Scott Hall Formal Opening Attracts Many Dignitaries

The formal Monday night opening of the State's new Poultry Science building attracted the concerned department heads ample opportunity to stand up on the bird legs and crow about their ultra-modern two-story structure.

The $380,110.97 building was named after W. Scott, well-known Alamance County farmer and General Assembly, agricultural leader, father of North Carolina's chief executive, Lerr Scott.

Scott Hall represents the strictly first-class type of building that confronts the poultry industry in North Carolina. It could be too much money, but, because of a haven for dollop Broadway producers seeking a comfortable place in which to lay their last remaining eggs.

There are accommodations which see our fine-feathered friends in the cradle to the grave—or at least the pit of some government.

The latest innovations in the incubator will be followed by sanitary conditions which prevent the stock from being killed, defathered and cleaned according to the most rigid government appointed standards. All of that is betting.

One especially intriguing gadget was a pistol which looked as though it might belong to the Buck Rogers age. Poultry serum or poultry eggs in either pellet or liquid form is shot into the head of large poultry or (young as is desired). This has a "curing" effect on the bird so that he soon loses all of his useful characteristics and is transformed into a "hen," one complete with mother instinct. These hormone injections also have a tenderizing effect on the meat of the bird making it easier to market the bird after he has lost his usefulness as a male.

When asked what would happen if a human being were thus serum-treated, one of the country's leading geneticists who is a member of the poultry department's faculty replied, "A man would probably be heard singing songs in the bathtub." The effect of the serum is temporary though, the Dr. pointed out lastly.

Key figures in the dedicatory rites, held in the beautiful new building, included Chancellor J. W. Hamrick, of the North Carolina State College; Dr. Clarence Poe, editor of The Progressive Farmer; Governor Scott; and President Gordon P. W. Gray of the Consolidated University. A special song was written by the Rev. Ed.-

The program was attended by 150 persons, including members of the Scott family, the North Carolina Board of Agriculture, the Carolina Poultry Council, and other agricultural leaders.

The "Spirit's" Got 'Em

Tommy Ward was "cooping" all over the place at the Tuesday noon Campus Government meeting. President Vincent Outland was tied up with Freshmen elections. As the chancellor dispersed, no word had come stating whether Outland has been picked; however, Mr. Ward managed admirably as the meeting's moderator.

The proposed cut system was subjected to a thorough raking over and the efforts of Tom Avery and his Cut Committee were closely questioned. But straw vote showed those present (a minority) favoring the cut system with a vote on stock. Then there are as many killed, defathered and cleaned according to the most rigid government appointed standards. All of that is betting.

The strong point of the system was its flexibility in that it allows the student to decide, with his discretion about which classes are most important to attend. For instance, should a student decide that he cannot properly prepare for a crucial test, he could cut another scheduled class which would allow him to serve another purpose without fear of having a cut turned in.

Exact information including all the particulars are not yet available. It is known already that the faculty is working out a new cut system for the student who is not included; or is not included by the student committee men who are advised to become informed that they will appear well-versed at the next C.G. meeting.

Tommy Ward reported that "Operation Spirit" was meeting with favorable results so far and that following the meeting a "THANK YOU" meeting was being poured in to support the movement. Floyd Sweet, President of IDC stated that it was he who had arranged the Motorclub meet-est on Tuesday night.

Sweet stated on the expenditures covering the recent College-staged IDC Ball. He then asked for a grant of $150 to be ad-

The December 4 Publications Board meeting was considerably dampened due to the inability of a majority of its members to attend.

The problem has become so acute that the next regular get-together has been planned as a supper meeting for January 8.

A dining room in the cafeteria will be secured in order that members may go through the line and charge their trays to the meeting which is scheduled to start at 6:00 p.m.; however, those planning to attend are urged to start selecting their menus at approximately 5:30. By so doing, the meeting will get underway without delay.

Research Famed

The name of North Carolina State's research work on night driving is spreading.

The Automobile Manufacturers Association of Detroit, Mich., has agreed to reprint an article on night driving published by P. B. Ward and two other men of its Engineering Advisory Committee. The article deals primarily with research work at State College.

The research work was done by Professors D. J. Morfie and Howard Owen of the State College Psychology.

Engr's Ball in Jan.

BY CHARLES HARBOUR

Okay you engineers, let's get those dates lined up over the Christmas holidays and get ready to launch the winter term social activities with a bang (or a bottle of champagne if you prefer) at the nineteenth annual Engineer's Ball on Friday night, January 9, in the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum. This dance promises to be better than any of the preceding ones and it marks the first time that the Engineering School has held a dance in the Coliseum.

All you have to do in order to obtain the tickets and invitations for the Ball is to be present at the YMCA on Tuesday or Wednesday night, January 6 or 7 from 8 to 10 p.m. and show your registration cards. There will be four lines at which you will not have to wait in order to pick up your tickets. There are 1,000 bails available for 1,000 engineering students and they will be given out on a first-come-first-served basis.

Music for the Engineer's Ball will be furnished by Claude Thornhill, his famous piano and orchestra, with lovely, blonde Christy Combs and dancing, young Med Florey as vocalist.

Plans have been made to have the Coliseum fully decorated in a colorful and original manner. The colored arc lights will be played among the couples throughout the dance. The Ball will be formal as this adds to the general atmosphere, and as a note of interest to you who cannot possibly be there, come, buy, or steal a tuxedo, you will not be refused entrance if you show up wearing a dark suit.

If you wonder why the dance is to be only one night instead of a customary two, that is because an orchestra twice as good as usual, can be obtained as they only have to be paid for one night. The dance is on Friday night because the Coliseum management refused to let the Coliseum be used on Saturday night; their reason being that cleaning up after the dance and repl the basketball floor would interrupt the next week's basketball

English Prof Honored

A member of the English faculty at North Carolina State College has been given an important committee assignment by the South Atlantic Modern Language Association which held its twenty-second annual meeting in Miami, Fla., November 27-29. Dr. Lodwick Hartley, head of the State College English Department, has been named co-chairman of the Freshman English section with Dr. Kenneth Knickerbocker of the University of Tennessee. The Freshman English section has been pursuing an extensive study of the coordination of secondary school and college English instruction in an effort to develop statewide programs throughout the South for the improvement of English instruction on all levels. At the Miami meeting, reports were heard from seven Southern states, including North Carolina, which has within the past few years developed an outstanding program through the activities of the North Carolina English Teachers Association. The study by Professors Knickerbocker and Hartley will direct during the coming year will involve the training for teachers of composition on both high school and college levels. A full report on matters of certification and general opportunities for training in composition throughout the South Atlantic area will comprise the program of the Freshman English section at the next meeting of the Modern Language Association in Atlanta next fall.

The first claim against the Pilot Life Insurance Co. for $250.00 has been paid to William Wulf.

There's a Time

"Why doesn't The Technician print some 'good' jokes like the Wataugan used to?" someone asked us, assuming we have many other individuals since the College humor magazine was discontinued in 1956. The question is perfectly legitimate, and because it was anticipated far in advance, the following reply was prepared, also far in advance. Is this an indication that we are so smug as to give the appearance of having an answer for every question which will be directed towards us in the ensuing months? No, not at all. But this we promise you. If this newspaper has not already, it will in the future attempt to take a stand on every major issue confronting the students on this campus. When we are final prepared to express ourselves the expression will be backed and tempered, we hope, by all the pertinent facts available and will constitute a sincere desire on our part to reason something better out of those undesirable situations which have commanded attention.

Now back to the question posed in the first sentence. In order to answer it we must resort to a simple form of reasoning and say—first of all, because The Technician is not the college humor magazine. It is essentially a newspaper and as such is concerned, in the main, with the dissemination of news tailored to give the news and interests of the State College students.

Does this mean that we will not in the future endeavor to print more material of a humorous nature? No, there will always be room for some form of humor on these pages; however, the editor is committed by his own profession, if you will, and simple—good taste, to passing on to the students only that humorous material which is felt to be "suitable," which is the most vague of all terms, and is not available to a mass of the readers—and they are not all students.

It follows therefore, that no off-color Wataugan-type jokes will appear on these pages during the tenure in office of the present editor. We might point out though, that if any jokes are extremely destroyed of being exposed to the type of literature referred to above, he might read the first issue of the Southern Engineer, which devoted four of its pages to old Wataugan material. And incidentally, while on the subject of reprints we might also make it known that the last issue of the Wataugan consisted of reprints of all that publications jokes, with a few exceptions, which had been fished from issues six years previous to the date of the first issue.

In summation, we wish to make our position abundantly clear. Should a group of students on this campus evidence such zeal, a literary process and working enthusiasm as is necessary to reinstate the college humor magazine, The Technician will do its best to support this group in any way that it can. The only condition is that a complete layout for a new Wataugan must be brought before the Publications Board in order that all concerned might review the material and plans for issues to follow. Until then, our position will remain static.

In the meantime, our readers will be confronted with that type of humor which has been indicated. We trust that everyone will respect our judgment in this matter.

Alumni Initiate Fund

For the first time in the 63-year history of North Carolina State College, the institution's alumni this year have adopted an Alumni Fund Program.

Rudolph I. Mintz of Wilmington, president of the college's Alumni Association, announced the appointment of an Alumni Fund Committee, composed of 15 area chairmen.

Members of the committee as selected by the executive committee last week and reviewed progress made to date, are:

E. E. Floyd, chairman, and the other members of the committee to the time and energy in promoting a State College of greater service in its chosen field.

President Mintz designated Guy F. Laney, former president of the college's Alumni Association and former chairman of the Board of Directors, as chairman of the Alumni Fund Committee. Laney, a member of the Class of 1926, is sales engineer of the Johns Manville Corporation.

Commenting on the new program, Chancellor Harold said it "introduces a factor of extraordinary promise" and urged alumni to lend their support to the move.

North Carolina State College. This plan is a definite part of the College's overall development program, now going forward under the leadership of the Development Council, which was formed under the able guidance of Chancellor J. W. Harrision and President Gordon Gray.

"This Council has accepted the responsibility for guiding the whole program of development for the College. Its potential is unlimited," said E. E. Floyd, Council Chairman, and the other members of the Committee of Directors are giving freely of their time and energy in promoting a State College of greater service in its chosen field.

SCOTT HALL—
Following the dedication, a tour was made through the extensive facilities of the building, which will serve as a mammoth training, research, and extension center for the State's multi-million-dollar poultry industry.

Speakers appearing on the dedicatory program paid high tribute to the late Mr. Scott and predicted a program of expansion and prosperity for North Carolina's poultry industry.

Speaking briefly, Governor Scott expressed appreciation for the honor or extension to his father and said the gesture had provided "a great inspiration to all the family." President Gray, in his address, said the new Scott Hall and its facilities will exert a wide influence in building a better agriculture for North Carolina and will enable the rural people of the State to avail themselves of additional "economic opportunities in the poultry field."

The University president pointed out that in 1950 the poultry industry ranked second in North Carolina in farm income and that the State ranks 15th in the nation in cash receipts from poultry.

President Gray spoke on what the $350,110 building will mean to the people of North Carolina. He pointed out that there are approximately 200,000 Tar Heels who get all or part of their income from poultry production or related enterprises.

The 300 concerns that are licensed to manufacture feed in North Carolina rely largely on the State College Department of Poultry Science for technical advice, President Gray said. Prior to the construction of Scott Hall, facilities did not exist for technical research on nutrition problems of chickens and turkeys, according to the University President.

He said the additional research, teaching, and extension services provided in Scott Hall will enable the college to conduct further work toward the advancement of the industry and expressed appreciation to the State for the physical facilities.

Governor J. W. Harrelson of State College, who presided over the exercises, said he was glad to have the building officially named for the late Mr. Scott and was delighted that it could be dedicated to the service of agriculture in North Carolina.

"The college," Chancellor Harrelson declared, "honors itself in honoring this distinguished citizen."

Members of the family present for the ceremonies included Gov- ernor and Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Robert W. Scott of Burlington, widow of the man for whom the building was named, State Senator and Mrs. Ralph Scott of Melons, Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Scott of Raleigh, Dr. and Mrs. Floyd Scott of But- lington, Mrs. Paul Haesler of New Brunswick, N. J., Mrs. C. R. Hud- son of Raleigh, Robert Scott Hud- son of Raleigh, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Smith of Raleigh.

In the dedicatory program, the following citation describes the facilities of the new Scott Hall:

"Scott Hall, the Poultry Science Building, is an outgrowth of the increasing demand for teaching, research, extension, and industrial service facilities to better serve the students of Poultry Science, the poultry industry of North Carolina, and those enterprises directly related to the poultry industry."

The 1947-49 legislatures appropriations for funds for this building. Plans were drawn by Hackney and Knott, architects of Durham, and the building was constructed by the Atlantic Building Company of Charlotte. Completed in June, 1952, and occupied by the Department of Poultry Science in July, 1952, the building provides modern class- rooms, a library, office space, demo-

I have had several requests in the last week to explain why the Third Herd of Woody Herman will be voted over the Stan Kenton aggregation in the 1963 band polls. I predicted Herman over Kenton on the basis of what each band has done during the year 1962 in the line of recordings, appearances, and general musical content. Woody Herman has produced the new Third Herd, with new sounds, a new style, and new sidemen. Stan has come out with a new series of classical records for his classical audience. Both bands are driving, progressive crews, with rapidly developing sidemen and arrangements. This is the shade of interest. The Herman band has been heard more than Stan's crew, and they are not playing to specialized audiences at all times. Only the future can tell, but the opinion from this quarter is that the majority will come through for Herman because people like to dance to their Jazz.

Oh what fun it is to ride...
State Looks Toward Dixie Classic

The Dixie Classic is just around the corner and State's defending classic champions are looking for another tournament victory.

This is the fourth year of the classic and it is adding attraction and color every year. It now has the reputation as the finest three-day tournament in the nation.

Since its origin in 1949 the State Pack has monopolized the victories in the tournament every year by winning it three years in a row over some of the best teams in the nation.

Tickets are on sale in the coliseum box office and if its tops in basketball thrills you want you can't beat the Dixie Classic.

Fitz Deserves a "Pat on the Back"

I believe in giving recognition where it is due and I think Coach Tom Fitzgibbons deserves a well earned share.

He coached his harriers to their second consecutive cross-country championship of the Southern Conference by defeating a great team from Maryland.

In his four years of coaching the cross-country team here at State he has amassed a fine record for himself. He has won 26 dual meets, tied 1 and lost 1 in Southern Conference competition; also he has won the North Carolina State Cross-Country Championship for the past four years and placed his teams in second, third, and for the last two years, won the Southern Conference cross-country championships along with placing them in tenth place in the nation this year in East Lansing, Michigan.

All total I think that is one of the finest records in the history of the school for any coach in a minor sport.

So in closing, I would like to say that I hear rumors about his dismissal from the coaching staff and if this is true I think the athletic council should put him in the athletic department somewhere because he has the ability to help them some. I hear that the physical education department needs a new man to help with the program. So why go out and hire a new man for this job when you have one working here. I personally think he could help the physical education program a great deal in the future.

I forgot to mention the pairings for the first day of the Dixie Classic, they are as follows:

1. Univ. of North Carolina vs. Holy Cross at 2:00 p.m.
2. North Carolina State vs. Princeton at 3:30 p.m.
3. Wake Forest vs. Univ. of Pennsylvania at 7:20 p.m.
4. Duke University vs. Brigham Young at 9:00 p.m.

Both N. C. State and Princeton represented their teams in the NCAA district finals last year.

Dormitory Intramurals

By JULIAN LANIER

With the end of the football season drawing nigh, championship playoff games are the order of the day in the dorm intramurals. Berry-Watauga lost to Vetville on Tuesday, Dec. 10, by a score of 2 to 0. This game blasted Berry's bid for the championship, and placed Vetville against Beeton No. 1 for the championship title. These two teams met on Wednesday, Dec. 10, to decide the final winner.

Vetville seems to have taken the lead in two of the three major intramural sports having reached the finals in volleyball as well as football. The issue will be decided in this sport this week when Berry-Watauga meets Owen Dorm in a semi-final game. The winner of this game will be pitted against Vetville for the championship.

The handball champions of the dorms this year are the Owls No. 2 who dominated Bagwell No. 1 in the final game.

Pack Swimmers Set American Records

The "Sparkplug"

Nauss Named All American

The State Pack swimmers broke three existing American records for the a trib of breaststroke distances here this week in an exhibition swim at the Frank Thompson pool.

The State sextet of Paul Arata, Craig Lyons, Frank Nauss, Bob Mattson, John Dayton and Allen Hall clipped more than 10 seconds off the 800-yard breaststroke relay record set Feb. 4, 1939 by Ohio State and shaved 18 seconds from the 1,000 yard breaststroke set Jan. 25, 1939 by the University of Michigan. State also broke the 1,500 yard American record for breaststroke by 18.4 seconds set the same date by Michigan.

Coach Willi Davis will officially apply to the Amateur Athletic Union for recognition of the new marks set yesterday by the Wolf-pack tankers. The distances were timed by four watches as required under A.A.U. rules.

Record Summary:

Nauss Named All American

Last week Frank Nauss, State's sensational distance swimmer, added another record to his collection which proved to be his greatest yet. He was chosen as a member of the 1962 AAU All-American long distance team for his outstanding performance at the AAU meet in New York last summer.

Frank was one of the standouts on the State's conference champions last year and has the prospects of being one of the greatest in the nation this year. He is only a sophomore this year and is from York, Pa.
By LENNY BINDER

The 1952-53 edition of the N. C. State basketball team showed some of their vaunted power and finesse last week by downing Washington and Lee 88-63 and Davidson 85-47 in Southern Conference clashes.

After being held virtually even in the first quarter by a scrappy Washington and Lee five, the Case-mens rallied to lead at the half by 15, 46-31. Guard Dave Gubit’s long-set shots loosened the General’s defense and center Mel Thompson, who played a strong all-around game, caused several hook-shots and rebounds to turn the game into a rout.

In the fourth quarter, Coach Case cleaned his bench by sending in Applebaum, Stevenson, Adams, Goux, Krupp, Brandenburg, and Kincaid. These men proved their merit by outplaying the Generals in every department.

In the opener the freshmen, led by Molseed and Bell, made a tremendous showing even though they were defeated by a strong Fl. Meyer five, 74-70.

Last Saturday, the Wolfpack romped to an 82-47 win over a weak Davidson five at the Coliseum. The Pack was never in serious difficulty as they outclass the Wildcats in every phase of the game.

Led by co-captains Bob Spight and Bill Kukoy, the Red Terrors jumped out to an early lead in the first ten minutes. However, the Wildcats closed the gap and only trailed by ten points at intermission. Forward Jimmy King kept Davidson in the game in the first half by sinking several thirty-five footers.

However, a tremendous individual performance in the third quarter by Center Mel Thompson put the game out of the reach of the Wildcats. Mel netted seventeen points in that quarter to come through with the most outstanding performance witnessed in the Coliseum so far this year.

In the first game, the State yearlings easily downed the Davidson J. Y. 76-52. Center Ron Shavlie with twelve points and guards Molseed and Bell with twelve and eighteen markers paced the freshmen to an easy win.

Rolloe Held

By RICHARD H. EGGLESTON

On one Saturday each fall descendants of Paul Bunyan, or his Rebel cousin Tony Beaver, take over Hill Forest to carry on the traditions of those fabled lumbermen.

Students, alumni, and faculty of the School of Forestry at State College journey to the forest for their annual Rolloe, a festivities now in its nineteenth year. Here the students foresters compete to see which class is most proficient in the arts of a woodsman.

About 10 a.m. the contests begin. Individuals from each class compete in such contests as: rifle shooting, archery, bat casting, and horseback. All of which require a steady hand and clear vision. Distance and diameter estimation contests are held to determine those whose judgment of space is most accurate. Chinning, rock throwing, and foot races give the boys a chance to show their muscles. Tobacco spitting for accuracy and distance high lights the individual competition. Team work is required of the classes in contests such as fire-building, cross-cut sawing for speed, tree felling, tug-of-war, and volleyball.
