for it is just what everyone has been looking forward to for quite a while. The name of it is "Farewell To Arms" and the reaspn for it is that there will be no more military this year. Now of course the boys just love to get out there and drill not to mention the pleasure that they get from a parade but I guess that you can get too much of a good thing.

of a good thing. Did you go to the delightful play that was given on the campus the other night by the name of "Kempy"? Well if you did not you missed a lot for i doubt if there will ever be another one junt like it, no one campus could stand two like that. I was told before I went that it was to be a comedy but the only comedy that I saw was in the make-up that was applied in such a brutaf rashion. My first impression was that it was a mystery thriller taken from the dark ages, but I was wrong. The man that stole the show, or maybe I should asy saved it, was a boy by the name of Carpenter, and to him should go all the "grapes" or what have you.

have you. - I have just finished reading my copy of this year's annual and in my opinion it is very good. If you will look very closely you will find a few mistakes but can you name anybody that can put out a perfect year book? What impressed me most was the new campus shots that were used this year and the beauty section. Both were fine and would do justice to any school. Outside of these and a few other minor changes the book is on the same order as the one last year. I am inclined to agree with Professor Pountain on his comment that the jokes that are "Sand-witched" in between the ads in the back of the book are so mild and dry that they would not merit your reading them if you have something else to do that is in the least bit important.

was. Now speaking of seniors, may I take this chance to wish them all the good luck in the world for believe you me they will need it. Not because they have not prepared themselves while they have been here but because they are going out into a world that is largor and harder than they have ever dreamed. Let's all hope that this will not be their daily program about a year from now: 8 to 9 breadline; 9 to 12 park bench; 12 to 1 soup kitchen; 1 to 6 park bench; 12 to 7 elective, (1) Chinatown Mission, (2) Salvation Army; 8 flop house.

Army: 8 dop house. There are two people on this campus that have been working all the time for the good of the school and the students here and not once have I seen anything in print that in any way expressed the appreciation of the stu-dent body for the work that they have done. I guess that everyone just took it for granted that they knew how we felt and let it go at that but I think that the time has come when they should know. I fully believe that no two people have been of more serv-ice on this campus than have Sarah Rand and Ruth Boyette. I am not saying this because I want to get out a tot of class cuts but because I know that has come in contact with them. I hope that they will be back next year and that (I they are not, that someone just as thoughtful as they are will take their places.

May I throw a "rose" at this paper and one member of its staff? This paper is the only college paper in the South that has a chaik plate artist, and by that I mean the man that illustrates the weekly editorials. He is plenty
