Helms cops top State post in flash pick

Senator Jesse Helms: "I'm just tickled to death..."

by Calvin Fadpucker
Walter L. Smith, chairman of the Chancellor Search Committee, announced last night that U. S. Senator Jesse Helms will become chancellor of N. C. State effective June 1.

In making the announcement, Smith also disclosed that Helms will resign his Senate seat on April 15 to return to Raleigh and prepare to assume the duties of the chief executive of the University.

FOLLOWING SMITH'S announcement, Chancellor John Caldwell called a hastily assembled press conference in the third floor shower of Gold Hall.

Striding quickly to the bank of microphones set up in front of the second shower head from the left, Caldwell glared into the television lights and read from a prepared statement.

"Aw, turkey shit," Caldwell screamed. The Chancellor then left the shower, declining to answer newsmen's questions. SENATOR HELMS, back in Raleigh for the Congressional Easter break, talked with the Techinashit about his selection.

"I'm just tickled to death. It's no secret that I've been after this job from the day Caldwell announced his retirement. I'm really looking forward to working with both the students and faculty of N.C. State. And besides that, I hear the chancellor gets great seats at basketball games."

ASKED IF HIS RIGHT wing views would interfere with his relationship with the University community Helms replied, "Well, I've got a little surprise for you there. I've been keeping it a secret for a couple of months—fact is, I've been saving it for this very moment. Anyway, the truth is, I've converted to the radical left."

Pressed for details on his new political philosophy and what brought it about, Helms declined immediate comment. However, the Senator volunteered to come to the Techinashit offices to be interviewed about the matter. (The exclusive Techinashit interview with Helms appears on pages four and five of today's edition. —Ed.)

Chancellor John Caldwell: "Aw, turkey shit..."

Thing invades Brickyard area

by Morgan Whitewash

"I don't know what it is," Chancellor John T. Caldwell said at a hastily assembled press conference Monday night. "But I want to get to the bottom of it, fast."

The event Caldwell referred to occurred on the brickyard sometime between 4 and 5 p.m. Monday. Since it was a holiday, few actually witnessed the occurrence.

According to campus security officer E.S. Telliot, it was "Somewhat ovoid and diaphanous, but it hasn't broken any traffic regulations so far."

DIRECTOR OF AUXILIARY Snacks Raymond X. Mallomarr noted that the object "definitely possessed a certain ontological truth that could not be disputed empirically."

An eyewitness at the brickyard said, in response to Mallomarr's statement, "What? He noted that although he had not seen it, many of his friends had and were 'very confused.'"

Weather conditions were near perfect for the event; the humidity was 60 per cent, almost optimum this early in spring.

EXPERTS AT State's Department of Physics were frankly at a loss to explain the phenomena. "I'm frankly at a loss to explain the phenomena," said Dr. Harold Expert. "So far our analysis has revealed nothing except that it was not organic in nature."

Another physics spokesman was a bit more definite. "Probably it was a frabits, very likely in its moulting stage," Dr. Ronald Expert noted.

Local authorities said it "posed no threat to indigenous plant, animal or mineral life, although small rodents should avoid open water. Several National Guard companies armed with high-caliber mechanisms are on 25-hour standby alert."

BASKETBALL STAR and demigod David Thompson could not be reached for comment. Neither could Ralph Nader, Bob Hope, Spiro Agnew, Giraldo Rivera, Billie Jean King, H.R. (Bob) Haldeman and Harry, the Wonder Horse. Former Senator Sam Ervin ducked reporter's questions and pigeon droppings.

Similar events have been recorded in Tacoma, Wash., the Kremlin, Ike's Kwik Stor in Kitty Litter, Nev., Antarctic Research Station Kumquat in remote Burnt Penguin Land and, most recently, in Henry Kissinger's briefcase.

THE FIRST person to notice it was Anna Slalom, a sophomore in Economic Deterioration. "I was talking with my boyfriend and I heard a noise, sort of like the sound an ooclet makes when you read Shelley to it. Anyway, I turned around and there it was, just sort of, uh, well, it's hard to describe just what it was doing."

Governor Holshouser's press secretary issued a statement concerning it. "Whatever it is," Holshouser said, "I hope it doesn't run for governor."

The Bell Tower shortly after thieves absconded with half of it.

Take top tons

by Howelrd Barenutts

A series of bizarre occurrences taking place over Easter weekend was capped yesterday by the discovery of the disappearance of over half of State's famous Bell Tower.

The disappearance may be the work of a radical terrorist group wanting money, Security announced.

"We didn't notice that it was gone until about 2 a.m. Monday," said Security Officer Ronald "Red" Neque, who heads the investigation. "We frankly don't know how they could have taken it so fast. Nobody on the third shift noticed anything out of the ordinary all night long, until we noticed the top half missing at about that time."

SECURITY DIRECTOR Bill Williams acknowledged that there were "practically no clues" in the disappearance, but said that a tape from a group calling itself the "Young People's Coalition for Anal Intercourse" had been sent to his office through campus mail. In the tape, the group claimed responsibility for the theft of the tower, and demanded payment for its safe return.

The tape, done by what was described as a man in his late teens or early twenties, demanded $5 million in unmarked bills or a comparable amount in trading stamps, to be delivered to a location to be disclosed later.

The money was to be used for, according to the tape, "The good of the people. The people in the group." The members of the group would use the funds for legal fees of captured group members, and dinner for 500 at MacDonald's.

"We don't know how authentic the tape is," said Williams. "It may just be a prank of some kind, but right now it's the only clue we have. We have been working with the Raleigh Police, of course. They have jurisdiction in this case, and there is a possibility that the FBI will become involved. They have shown an interest in the case."

IT WAS FIRST thought that the disappearance could be the result of the brick-eating fungus which recently devastated many campus structures, but it appears that the fungus only attacks brick and other clay-based materials. Many southern Baptists are reporting difficulty in walking as a direct result of this fungus. (see related story).

The possibility of a student prank, perhaps by students at Chapel Hill in retaliation for their resounding defeat in basketball, was also ruled out, according to Neque. "Because the students simply couldn't have the money or the equipment to pull it off."

A possibility exists that the blocks may have been gradually taken, over a period of days or even weeks, with styrofoam replicas used to replace them, and only the clock left in place, presumably to be taken after the last granite blocks had been removed.

"That's possible because nobody ever goes into the tower," said Bruce "Brick" Turner, who works with the Physical Plant. "The bells are played from inside a room in Holladay, and the clock itself operates on a time electric motor. As long as the blocks looked reasonably like the real thing, there would be no reason to suspect anything."

THE THEORY CAME about because a large piece of styrofoam was found inside the remainder of the tower.

Authorities speculate that the thieves had gotten more than halfway down the tower when they were surprised in the act sometime Sunday night, and decided to just take the clock and leave.

"Whoever they were it was really a professional job," said Neque. "Apparently they only came on campus when they knew Security wouldn't be looking, times when they were busy towing cars. The only reason we noticed it this time was that there were almost no students at school at that point in time."

Fierce fungus eats State bricks

by Howelrd Barenutts

A new strain of fungus struck the State campus last week, and threatens to close down the 85-year-old university if nothing is done to halt it.

The organism, according to the Department of Genetics, is a mutant strain derived from various types which grow on rocks and trees in the area, and grows only on bricks and other clay-based materials. This fungus, however, rather than simply attaching itself to objects, breaks down the structure of the affected area into various inert gases, leaving a small amount of an organic compound resembling a mixture of cow manure and leed tea.

"IT WOULD REALLY be an interesting discovery, if it weren't for the fact that we're literally being eaten out of house and home," said Dr. Robert Professor, a genetics smith at State. "The properties of the new fungus are different from any other that has been discovered. It seems to be a cross between advanced syphilis and jock itch. If we could control it, we would be able to use it for a number of projects, including the cheap manufacture of fertilizer from simple clay."

Several buildings have already been struck by the fungus, including the D.H. Hill Library bookstack, and Reynolds Coliseum. Apparently the fungus only attacks bricks coming from a specific area of the country, and health officials are trying to track down the origin of the bricks which are being devoured.

"What most people don't realize is that different bricks are made in different ways," said Charlee "Brick" Mason, head of the Physical Plant's Brick Purchasing Division. "Manure is used in the process for making some bricks, and there is a theory that those bricks are the ones affected, but that has yet to be verified."

ACCORDING TO MASON, there are some drawbacks to this theory, however.

"You see, the Student Center hasn't been affected at all, and we know for a fact that they didn't use shit for those bricks. On the other hand, the Price Music Center, which was built at the same time from the same bricks, is gone except for a few tubas," said Mason.

According to authorities, a number of experts have been called in from across the country, including Everett "Brick" Breaker, Frederick "Brick" Laver, and the world-famous Red "Brick" Brick, of the California Institute of Brick.

Students give varied answers to question

by Nickl Chamere
"On the Prickyard" this week visits the various habitats of the real students—whether floating around the Zig-Zag, reclining comfortably on a dorm floor, or resting in one of the many trees on campus—that great majority of us who go to college in our spare time.

The question this week looks deeply into the Psyche of students questioned, probing the cultural, sociological, psychological, and emotional motivation of the enormous, homogeneous variety of assholes residing on this campus.

Margie Mason

BARBARA S. HIPP, a junior in Visual Design, said, "I feel that this campus offers a multitude of experiences for the really involved, other-oriented individual. A person who really cares about the plight of the various peoples of the world, no matter what their point of national origin, can get a rewarding and meaningful experience from associating with the many real individuals at this institution."

Asked how this tied into the question, Hipp responded, "My philosophy is that if everyone simply loved everyone else in the world, many of the world's most pressing needs could be solved."

Asked how she felt about those on campus who were right-wing or who otherwise disagreed with her position, she snapped, "Fascists like that should be shot. They are the only barrier to real world peace."

Mark Uppman, a sophomore in recreation, said, "What?" WHEN THE question was restated, Uppman replied, "I feel that the real issues in this fascist country are really being ignored by most people. It's all a plot by Nixon to turn us all into slaves."

It was pointed out that Nixon was no longer president. "You're kidding!" exclaimed Uppman. "That last shit was better than I thought."

Asked how the country was ignoring real issues, Uppman replied, "What issues?"

Barbara S. Hipp

He was reminded of his earlier response to the question.

"What question?" asked Uppman.

The question was restated. "I FEEL THAT the real issues in this fascist country are really being ignored by most people," replied Uppman.

Margie Mason, daughter of Charles "Brick" Mason of the

Tom "Rocky" Stone

Physical Plant, and a senior in Chemical Engineering, said, "I think what this country needs is to get away from the smut and irresponsibility that it's now full of now." She refused to comment further, even though the question was repeated several times and she was beaten severely.

"I think Fritts is perfectly justified in his suit, and he should win handily," said Tom "Rocky" Stone, a junior in Sociology and State's All-America linebacker. "He should get the decision by at least 14 points."

WILBUR P. EPPS, a junior in Ag Education, said, "Three parts manure of either cow, horse, or turtle, and add to ammonium nitrate, and spread evenly along the furrows. That will produce tall plants within 30 days that may be cleaned and smoked within a few days. The seeds should be allowed to mature, however, and only the large dark ones should be planted, because the small green ones probably won't sprout."

"People should not read the

First letter

To the Editor:
I read the Technashit from cover to cover, so to speak. I like the Purvis cartoons (those busty girls he draws just say me!) and the Doctor's Bag. But what I enjoy reading most is the Blisful Ignorance column. Larry Blis' inimitable brand of humor and satire brighten up my day considerably. Take that last one about the Bicentennial. Damn near fell out of my seat laughing. The guy's a genius, an absolute genius. In that case, he almost perfectly expressed my feelings on the subject. What talent! We here at State are fortunate to have such high-caliber writing available to so many.
I certainly hope Mr. Blis is rewarded amply for his efforts. I'd say $20 or $30 is the very least he should be paid.
Mr. Blis is certainly destined to earn a place among the great humorists of our time, such as James Thurber, Robert Benchley, S.J. Perelman, P.G. Wodehouse, Peter de Vries, Woody Allen, and Mel Brooks. Let's hope that he doesn't let up on his excellent work. Thank you.

Larry Blis
So. LAE

P.S. Why don't you run a picture of him sometime? He must be extremely sexy.

Another letter

To the Editor:
I am sure glad my brother is finally moving out. To tell you the truth I was sort of getting tired of looking at his ugly face all the time. Anyway he looks sort of like someone I know but without the broken nose.
And on top of that he thinks he can catch a pass. Who does he think he is, Elijah Marshall or somebody? He couldn't catch a plane that has been delayed three hours at the Atlanta Airport.
What ole Don doesn't know is that his new roommate will soon want out also. She was telling me the other day that between the two of us I was the better looking.

Yet another letter

To the Editor:
I agree with Dave.

Elijah Marshall

Epistle the fourth

To the Editor:
I never thought that twin brothers could get along as roommates or for that matter as teammates. That's why I never thought of recruiting them in the first place. Now to make them happy, so we can teach Don how to catch a plane that has been delayed three hours in the Atlanta Airport, all mirrors on campus are being removed and Don will have to have his nose broken so that when he sees Dave he will think it is himself.

I guess I said that right.

Last letter

To the Editor:
Don't try covering it up, you beaners. I saw it on the brickyard Monday night and so did my friends. Many of them told me in all candor that they didn't know what the hell was going on.
For one thing, it was made of atoms and molecules, and don't let anyone tell you otherwise. As I watched, it assumed several shapes, many of which were considered impossible in Euclidian-Einsteinian-Snerdian physics. Sometimes it resembled a guava, usually it did not.

Quite a few people noticed electromagnetic and wave blotchmarks nearby, including extremely bright things in the sky; dark lines and spaces, not unlike pizza stains, emanating from bases of objects; and diffused atmospheric manifestations indicative of unnatural sexual acts between consenting subatomic particles.

It left no marks, although several people contracted mobile wartage on their noses. At least one man's acne was cleared, and later replaced with nodes.

But I know what it is and if you want to know what it is too, leave $10,000 in a plain brown pineapple at the Student Center Information Desk on the second floor. No police, or I'll...Well, just try me and see!

Chancellor Jesse Helms:

'I'm gonna make this

(Editor's Note: Jesse Helms, presently North Carolina's senior United States Senator, will be resigning that position on April 15 to begin preparations to assume the chancellorship of NCSU on June 1. Helms, who has been known throughout his television and political careers as an extreme right winger, recently surprised his following by announcing that he has converted to the far left. After posing for the above picture, Helms talked with the Technashit.)

by Calvin Fudpucker

Technashit: How does it feel to be the new chancellor of N. C. State, Senator Helms?

Helms: Feels great. As a matter of fact, I'd put it right up there with fellatio. Unreal, baby. And another thing. No more addressing me as "Senator Helms". From now on just call me Chancellor Jesse, or Dad, whichever you prefer.

Technashit: Senator, or uh Chancellor

Jesse, there has been a great deal about your change in political philosophy. Your conversion from the far right to the far left. What brought about the change?

Helms: It was Gerald Ford. God, turkey! I mean, ole Tricky Penis fooled all along with his right wing beliefs everything he said. And that, I had the hots for Tricia. piece! But then Ford got in office and me see the error of my ways. The intelligence of chopped liver.

'the most wild ass place you've ever seen...'

ber what Lyndon Johnson said about him? Lyndon said he must have played football without a helmet too long. Well, the way I see it, they must have used him for the damn football—you would have to be kicked a lot to be that goofy.

Technashit: In light of your political conversion, who are you backing for the presidency in 1976?

Helms: I think the ideal ticket would be Abbie Hoffman and Patty Hearst. I mean, like wow, there would really be some shit kicked if they were elected. I can just see Abbie now passing out jelly beans on the floor of the Senate while Patty follows behind him mowing down conservatives.

Technashit: Getting back to your new job Dad, what are your plans for N. C. State?

Helms: I'm gonna make this the most wild ass place you've ever seen. This is going to be the dope/sex/boogie capitol of the world. For example, on registration day I'm going to be down at the Coliseum passing out nickels to every student.

Technashit: You mean five cent coins?

Helms: No, you red neck creep. I mean five dollar bags of dope, and I've also arranged for a few lucky students to receive a gram of hash in their schedule envelopes.

Technashit: And what about sex?

Helms: Didn't your father tell you?

Technashit: Uh, yes, but you mentioned some plan to make State the world's sex capitol.

Helms: Oh, yes. Well, I'm into 69s myself now, but I want each student to have a chance to fulfill his or her own sexual fantasy. In order to fulfill that goal I'm going to organize a Division of Sexology within the Sociology Department. The first two courses will be Sex 350 "Advanced Sexual Positions: How to Achieve Them Without Laughing," and Sex 351 "1,001 Things to Do With Your Tongue." There will also be one graduate level course, Sex 540, "Introduction to Kinkiness."

Technashit: Any final comment for the students?

Helms: I'd just like to say that I'm really looking forward to my years at N.C. State, and rock 'n roll is here to stay.

Buckey twins on the outs, splitting up

Dave Buckey:
'He's just such an ugly son of a bitch...'

by Clark Kent
Dave and Don Buckey, State football's dynamic duo, are splitting up.
Yes, strange as it seems to those personally unfamiliar with the Buckeys, Dave and Don have not been getting along well for sometime now, it seems.
The story was brought to the attention of the Technashit by none other than State head football coach Lou Holtz, who in a Monday press conference admitted, "Yes, it's true, they hate each other's guts."
ASKED TO elaborate, Holtz said, "Yes, it's true they hate each other's guts."

As a consequence of the conflict that has arisen between them, Dave and Don, roommates at State for three years and the same for 18 years before that while growing up in Akron, Ohio, will now be parting company.
Contacted by the Technashit, Dave Buckey confirmed the story. "Yes it's true," Dave said, "We hate each other's guts."
Asked to explain, the State quarterback said, "He's just such an ugly son of a bitch, I can't stand looking at him any more."
PRESSED FOR details, Dave continued, "Yes, there are other things, too. I mean, for about the past year now he's been doing things that really tick me off. For example, about two months ago I had my girlfriend over for the night. Well, I had told him that afternoon that we would be over that night, and that he'd just stay somewhere else. Well, what the bastard really did was hide in the closet from four o'clock that afternoon on, and when I got up to go to the bathroom that night, he came out of the closet and got in bed with my girlfriend. When I came back a few minutes later, he was balling her silly."

Obviously irate, Dave went on, "I mean, to begin with, what he did was lower than whale shit. But then when he admitted that he'd been pulling this stunt since high school, well that was the last straw."
DON BUCKEY, contacted by the Technashit and informed of Dave's statement said, "Well he can just suck my dorsal root ganglion."
Asked directly if Dave's allegations were true, Don replied "Oh, hell yes. I really did ball his girlfriend silly, and every other girl he's had since high school. I mean, let's face it. I'm slicker than cat shit."

Don Buckey:

John Wooden to coach Wolfpack?

by Jimmy Olsen
State head basketball coach Norman Sloan revealed yesterday that retired UCLA coach John Wooden has been asked to join the staff at State and has expressed some interest in such a position.
"I'm just so thrilled about it I could jump out the window," said Sloan in his third-floor office Monday. "I talked to John last night (Sunday) and he said he'd think about it. He said he'd always dreamed of being associated with Atlantic Coast Conference basketball. I'm just so elated about the possibility that I couldn't think last night, and I can't sleep straight this morning."
JOHNNY'S MAMA lives in North Carolina and he always attends the Campbell College basketball school, so he's closely associated with the state. I understand he asked for the head job at Appalachian State but was turned down."

Asked when he expected to hear something definite from Wooden, Sloan said, "Probably not until Johnny gets back from his vacation. He said he and Billy were going to spend a few days in their cabin in the mountains. I assume it's a relative."
Contacted by the Technashit last night, Wooden replied, "I nearly peed in my britches when Norm called me. And when he told me that I'd be in charge of jocks and balls, well that really sent a charge up my wing-ding. And then when he told me that he'd let me do all the screaming at the referees, well I had to run to the closet and relieve myself. I'm so thrilled, but I'll have to wait and see what my doctors say. I'm going to see one of them tonight after she gets off work, and the other one will be back from cheerleading practice in a few minutes."

REACTION TO THE possibility of Wooden coaching in the ACC was generally the same—Oh Shit!
Dean Smith, coach of ACC champion North Carolina, said, "Maybe now State will get its program on the rise and off the rag."
Notre Dame's Digger Phelps, a staunch critic of the cheating and low-down, disreputable and illegal recruiting practices which the ACC carries on, called a press conference and said, "It takes one to know one. Everyone knows that the only reason John Wooden built a dynasty at UCLA is because he used illegal recruiting practices to lure all those dumbasses like Henry Bibby, who was so dumb that the ACC couldn't even find some way to get him in. If he goes to N.C. State, I don't know if I'll be able to keep my head screwed on straight. It just burns my balls to think of all the cheating and dishonesty that goes on outside the hallowed halls of Notre Dame."

Extracurricular Scene—

by Shray Delfoid

With the increasing number of women on the State campus every year, he cries for more co-rec activities become realistic. With this in mind, the Intramural Department is considering moving the winner of this year's Women's Residence and Sorority League to the Men's Residence League for the Fall semester of 1975. Given equal opportunity, the Women's entry will compete in all intramural sports on the Men's program and will gain points in the same way depending on their finish in a particular event. Of course, off campus candidates for each organization can be either male or female. The Women's entry will compete in the Fraternity circuit during the 1975 Spring Semester.

LAST WEEK, the Intramural Department added one more co-rec activity to this season's calendar. All athletic directors were asked to report to Carmichael Gym April 10 at 4:30 for an important meeting and demonstration of the Intramural Department's latest co-rec activity, wrestling. Men's Intramural Director Jack Shannon and Women's Intramural Head Lynn Berie will go head-to-head in demonstrating the techniques of co-rec wrestling. Two student assistants in the Intramural Department, Kathy Bounds and Chuck Carpenter, will also provide a demonstration to show how easy and fun co-rec wrestling really is.
Speaking of Carpenter, reliable rumors have circulated throughout the Intramural Department that he will be the new Intramural Director at State, when Shannon steps down to take a job with the Lifeguards of America. The Physical Education Department seems keen on a person with Carpenter's qualifications, especially his inside knowledge of the Intramural Department. An interim Intramural Director seems certain to hold the post until Carpenter's graduation. Robert Keller, former Turlington Athletic Director and knowledgeable student of the Intramural scene, will probably be added to the staff as an assistant, according to the Intramural Department.

MOVING OUTDOORS, the Athletic Department has approved funding for a 50 meter pool to be built on the lower intramural fields. Although this addition will obviously hurt attendance at Owen and Lee Beaches, authorities feel the pool will be a worthwhile addition since it will be multi-functional. With the pool being heated, the swim team would be able to reserve the pool for a few hours a day for a good part of the year. Recreational and moonlight swimming as well as sunning and socializing, an integral part of the Spring Semester here at State, should give the pool popular appeal. Groundbreaking is expected to take place this month, with the pool expected to be completed by early Spring '76.

Stan Fritts files suit against conference, James

State running back Stan Fritts has filed a $200,000 suit against the Atlantic Coast Conference and Commissioner Bob James.

Fragging

New athletic event hits State campus

by Grantland Lee

A new sport will come to State next fall—fraggling. Fraggling is a fast-paced, rough-and-tumble game developed during the U.S. involvement in Vietnam. In its most basic form, a "frag" (fragmentation grenade) was rolled into the tent of unpopular officers. If that officer happened to be in the tent when the grenade exploded, so much the worse.

The sport as it is played now is a cross between football, soccer, hockey, and tactical bombing. The field, called a "free-fire zone" in fraggling argot, is the size of a football field. The field is shelled before each game, making craters that add much to the games excitement.

EACH TEAM consists of forty men, all of which play at all times, with no time outs. (Time outs were originally planned by fraggling's inventor, Ulysses Westmoreland Patton, but the game's combative nature makes it very difficult to stop.)

"Eighty men on the field seems like a lot of people," said "Ike" Bradley, who will coach the Wolfpack's fraggling platoon come September. "But we use a frag grenade instead of a ball, so the numbers are gradually thinned out as the game progresses."

The frags used are designed to go off 10 seconds after its pin is pulled. A play runs something like this: the players line up against each other as in football. The "schlepp", analogous to a center, pulls the pin and has the option of passing, running, or throwing the frag to the opposite team's end zone. The frag makes a loud noise when the pin is pulled, so that defensive players may try to capture the grenade and hurl it at the offensive team's endzone. Or they can run like hell. (The latter option is far more common.)

EACH TEAM'S END zone contains a World War II vintage pillbox. The fraggers try to destroy the opposing team's pillbox before their own is eliminated. Additionally, if fragging the pillbox shows little results, each coach may call in two air strikes per game.

In an air strike, a horn is sounded and all players and spectators take cover. In seconds, helicopter gunships plaster the targetted endzone with rockets and machine guns. Fraggling has proved very popular at military academies and West Point. In California, radical terrorists spend their Sunday afternoons in the free-fire zone practicing for what they call "the big game."

IKE BRADLEY expects the game to catch on at State. "The rules are quite simple and, as you can imagine, there's lots of

by Carroll James

In a move to cut the balls out from under Chris Kupec, all-Atlantic Coast Conference running back Stan Fritts of State has filed a $200,000 suit against the league and ACC Commissioner Bob James.

THE SUIT WAS filed in U.S. Middle District Court Monday in Greensboro, challenging an NCAA ruling that could make Kupec eligible for a fourth season at North Carolina, a school made famous by underhanded, cheap and other undesirable qualities.

"If they let Chris Kupec play another year, then they better let a lot more guys play a fifth year. Hell, he played four years according to the rules, and damnit, you gotta play by the rules. But I realize that rules are something which they disregard at Carolina," said Fritts.

Fritts has already signed a contract with the Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League, and therefore would not be eligible for another year even if he won his suit. However, said Fritts, "It's the principle of the damn thing."

COMMISSIONER JAMES, contacted by the Technashit yesterday said, "I'm glad Stan is suing us to show what a cocksucker Chris Kupec is. However, I'm not too thrilled about the idea of losing 200,000 clams, but that's business. It'll be worth it to see that damn Kupec get it in the butt."

Once James got started on the subject of Kupec, he couldn't be stopped and gotten off his tangent.

"That Motherfucker!" he shouted. "If he pulled a 3.7 at Carolina, that shows what a slide school that hippie commune is. He's so damn stupid he'd crawl up a chicken's ass for an egg sandwich."

NEITHER KUPEC nor Carolina head football coach Bill Dooley could be reached for comment. They were reportedly fishing with Bebe Rebozo, a close friend of Dooley's.

Fritts, cornered under a table at Red's on Hillsborough Street, said, "I just want everything to be fair. I've always been taught to play fair, but Chris isn't playing right. If he'd been drafted high with all the good players, he wouldn't be suing anybody. He's just out to make himself a buck. If he'd spend his time practicing football instead of suing some damn body maybe he'd get good enough to make a pro team."

Fritts referred the remainder of reporters' questions to his lawyer who was in the john.

"I THINK (grunt) we have (grunt) a very good case (grunt)," said Alfonso J. Shavey. "Hell, (grunt) if Kupec can do it (grunt) Stan can do it better (grunt). Just ask the State cheerleaders."

Fritts set ACC career and single-season scoring records and also school career and single-season rushing marks. He was drafted by the Cincinnati Bengals in the fifth round of the NFL's college draft. Kupec, who rolled up impressive stats against such powerhouses as Ohio University and Army, was not drafted until the "garbage rounds." He went to the Buffalo Bills in the 10th round.

Bills coach Lou Saban has already called Kupec a "10th round copout."

Covering SPURTS

It has come to light that Stan Fritts has decided to make a second valiant move to sue the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters for not naming him Player-of-the-Year in football. Fritts claims that he would have gotten a higher pro salary with that honor.

The State senior has a very good point. Here is a guy that has to be the greatest football player in the world and he's considered second rate in the ACC. Randy White of Maryland is just a pussy. Fritts said so himself.

In the world of oblivion the more honors bestowed on a particular athlete, the greater the pro salary. White of course would have wanted to sue the conference also, but he really has no grounds.

FRITTS ON THE other hand feels that if he had started playing football his sophomore year in high school instead of his junior year, and if he had been allowed in the ACC before his sophomore year and not had to sit out a year, then he would have been a much better ball player, not quite as mature but better mentally.

He did take that matter of not playing as many years as other athletes in the conference such as that Kupecak or Kupec or something like that fellow over at Chapel Hill High School to the commissioners office, but Walter Kennedy turned him down cold. Kennedy's reasons were not given but it is obvious that Fritts is not well versed in the art of dribbling a deflated rugby ball.

So, now Fritts is suing the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters Association for not naming him the conference Player-of-the-Year in football. Fritts lays a claim that a salary higher than the one he received would have been in the offering from the Cincinnati Bengals.

The greatest football player in the world has a very good point. The State senior is thusly being considered a second rate football player behind that pussy from Maryland Randy White. Just ask Fritts about White,

by Fat Ass Sports Editor

he'll tell you the same thing.

EVERYONE KNOWS THAT a greater salary can be made in this world if the honors are more forthcoming. With no grounds, White, of course, cannot sue the conference.

Fritts didn't start playing football until he was 16 years old and had to skip a year in college, because of some silly NCAA rule that says you can break the rules and not sit out a year after transferring to some whimp of a school after not applying for a high conference standard. Fritts would have been younger and not as physical if he had been allowed to play each of those seven years, but his maturity wouldn't have been any greater either. His mentality would have probalby been higher.

A guy from a country day school in Orange County sued the conference recently for now allowing him to play in all the scheduled games during his extended career. Fritts thought about taking a complaint to the court system, but after talking with the commissioner, he decided against it. Walter Kennedy refused to release the reasons for turning Fritts down, but it is obvious that Fritts is not too well versed in dribbling a football.

Maybe, along with the suing of the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters Association, Fritts should sue all the sportswriters in the nation for not putting him on first string all-America.

'Delayer,' from Yes, puts out

by Weston Drivebelt and Arnold Cuelover

A number of new records have come to our attention. Leading off today is the new LP from Yes, Delayer. It's very similar to Close to the Edge, except that Bill Bruford and Rick Wakeman aren't on it, the music has different rhythms and Jon Anderson has written an entirely different set of lyrics.

Many people will find side one, The Gates of Magnesium, to be Delayer's high point. In an exclusive interview, Anderson emphasized that the song "composes well over 50 per cent of the record." New keyboard player Patrick Moras' efforts are outstanding, especially on organ, synthesizers, melotrons and piano. Drummer Alan White's repertoire has been expanded to encompass rhythms, often in conjunction with the overall melody.

Round Chaser, which is not found on the last half of side two, unlike To Be Overt, which is bound to elicit controversy, or at least mild annoyance. Purists may well blanch at the group's vocal tagline, called by rock critic Stanley Brick, "the immortal 'jajaja-jaja'."

To Be Overt opens new avenues for Yes. Anderson reaches new heights of confusion in his lyrics. Consider this brief verse: "We have only to raise our feet/watered by our aardvarks/unholy eclipsed cords of life trip us/and leave me waiting for."

All in all, a fine record, especially if you're stoned.

musical mucous

Their next album, Closely Tracked Dribble, should be on the shelves by summer.

Several months old but still worth mentioning is Todd Rundgren's Dystopia. Dystopia is Todd's new backup band; they sound like nothing so much as a combination of Keith Emerson and Walter Schlemm, an obscure German zitherist. The group has three people on various keyboard instruments; often only one or two will play at a time, giving the songs variety. One of our friends at a party said this upon hearing it about 4 a.m.: "It's uh, yeah, well, y'know, it just...Right! Right!"

Platter notes: Elton John, flushed with the success of his record-breaking tour of Benson, Granite Falls and Zebulon, says he plans to return "within the 20th century and possibly sooner."...Federal Energy Administration officials are considering a plan to connect songstress Tina Turner to a series of generators. An FEA spokesman said that the hyperactive soul singer "produces enough energy in her singing and dancing to power a city of 10,000 for three weeks."...Faced with an enormous electric bill, British rockers

Emerson, Lake and Palmer came up with a novel solution to the energy crunch: their amplifiers and synthesizers are hooked up to a giant treadmill powered by 200 roadies... Hunter Thompson, of Fear and Loathing fame, says that his next book will be titled Fear and Loathing in Easter. Thompson. Sources say he'll lock himself in a room with a tape recorder and inject "every harmful drug known to man into his body" and then chronicle their effects on his body systems. The book may be his last...Finally, producer Terry Knight announced the signing of a new group called "Fickish Parakeets." Knight said that they would be "the definitive jazz-rock-ragtime-Baroque group."

SMC 'Shopper' offers comfort, room

by Road Madness
and Evil McTurnip

If all you want from your kart is pure economy, then Schuette Motor Company of Lizzard Lick has come (so to speak) up with the perfect kart for you. It is the newly-discovered "Shopper" (not to be confused with a Packer, or any other cheap originals).

POWERED BY the patented WEO (Wallabee-Energized Oedipus) engine, which runs on inflation, the average Shopper will get about 37 meals...uh, miles per trip to the special "With Dixon" fueling centers. Add that to fantastic roominess and durability, and you have what may be the best thing on the sidewalk for the economy-minded driver.

The Shopper, of course, is not meant to perform or handle like a sporty Kushman Kart. Nor is it meant to be as comfortable and versatile as a Chevy Van. All the Shopper is meant to do is get the housewife to the grocery store and the kids to school. It is simply an economical way to get from one place to another — eventually.

The interior of the Shopper is surprisingly roomy. The driver takes up almost no space inside the vehicle. The engine takes up the same space. Thus most of the kart is left for passengers and baggage.

IT IS, AS ONE would expect, a bit drafty inside the Shopper. But if you are a veteran the draft will leave you alone. Comfort is also lacking in the kart, but if the price is right even a big star like Bill Cullen or Bob Barker would be willing to suffer the consequences of economy.

Handling in the Shopper is not as sure as one would find in a classy kart like a VW, but it is smooth enough that you won't break eggs or crush bread in it. The suspension is extremely tight, but the kart is a little topheavy, so one has to be careful when driving it. But then, it doesn't go that fast, so it is as safe, or safer than most anything else around.

The Shopper is so safe, as a matter of fact, that it doesn't even need headlights, windshield wipers or safety belts like most cars. Furthermore, it meets federal anti-pollution standards through 1979 without any add-on features that sap power. In 1980, however, engineers expect to add a catalytic converter onto the exhaust system. This device will be about the size and shape of a pencil, so it will be easy to install.

THE ONLY PROBLEM we could find with the Shopper was its cheap construction. It is nevertheless built 1,000 per cent better than anything else Detroit makes. But it still lacks the quality which all karts should have. Even the kampus kop Kushmanns, which are made in Poland, have better quality than the Shopper.

Priced at only $39 and available at A&P Motors on Hillsborough Street (North Carolina's only Schuette pusher), the Shopper is about the best commuter kart on the sidewalks today.

Soon SMC will come out with a new model, based on the Shopper, called the Stasher. This car will feature extra roominess, performance, and comfort, and will run on THC. It should provide an exhilarating driving experience as you rush around in it.
