On 'Man and the Moral Problem'

Bunche Speaks to Apollos

Dr. Ralph J. Bunche will be the speaker for the last meeting of the Apollo Club this spring. The club will meet at 5:45 p.m. Thursday in the Cafeteria for supper and to hear Dr. Bunche who should prove to be the outstanding speaker for this series of meetings, "Man and the Moral Problem."

Dr. Bunche was educated at the University of California and Howard University, receiving both his Masters and Ph.D. at Howard. Upon completion of his studies, he was chairman of the Department of Political Science at Howard for thirteen years.

In recognition of his able leadership as acting United Nations Mediator on Palestine, he received the Nobel Prize for Peace in 1950. In 1954, he became Undersecretary of the United Nations, and has since served in this capacity.

Dr. Bunche has distinguished himself as a research analyst on Africa and the Far East. He has published three books and contributed numerous articles to scholarly journals.

The Apollo Club was organized last fall as a part of the program sponsored by the State College YMCA. Membership is limited so that each speaker may reach the members more effectively.

The speakers meet with a faculty group on Friday mornings, with a fraternity, and with the YMCA Cabinet so that a maximum number of students and faculty may be reached.

A similar program is being planned for next year. The Fall Series, entitled "Dynamics of Twentieth Century Thought," will be held October 1, 8, 15, and 22.

Stanford Prof Lectures

John E. Arnold, industrial consultant and professor of mechanical engineering at Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif., will deliver a public lecture in the auditorium of the Riddick Engineering Laboratories at State College today at 8 p.m.

His topic will be "Generalist vs. Specialist." The program will be open to the public without charge.

In his talk, Professor Arnold will review what he calls "the imaginative development of our industrial potential."

He is the founder of the famed Creative Engineering Laboratory at MIT and is now continuing his research and consulting activities in engineering and management at Stanford.

Professor Arnold will be introduced at the State College meeting by Prof. Austin R. Baer, head of the Department of Product Design in the School of Design, sponsor of the lecture.

Lathrop Selected For Press Parley

Roy Lathrop of Asheville, editor of The Technician, student newspaper at State College, is in New York attending a student editors' conference at the Overseas Press Club.

A senior at N. C. State, Lathrop was selected as a scholarship participant in the confer-Entitled "The Expanding Role of Communication in a Contrasting World," the conference opened Friday, March 13, and continued through Sunday. Sessions were held at the Overseas Press Club Headquarters, New York City.

Approximately 75 student editors attended the three-day meeting.

The students heard talks of a noted group of news reporters, columnists, and broadcasters, including Bob Considine, Henry Cassidy, Walter Kronkite, Pauline Frederick, Inez Robb, and Bill Lawrence.

Keynote speaker was Dr. Edward Barrett, dean of Columbia University's School of Journalism.

Chairman of the planning committee was Ruth Geri Hagy, moderator of the ABC-TV network show, "College News Conference."

The conference was designed to give the student editors a broader understanding of overseas press coverage and a better knowledge of domestic reporting of foreign news both on the undergraduate and professional levels.

Lathrop, a senior at State College, was chosen for conference participation from among all college editors in the eastern section of the United States.

United Fund Head Issues Statement

Fred Houtz, chairman of the Student United Fund Drive, released the following statement yesterday to The Technician:

"We are approaching the final days of the annual Student United Fund Drive. All students are urged to contribute to make this year's drive a success.

"The original plan to report the progress of the drive in this issue of The Technician was postponed until the Thursday edition because all committee representatives making the solicitations have not reported. Also, fraternities will not be solicited until their regular meetings tonight.

"A sampling of the reports received, however, indicate only one fourth of the total goal has been raised.

"Committee representatives soliciting in the dormitories are reminded to complete their drive and turn their contributions in to the YMCA by 5:00 p.m. Wednesday. Fraternity representatives should turn in their contributions to the Student Affairs Office by 5:00 p.m. Wednesday, March 18, also."

ROTC Prepares For Inspection

Activities of the Army ROTC Brigade are beginning to move into full swing as spring and the last half of the semester approaches. Platoon competition has begun among the Battle Groups, and after Easter the best platoon in the Brigade will be selected.

The annual Federal Inspection is scheduled to be conducted by an inspection team from Headquarters, Third U. S. Army on 9-10 April. A parade will be held on the Thursday for the inspectors.

Company competition will fill the gap from the inspection until the Military Ball Weekend. On the Saturday morning, May 9, a two-hour parade will consist of combining the sponsors, awards day, and graduation parades into a colorful presentation by the Brigade.

The ROTC units will participate in the Link Day for Golden Chain. The last part of May will consist of MS III's in charge of the Companies, and also stress for the first time that of Mounting Interior Guard.

Engineers Select Top Senior: Redwine

Richard Redwine, the president of the Engineers' Council, was named "Outstanding Senior in Engineering" Saturday night at the St. Patrick's Dance.

Dr. J. Harold Lampe, dean of the School of Engineering, announced Redwine's selection and

Nominations Books Open For Candidates

The nominations books for the campus elections will be open until Friday, March 20, in Room 206, Holladay Hall. The hours which the nominations books will be open are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Any candidate who plans to run for an office must sign the nominations book.

Positions to be filled in the Judicial Department are Honor Code Board: Seniors (2), Juniors (3), Sophomore (2). Men's Campus Code Board: Senior (2), Junior (3), Sophomore (1). Changes in the College Board of Directors are: two Sophomores elected for one year, two Juniors elected for two years, and two rising Seniors elected for one year.

President Jim Hunt of the Student Government makes a statement concerning student elections: "I wish to call to the attention of the student body that during this week nomination books will be open for the campus elections this spring.

"Of special importance are several positions which often are the object of little competition, and thus, have possibly on occasion been filled by persons not truly representative of the student body.

"The first thing I wish to mention are the positions on the College Union Board of Directors elected from the three upper classes at large. By virtue of a recent College Union constitutional change, there are two positions on the Board of Directors to be filled from each of the rising Sophomore, Junior, and Senior classes. The Sophomore and Senior representatives elected will serve for one year. The Juniors will be elected for a two-year term.

"This past year two of the three positions then open to the classes at large were filled by students who were also closely connected with the College Union (one a committee chairman this year, the other a chairman last year).

"I hope the coming year will see a change in this situation. "Although any student is eligible to run for these offices, they should be filled by students who represent their entire class—not just College Union Committees.

"I strongly urge that interested students who are not internally connected with the C.U. sign up and campaign vigorously for these positions. The C.U. committees are represented by four members on the Board of Directors already. Their members should not also be elected to the positions allocated to the student body at large.

"Let me also add my word to that of Elections Committee Chairman Clay Price, in encouraging qualified students to run for the Honor Code and Campus Code Boards. These positions are of extreme importance in our Judicial System and should be filled by top-notch students—interested in making our Honor System fair and effective.

"I think that in no other positions on this campus is it as necessary to have representatives in whom we trust and believe. I urge each student qualified to offer his services!"

Military Ball Date Changed To May 9

The Military Ball date has been changed from March 21 to May 9, because of complications in securing the coliseum.

The Military Ball Association had reserved the coliseum; however, due to a contract of 60 days notice, the coliseum was given to the performance of a circus on Friday and Saturday, March 20 and 21.

Plans have been switched to having the dance on May 9 with the "Lamplighters" furnishing the music in the coliseum. Also plans call for a two-hour parade on Saturday morning combining the sponsor, graduation, and awards parades.

Information on uniforms and other details on the dance will be announced later. If you have not secured your ticket you may do so by contacting Major Drum in Room 142 of the coliseum. The price of tickets is $4.50 apiece.

Nine Honorary Colonels will be selected from pictures submitted by all Army and Air Force ROTC students. From all the pictures submitted a Ball Queen Colonel will be selected. From all the Army pictures, the Brigade Queen Colonel will be selected, and this procedure will continue for the Battle Groups, and the Air Force Wing and Groups.

Pictures will be submitted to the Army and Air Force Cadet Headquarters by April 24, with each sponsor having a portrait and full-length picture. Make sure your name and organization are attached to the pictures, and that the pictures are placed in an envelope.

YDC To Hold Elections

It's that time of year again when "Democrats fight it out" for election to Y.D.C. offices.

The elections for Y.D.C. offices will be held Wednesday, March 18, at 8:00 p.m. in the College Union.

So far the following members have officially announced their candidacy: President-Phil Carlton and Sterling Mason, Vice-president-Donald Blizard, Recording Secretary-Charles Russell.

The floor will be open for nominations and members are urged to consider running for office. All members are especially urged to attend this meeting.

Sign Up . . . Serve

On the front page of this issue of The Technician there is an article concerning the time that is remaining before the nominations books for the general spring elections will be closed. Thus far, the students of State College have indicated very little interest in these elections by not signing up to run for the various offices on campus.

Actually, there is no power in the world that can make anyone run for any of these offices, but, the point is this: a student is hurting himself by not signing up. Aside from the fact that a student's prestige is increased in the eyes of his fellow students, he gains certain intangible benefits when serving in a responsible position.

First of all, he is encouraged by the students who are serving with him to voice his views on various campus problems. Some may say that they don't want to do this because they just don't care, but this is not so. Whether it's in a bull session at the dorm or fraternity house or over the dinner table with a few close friends, the problems that confront State College are bound to arise, and everyone there will say what he thinks on the matter.

As a part of this same fact, whenever students do get together in these discussions, some good will come out of it. Maybe you, at first, have no ideas on the subject at hand, but, by listening to the thoughts expressed by other students, you will soon develop thoughts of your own on the subject. This happens almost invariably.

Secondly, much can be gained by working with other students. By this, we mean that a certain knowledge of human nature can be discovered and used later. Many are the nights that we sit poring over the books, trying to salvage something out of the jumble of formulas and equations. But this will not always be the case. Sooner or later, we will leave State College and try our hand in the outside world. Then, this knowledge of human nature that is yours to have will come in handy.

But, perhaps you think that you don't have a chance. That is possible . . . everybody cannot win. But, if things remain as they are right now, not only will everybody win, but all the offices will not even be filled! This would be a poor situation in a college which supposedly prides itself on the freedom that the students have to govern themselves.

In the years past, there have been enough students signed up for the various offices, but there have been no extras in many cases. Thus, when an office holder has been forced to drop out of school, there has been no one to replace him who indicated a desire for the office in the first place.

So, there is no reason for you not to sign up just because there are others signed up for the same office. Remember, the "death rate" is high at State College, and Death has no preference. With disaster, you may soon be President! Sign up!

—JM

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

For some time I have been reading, with interest, letters in this column stating viewpoints of various students on the question of liberal arts courses in the technical curriculum. I was most amused by the letter from Mrs. A. D. Stuart, Jr., in the March 9 edition. My first impression was that of the typical freshman lamenting the fact that college was forcing him to put himself out a little in order to get something out of it. But the more I reflected on this letter, the more it appeared to summarize the general attitude of far too many students in colleges and universities in the United States today.

Three years ago I entered college as a freshman with a degree in forestry as my ultimate goal. At that time the only thing that was important was forestry, and anything pertaining to that—desirable; one not pertinent—unbearable. Fortunately for me I had an advisor who had a good deal more foresight than I had. When I tried to squeeze out of taking a course in language, his only comment was, "Mr. Wallinger, you may desire to be a forester, but do you have anything against being an educated forester?" Those words have stuck fast ever since, and the further I progress, the more important they seem.

This letter is not intended as a rebuttal; I am rather trying to express another point of consideration for what it may be worth. I only ask that you who have the opposite viewpoint give it and yourselves fair consideration, not dropping it without thought. Your technical training is of the utmost importance in this scientific age, but there will be times when you have to leave the small island of your specialization and look beyond the horizon to other trends of thought and specialization. You cannot afford to remain ignorant of the mind and motivation of others. This idea is manifest in the minds of graduates of European schools, and as the world continues to shrink you must compete with them and work with them. Now is the opportunity that society has given you to broaden your outlook as far as possible while training yourself at the same time.

Scott Wallinger

To the Editor:

I have become increasingly aware during the past months of international tension on the military front, that the war we are really losing is the cold war on the economic and social front. The crisis situations are not the threat to our freedom since the USSR seems to be continually backing down on her ultimatums. The question has been asked whether these moves on the part of the USSR have been merely propaganda moves on the way to winning an economic, social, and political war for which we are totally unprepared.

What must we do? One of our first actions must be the promulgation of an acute awareness in international affairs upon our campus in order to prepare ourselves for the future.

Secondly, and I feel most important at the present time for us as students, we must bring the students of the free world together in the greatest bond of cooperative international relationship ever expressed by the world community through our contributions which they desperately need. This is what we can do through World University Service which is the largest part of our fund drive on campus at the present time. As students it is our organization since it carries on its mutual assistance and self-help aid program for students throughout the world solely by student contributions. The tragedy seems to be that we have not understood this in the past.

THE AID WE GIVE AND THE WAY WE WORK TOGETHER NOW AS STUDENTS THROUGHOUT THE FREE WORLD WILL DETERMINE OUR CORPORATE FUTURE.

Can we give a small contribution and feel satisfied that we have done our share?

Morgan Thomas

Editor's note:

Morgan Thomas, a graduate of Yale University, is spending this year traveling to colleges and universities throughout the United States in an effort to explain the purpose of the World University Service. Thomas came to State last week and met with the leaders of the Student United Fund Drive here on campus, offering suggestions to them on ways of increasing student participation in the drive. This year, five hundred dollars of the total student contributions will go to the World University Service to be distributed to the children of Greece.

Technicalities . . .

By Steve Daves

This is almost the story of Michael Kelly. Sometimes when I hear a name, my mind strains and gives me a picture of the owner of the name, and Michael Kelly is just what I thought he would be. He is a small, pale, but not unhealthy young man, with an illogical mixture of auburn and ebony hair, which creeps down on his forehead but is not really undisciplined. For Michael Kelly (he doesn't like "Mike") is a disciplined, gentle, meek young man . . . a product of simple, meek parents.

Michael and his parents worked hard that Michael might graduate from college, and he did, earning a degree in mathematics and then a Master's degree. Michael is an introvert. He has a delicate personality that, nevertheless, is difficult to bruise; and he appreciates many things—art, books, science, mathematics. His science is an art and he is a genius.

Industry didn't appreciate Michael, but he didn't mind, because he had been explaining things to stronger, grosser personalities for years, and he made a good college instructor. Year before last, Michael married a small, quiet woman who didn't mind his 1947 Plymouth and two-button suits; and last year, a small, hungry, quiet baby was born to this woman who stayed less than a week in a ward at Rex Hospital with three other tired women.

I was in Raleigh the other day and walked around the Capitol and down the street in front of the Sir Walter Hotel. I watched the Cadillac, and all the old, fat men or the young, trim men with Botany suits and silk ties and cashmere overcoats (maybe vicuna) and cigars. I watched the smug journalists in three button suits—the intellectuals of Raleigh. I watched the stuffed lobbyists whose pains were from over-"self-indulgence", not hunger; and I watched the lawyers and the trooper-chauffeurs and the desirable secretaries with alligator bags and tight suits, and I even saw part of the neat-expensive, brilliant industry recruiting team. And I thought about the airplanes and the big trip to beautiful Charlotte in airplanes and renting the Charlotte Coliseum and eating country ham on the airplanes.

And I thought about 4½ million dollars for new powder rooms for the desirable secretaries and for the intellectual journalists. I wanted to spit because the world tasted bad. I think I wanted to spit on a Cadillac or alligator bag or cashmere coat, but I didn't; I spit in the street, which was the same thing, only cheaper. Or was it.

And I saw Michael Kelly standing in front of the department store, looking at a pair of split-cordovans, the cheapest in the window, but a salesman in the doorway looked away in disgust. And I looked away in disgust, too, because Michael Kelly's scuffed, many-soled loafers, black, didn't at all go with his beige and brown two-button sportcoat. . . .

Greeks On Campus

By Bill Marley

The final slate of officers, including the ones nominated from the floor at last week's I. F. C. meeting, has been formulated. The only nomination, other than those presented in last week's column, is H. C. Rose of Sigma Pi, who is running for treasurer.

The primary for all campus elections is scheduled for April 8, with the general election being held on April 16.

I guess that I had better put my two cents in about the College Union situation before the ranting and raving dies down. Seriously, it isn't only ranting and raving, there is much more to it than just something else that flares up as a shortlived campus controversy.

Several people connected actively with the College Union have expressed a desire to know why fraternity men do not participate in their activities. The question of social participation is easily answered, but there seems to be a lack of fraternity-men interest in any phase of College Union activity.

Why is this so? There probably is no specific answer to this question, but, by dealing in generalities, we might be able to obtain a solution. There are probably very few men who are committee chairmen or men who are otherwise administratively connected with the College Union who know anything about fraternities.

Since this is the case, how can one expect a fraternity man to penetrate the barrier and join in the activities of the College Union?

Now . . . "What's good for the College Union is good for the students!" We have approximately 900 fraternity men here at North Carolina State, who, at last count, were registered in this school as students. Therefore, it seems to me, that if there are 900 students who are not participating actively (roughly one-sixth), the above quotation is one helluva statement!

I noticed in the last Playboy jazz poll that Stan Kenton swept first place for the best band, and June Christy placed second as the best female vocalist. And we've got them both for one weekend!

Lou Pucillo Selected To Look's All America Team

The South dominated the selections by the United States Basketball Writers Association for the 1959 Look Magazine All America Team.

In announcing the selections, the new issue of Look magazine observed that Mississippi State's Bailey Howell, Kentucky's John Cox, North Carolina's Lou Pucillo and West Virginia's Jerry West took four of the 10 berths on the All-America squad.

Howell, "the pride of the Southeastern Conference," has set "several SEC as well as school records" with a 27-point average from the floor, the magazine pointed out.

Noting that West Virginia's Jerry West is "a real clutch player," Look stated that "he was a standout on strange courts, scoring 44 at Tennessee and 36 at Kentucky."

Kentucky's John Cox was cited by the magazine for working "brilliantly out of a forward position to key the blistering fast-break attack of the Wildcats."

"The Lilliputian" of this year's All-America, the 5'9" Lou Pucillo of North Carolina State is "a clever playmaker and a steady scorer, averaging around 15 points a game," declared Look.

But the dominant figure in college basketball today, according to the voting by the basketball writers, is Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson who was accorded far heavier support than any other player.

"It is unlikely," said Look, "that the college game has ever seen a more brilliant all-around operator."

The remainder of Look's traditional 10-man All America, in which every player enjoys equal first-string stature, are: Bob Boozer, Kansas State; Johnny Green, Michigan State; Bob Ferry, St. Louis; Alan Seiden, St. John; and Tom Hawkins, Notre Dame.

In the voting for NCAA District 3 All Stars, the basketball writers named Howell "the most valuable player" and picked Cox, Pucillo, West and North Carolina State's John Richter for top regional honors.

Baseball Squad Prepares For Coming Season

Coach Vic Sorrell begins his 14th season at North Carolina State with a team which is short of experience. The Wolfpack lost six starters from the 1958 team by graduation. A seventh, Danny Casteen, signed a contract with the Philadelphia Phillies estimated at roughly 30,000 dollars.

Although short of experience, Coach Sorrell promises that the 1959 edition of the Wolfpack will be one that hustles and gives a good account of itself in all games that it plays during the season.

Returning to the team this year are four lettermen from last year's club. The returnees are pitchers Joe Jones and Owen Wright, outfielder Don Hafer, and third baseman Glenn Sparrow. Coach Sorrell, at present is planning to move Sparrow to second base.

There is a big battle at first base where at the present a sophomore, Bill Mock, is leading the way. Others in the fight are Lancaster, Wells, a transfer from Wilmington Junior College, Phillips, and Lambert. The rest of the infield has Cox at short, Eason at third, and Smith catching.

In the outfield Coach Sorrell has football players Bernie Latusik and Hafer. Jim Hill, a starter on the 1957 team, will man the other outfield post.

Pitching promises to be a strong point of the team this season. Jones and Wright, starters on the team last season, will lead the way. However, Wilson Carruthers, a holdout last year, will give them plenty of help. Carruthers could become the pitching star of the Wolfpack if he can avoid arm trouble and injuries. Harold Gilbert, a relief pitcher, also returns.

Other pitchers include Scott, Neville, and Overby. Overby had a very good year in semipro ball last season and could help the Pack considerably. The upcoming season promises to be an interesting one for the Pack.

Dakota Staton to Appear in Jazz Show

Dakota Staton, that new exciting jazz singer of "The Late, Late Show" fame, will make her first appearance in Raleigh when she co-stars with Woody Herman and his Great Jazz Orchestra in the Big Jazz Concert of '59 at the State Fair Arena on Sunday afternoon, March 22. Other jazz artists appearing in the concert include Chris Barber and his Great Jazz Band, Ottillie Patterson, drummer Graham Burbidge, trumpeteer Pat Halcox and Monty Sunshine.

George Shearing says, "Dakota is dynamic! To hear her sing for the first time is to joyously discover one of the finest jazz singers of our day." Her distinctive vocal stylings are sometimes blues-like with an unusual misty quality, sometimes swinging with a light, refreshing beat. In each performance, the Staton sound creates new meaning for familiar lyrics, turning old favorites into fresh and exciting musical experience.

There are too many facets to Dakota to sum up her fascination in any pat phrasing. She imprints each song differently. She compels attentiveness, for she's a singer with many meanings. Her versatile range, phrasing, intonation—all make each Dakota interpretation individual and all her own. Is the Dakota who sings the wistful and taunting "Little Girl Blue" the same Dakota who sings the bright and tasty "Anything Goes"? Is the sophisticated "Some Other Spring" by the same singer as the rocking "Say It Ain't So, Joe"? Or the gay, incisive "Cherokee" the product of the same inventiveness that produces the lyric "Night Mist"? Fortunately, they're all the same girl and she's real, a very real singer.

Doors will open at 1:30 p.m. with concert time set for 2:30 p.m. sharp. The stage for this concert will be located in the center of the arena floor, arena-type presentation, with seats on all sides as well as the regular circular seats of the arena.

Tickets for this concert will be handled by Thiem Record Shop and Hamlin Drug Company in Raleigh and Kemp's in Chapel Hill. Admission will be $2.00—$2.50—$3.00 with the special seats on the main floor, around the stage $3.50.

This concert is being sponsored by the Capital City Jazz Corporation who gave you the first Capital City Jazz Festival at the Arena last November. This will be the only appearance of this group of artists in eastern North Carolina.
