Thank You, Mr. Mial . . .

Last Tuesday members of the Senior Class had the honor of hearing a talk by Mr. T. K. Mial, one of State College's most prominent alumni and also one who is vitally interested in the future of the college and its alumni association. He explained to the graduating students the value of their college education, and also told them how they could lend a hand to the Alumni Association.

Mr. Mial also hit a note of importance when he said that the graduates of this institution should help present graduates in industry and the business world. Certainly this is one way that alumni can show that they are interested in State College and have faith in the products that it turns out. If Mr. Mial's ideas along this line could be turned into reality, it would also mean that there would be more jobs waiting for State College men on graduation day.

Mial came into the limelight recently when he began an intensive drive to locate and organize all State College men living North of the Mason-Dixon line. He has shown that he is vitally interested in the future of this school by wanting to help in promoting its progress. What we are in need of now is to find more alumni who will show the same enthusiasm and work as hard as Mr. Mial.

With alumni cooperation and support such as this, there will be no holding of State College. Still having the hopes of finding more alumni who will work along these lines, we say, "Thank you, Mr. Mial."

Political Pot Boils . . .

"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," and that's not all. In the spring at State College the young student's thoughts turn to thoughts of politics—campus politics.

Next Wednesday will mark the beginning of balloting, when the few candidates entered in the primary will begin their struggle. The main ball is scheduled for the following Wednesday, better known as April 17, when the voting battle will be in full swing.

We invest our power in the hands of our selected representatives and we naturally expect them to voice our opinions in affairs that are of interest to all of us. This is the most logical reason that we can think of why we should use great care in selecting the candidates for whom we will cast our vote.

Too many men go into office on the strength of their hand-shaking and back-slapping ability. They are elected because they belong to the right political circles, or because they are good mixers on the campus. That is hardly a righteous platform for any candidate to lean on, and often you will find that this type of person is not a clear-thinking statesman who will know what to do with responsibility. What we want is a man who will stand up for the rights of the students they represent.

Before you cast your vote, look around you and see the candidates for whom you are voting. Realize that the vote you cast means that you favor that person as your representative in whatever job he is to hold.

And above all things, do vote. Every student should feel that it is his personal responsibility to cast his ballot, for as a general rule around half of the student body votes. Be sure to vote yourself, and urge your friends, classmates, and neighbors to cast their ballot. Just remember, the men who are being elected are your representatives.

A Campus Beautiful . . .

This spring the student body will undoubtedly see the prettiest campus that they have seen in many years, and this will be due to the endless work that has been done in beautifying the grounds and buildings.

Certainly we should cooperate in seeing that this beauty does not go to waste through our carelessness, and rather we should work to preserve this beauty for those who will follow us. A great deal of time and expense has been incurred in improving the grounds, and all of this can be destroyed by a few students who insist on walking across a newly planted plot of ground.

Feel that the campus is part yours, and you will not be so quick to tear down its beauty.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:
After eating at the school cafeteria for almost three years, I find that my once hearty appetite has been replaced by a nausea at the mere sight of the slop pushed out. For three years—three years, mind you, the food has been unchanging in either form or content. It seems that the management never heard of variety being the spice of life; perhaps the cooks memorized only pages 5 and 6 of the cook book and threw away the rest of the recipes. If it weren't for the fact that the cafeteria has a virtual monopoly on the meals served, it is problematical

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS

Appropriations Increase . . .

An excellent article on the situation that exists along the lines of a comparison of appropriations at State and Carolina appeared in the News and Observer recently under the title of "Technical Training." The article, which was written by Dean Van Leer of the school of engineering, presented to the public some of the problems and difficulties which this situation is placing on the public of this state, and it is sincerely hoped that this will in some manner help State College to get an appropriation boost when the next legislature comes into session.

Wait Until Saturday . . .

If you are planning on attending the Barbecue, Saturday night for the purpose of dancing, then you are evidently one of those few persons who are not interested in State College campus politics. For you are overlooking the fact that it is going to be the place where the old political pot is going to boil in earnest.

When you see a happy looking gent coming toward you with an extended hand or a pocket full of cigars, remember to cut on the young lady dancing next to you . . . otherwise you will get your ear full of the evils and remedies which could so quickly be applied to the campus. And after all, remember that it's an Ag school dance.

Initiations . . .

This time of the year seems to be a boom to the numerous initiations that take place on the campus, and this week we have seen students in all manner of ways and performing all forms of antics all over the campus. Social fraternities are holding their so-called

Open Forum

Dear Editor:
"I just woke up and I am good and darn mad." I woke up to the fact that less than one-twentieth of the 20,000 alumni of State College are active alumni for their alma mater. At this rate the college is receiving only one-twentieth of the help and power that it might have from alumni.

I do not care to put the blame on someone else in order to cover up my own lack of loyalty. To do anything about this situation the present group of students have got to do their part. We can speak to what alumni we like and get them interested, and as we leave State we will do our little bit to bring our loyalty to our alma mater.

The seniors made an excellent start Tuesday when they voted unanimously to join the Alumni Association at the special rate offered them. I am hoping that the following classes will do the same thing. In fact, I dare them to try and beat our record.

Clark Condemns Frank P. Graham in Open Letter

Clark has been attacking Dr. Graham's policies for more than a dozen years and it is also a matter of record that Dr. Graham has remained silent in the face of Clark's charges. There is complete faith on the part of his countless friends all over the State that Dr. Graham can answer definitely and completely any charges made.

A portion of Mr. Clark's letter is quoted thus: "The election of Dr. Frank Poole of N. C. State College as president of Clemson College, by the unanimous vote of the trustees, is especially gratifying to those who know how President Graham's punitive system has denied him promotion at State College."

When R. Y. Winters resigned as Dean of the Agricultural Experiment Station, Dr. Poole was next in line and was well qualified that had it been left to the Agricultural Department or to the Faculty of State College, he would have been immediately promoted, but as he had dared differ with President Frank Graham during the Hunk Anderson-Don Sermon row, he was a marked man.

"When President Graham visited the U. S. Department of Agriculture and asked them to suggest a suitable man to succeed the late Dr. Frank Poole already had in Dr. Frank Poole one of the best qualified men they knew, but Dr. Poole had committed the unpardonable sin of not being subservient and had thereby ended all chances of future promotion. Dr. Poole had committed the sin of seconding a motion made by Dr. W. W. Riddick, relating to the advisability of the removal of Dr. R. R. Sermon, when he knew that President Graham was supporting Doc Printing Plant . . .

According to an official announcement made last week, the proposed college printing plant will be ready for operation by June 1, meaning that the plant will be ready to handle all student publications by next fall. It is planned for the print shop to print all publications except the Agnews.

And to further back up this statement of readiness, a press was moved into the basement of the old textile building last week, incidentally, it seems that present plans call for moving publications offices into the old textile building also, which will mean that they will be in a very convenient place near the plant.

Still Going Strong . . .

Continuing with enthusiasm are the high school deputations being made by Golden Chain in an attempt to interest high school seniors to attend college. Members of the organization have visited numerous schools over the state, and in some instances have shown the students the motion picture "State College Days." Golden Chain certainly deserves congratulations for their excellent work along this line.

Student-Faculty Day . . .

Announcement was made by the Interfraternity Council last week that that group would again sponsor a Student-Faculty Day, begun by the council last year in an effort to promote closer relationship between students and the faculty. Although the date for the event, which proved to be highly successful last year, has not been announced, plans have already been started by the Interfraternity Council. We predict that its success will be even greater this year.

What was the real purpose and idea back of the Morrill Act which set up our great colleges? It was that the sons and daughters of the middle class farmers and mechanics could have a first-class college education at a lower cost than that supplied at the state universities for doctors, lawyers and the clergy.

Well, my dear friends, unless something is done about it the industrial class of North Carolina is again being "gypped" and, as has been the case all too frequently in the past, made to pay and pay and pay—for the right to make this state a better place in which to live.

"How long, O Lord, how long!"

great agricultural school has ever been developed upon a campus dominated by liberal arts or under whose primary interests are liberal arts.

President Frank Graham is continually striving to insert a greater measure of "social sciences" into the engineering, textile, and agricultural courses at State College which mean that students taking such courses must be eliminated. His ability to reward or punish those who differ with him is a potent factor and he has persistently used his punitive system or threats of same."

Barnwarming Bids

Bids for the Barnwarming will be given out to Ag boys in rooms 128 and 139 in 1911 dormitory until twelve noon Saturday. Tickets will be sold to outsiders both before the dance and on the door. All Ag students are asked to bring their athletic ticket books when calling for bids.

(The following consists of excerpts taken from an article on "Technical Training," written by Dean Blake R. Van Leer, which appeared in the News and Observer.)

The citizens of North Carolina should be and are interested in this phase (land-grant colleges) of education which it contributes more to comfort, convenience, industries and physical standards of living than do any other functions. There is little doubt that agriculture, engineering and textile education has added more wealth to North Carolina in the last 50 years than all the other forms of education combined. One would think that the people of North Carolina appreciate North Carolina State College and the contribution it has and is making to the prosperity of our state.

Well, they do. They employ the graduates of State College—in fact, that is the one thing in which State College surpasses every other educational institution in the state. Its graduates get and hold jobs. For this reason, undoubtedly, the people of the state continue to send their sons to N. C. State College in increasing numbers. However, on the basis of every other college standard of comparison State College is "way down the line." In fact, if a rank outsider were to compare State College with its sister institution at Chapel Hill, it would be seen that Chapel Hill gets nearly all of the breaks.

The purpose of this article is to plead for agriculture and engineering and textile education. The leaders in these great professions in North Carolina are also entitled to an environment where they can produce cultured gentlemen. There is no desire to take from Chapel Hill or Greensboro or any other educational institution one penny which they now have. God knows they need it. But when, oh when, will industry and the Legislature, composed largely of lawyers, graduates of Chapel Hill and Wake Forest, give State College, the training ground of industry, a break?

What was the real purpose and idea back of the Morrill Act which set up our great colleges? It was that the sons and daughters of the middle class farmers and mechanics could have a first-class college education at a lower cost than that supplied at the state universities for doctors, lawyers and the clergy.

Well, my dear friends, unless something is done about it the industrial class of North Carolina is again being "gypped" and, as has been the case all too frequently in the past, made to pay and pay and pay—for the right to make this state a better place in which to live.

GLEANINGS

by THE STAFF

Fighting strongly against the more beautiful influences of spring and all that it brings, I find myself again battling with the keys in an attempt to produce some few insights on the antics of our student body . . . anecdotes that rank among the less-known activities of State College men.

Naturally our main efforts have been bent during recent days toward the placing of spies among the various groups that are leaving on inspection trips, etc., so that a little later in the term we will really be able to penetrate into the evil side of the student body.

With the advent of spring, Fayetteville Street seems to be the hangout of a large majority of the students, particularly on a Saturday afternoon. Boon-Isley's is slipping a little, but the California and Walgreens still hold up the cause. Roadsters with tops down, filled to the brim with good-looking women, really predominate the highways, especially Hillsboro Street.

A real honest-to-goodness water fight was held this week in 1911 dormitory, and a wet time was had by all. We hear that Joe Michael had something to do with its origin, but naturally we couldn't believe a thing like that. I still have memories of a water fight held in Fourth my freshman year.

Rumors of sound trucks, posters, stump speeches and numerous other inducements are filling the campus prior to the primary and general elections which will begin next week. Naturally you can't believe everything you hear, but this promises to be one of the low-key campaigns in State's history.

And plans are also under way to bring several political bigwigs to the campus in the near future to address the student body. Among those prominently mentioned as appearing here is Paul V. McNutt, mentioned several times as a prospective candidate for the presidency of the United States. Also included on the list are many of the state Democratic candidates for governor, who will be brought to State by the Young Democrats Club. And speaking of politicians, Bill Friday has recently been carrying pockets full of cigars and patting everybody on the back . . . and also, he was just last week elected president of the State Student Federation, which represents some smooth politicking.

There's nothing like throwing in a few hands of bridge at midnight on the night that the paper comes out, so with the aid of the staff we shuffled the pasteboards for a couple of minutes. Who says everything happens before midnight?

Latest organization at the Delta Sig house is the Bachelor's Club, headed by none other than Charlie Santore, who has found numerous fellow members within the domicile. . . . Charlie has sorta toned down on his recent loud "Lamour, Lamour." Also seen on the campus are many members of the "eight ball club," but after all, true love doesn't run smooth.

HEARD ON THE SIDE: Jim Mitchiner is raving about a picture that he has from some lass at Milledgeville, Ga., or rather that is where she goes to school. . . . That is also the site of the Georgia State Hospital for the Insane, Jim. . . . Ted and Able Johnson were really strutting their stuff in front of the College Soda Shop yesterday with a couple of local dames. . . . Bob Towers also seems to have found some attraction at that spot. . . .

"Worm" Herndon has invented a cyclemobile, which is a bicycle with a gasoline motor attached to the rear, and so now he has no worries about being on time to classes in the textile building . . . and ask Leon Williams about the effect of spring. . . . ditto Dave Pearsall. . . . What could be the reason that "Cutie" Carter has so many women on the string, and they still can't catch on? . . . Bill Hewfield reports that things are not doing so well down about Converse right now.

Tony DiYeso finally admitted last week that he kept Mickey Sullivan around as a bodyguard and in case he had to walk by any dark places at night. . . . Tom Rowland still swears that he is through with women. . . . Buddy Means seems to have become re-established out on White Oak Road. . . . which reminds us that we see Sam Mann's car out in that section occasionally. . . . and "Or" Cox says that this music of the modern civilization, better known as "jitterbugging," is wearing him down. . . . and we are running down, so we'll be seeing you.—"SPUD" DAVIDSON.

Forty Musicians To Give Concert

State College Symphony Orchestra Plans Program in Pullen Hall Sunday Afternoon

The Little Symphony Orchestra of State College, augmented by a number of prominent Raleigh musicians, will present a concert in Pullen Hall Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. The orchestra will total 40 musicians.

Featured as soloists will be Curtis Craver, clarinetist, and Emily Richardson, harpist. Both of these soloists have recently passed successful auditions in the state eliminations for the proposed National Youth Symphony Orchestra, which Leopold Stokowski will conduct on a tour through South America next summer, and they will participate in the regional auditions in Washington in the near future.

Sunday's program, which was announced by C. D. Kutschinski, musical director, includes many selections which are well known to all musical audiences.

The student body, faculty and friends are cordially invited to Sunday's concert. The college whistle will sound at 4:15 to remind students of the concert.

Smith Lectures On Bernard Shaw

New York Professor Contrasts Public and Private Characteristics of Well-Known Author

In a sprightly lecture last Tuesday on George Bernard Shaw, Prof. S. Stephenson Smith of New York City told a large audience at State College of the vast difference between the impish, eccentric, impudent Shaw known to the public and the Shaw of private life.

Prof. Smith, who is on leave from the English Department of the University of Oregon, described the great playwright as a modest, generous man who gives away a considerable portion of his large income to struggling young authors, artists and musicians and to various churches. "He is the first English author since Byron who is a world figure," declared Prof. Smith. He termed the life of Shaw written by Archibald Henderson of Chapel Hill as "notable."
