CURRENT EVENTS COURSE

While the different departments are making up their curricula for the coming year, it might be well to include as an elective a course in current events.

Using a newspaper as a textbook and with a well-qualified professor's knowledge of current events, the course could be made one of the most valuable on the campus. Right now when the Legislature and Congress are in session is one of the best times for a student to become acquainted with the problems and the procedure of government. In this way the students could familiarize themselves with practical government, and to all, this would prove a most sturdy background, enabling them to talk with a definite knowledge on affairs of the day. As the situation now stands, there are but a few students who are able to thoroughly read a newspaper and digest its contents. Unless the student knows of the background of a particular subject, he is liable to become tangled when attempting to read of certain events.

Should a student take a course such as this while in college, he would acquire a habit for a daily reading of the newspapers. This will, of course, enable him to talk intelligently on the affairs of the day, and greatly help him in his business connections.

Too often the individual reads only those news stories in the daily papers which concern the sensational, omitting entirely the very cream of the reports because they either are not able to understand them or have not been educated to appreciate this type of story. Of course it is an individual's prerogative to read that which he likes, but at the same time, he should be able to more thoroughly understand the larger and more important things going on around him, things which will affect the life of every person in this and other countries.

A great majority of the country's population is inclined to be too much like the barber. They know a little bit of everything from the most intricate of economic problems down to the merest trifles, but they will discuss all of these current topics with the greatest conviction and at great length even though they somewhat puzzle themselves with what they are saying.

A good practical course in current events, it would seem, is really one of the wisest moves which could be made. The course would prove popular with most of the student body, and a great deal of interest could be aroused if it were instituted into the curriculum.

SENIOR PLACEMENTS

With graduation only a short while away, seniors have begun to wonder as to the prospects for a position after commencement.

It might be safely said that the prospects this year, while still not too bright are somewhat of an improvement over those of last year. Already corporations have started sending inquiries to this institution asking to interview some of the graduating seniors, and some of the class has already been placed. A large number of employers have always turned their attention to State College when selecting new men for their organizations, and this is a reflection of the excellent training which students receive here for a life's profession.

This year's placements should surpass those of last year what with the brightened prospects, and seniors about to be graduated this spring should feel encouraged at the outlook. It seems that the darkest days of the depression are over, and that there is again a demand for college trained men in the numerous professions. Unless there is a drop or a lull again in business, the 1935 graduate will stand a much better chance of securing a position than the senior in the four or five classes preceding him.

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE TOURNAMENT

The students of State College are happy to welcome to Raleigh the players, officials, and all the rest of the visitors who are brought to Raleigh by the fourteenth annual Southern Conference basketball tournament. While the tournament is not being played at the college, State is in the position of being the host school, since the tournament is being played in Raleigh.

State College hopes that the stay of the visitors in Raleigh this week-end will be a pleasant one. While only one team can be satisfied with the results of the tournament, and, while naturally we are hopeful that the Red Terrors will be that team, let it be said sincerely, "may the best team win."

The members of the Raleigh Junior Chamber of Commerce are to be congratulated for the smooth way in which they have handled all of the thousand and one details pertaining to the satisfactory running of the Southern Conference tournament. Theirs was a hard job, but from the way in which the first day's play has gone over, this will be the most successful conference to have been staged here.

This fourteenth tournament has many of the features which should make it outstanding. There are no glaringly outstanding teams, and this meeting of the teams is one that may be packed with thrilling upsets for the spectators. Although the University of North Carolina and Duke's teams had enough edge to be the seeded teams, the rest of the teams entered have enough strength to come in ahead if they get a good playing streak.

Another interesting item from the point of view of the fans is that the North Carolina teams entered would appear to have a little something on the out-of-state contestants. With the three North Carolina teams entered all located within a radius of thirty miles, and naturally much local interest will be aroused in the games in which these teams play. This should help the Junior Chamber of Commerce a great deal in making the tournament profitable from a financial point of view.

The winner of the tournament, we congratulate in advance, for whoever comes out victorious will have had some stiff battles. To the losers goes our sympathy, for after all, there can be only one winner. But it is to be hoped that everyone will mutually agree after the conference is over that it has been a success and the winner deserved the honor.—R. H. M.

It has been noticed that many of the freshmen who have been invited to the weekly Sunday teas are not attending. The teas give the first year men a chance to become more thoroughly acquainted with their fellow classmates, and for this reason alone those who have been tendered invitations should make it a point to be present. Not only will they make the acquaintance of other freshmen, but they also have an opportunity to become acquainted with the upperclassmen present, as well as various faculty members.

HERE and THERE

By G. W. FORD

Despite the very bad weather conditions which prevailed on Tuesday night, the STUPENDATHON turned out to be a great success. The Monogram Club is just bubbling over with talent. No one part of the show was outstanding... it was good all the way through.

More about plays: When the Red Masquers gave their two plays last week the TECHNICIAN was already on its way to the press. It was held out long enough to print the headlines about the plays but the story was that which had been given out before hand. It failed to mention that the music was furnished by Major Kutschinski and the State College Concert Orchestra; that David Young gave assistance in directing the production; and the lighting effects were by Chester Seawall.

Charlie Parrot is an old time member of the Ball and Chain Club.

Carl Isaacs has been sporting a black eye around the campus for the past week. I haven't taken the trouble to find where it came from, but it brings back that old saying, "The hand is quicker than the eye. That's why there are so many black eyes."

Freshmen don't seem to be taking much interest in the Sunday afternoon teas that Dean Harrelson has been giving for them. Upperclassmen would jump at such an opportunity to meet more students and faculty members... but it's the freshmen who get the bids and never use them.

The Publications Board had its annual banquet on Wednesday night. Frank Jeter, as Toastmaster, had seven new jokes for us: one at the beginning of his talk and one for the introduction of each editor and business manager. I learned something new from him, too... Budget is pronounced, boo-jet. Dean Harrelson presented the keys to the staff members. The Dean also tells some good stories... Then we had a dance... the best looking bunch of girls ever assembled at one dance were there. After the dance Gene Knight and Bob Knox... well, maybe I'd better leave something for the Man In the Black Stouch Hat.

Two permanent fixtures down at St. Mary's are the front steps and Bill Peck.

The Chemical Engineers had to build a dam in the brook over behind the gym to perform an experiment. The water backed up and formed a lake. They have named them Lake Randolph and Dam Grove.

Keep your eye on Bob Bourne's Statesmen for an up and coming orchestra.

May the Best Team Win!

Lester Mims was aroused from his slumber three times the other night by a mouse running over his pillow and through his hair. After several unsuccessful attempts to chase the animal, Lester went downstairs and spent the rest of the night on the divan.

Seems that someone has been passing phoney ten-dollar bills around lately... better keep your eyes open when getting change.

Tommy Swain must have a good time working in the library. He gets to read books and everything.

Have you ever seen a road paved with chewing gum? Take a look at the road in front of the State Drug Store. When people stop in cars for a drink they throw their gum in the road. This has been going on so long that the road is not any longer asphalt... it's chewing gum.

And they tell me that applications for dates at St. Mary's have increased enormously since the opening of the new date rooms last Saturday night. The rating of the "belles of St. Mary's" is going up.

Asks Expert Advice on Murals To the Editor:

A comment on the matter of voting on the McLean murals may not be out of place at this time.

Murals are the product of skill and training. May I raise the question as to whether other products of skill are chosen by popular vote. Does State College adopt its building plans in this manner? Was the architectural character of the library rotunda decided by the faculty and students? A large mural was recently placed in the new Agricultural Building at Washington, but the office holders and their stenographers who work in that building did not vote them into place.

The correct procedure in accepting or rejecting a work of art by institutions is that of employing an art jury. Experts decide matters in every other field involving professional skill—why not art?

So far as the writer knows every professional artist in Raleigh outside of the college approves the murals as they appear in the rotunda. One, a former student of Rivera, was enthusiastic in her praise of Mr. McLean's productions. It may be that a higher court would reverse this opinion. Who knows? Three leading artists of the country should be brought here for this decision.

It would logically follow that all those who believe that the products of professional skill, should be judged by professionals, will refuse to use a wrong method in a decision of this sort. And this would mean an unwillingness on the part of many to vote at all.

The spirit of good sportsmanship and good sense at State College is too high, it is to be hoped, to see a professional matter decided by an unprofessional jury.

Dr. B. W. Wells.

Other guests present were: Colonel J. W. Harrelson, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Jeter and Mr. and Mrs. L. Mayer.

Sigma Pi

Members of Rho chapter of the Sigma Pi fraternity entertained at an informal dance Friday night at their home on Clarke Avenue.

The dance was given in honor of the founding of the fraternity on February 26, 1897, and for the new pledges to the fraternity.

The lower floor of the house was en suite to the guests. Music was furnished by an amplifying system. Throughout the evening, punch was served.

Guests at the dance included: Miss Nancy Mann with Brock Stissel, Miss Katherine Glascock with Max Saunders, Miss Rosemary Schenck with W. M. Jones, Jr., Miss Margaret Waddell with Carl Bayne, Miss Judith Walker with H. C. Hill, Miss Laura Hudler with A. D. Warren, Miss Nancy Dalton with J. L. Bowers, Miss Dorothy Lassiter with Gus Palmer, Miss Barbara Harris with Getty Browning, Miss Doryce Wynne with Charles Eastep, Miss Dorothy Danieley with Ed Coble, Miss Emily Hunt with R. R. Cunningham, Miss Melba Byouck with Walter Chapman, and Miss Margaret Honeycutt.

R. B. Etheridge, alumni member, and Mrs. Etheridge were the chaperones for the occasion.

Tournament Dance

A dance will be held in the Virginia Dare ballroom of the Sir Walter Hotel tomorrow night following the final game of the Southern Conference basketball tournament. Honor guests will be the members of the competing teams in the conference tournament.

Music will be furnished by Jimmy Fuller and his orchestra from the University of North Carolina.

The sponsors for the dance are the young ladies who are also sponsoring the teams in the tournament. They are: Miss Nancy Mann, Miss Katherine Harris, Miss Ruth Pender, Miss Katherine Theim, Miss Lucy Dortch, Miss Edith Wyatt, Miss Julia Drake, Miss Margaret Vass, Miss Sarah Crabtree, Miss Billie Harrelson, Miss Rosemary Keneck, Miss Elizabeth Park, Miss Polly Winborne, Miss Jean Poo, Miss one Little, and Miss Mary Poyner.

KING FINALISTS MEET NEXT WEEK

Table with columns for team names and scores. Includes teams like Phi Epsilon, Chi Alpha, Phi Kappa Phi, etc.

Barnwarming

The annual Barnwarming conducted by members of the Ag Club of State College will be held tomorrow night in the Frank Thompson Gymnasium from 8 until 12 o'clock.

Governor and Mrs. J. C. B. Ehringhaus and the members of the General Assembly and their wives have been extended invitations to attend the dance as honor guests.

Margie Simms and Her Debutantes have been secured to furnish the music for the dance.

To the best knowledge of the committeemen in charge of the dance, this year's social activities for the agricultural students, will mark the 20th annual observance of a Barnwarming or a similar social activity by agricultural students of State College.

Hay, trees, leaves, and greens will be arranged in the gymnasium so as to form a rural setting and the dancers will be dressed in farm costumes—overalls for the boys, and gingham for the girls.

Miss Ruth Lineburger of Rock Hill, S. C. has been named sponsor for the Barnwarming by W. E. Boykin, president of the Ag Club.

The dance committee is composed of C. L. Davis, George McColl, and A. N. Tutum, Jr.

The committee on arrangements is composed of Connie Gay, J. R. Boswell, Eddie Jackson, and J. A. Lutz.

Tri-Society Ball

The first Tri-Society Ball will be held tonight in the Architectural Studios on the third floor of the Electrical Engineering building. The ball is sponsored jointly by the Beaux Arts Society, the Associated General Contractors, and the American Society of Civil Engineers at N. C. State College.

The studio will be attractively decorated, and will feature a miniature bar from which refreshments will be served to the guests of the club.

A complete amplifying system playing popular melodies will furnish music for the dance. Admittance to the affair will be by card only.

St. Mary's Dance

The annual Junior-Senior Ball of St. Mary's Junior College will be held in the school gymnasium tomorrow evening beginning at 8:30 o'clock. The dance will be formal, and admittance will be by bid only.

Jimmy Poyner and his State Collegians will furnish the music for the dance, which is one of the outstanding affairs of the St. Mary's school year.

STATE

London Town as it looked a hundred years ago has come into existence in one of the most astonishing square miles in all the world—'Lot Two' at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in California.

There, between an African jungle and an Arabian mosque, stands a great city where, a few weeks ago, thousands of quaintly-garbed pedestrians and hundreds of horse-drawn vehicles of all descriptions mingled in a noisy bedlam that was London in 1830.

The picture is 'David Copperfield,' the Charles Dickens classic which opens Sunday at the State for six days.

In order to more thoroughly enjoy the picture you are urged to see it from the beginning. Shows begin at 11:30-2:00-4:25-6:50-9:15 and the feature begins at 11:45-2:10-4:35-7:00 and 9:25. A news completes the program.

PALACE

That warm, human quality which made 'Street Scene' 'The Crowd,' 'The Champ,' 'The Big Parade,' and other King Vidor productions such outstanding successes is again the distinguishing feature of 'Our Daily Bread' the inimitable director's latest production which will be shown at the Palace Theatre Sunday and Monday.

A musical comedy, 'King for a Day' with Bill Robinson (of 'The Little Colonel') also a Walt Disney cartoon, 'Peculiar Penguins' and Palace News events completes the program.

CAPITOL

The co-starring appearance of Joan Crawford and Clark Gable in a photo-play is always an occasion for dancing in the streets so far as film fans are concerned. The countless admirers of this duo will not be let down in their picture 'Chained,' which will be shown at the Capitol Theatre Monday and Tuesday, for the picture is by far the best in which either the vivid Miss Crawford or Gable has appeared and furnishes sparkling entertainment from its opening reel to its final fade-out.

A screen souvenir and a comedy, 'Not Tonight Josephine,' complete the program.

WAKE

Mischelvous, gay, spectacular and glamorous, RKO-Radio's musical comedy, 'The Gay Divorcee' is affording wholesale amusement for local theatregoers. It is a high-speed entertainment with no time for parking, and co-stars Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, the delightful pair who made such a hit in 'Flying Down to Rio,' showing at the Wake, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

PAPER EXHIBITS VARIED CHANGES DURING HISTORY

This is mentioned since there were no courses in journalism offered at the college, and since it was so hard to get the aid of anyone who knew anything at all about the editing of a paper. The paper did develop along major lines, and did become a paying proposition despite all the difficulties.

The Class of 1924 made few changes in the actual set up of the paper but did increase the staff to more satisfactory proportions and kept the financial and on a paying basis.

Compulsory Fee Begun During the session of 1924-25, the business staff worked unique changes. It finally succeeded in getting the Board to put through the publication fee by combining the appropriation with the Agromeck and the other campus publications.

The next editor, E. G. Moore, changed the size to five columns and instituted a more of a journalistic set-up. The Class of 1926 should be credited with the fact that during its incumbency THE TECHNICIAN was voted the best college paper in North Carolina.

Several Changes The next few years saw several changes of minor consequence. Editor R. R. Fountain, a brother of the third chief, eliminated some of the poetry, and his business manager, F. S. McCoy, placed the financial side on a more profitable basis.

Editor A. L. Aydlett and Business Manager Jimmy Stevenson, published a TECHNICIAN that was essentially a newspaper even though it was far from perfect. Sometime along there, the paper was printed on regular news stock rather than on the enameled magazine paper which had formerly been used.

Going Modern During the year 1930-31, the paper began to show signs of becoming a first class campus newspaper. This was the year that Roy Park was editor and A. E. Land was business manager. Park was the first of a series of first class journalists who have dominated the paper since then. From about 1925 on the college operated on the basis of schools, and until 1929 there was a school of journalism with a full fledged curriculum and degree. This had an enormous influence on the paper. The professors were only too glad to give advice and require their students to hand in well written material ready for publication. April Fool issues were instituted, and the editorial page tended to become vitally interested in all campus affairs and activities.

Louis H. (Hop) Wilson, editor for the year of 1931-1932 and his able business manager, John Rabb, are to be commended for two points. First, they won the first prize with their paper for its being the best publication in the state, and they also developed the paper into a real and up-to-date collegiate publication. Some still remember the militant attitude Wilson's editorial page carried.

The next year's staff also carried off first prize with their paper. Under the able leadership of Editor H. A. McClung and Business Manager Burke McConnell the paper carried on the new policies. Campus problems no matter how large or small, were discussed and put openly before the students for questioning.

Under the guidance of Editor E. J. Lassen and Business Manager J. E. McIntyre the paper was a financial success. Societies and activities were given even more support and a higher type of journalism was employed.

This year's issues have carried on the precedent set by past editors. The editorial page has been fully developed. Full cooperation has been given all campus movements, questions big and small have been put before the students, a better set up has been installed, a larger staff has been built up and it uses the latest methods of presenting the news. The business staff has also made many advances. The Editor is Gene Knight and his business manager is C. W. Turfington.

Today's TECHNICIAN is a far cry from the original issues. The first editors, chosen for their scholastic standing and generally not knowing anything about journalism, can hardly be blamed if they fail to recognize today's TECHNICIAN as an offspring of the paper they founded. But it is, and they must be warmly commended and congratulated for so firmly establishing the basis for our present day successful college publication.
