At Annual Fair

Engineers To Preside

Scores of exhibits and demonstrations, including rocket and missile models, will be featured at the 27th annual Engineers' Fair to be held at State College Friday and Saturday, April 17-18.

The fair, which each year attracts several thousands of high school students and other citizens from throughout the State, will open Friday, April 17, at 2 p.m. Exhibit halls will be open to the public Friday, April 17, from 2 until 9 p.m. and on Saturday, April 18, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Sponsored by the Engineers' Council, student government body in the college's School of Engineering, the two-day exposition will spotlight State College's multi-million dollar engineering facilities and State-wide engineering services.

Principal speaker at the opening exercises will be George R. Herbert, president of the Research Triangle Institute.

Each of nine engineering departments at the college will have from 30 to 40 exhibits and demonstrations to carry out this year's fair theme "Progress in Engineering."

"In addition to giving high school students a look at opportunities in engineering education," said Paul Madren, Jr., electrical engineering senior from Ossipee, who is chairman of the Fair, "we are going all out to show some of the most recent developments in engineering techniques."

Among the displays will be student-built reactor models of all types, model planes, jet engines, electronic systems, rocket and missile models, a space-lattice bubble machine, a snow-making machine, and many other engineering marvels of modern technology.

Metallurgical engineering students will have on demonstration a spectacular small blast furnace which, as visitors look on, will be used to make objects such as frying pans.

Madren also reported that there will be a number of surprising demonstrations of magical quality.

"These will challenge the imagination," he declared.

There will also be a number of commercial exhibitions on display, especially from the industries of North Carolina.

Committee chairmen for the outstanding event are Ken Sisk of Asheville, programs; Frank Madren of Ossipee and Harvey Lanier of Maple Hill, publicity; John Clark of Charlotte, arrangements, and George Parrott of Raleigh, opening exercises.

Invitations to the Fair, which is free to the public, have gone to all North Carolina high school principals and their student bodies.

A crowd of 10,000 visitors is expected to attend the two-day event.

Golden Chain To Play Host For Annual Parents' Weekend

by George Hammett

Final plans are being set in order to welcome the parents of State College students to the State campus. The host for this annual event, Parents' Weekend of 1959, is Golden Chain, senior honorary fraternity.

The campus "Open House" will begin Friday, April 17 and end on Sunday, April 18. This will give the parents a chance to look over the functions and activities of the State students, while taking part in an array of entertainment prepared for them by the Golden Chain.

To help make this event a success, many organizations have given a hand. The Engineers Council in sponsoring the Engineers' Fair. The College Union has planned a dance, and Carnival Night. The Consolidated University Student Council sponsors Consolidated University Day. The Blue Key will give a tea. The dormitories will hold an open house. Pi Kappa Phi is sponsoring the Fraternity sing. Danforth Chapel plans to hold a special service Sunday.

Parents' Weekend begins on Friday at 2:00 p.m. when George R. Herbert, president of the Research Triangle Institute, presents the opening address for the Engineers' Fair.

Saturday morning the Order of Thirty & Three will have a registration for parents at the front lobby of the College Union.

Blue Key will sponsor a tea for all parents, to be held April 18. The tea will be held in the lobby of Bragaw (New) Dormitory between the hours of 4:00 and 6:00 p.m. All parents are invited to attend. This will be a good opportunity for the parents to get acquainted and, also, to see the modern design of the new Bragaw Dormitory.

Carnival Night will take the second lead of events Friday night, continuing at 1:00 p.m. Saturday and remaining open all afternoon and night until 1:00 a.m. The dance given by the College Union will begin at 8:30 p.m. Friday with music presented by the Duke Ambassadors. Honored guest for the occasion will be Linda Wey, State College Football Queen.

Saturday afternoon State's thirteen dormitories and eighteen social fraternities will leave their doors opened wide for visiting parents.

On Sunday Morning, Danforth Chapel, has prepared a special service for the parents. The service will be given in the Chapel located in the YMCA Building.

Sunday afternoon at 2:00-3:00 p.m. the fraternity sing competition will be presented. The Intra-fraternity sing, sponsored by Pi Kappa Phi, will end the Parents' Weekend of 1959.

Five thousand extra copies of The Technician have been printed, which will be sent to the parents. This issue, which includes the Chancellor's welcome to parents, offers a formal invitation to Parents' Weekend.

To Parents

Chancellor Speaks

To the Parents of Students:

"The administrative officers of North Carolina State College take pleasure in joining with our students in extending a most cordial invitation to you to come to the campus for Parents' Week End on April 17, 18, and 19. Under the leadership of Golden Chain, our Senior leadership society, special events are being planned to help you know more of what goes on at State College.

"Beginning with the opening of the annual Engineers' Fair in Riddick Stadium by Mr. George Herbert, president of the Research Triangle Institute, at 2:00 p.m. on Friday, April 17, a series of features has been devised to help you become acquainted with our facilities and instructional programs. We believe that you will derive much pleasure from seeing where your son or daughter sleeps, eats, studies, attends classes, works in laboratories, goes to church, and participates in recreational and other activities.

"From personal experience I know that it can be a constant source of satisfaction to have a good understanding of the day-by-day activities of a son or daughter who is away from home getting an education. I am confident also that your presence on our campus during this week end being planned for you will mean a great deal to your son or daughter. Come if you can."

Very cordially yours,
Carey H. Bostian,
Chancellor

The Junior-Senior Ring Dance, sponsored by the Junior Class of State College in honor of the graduating seniors, will be held this Saturday night, from 8 p.m. until 12 midnight, in the Reynolds Coliseum. Music for the event will be provided by Maynard Ferguson and his Orchestra.

Carnival Night Features Dance and Entertainment

Presented as one of the outstanding attractions of the year, the annual Carnival Night activities, on April 17-18 this year, are being planned in conjunction with Parents' Weekend, the Engineers' Fair, and the Consolidated University Day on campus.

Dance Begins Festivities

Beginning with a Carnival Night Kick-off Dance, the College Union of State College opens the two-day event with the cooperation of campus organizations of State College, Woman's College, and Carolina. The dance, scheduled for Friday evening, will feature the music of the Duke Ambassadors. The dance, lasting from 8:30 until 11:30, will open the weekend and carry the carnival spirit into Saturday.

The Kick-off Dance will be held in the College Union Ballroom. Along with the participating schools of the Consolidated University will be many girls from the local girls' school in Raleigh. A few of the carnival attractions will be open on Friday evening and many more will be in construction for the Carnival Day on Saturday.

Door Prizes Will Be Given. Thirty to forty bottles will be scattered about the College Union, and all will be open by one o'clock on Saturday. Throughout the Carnival Day door prizes, donated by Raleigh merchants, will be given out. At the end of the evening prizes will be awarded to the top three booths of the carnival: the best decorated, the most original, and the most profitable. Booths offer such attractions as Bingo, Penny Toss, Water Dip, and a Cake Walk.

A Lost and Found Sale will be a feature of the Saturday functions when the College Union sponsors the sale of lost articles with proceeds going into a Student Scholarship Fund.

On Saturday evening, there will be a Consolidated University Day Dance in the Snack Bar, over which will reign the Consolidated University Queen, with music by Joe Harper. The dance will begin at 8 and last until the closing of the carnival at 12.

One of the outstanding highlights of the Carnival Night will be the crowning of the Carnival Queen, who will be selected from among the entrants by the organizations, in the College Union Ballroom.

Carnival Night is planned by the College Union Social Committee with the assistance of the other sixteen College Union committees.

University Day Sponsored By CU Council

Saturday, April 18th, will be Consolidated University Day at State College. This event, sponsored by the Consolidated University Student Council, is one of three C. U. Days held annually—one each on the campuses of State, Carolina, and Woman's College. They are designed to promote better cooperation between the three branches of the Consolidated University.

This year, State College C. U. Day is being held in conjunction with Carnival Night at the College Union; and several bus loads of students from Woman's College and Carolina are expected to attend.

Highlights of C. U. Day will include carnival booths entered by all three branches of the Consolidated University; Carolina's presentation of "Cavalcade of Talent"; and the Consolidated University Day Dance beginning at 8 p.m.

Eddie Knox, chairman of State's fifteen member CUSC delegation, made the following statement to The Technician concerning C. U. Day: "I wish to urge all State College students to participate in the activities of C. U. Day. Possibly the outstanding feature of the

Our Invitation: Parents' Weekend '59

We have dedicated this entire issue of The Technician to the parents of State College students. We have filled it with articles and features which will be of interest to our parents . . . because we want to see them next week for the Annual Parents' Weekend!

All parents of State students will receive this paper, and we hope that it will serve as an effective promotion medium for the Weekend, sponsored by the top leadership fraternity on campus, Golden Chain.

As can be seen on these six pages, State College will experience its busiest, most active, most interesting weekend for the parents to enjoy . . . a time when they can be with their sons or daughters and learn about the school which will shape such a large part of the students' future lives.

We are proud of State College. We're not just saying that to bolster anybody's spirits or lull them into a false sense of pride . . . we can and will prove that our pride is just and deserved.

From a humble beginning over 70 years ago, State has risen to a position of high prominence. Though the College has met great problems, and often-severe criticism, most of our difficulties can be attributed to growing pains. Well, we're still growing and we still have problems . . . and we gladly accept the responsibility for problems as an inherent component of stimulating growth.

Increasingly we find mention of State's assets and accomplishments in national meetings and publications. And increasingly the College is being made aware of its vast potential for serving the state of North Carolina, now being recognized as one of the most progressive states in the entire country.

Our most pressing problem is financial; we need more money from the state to increase faculty salaries and improve the College facilities, so that we can educate in quality as well as in quantity. You, the parents, have a direct interest in this school . . . and by your active support, we can solve the problem, even if it may mean higher taxes. Contact your legislators . . . we need your help.

When the parents come to our school, we want to show them as much about life at State as possible. Therefore we advise that the students try to attend as many functions as possible so that their parents will have a well-rounded impression of the campus when they leave.

We expect the attendance for this year's Parents' Weekend to break all records. Students can make this expectation come true by personally asking their parents to attend . . . parents can help by answering in the affirmative.

All State College is waiting to welcome you.

"OVER HERE, HENRY, I'D KNOW OUR BOY'S ROOM-ANYPLACE!"

WAY OUT...

with John Cocke

I remember one time when I was a freshman and was home for Christmas holidays. I had just gotten in and hadn't seen my folks since the day in September when they had put me on the train and sent me away to school.

Anyway, I was back and was talking to my father in the living room.

"Hey Dad," I said. "Wanna go out and get some beer?"

"What, son? You've been drinking?"

"Well a little. But you told me that when you were in college . . ."

He shook his head vigorously.

"No, no! I just won't have it!"

"But Pop, you used to tell me all the time about . . ."

"What I did in college is completely irrelevant. But to think that you had the gall to ask your own father out to drink with you. Oh my God! What would your mother think if she knew about this?"

"Aw heck. I just thought that for old time's sake you'd have one with me. You know, I'm a college man now," I said.

"So you think you can do anything you please, huh? Just because you're in college?"

"Well no, but I think I should be able to look around a little," I said.

"And with girls too? I suppose you've been 'experimenting' there, as well."

The way he said it didn't sound quite right, and I squirmed around uncomfortably in the chair. "I've been going out with all different types, sure. You've got to learn them all, the way I look at it. But please don't think I've been, well, you know what I mean." I wanted to come right out and say it, but somehow I couldn't. I couldn't say what I meant because I felt as if a glass panel with those aluminum supports they're always showing on TV had been thrown up between us.

He gazed solemnly at the floor for a few minutes and then began again. "Son," he said, "have you been going to that church your mother told you to?"

"Well yes, some."

"Some? What do you mean?"

"Well I mean I've been going to some of the other churches too, Pop. I just want to look around and maybe find one that suits me better."

"Oh, son . . . You owe loyalty to your own church. You know that."

"Pop, listen. Wouldn't it be better for me to form my own ideas? I mean the old church may not be best for me after all."

"Oh, son. Loyalty, loyalty." He stopped for a moment and put his head in his hands and sat there. Then he reached underneath the chair and pulled out this old teddy bear that he used to play with when he was a kid. Whenever he was real sad or confused he would always pull out that teddy bear. I guess you'd call it a sort of security symbol.

But he kept squeezing the damn thing and swaying back and forth and moaning lines from "Faith of our Fathers", so I said, "come on, Pop. Snap out of it. This isn't doing any good."

It took him a while but he finally did. He put the teddy bear back and thought for a few minutes and then turned to me.

"Well, man," he said. "Let's cut out to Harry's and have a couple of cool ones."

So I loaned him one of my turtle-neck sweaters and some sandals and a pair of dark glasses and we swung out into the dusky night.

Open Letter to Parents

Welcome from Stu. Gov. President

To the Parents:

"The dates of April 17-19 will occasion the official State College Parents' Weekend for this year. Its activities will include many outstanding events that we believe will be of interest and enjoyment to the parents of every State College student.

"As President of the Student Body, I wish to extend a very sincere invitation to our parents to be with us on this occasion. We believe that it will afford a deeper insight into the college life and activities of your son or daughter, and provide an opportunity for a very mutually enjoyable weekend together.

"A great deal of work and effort is going into preparation for the events of this weekend, much of which is probably being contributed by your son or daughter. We believe it is worthwhile, however . . . if you, our parents, are here to enjoy its results with us.

"We are proud of our parents, and State College Parents' Weekend will offer us a rare opportunity to honor you and to make you better acquainted with our college.

"Again I wish to emphasize how eager we are to have you with us for the occasion we have planned in your honor . . . Parent's Weekend. Remember, only by your presence can it be a success."

Pseudo Commentary

by Chuck Lombard

When lots of kids come to college they tell themselves that they are going to become intellectuals. After all each of them is good intellectual material—and the unexamined life is hardly worth living, as everyone knows.

So they get to college and join a fraternity and learn to "circulate" gracefully. Further, our intellectual pupas stage an early raid on the college clothing stores, gratifying the proprietors no end with vast purchases of grossly over-priced and rigidly stylized—but it's conservative—clothing. The dress is very important to the college intellectual. This is true because there is only one school of college philosophy. And naturally if you want to be an intellectual you'll want to belong to the school. And further, the school rules implicitly insist that ivy be the only garb compatible with the delicate sophistication of the true intellectual.

Having become properly uniformed, our budding young sophist sets out to educate himself in the paperback library of formal college intellectuality. He will surely read On the Road and perhaps find time for The Catcher in the Rye and when compelled through his Contemporary Civilization courses he will no doubt tackle the essays of Locke, Rousseau, Marx, Hegel, etc. But all of this will in the end prove a dreadful bore and our friend, completely educated, will spread his new grown wings and take the pseudo-set by storm.

The pseudos meet, nearly nightly, at the round table in Paul the Friendly Peruvian's Pitzer beer palace. Our friend on his first night out will drift in slow and suave like. Blowing great clouds of pipe smoke out of his nose like some Chinese dragon, our boy will spy some semi-acquaintance who by his dress and drinking style is obviously second generation pseudo.

Our apprentice pseudo, because of his dress and bored expression, is obviously an intellectual of some promise so he is promptly invited to sit down and break beer with the rest of the fellows. He does so with the casual remark, "Man, I'm beat," to which all the old S.O.B.'s (Pseudos Over Beer) exchange favorable glances. So now the general conversation picks up again with an occasional moan born of intellectual torment interspersed with calls for more beer coupled with those frequent gross but necessary trips to the back room.

In between trips, young pseudo mentions that all motivation is selfish. Further he states that since it is extremely doubtful that there exists a God nothing we do really matters. In fact he'll say that if it weren't for having to earn his bread he wouldn't do anything—except study philosophy of course. Yes, he would like to do more of that some time, study philosophy and all.

All the other pseudos are quick to agree with our pal that life is in general a bore and idealism is certainly ridiculous. Individuality is to be admired as long as it extends only to beard-wearing, and beauty for beauty's sake is passe. Yes . . . Yes.

Notice

As many of you know, our Dean of Faculty, Dr. John W. Shirley, wrote a series of feature articles for THE TECHNICIAN on Russian education, based on his travels in Russia this past summer.

We have received numerous requests from the faculty, students, and parents for additional copies. Therefore, we are glad to announce that they are now available in pamphlet form, prepared by Dean Shirley for publication. THE TECHNICIAN, with financial assistance from the Publications Board, had 1,000 copies printed for distribution to interested persons. (See page 4).

Parents may receive copies when they register for Parents' Weekend. Students may pick up copies at the College Union main desk or at THE TECHNICIAN offices (1911 Bldg.). Faculty members may receive theirs through campus mail upon request.

Service For Parents

Home of Danforth Chapel

As part of the activities planned for Parents' Weekend, the YMCA will again sponsor services in the Danforth Chapel, Sunday, April 19 at 11 a.m. This special service is planned for the State College Community and its guests for this weekend, and the "Y" extends a cordial invitation to you to participate in the service as a part of the weekend activities. A similar service was held last year in conjunction with Parents' Weekend and proved to be very popular with the college and its guests.

The Danforth Chapel Choir, under the direction of Nels Leonard, will present special music for the occasion. The Danforth Chapel was completed and dedicated in 1956 with a gift from the William H. Danforth foundation and is unique as a place of prayer, meditation and worship on the State College campus. The Chapel is open 24 hours a day for meditation and is available to organizations on the campus for initiation ceremonies, special observances, and other functions of a religious nature.

It is also used for weddings and baptisms for members of the State College community. Weekly Chapel services are held on Wednesdays and plans are being formulated to begin Sunday services and weekly Vespers next September. The Chapel is equipped with a two-manual organ and a stereophonic sound system. Again the YMCA offers its service to you as a part of its religious program and urges you to worship with your parents during Parents' Weekend.

WKNC Keeps Pace With Changing Time

In keeping with the changing times, WKNC has begun another new program. Jim Kuckney, a sophomore in ME, is your commentator each Tuesday night at 9:05 on "The State of State." This is a five minute commentary on affairs of vital importance to all State College students.

Jim invites your letters and witticisms on this series. Address them to "The State of State," WKNC, State College. A thing all too often taken for granted is the news that is heard over WKNC. Each of these news casts originates from a United Press International teletype machine connected to all important news centers all over the world.

The Lucky Strike news with Russ Ford is a comprehensive 15 minute round-up heard each week night at 7:45.

A complete round-up of state, national, and world sports news, sponsored also by Lucky Strike, is heard each week night at 11 p.m.

State College's thirteen dormitories will observe open house from 1-3 p.m. on Saturday, April 18, during Parents' Weekend. During these hours the dormitories will be open so that parents may visit the rooms.

The thirteen dormitories are: Alexander, Bagwell, Becton, Bragaw, Berry, Fourth, Gold, Owen, Syme, Tucker, Turlington, Watauga, and Welch. The connecting link between these dormitories is the Interdormitory Council which is composed of the president and vice-president from each dormitory. The purpose of the council is to rule on matters common to all the dormitories.

The latest addition to the dormitories is ultra-modern Bragaw which was completed last fall. The new multi-million dollar structure houses 800 men and is one of the largest dormitories in the state. The building is in the shape of two "Boomerangs" with a central activity area connecting the two.

The structure is composed of suites of four rooms each with each suite open to an outside corridor. The rooms are equipped with built-in study desks, bookshelves, filing drawers, and dressers. The walls are masonry block finished in light colors with asphalt tile floors and acoustical tile ceilings.

On the second floor of each wing an apartment is provided for a host and hostess. These apartments include a living area with adjacent kitchen, bedroom, bath, and closets. A similar apartment is also provided in the other large dormitories. During the open house, members of the Interdormitory Council will be on hand at each dormitory to assist the visitors.

Fraternity Sing Competition Colors Weekend Festivities

The annual Parents' Day Weekend functions for this year will again include the annual Pi Kappa Phi Interfraternity Sing, sponsored by Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity. The Sing, now in its eighth year, provides a program of interest and entertainment for spectators and participants alike.

Jimmy Capps, prominent WPTF announcer of Raleigh, will emcee the show, announcing the contestants and their selections. Each entrant will sing two songs which will be judged on a point basis by three Raleigh musicians. The fraternity tallying the most points wins. The award for the winner will be the plaque which has been awarded to past winners of the competition by Pi Kappa Phi. Any fraternity which wins for four consecutive years is entitled to keep the plaque.

Each of the fraternities entering the show has been offered the opportunity to sing on WPTF radio station, under the direction of Mr. Capps. This should promise some good competition leading up to the event itself, which will be held on Sunday, April 19, at 3:00 p.m. in the College Union ballroom.

Last year, the Sing offered extra entertainment by the Meredith College Triple Trio during the final tally of points. Similar arrangements are being made for the 1959 Sing. The program should prove to be good, and Pi Kappa Phi invites all interested persons to attend.

Dean's 'Technician' Series on Russian Education Published, Will Be Made Available to Students, Faculty and Parents

Dr. John W. Shirley, Dean of the Faculty at State College, recently completed publication of the series of articles on Russian education which appeared in The Technician earlier this year.

This pamphlet, which is available to all parents, faculty members, and students, was compiled from ten articles which were published in The Technician during the first semester of this year.

Dr. Shirley, who is the author of these articles, spent five weeks touring Russia last summer with a group of other American teachers and educators. During the time that this delegation was in the Soviet Republic, they followed a rigid schedule which showed them many of the facets of Russian education.

Through these meetings and through study of the courses which are scheduled for each student on the higher educational level, this American delegation found that a much more rigorous curriculum is set up for the average Russian college student than for the average American college student.

Dean Shirley's articles point out this need to improve the system of education here in the United States. He goes further to show the possible consequences that will be suffered by the United States if this need for improvement is not brought about in the near future.

The Technician, with the permission of Dean Shirley, had one thousand extra copies of this pamphlet printed. This was done because the newspaper felt that these articles presented a very good overall picture of the problems that face the United States today in its dealings with the Soviet Union.

Anyone who desires a copy of this booklet is asked to write to The Technician, Box 5698, State College Station, Raleigh, North Carolina. There is no charge for this service.

Parents' Reward: Grad's Pay Rises

State College's 1959 graduates are faced with a wide range of job offers, rising salaries, and various professional attractions, a survey of the college placement offices revealed today.

Notable among the industries increasing their demands for State graduates are the electronics, aircraft, and missile design and manufacturing firms. Emphasis upon engineering and technology has placed a heavier demand for State College graduates.

All schools composing the college reported a greater demand for graduates than they are able to fill.

More than 1,000 students will receive degrees from State College this year.

More than 250 companies have or will interview seniors in the State College School of Engineering this spring.

In reporting this, William H. (Bill) Simpson, placement director, said the number of companies sending interviewers to the campus this year is about the same as last year.

Opportunities, however, are better this year than last spring, Simpson stated. He said the demand is greater and the opportunities are better, particularly in the electronics, aircraft, and missile industries.

The number of graduating seniors at State College in engineering is greater in 1959 than in 1958. The college graduated 395 engineers last June. The number will be 544 this summer. In addition, 40 received degrees in January.

The average starting salary among engineering graduates last summer was $460 a month or $5,520 annually. The starting figure will be up slightly this year, Simpson said.

Simpson said interviews will continue among the engineers for the next few weeks. During the Easter holidays, many of the prospective graduates are making visits to industrial plants seeking their services.

After Easter, he said, the School of Engineering will have a more definite idea of the placement of the seniors.

"An overwhelming demand exists for graduates of the School of Textiles at North Carolina State College."

This statement was voiced today by Dr. Malcolm E. Campbell, dean of the college's world-famed School of Textiles, as he reviewed employment opportunities facing the Class of 1959.

Starting salaries, he reported, range from $400 to $550 per month. In five years after graduation, a textile graduate, the dean stated, may expect to be ahead salary-wise of his friends in other fields of technology and remain ahead for the rest of his professional life.

Even brighter economic prospects lie ahead for the textile industry, Dean Campbell believes.

He said, "Rising population, growth in the national product, the increase in the 20-30 year age group that will begin in 1961, and other economic factors all foreshadow a period of vigorous growth for the textile industry in the 1960's."

With its diversity of products and processes, the textile industry provides "almost unlimited career opportunities for young men and women," Dean Campbell declared.

The State College School of Agriculture this year has had more demands for its graduates than it can supply, Dr. H. B. James, director of instruction, said.

Approximately 91 seniors in agriculture will graduate in June. Add to this 22 who were graduated in January.

Last year's average annual salary for agricultural graduates was about $4,800.

A wide range of employment opportunities await the graduates, most of whom will accept jobs in North Carolina.

Job opportunities for the School of Education graduates were described as "excellent" today by Dr. J. Bryant Kirkland, dean of State College's programs in industrial education, agricultural education, and mathematics and science education.

Dean Kirkland said that the "demand for our graduates far exceeds the availability of graduating students in all our departments."

Approximately 44 graduates will receive their degrees in May, and 47 were graduated at the spring exercise. Salaries for these graduates have ranged as high as $4,800 for classroom teachers accepting positions in other states, but the average has been around $3,600 for the graduates of all departments, and a $3,000 average for starting teachers for the nine-month school term.

Even though North Carolina school salaries are below those in other areas, Dean Kirkland said that about 75 per cent of the graduates will remain in North Carolina. Higher salaries are being offered mathematics graduates by some industrial concerns, he added.

The outlook for graduating seniors in wood products, pulp and paper technology, and forest management curriculums in State College's School of Forestry "looks good," according to Dr. R. J. Preston, dean of the school.

Pointing out that there has been no difficulty in placing forestry students for the past five or six years, Dean Preston stated that "he anticipated no difficulty in placing qualified graduates." About 60 students in the three School of Forestry programs will graduate in June.

Salaries for these graduates, said Dean Preston, will range from $4,800 to $6,000, depending on the program.

Dean Preston noted that interviews with seniors are being conducted almost daily, and present indications are that 80 per cent of the graduates will accept employment in North Carolina or contiguous Southern states.

The 26 architectural graduates and the three landscape architecture graduates who will receive their degrees in May at State College will find job opportunities "considerably better than last year," according to Henry L. Kamphoefner, dean of the school.

Dean Kamphoefner indicated that in the design fields, previous experience is a factor taken into consideration when salaries are offered the new graduates, but he added that all students will average not less than $100 per week. Over the past 10 years, 65 per cent of the graduates in the School of Design have located in North Carolina. But there is a recent trend for more of these graduates to leave the State as the school continues to advance its program of developing an architecture suitable for the Southern region.

	"EVERYONE TO HIS OWN TASTE" There has never been any accounting for tastes, and the man who appreciated this truth first was Francois Rabelais. In his "Pantagruel", he coined this now-famous judgment: "Every one to his taste, as the woman said when she kissed her cow."
	"PRACTICE WHAT YOU PREACH" Sounds like advice right out of "Poor Richard", but Plautus said it many centuries before Ben Franklin. Classical scholars, of course, know this statement in its original Latin: "Facias ipse quod faciamus suades."
	"LOVED AND LOST" It's better than not loving at all according to Lord Tennyson's "In Memoriam", XXVII: "I hold it true, whate'er befall/I feel it, when I sorrow most/'Tis better to have loved and lost/Than never to have loved at all."

Jockey SKANTS striped brief

"Purely sensational"—that's the judgment of college men who have seen the new Jockey Striped SKANTS. Jockey stylists have taken this 100% stretch nylon bikini-style brief... added candy stripes... and produced a garment you'll really enjoy wearing.

SKANTS is cut high on the sides with a low waistband and comes in a choice of red, black, green, rust or blue stripes. Look for SKANTS—in stripes, or solids—in the Jockey department at your campus store.

Bushy Faces: Why all the beards, boys? Centennial coming up—or trying to prove masculinity. You can't all be Design Students.

Sigma Upsilon Alpha Report: The Picture shows the brothers after returning from their annual Easter home party at Carolina Beach. Enough said.

In order to recoup the disastrous expenses incurred at Carolina Beach over the Easter vacation, the brothers and officers of S.U.A. have set up a Campus Election Service. For a nominal fee, the brothers will not tear down posters or set fire to or deface banners of any of their paying clients. And for an additional charge clients may avail themselves of the "Confidential Opponent-Report Service" which guarantees proof positive of the opponent's membership in a minimum of four Communist-front organizations. Furnished with the report will be actual photographs of your opponent both dodging the draft and molesting small children on Sunday.

This S.U.A. service satisfies a need of long standing here on campus. The service may be expanded to cover the 1960 Presidential election.

Shaken Agitators: A Southern friend of mine was being baited by several far-left and loud-mouthed Yankees on the racial issue in the South. Wishing to avoid a long drawn-out yelling session with these uninformed agitators, my friend shut them up with, "In my part of the South, suh, we don't believe in either integration or segregation... we believe in SLAVERY."

A LEGITIMATE Gripe (Parents Take Note): A member of the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina takes an oath in which he swears before God on the Holy Bible to uphold the Constitution of the State of North Carolina. The constitution clearly demands reapportionment after each census. Year after year, members of the General Assembly have openly and brazenly refused to reapportion the State, and in doing so have proved that they are guilty of a breach of their most solemn oath. This is immoral. I wonder if it's possible for them to feel a little ashamed of themselves.

CU Day

day will be the C. U. Day Dance Saturday night in the College Union Snack Bar.

"Reigning at this dance will be the Consolidated University Queen crowned last fall at the State-Carolina football game. I wish to particularly urge State students to make our Woman's College visitors feel at home."

The next C. U. Day, following the 18th, will be held at Woman's College later in the spring.

The problem was not that Marty had fallen in love with a shirt. After all, he was a Philosophy major.

The trouble was . . . Marty was in love with two shirts.

With Shirt No. 1, the Van Heusen Century, the serious Marty spent hours in heavenly bliss. He worshipped the revolutionary soft collar that won't wrinkle ever. It was Century's one-piece construction that drove him wild. (Other collars never did anything for our boy Marty, except wrinkle madly. You see, other collars are three pieces, fused or sewn together.)

With Shirt No. 2, the amazing Van Heusen "Vantage," the gay, frivolous Marty lived the life of carefree abandon. He could wear it and wear it—wash it—drip-dry it, or have it tumble-dried automatically—and wear it again in a matter of hours. It was the most money-saving love he ever had.

But when Marty was with one shirt, he missed the other. It was terrible. Like so many others with the same problem, Marty wrote to us. And so it came to pass that the Van Heusen "Century-Vantage" was born. This shirt combined the advantages of each into one great shirt—a wash and wear, no-iron, all cotton broadcloth shirt with the soft collar that won't wrinkle ever! And just $5! Have you a problem?
