The State College World University Service-United Fund Drive closed last Friday night with a total of $868.20 collected from the student body. Both Jim Nolan, president of the Student Government and the co-chairmen of the drive, Ed Rose and Fred Rawicz, expressed disappointment over the results of the drive and the seeming lack of interest in the State College community for the welfare of students throughout the and suffering for its freedom! In dormitories, Forth, Turlington, and Welch were the leading contributors on a percentage basis. The per cent figures were based on the number of students giving a one dollar contribution—the goal for the drive. On this basis, Phi Epsilon Pi, Sigma Alpha Mu, and Sigma Phi Epsilon led the fraternities with contributions of well over 100%.

The following is a list of organizations and their contributions as of 6 p.m. Tuesday, released by the chairmen of the drive:

Photography Contest
A portrait photography contest, sponsored by the CU Photography Committee, will be held tomorrow at 7 p.m. at the College Union. Instructions will be given by John Mattox, a professional portrait photographer. Girls from Meredith, Peace, Mary's and Rex Hospital will serve as models for student photographers. Following the contest refreshments will be served and dancing in the Snack Bar.

Hill Announces Diploma Plans

Roger Hill, President of the Senior Class, announced Tuesday that members of the Senior Class representing each school on the campus had met with a representative of the Elliott Company of Greensboro concerning plans for a new diploma. Hill approximated the size of the new diploma at 11 by 14 inches, and said the cost would be only about 50 cents more than the present contested scroll. He said Old English type would be used. Further action will be postponed until after the Christmas holidays, when the proposal will be presented to the faculty senate and the Administrative Council for approval.

Stu. Guilty Says Judicial Board

On December 6 the Judicial Board found a student guilty of stealing a mattress from a college dormitory room. The student was placed on probation for the remainder of the school year and a letter of explanation was sent to his parents.

Housing . . . Key To Growth

Roy Lathrop
N. C. State College is growing—and growing fast. It grows despite tremendous obstacles; foremost among these obstacles is student housing, but there are many more needs that State must meet before it can grow successfully. This week and next, this article will point out and comment upon some significant facts which show that State College realizes its needs and just what is planned to meet them.
For now, it will be student housing that primarily interests most of us. Statistics are usually boring, but these will not be: 41% of State's enrollment

Junior-Senior Engages Tomorrow's Band for Dance

There was a meeting of the Junior-Senior Class in Puller Hall approximately 250 students in attendance. Class president, [Name], announced that the Junior-Senior Band for next May 4 would be Buddy Morrow—the first big-name band to play at this dance in years.
Also discussed was the purchasing of school rings. L. G. Balfour was selected as the jeweler from which the rings would be purchased. The base price for the rings will be $29.00. Greek letters will cost extra. First and last names and middle initial will be engraved free. A representative will be on the campus after Christmas to measure sizes and to take orders.

Students begin to clean up the debris left by the pictured fallen Christmas tree in the College Union. The tree caught fire and burned in an unusual, but quickly controlled, fire, December 6.

Seasonal Notes

We would like to wish each and every member of the State community a cordial Merry Christmas.

But we'd like to add three notes to your thoughts before you "bug out" tomorrow or Saturday.

Did you know that the State United Fund-WUS drive had, by sometime Monday, received a total of only 718 dollars? That isn't exactly what we'd call a buck apiece. Try it on your slide rule! We would like to remind you about the old Christmas spirit of giving and urge you to give the fund a last minute kick before you go. There will be people at the CU and the Y all day tomorrow who will gladly accept your contributions. We think the response so far stinks! !

Number two is . . . be careful. Read the back page for further comments. In fact . . . just look at the back page . . . that should do it!

As for number three. We get a little dismayed every year at the modern commercial tone of Christmas. Try to go to church Christmas Day . . . and remember whose birthday we're celebrating. To the majority of us He should mean more than any other person or thing at Christmas. Remember Him in your hurrying and scurrying. We intend to.

The Alma Mater

Three weeks ago there appeared in The Technician an Editorial which, in effect, said that our present Alma Mater was not being sung and that some kind of change was needed.

In order that a change might be made, we suggested a contest. We asked students to write a new Alma Mater and send it in. The English Department helped publicize the contest. Little response followed.

Since then, however, one very good suggestion has been made. It is that we use only twelve lines of the original thirty-two line Alma Mater, call it the "Abridged Version," and let this version be the one which we sing at football games and other events.

Work has proceeded and so next year the freshmen will receive copies, not of the old Alma Mater, but of the new "Abridged Version." We hope that this change will evoke a much more spirited response from the entire student body next Fall.

We like the changed version. We think it will please a large majority of the students and that it will give us an Alma Mater which can be more easily remembered and, we hope, sung.

Here 'tis! ! What do you think?

Where the bravest hearts of men are found,

That are loyal through and through,

There stands ever cherished N. C. State,

Firmly, strong and true.

Chorus:

Then lift your voices! Loudly sing

Our Alma Mater's praise!

Over all the earth her song shall ring,

Whose notes we proudly raise.

Her glories we shall sound afar

From hill to oceanside;

Our hearts ever hold you N. C. State,

In the folds of their love and pride.

Ed. Note: You might cut this out and hang on to it.

ROY LATHROP

Harry High School

While we are always glad to have the high school students visit State, it does seem that they would act more like prospective college students rather than immature adolescents. Few of us claim the distinction of being wholly mature . . . we aren't; but not many of you have seen State students throwing paper airplanes and peanuts at the basketball games in the Coliseum. The thing that really makes it bad is that those high school visitors are given seats which are normally occupied by State students . . . the adults in the balconies don't know whether those who are throwing stuff are college boys or high school visitors; half the time you can guess who gets the blame and the corresponding shakes of the adult head in disapproval. The very fact that those visitors take seats which we have already paid for might be just cause for student's gripes . . . those visitors are sitting in our seats and therefore are our guests rather than the college's. Seems like those in charge of visiting high school students could well remind them that growing up a little—at least while they are here at State—would not be too much to ask for the privilege of using facilities that State students are paying for.

X-Rays . . . How Safe?

Weekend before last, I tuned in my radio and heard a nationally known news commentator making some very disturbing statements about X-Rays and their use. The over-all impression from his comments was this: Americans are in more danger from the over-use of X-Rays than they will ever be from the radiation fall-out of nuclear weapons testing. But before we present any facts, it would be best to be absolutely sure of our sources of information . . . if this commentator wasn't being an alarmist, and that's doubtful, this is something all of us should know more about. Unfortunately, I didn't get the commentator's name . . . you've all heard his voice many times and so have I, but I'm not sure who he is. If anybody else heard that broadcast on Sunday night, December 2, please write me, in care of the Technician, and tell me his name . . . as soon as we can get more information we'll pass it on to you.

Raleigh and State College

A lot of people at State have complained that the city of Raleigh just naturally dislike State students and is trying to drain them of every penny they own. Let's look at both sides.

This might be the complaint of a Raleigh citizen: the first, State College is on land that is exempt from city taxes because it is State owned—at the same time State College receives fire and police protection from the city which means that Raleigh citizens are paying higher taxes to finance this protection; secondly, State students—with the high percentage of cars—further complicate the traffic situation and parking problems and at times create hazardous driving conditions; and thirdly, there seems to be the general feeling of uneasiness which exists when 5,500 young men (or boys, as the case may be) are gathered in one place . . . mothers with sons may visualize their little ones being corrupted by the hard and fast elements here at State, and fathers with daughters dread the prospect of their sweet young things dating members of the Wicked Wolfpack. Maybe some of these complaints are well-founded. However, we hope Raleigh citizens have not and will not overlook the following facts: first, State College has brought a lot of publicity and recognition to Raleigh; secondly, most students do not work in Raleigh, and therefore all the money we spend comes from other sources outside the city . . . the sources of income derived from 5,500 persons going to college is quite significant to a lot of business here in Raleigh—service stations, restaurants, movie clothing stores, etc.; and thirdly, the citizens of Raleigh have a fine school close enough that they can send their children to college at a much smaller cost than most of us are paying.

There are good points and both points to both sides—being somewhat prejudiced, we say that the existence of State College in Raleigh is much more beneficial to the city than it is detrimental. And as long as we behave ourselves, all we ask that Raleigh not take too much advantage of a good thing.

Financial Aid Tops Million

State College reported that its financial aid program for students this academic year amounts to a total of $1,059,848.80.

Dr. Ralph E. Fadum, chairman of the Scholarship and Student Aid Committee, and Dr. W. B. Rogers, the college's student financial aid officer, said the total figure includes scholarships, grants-in-aid, loans, athletic awards, fellowships, and self-help employment.

Approximately one-fourth of State College's 5,573 students have sought and obtained part-time work on the campus and the City of Raleigh and are earning an estimated $418,000 about $300 for each of the approximately 1400 students who are employed.

Other items in the student aid total are $41,250 in grants-in-aid to 247 students, $18,755 in loans to 73 students, $117,980 in scholarships to 271 students, and $116,614 in athletic awards to 130 students, $39,450 in fellowships and assistantships to 244 graduate students.

The total number of students receiving financial aid in these categories stands at 965.

Among those awarded scholarships are 70 top-ranking students from throughout the State who are sharing in North Carolina State College's unique "Talent for Service" scholarship program which alone amounts to $33,400 annually or a total of $131,000 for four years. The awards average $500 each annually or $2,000 for four years.

The "Talent for Service" awards, sponsored by the college's Development Council headed by C. A. Dillon of Raleigh, are designed to recognize the State's most talented high school graduates who need financial help to attend college.

The Development Council launched the scholarship program four years ago when it learned that less than one third of the State's highest ranking high school seniors attend college at a time when there are six to 10 jobs open to each State College graduate.

Declaring that it was "reaching to the grass roots for worthy talent," the council, composed of business leaders, alumni of the college, and administrative officials of the institution, said it decided to provide the "Talent for Service" scholarships through its "concern for the conservation and development of the State's human resources as well as the natural and industrial resources."

Applications from about 600 students were considered for the awards last spring. From this group, 28 freshmen were chosen to receive $12,352 for their first year of study and a total of $45,658 for four years of academic work.

"Talent for Service" committees in each of the State's 100 counties accept and screen the recommended applicants from each high school and forward the top applicants from their counties to the college for final processing.

Dr. Rogers said the "Talent for Service" scholarships are awarded on the basis of "scholastic promise, leadership potential, financial need, and interest in a field of study offered at State College."

With The Greeks

(Editor's note: This is the first of a bi-weekly article that will appear in the Technician. "With The Greeks" will be centered around the activities of the 17 social fraternities on the State Campus.)

Fraternity activities during the past two weeks have been centered around the forthcoming holidays.

Alpha Gamma Rho held a dinner and dance at Raleigh's Scandia Village Saturday night for their members and guests.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity have held a series of informal teas each Thursday afternoon at the chapter house. Girls from the different schools in Raleigh have been their guests.

The Mohawk Club was the scene of Sigma Nu's Christmas party last Saturday night with Norman's Combo providing the music. The State chapter had as their guests the Sigma Nu Chapter at Duke.

Kappa Alpha, Lambda Chi Alpha, Sigma Chi, and Sigma Pi all had informal parties at their respective houses over the weekend.

Pi Kappa Alpha, Phi Kappa Tau, and Phi Kappa Pi got in the holiday spirit early with special events during the first week-end in December.

Last night the 17 chapters entertained over 300 orphans from the Raleigh area with a Christmas Party. The annual event is sponsored by the Inter-fraternity Conference.

EDIBLE SPORT SHIRTS?

Among the sort of sport shirts that Van Heusen refuses to make are the following:

Sport shirts that light up in the dark: These are the kind that flash messages, like "Hey, baby, you're a honey," or "Pass the ashtray, please." Useful for parties, faculty teas and cotillion balls. But they tend to commercialize the graceful art of conversation.

Sport shirts with road maps on them: Too dangerous. Say you're driving from campus to the big city. You don't know whether to turn left or right at the turnpike, so you look down at your shirt to check. Crash!

Edible sport shirts: Too misleading. You're sitting under a shady tree with your favorite co-ed. She rests her head gently

Deflated Wolfpack Regroups for George Wash. Saturday; Eastern Kentucky Monday in Coliseum

North Carolina State returns home Saturday night to take on the Colonials of George Washington in an 8:15 affair which will be preceded by the Raleigh High School-Greensboro High game at 6 o'clock.

The Pack suffered its first loss of the season Tuesday night against Clemson and then moved to Charlotte for a conference clash with South Carolina.

Of all the jinxes in sports history, the State-George Washington series must rank close to the top. Against the always-powerful Colonials, the Wolfpack has won 16 straight in the past ten years holding GW winless.

State and George Washington last met in 1955 with the Pack winning 68-59. Bill Telasky is the top offensive threat for the Colonials.

Eastern Kentucky

The Wolfpack takes Sunday off and then returns to the hardwoods Monday evening against always rough Eastern Kentucky in the Coliseum. Over the past ten years the Pack has won 6 while not losing any to the Kentucky lads.

State College cage squad will wind up its pre-Dixie Classic schedule with a trip northward

JOHN RICHTER ... 6-8 ... 225 ... 19 ... Sophomore ... Philadelphia, Pa. John was the second leading scorer on last year's freshman team with an average of 18.2 points per game. He is especially agile for his size and moves like a small man. John's scoring and rebounding ability are expected to make him one of the best in a long line of great centers at State. He will be fighting for a starting berth as a rookie and may be used with Seitz as a double post combination. He is a straight "A" student in Nuclear Engineering and plans to enter that field after graduation. He attended Frankford High School and earned letters in basketball, football and track. His hobby is fishing. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Richter of 6138 Belden St., Philadelphia. He scores on hooks, layups and tap-ins.

Clemson's Tigers battled to an overtime 96-94 victory over previously unbeaten North Carolina State.

It was the first time in 10 years that a Clemson squad had won a basketball game from Coach Case.

State blew a 4-point 86-82 lead in the final minute of the regulation game to throw the thriller into an overtime. The score was 86-86 at the end of the regulation game.

Vince Yockel's clutch shooting in the final minutes gave Clemson the win. He scored 31 points. John Maglio tallied 28 and Bob Seitz 22 to lead the Wolf-pack.

State played South Carolina last night in Charlotte.

Penn State

State College edged past Penn State 66-60 last Saturday to wrap up its third straight win of the young season. However, the Pack lost the services of forward Nick Pond who suffered a broken wrist in the first half.

It is not known how long he will be out.

Seitz's 25 points was tops for both teams.

Student bridge tournaments scheduled to get underway this week, have been postponed until after the holidays.

This was done in order to give students more time to sign up and participate. Students can sign up at the College Union games desk between Jan. 7-12. Play will begin the following week.

Fraternities Entertain Orphans

North Carolina State's 17 social fraternities entertained over 300 orphans and underprivileged children of Raleigh and Wake County at a series of Christmas parties last night in the respective chapter houses.

Among the children who were guests of the fraternities were groups from the Catholic and Methodist Orphanages and others from underprivileged homes in the Raleigh area.

An elaborate evening was enjoyed by all with everything from cowboy movies and cartoons to games and a personal visit from Santa Claus. The usual Christmas refreshments were served.

Ol' Santa dropped in at each fraternity and presented the children with a gift.

Hudson-Belk Company of Raleigh cooperated greatly in securing the gifts and wrapping them for Santa's visit.

The Christmas project, which is an annual affair, is under the sponsorship of the Interfraternity Council at State. Bert Brown served as project chairman for the event.

This is one of the many community projects the fraternity men of State College take part in each year.

State Opens 8th Dixie Classic Against Iowa Carolina-Wake Forest Favorites To Cop Crown

THE DIXIE CLASSIC

The Dixie Classic, one of the nation's outstanding holiday basketball tournaments, will be held Dec. 27, 28 and 29 in Reynolds Coliseum on the State College Campus.

The brainchild of State coach Everett Case, the Dixie Classic was started in 1949 and has mushroomed into a spectacular attraction which drew 68,000 fans for the three days last year.

North Carolina's "Big Four" colleges—State, Wake Forest, Duke and North Carolina—serve as host teams each year. Leading teams from throughout the nation make up the opposition.

In the past, competing teams have been West Virginia, Rhode Island State, Penn State, Georgia Tech, Tulane, Navy, Colgate, Southern California, Cornell, Columbia, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Holy Cross, Brigham Young, Seton Hall, Oregon State, Minnesota, Wyoming and Villanova.

This year the participating teams are Iowa, the Big Ten champ; Utah, champion of the Skyline conference; West Virginia, the Southern Conference winner; and DePaul, a strong independent team.

First round pairings, which are drawn from a hat by the Big Four coaches, pit DePaul vs. Wake Forest, State vs. Iowa, Duke vs. West Virginia and North Carolina vs. Utah.

This year will be the eighth birthday of the Dixie Classic. State's Wolfpack has won six out of seven previous tournaments. Duke won the title in 1953.

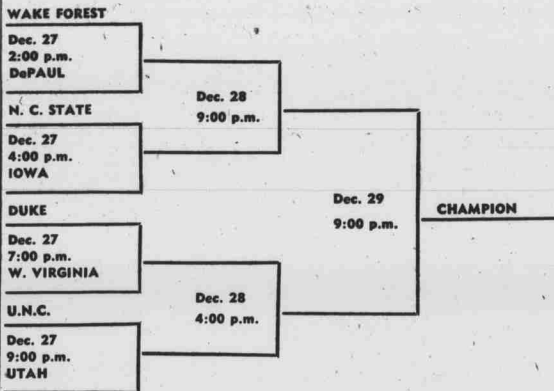

Game officials will be Tommy Bell of Lexington, Ky.; Al Kluttz of Salisbury, N. C.; Lou Eisenstein of New York, N. Y.; Phil Fox of Washington, D. C.; and Don Elser of Chicago, Ill.

Season tickets for all 12 games are $14, $10, and $7. Tickets for individual games, which go on sale the day the tournament begins, are $2.50 and $1.50 each.

HOUSING

is now living off campus, or 2373 out of 5543; for the 3170 living on campus, there are only 1136 dormitory rooms and 244 outdated G.I. apartments available; almost two thirds of those living in dormitories are in three-man rooms; there are 707 more students this year than last fall, and the enrollment has increased by nearly 1600 in the last four years; by 1960, the expected enrollment is placed between 6700 and 7000!

Well, what's going to be done about it? In the planning is a new 400-room dormitory to be placed on Verville Hill near the College Print Shop; this dormitory could have been filled with its capacity of 800 a year ago and still left many in three-man rooms. But funds are not yet available to build more than one dormitory. Also, the college is trying very hard to get funds for building a married-student housing center a half mile west of Verville and for constructing the long-planned fraternity court on Western Boulevard in the southeast corner of the campus.

But money has been and will always be the stumbling block in the path of expansion at State. When funds are available, naturally student housing will be given first consideration. In last month's Statelog, this thought-provoking statement was made: "The key to the future growth of State College is adequate student housing." In the same paper, N. B. Watts was quoted as saying, "Student housing must be more than a place to sleep. It should be a place to live, to study, to grow as a student and a person—with enough room to do it. An overcrowded environment is detrimental to the student's total development—to his social, recreational, and study habits." Every student who has been cramped in a three-man room or who has spent days looking for a room off campus will appreciate these words of real understanding from Mr. Watts.

But housing is not the only problem at State by any means—it is the most pressing. In the next issue it will be shown how much can be expected in other fields of expansion in the future ... it looks promising.

History Professor Recalls Pearl Harbor Experience

Reflecting on his experiences at Pearl Harbor 15 years ago last Friday, Dr. Philip M. Rice, associate professor of history and political science at North Carolina State College, said the Japanese attack on Hawaii "developed in each concerned an admiration and a respect for the innate dignity of his fellow man."

Commenting on the reaction of the officers and crew on duty at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, Dr. Rice, a commander in the U. S. Naval Reserve-Ready Reserve, said "the most significant thing has, I believe, been the lasting spirit of comradeship that developed during that crisis . . ."

Reviewing the events of "the Day of Infamy," Dr. Rice stated:

"On the morning of December 7, 1941, I was an Ensign aboard the U.S.S. Preble, a high-speed destroyer mine-layer. In common with others of our division we were tied up in the Navy Yard at Pearl Harbor, undergoing an extensive overhaul. When the attack came, our Junior Officer-of-the-Deck strolled nonchalantly down to my cabin and announced in a calm and almost disinterested voice that we were being 'attacked by Japanese bombers.' The full significance of the event had not yet registered with him or with other members of the crew.

"As senior officer on board it was my duty to make preparations for defending the ship until the Captain returned. Yet there was little that could be done. Our guns had been removed from the overhaul and we were in no condition for sea. We did break open a boxcar on a siding, extract some 50 calibre machine guns, distribute gas masks, and ready a landing force. Later we sent part of our crew to the aid of the battleship Pennsylvania and others to those destroyers that could leave the harbor. For the rest—we were fortunate; bombs and shrapnel came close, but there were no direct hits. In fact we often thought that we were more endangered by the fire of the cruisers behind us than by the missiles falling from the heavens.

"Perhaps what one remembers best about such an event are fleeting glimpses—some humorous, some tragic, some ironic. The night before my roommate had been enjoying Sinclair Lewis' 'It Can't Happen Here'; by nine o'clock Sunday morning it was obvious that it had happened.

"During the heat of the attack a Filipino steward had dashed across the pier and taken refuge under a truck. Minutes later the truck drove off, but it was some time before the mess boy realized he was exposed. The alarm on his face, and the motion of his legs

(Continued from column 2) which would have won him a record for the hundred yard dash, broke some of the tension and brought a laugh from the crew.

"The hours slipped by rapidly and one's thoughts were often disconnected with action or with reality. One of my classmates and I had a double date for the afternoon. I wondered if this would be over by then and how we might communicate with each other. It was idle speculation; the classmate went down with 1100 others on board the ship.

PEARL HARBOR

Arizona. "The morning had been warm and sunny, but the sky was soon overcast with the haze of gunsmoke. I had grabbed the first piece of clothing available when I heard of the attack and wore it the remainder of the day. Not until evening did I realize that I was clothed in a winter sweater that had no place in Hawaiian waters. Even my own injury had been forgotten in the tenseness and excitement.

"Sometimes during the day a rainbow arched over the hills in back of Pearl City. One had no concept of time. We tried to count the planes that were being shot down: the number was pitifully small. And where were our own? In vain did the crew scan the sky for one irridinary flight.

"In spite of the havoc and the confusion, the calm among personnel was remarkable. This was a dream, a complete negation of reality; yet officers and crew alike performed their necessary tasks almost without thought.

THE TECHNICIAN

December 13, 1956

"Those are the things that one remembers—perhaps most of them inconsequential. From the personal standpoint the real significance of December 7th lay not in the events of the day but in the effect that the experience had on the individuals on board the ship. The gulfs that separated individuals were forgotten; a new bond was forged; a bond that lasted throughout the war and has remained intact to the present. Reflecting on an event that occurred fifteen years ago, the most significant thing has, I believe, been the lasting spirit of comradeship that developed during that crisis. The 7th of December created a peculiar loyalty to ship and to the Navy, but it did more than that; it dropped the masks from the faces of individuals and brought to the fore their best and most lasting qualities.

What's doing . . . at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft

THE HOUSE THAT JET ENGINES BUILT

Engineers and scientists at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft developed the piston engines that wrote aviation history for three decades. Then came the jet age, and again it was the P & W A team that came up with the mighty J-57, most powerful production aircraft engine in the world today. Behind such accomplishments, of course, stand many development tools...tools like the house that jet engines built: the Andrew Willgoos Laboratory.

Located on the eastern bank of the Connecticut River in East Hartford, this windowless, thick concrete-walled laboratory has been growing almost continuously since its initial "completion" in 1950. As more powerful, far more advanced turbojet engines are conceived, the means for testing them in development stages must itself undergo carefully calculated alteration. Hence, authorship of today's specifications for Willgoos Laboratory properly belongs to the experimental engines it is testing today. Similarly, tomorrow's proportions, capacities and equipment will depend upon the requirements of tomorrow's power plants.

Behind the ponderous walls of this multi-million-dollar structure lies the wherewithal to simulate many of the rigorous flight conditions to be encountered by military and commercial aircraft. The range of these conditions must vary from ambient pressures and temperatures in a static condition at sea level all the way to the pressures, temperatures and high speeds involved in high-altitude flight.

This, then, is the house that jet engines built; at the same time, it is the house that tomorrow's engines will change and re-build.

YOUR CHRISTMAS?

Christmas is a holiday for us. But it is not a holiday for the hangman of the highways . . . death. It is not a holiday for carelessness . . . just having a good time protects no one from his own stupidity . . . just because somebody loves you at Christmas, (or for that matter, anytime) you're not guaranteed safe passage along the state's highways.

Christmas is in fact the most grisly time of year on the state's and the nation's highways. Instead of a season of joy, for many it is a season of intense sorrow, marred by the loss of a friend or loved one from the traditional Christmas circle.

We have an unusual problem here at State. Many of us face trips of several hundred miles tomorrow and Saturday. Instead of serious concentration on the job at hand, many of us will be "delirious with joy" at being out of school. And the delirium of joy, with the inclination to speed and show off, is only a whit less dangerous than the delirium of alcohol . . . the highway's greatest killer, next to speed.

Read the statistics in the column below. They present an awesome picture of death and destruction on our highways. Will you be in the statistics when next year's editors write their articles and editorials?

WAIT A MINUTE BIG BOY—
YOU'RE IN NO SHAPE . . . . .
FOR ANYTHING!

There were 783 accidents during the official scoring period last year . . . from Dec. 23 at 6 P.M. until Dec. 26 at 12 Midnight. 472 occurred in rural districts . . . 311 in urban. That's an average of almost ten every hour. 216 people were killed . . . three per hour.

Almost all occurred under ideal conditions . . . when people pay the least attention to their driving. (You?) 700 happened on hard surfaced roads, 736 occurred where there was no road defect, 605 on straight roads, 674 of the 783 in clear weather, and 459 times a collision with another vehicle was involved. Of the total number of vehicles involved, 1206 (almost 90%) were (and we do mean were) passenger cars.

Here's something else interesting . . . 177 of the drivers at fault were exceeding the safe speed limit, 102 failed to yield right-of-way and 92 were drunk . . . how that happened we'll never know. The drunks managing to finish third. Lot of numbers . . . any of 'em belong to you?

As much as all of us gripe about the State Patrol in North Carolina, there can be no denying that they're sharp. The fear of them that many people exhibit is testimony to their prowess.

But theirs is a difficult job. Their force numbers slightly over 580. Many of these men are tied to administrative and desk jobs . . . leaving fewer to patrol the state highways . . . to "protect the public safety" as the enabling statute reads.

They are men of experience. Years of experience with death and destruction have lead them to a macabre acquaintance with death and horror. They are cursed, laughed at and taunted . . . yet they still go on trying to protect those who would evade them.

Legislators remove their teeth. They forbid them unmarked cars, try to rob them of their greatest weapon, the whammy, and hamper them at every turn.

But there is hope. This year the Patrol and the Department of Motor Vehicles will ask for a program embodying unmarked patrol cars, an increase in force, statewide high school driver education and several other important points.

We're pulling for them. Anybody in his right mind will be too. Statistics are made of people. Aren't you a person?

This is a curving mountain road near Asheville. The car met a truck . . . head on. It wasn't their fault at all . . . but seven of them died. A family of six . . . that makes four innocent kids . . . not counting the mother and father . . . wiped out completely. Will you be a killer this Christmas?

See the expression on that guy's face in the background? Sort of wry smile. Revulsion, wonder . . . something . . . perhaps entertainment at the folly of others. This was a case of drinking and driving. Further proof of the old adage that liquor and gasoline don't mix!

People might say this is in bad taste. We certainly agree. Death is a naughty, naughty thing. One should never be dead. It is certainly in bad taste . . . not the thing that is done in the best circles. Say, do you think Mom would like to have you come home in this shape this weekend?

Speeding around a turn . . . off the side . . . into the foreground of an official State Highway Patrol photograph. Pretty slick work. Wouldn't you be proud as punch? People always think they're in command of that one ton 70 mph missile. But you can't always be sure. The people that set the 55 mph limit knew what they were doing. Do you?
