Rome Prize

State Design Grad. Receives High Honor

The 1960 Rome Prize in Architecture — one of the world's top academic awards in the field of architecture — has been won by Wayne Taylor of Maple, Currituck County, a 1958 graduate of the school of Design at State College.

Valued at $7,000 for two years of study at the American Academy of Rome, the award is sought by architectural students throughout the United States.

Announcement of the selection of Taylor to receive the honor was made today in New York City by Michael Rapuano, a noted Manhattan Landscape architect and president of the American Academy in Rome.

In addition to the study provided by the grant, the award also covers a liberal travel allowance.

During his studies in Rome, Taylor also will travel widely in Europe during the first year and perhaps in the Near East and Asia during the second year.

Taylor received his bachelor of architecture degree from North Carolina State College in June, 1958, and spent the 1958-59 academic year as an instructor in the college's School of Design.

Since last June, he has been working independently in Maple, a town in Currituck County.

As a student at State College, Taylor was on the staff of the Student Publications in the School of Design and worked on the annual art auction of students in the school.

Taylor also won the book award presented by the North Carolina Chapter of the American Institute of Architects as the outstanding designer in the Class of 1958.

Taylor's brother, Ben Taylor, also was graduated in 1958 and is now a civilian architect with the U. S. Army's Corps of Engineers in Leghorn, Italy.

The architectural award won by Wayne Taylor is the first such honor ever won by a State College graduate. However, two State College graduates have won the Rome Prize for Landscape Architecture. They are Richard C. Bell of Manteo, now practicing landscape architecture in Raleigh, and George Patton of Franklin, now practicing in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Soph Wins YMCA-Sponsored Exchange Trip To Russia

John Phillip Reuer student in the School of Design at State College, has been selected by the National Board of the YMCA-YWCA from a nationwide list of student candidates to participate in a three-month exchange program between the United States and the Soviet Union.

This exchange program is sponsored by the YMCA-YWCA and gives students from both countries — Russia and the United States—a chance at seeing the other one's country. Last year, Norman Owen from State College was a participant. The 1960 itinerary, dating from June 26 to September 4, will include 40 days in Russia, which is longer than any other authorized stay in that country; a week and a half in Rumania, heretofore closed to western travellers; and short stays in France, Austria and Czechoslovakia.

When Reuer came to this country in 1953, he realized a lifelong ambition. He spent his first year in Columbus, Ohio, where he was drafted in 1954 and served with the army in Arkansas.

He is married to the former Eleanor Griswold of Durham, whom he met while she was attending the Academy of Fine Arts in Berlin. His wife is a part-time instructor and graduate student at the University of North Carolina. They have a three-year-old daughter Stephanie.

Reuer is now a sophomore at

State College. This will not be Reuer's first encounter with the Russians. Under very different conditions, he recalls vividly the tense, hectic and exciting chaos of survival during the last grim days of World War II in his native Berlin.

"The city was being bombed almost hourly. The Russians had surrounded and even entered part of the city. A friend who had run out to the store to get some last minute groceries cycled right into an on-coming column of Russian troops, but managed to throw herself and bicycle down an embankment. While waiting nervously with my family in our cellar my gregarious aunt telephoned from another part of the city that her Russian guests had arrived, and they were all having a grand party. They were so taken by my aunt, that they presented her with gifts of loot plundered from her neighbors.

"As Russian troops were marching down our streets, Herr Hitler was still screaming over the Radio of German victory on the Eastern front, and that reinforcements were already in Berlin. He ordered the subway to be flooded, thus killing thousands who had found refuge from air raids in the bomb-proof tunnels. Though this last night brought to an end one era, and started a new one, I would almost call it the most significant night I ever experienced. It had all the elements of human achievement and suffering throughout history, compressed into a few hours. Under a majestically burning, and spectacularly living sky, filled with uncountable flashes and light traces of shells, search-lights and explosives amidst the thunder of guns and bombs — meaningless tragedy came to an end. Rape, suicide and murder changed humans in-

SG Committee Announces General Election Rules

General rules concerning the spring elections were announced today by Murray Rudisill, Chairman of the Campus Elections Committee. Nominations for campus offices are made in room 207, Holaday Hall.

The nominations book should contain the candidate's full name, campus address and home address, curriculum, and the way he wishes his name to appear on the ballot. The book must be counter-signed by another State student.

Students may not run for more than one student government office and one class office. All campus positions will be decided by a majority vote except senators, who are elected by plurality.

A meeting of all the nominees will be held April 11th in order to determine ballot positions. The polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. April 28. The run-offs are scheduled for May 5.

No candidate may campaign in such a manner as to disturb classes. Notices must not be tacked or nailed to trees or buildings; string may be used. Each candidate is responsible for seeing that his posters are removed within twenty-four hours after the final election.

No campaign will take place within fifty feet of the polls, and posters within this area will be removed on election days. Sound trucks will not be used during classes nor after six o'clock p.m.

Strict compliance of these rules is expected. Any violation of campaign regulations can cause a candidate to be disqualified.

Indoctrination Meet

Chest Drive Holds

The annual Campus Chest Drive got off to a start as over 150 solicitors and co-ordinators met at the College Union Tuesday night for indoctrination. The group was called to order by Student President Eddie Knox, who presented the heads of I.F.C., I.D.C., W.K.N.C.,

A.P.O., V.A., and the Y.M.C.A., sponsors of the Drive.

Top Johnston, assistant co-ordinator of Religious Affairs introduced the evening's first guest, Mr. L. L. Ray, who told the solicitors of the twenty-seven worthy organizations which their money will help in Raleigh. Mr. Chick Doak then gave a brief explanation of the work of American Friends, another agency which the drive backs.

The main speaker of the evening, Mr. Masa Nishihara, a leader of the Japanese student movement who is presently studying at Chapel Hill, told of the critical needs of overseas students, some of which have no food or shelter, and the job World University Service does to help these needy students. W.U.S. is the third group which the Drive helps.

Dean Banks Talley presented a brief pep talk, and the next solicitors meeting was announced for the following Tuesday, at Williams Hall auditorium, 9:00 p.m. The Drive will run from April 1-8.

'Outstanding Senior In Engr.' Named

Larry King Monteith, a native of Bryson City, was named "Outstanding Senior in Engineering" at State College Saturday evening March 12 out of a class of 490 engineering seniors.

Dr. J. Harold Lampe, dean of the college's School of Engineering, announced the selection of Monteith to receive the coveted honor at the annual St. Patrick's Dance held in William Neal Reynolds Coliseum for engineering students, faculty, and guests.

Dean Lampe presented Monteith with an engraved gold wrist watch in recognition of his "outstanding achievements both in his academic and student activities".

The award winner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Smith of Lubbock, Texas. The annual "Outstanding Engineering Senior" award is given to the student whose achievements in scholarship and leadership during his college career are judged as superlative by members of the administration and faculty of State College.

An electrical engineering senior, Monteith was praised by his professors for the outstanding work he has been doing as a scholar, laboratory instructor, and engineering school leader.

Monteith has a grade point average of 3.83 out of a possible 4.00. He received the sophomore award in electrical engineering and the Institute of Radio Engineers Junior Award. He was chosen to membership in Phi Eta Sigma, freshman scholastic society.

He is a member of Eta Kappa Mu, electrical engineering honor society of which he is president; Tau Beta Pi, engineering honor society; Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic society; the Joint Student Branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the Institute of Radio Engineers of which he is treasurer; and the Engineers' Council, student governing group of the engineering school.

In addition, he has actively participated in "High School Day," in the State Fair engineering project, and in the presentation of the Engineers' Fair. Last spring he served as marshal at the graduation ceremonies.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Planning - Futile?

This year, it seems that State College has been fortunate in making many strides forward and in falling down on very few counts. We think this statement can be made without recapitulation. However, in order to preserve this record that has been made thus far this year, the students of State will have to throw off the past years' records of one event—the Students United Fund.

Nearly every year that this fund has been conducted on our campus, the actual collections have fallen far short of the goal that had been set at the start of the campaigns. Although the goals set were often less than twenty-five cents per student, it seems that something always happened, either in the planning stage or in the actual collections, to prevent the fund from realizing its goal.

This year, however, the Fund Advisory Committee has taken many pains to insure the success of the drive. The meetings began in December, and, in nearly every one since then, new ideas and thoughts have been expressed and execution has begun so that there will be no slip-ups when the drive starts.

Also in the past, the results of the drive went almost wholly to a cause that was relatively unfamiliar on the campus—the World University Service. This year, the Advisory Committee, with approval from the Student Government has sliced the WUS fund to 40% of the receipts of the Drive. Along with the WUS, the Raleigh United Fund will receive 40% and the American Friends Service Society will receive 20%. In this way, the Committee is contributing part of the money to a local cause, a national cause, and an international cause.

Besides the tremendous amount of planning, the Advisory Committee considered it necessary to up the goal to about fifty cents per student. This step was made for two reasons. First, this drive is the only one conducted on the State campus during the year which asks that students contribute. Second, the system of reaching all State College students, and not only those living either on campus, or in fraternity houses, has been vastly improved, making the prospects for a successful drive much brighter.

Fifty cents is really quite a small amount when one thinks of the money spent each week on cigarettes, college beverages, flicks, pool, etc. By simply forgoing these pleasures for a couple of days, a student can save enough to contribute his share to making the Drive a success. The Committee has made every effort in its planning sessions to insure a worthwhile campaign; don't let this effort be in vain.

Women Buy Pants In Family Survey Reveals

Men may still wear the pants in the family. But chances are women buy them.

This is the conclusion indicated by a poll of 14,600 husbands and wives in ten leading U. S. cities (New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Boston, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Washington, D.C.), recently conducted by the H.I.S. Sportswear Company, one of the nation's largest manufacturers of men's slacks. The 7-question survey sought to measure the influence of women on male pants buying.

According to the survey, many men say they buy their own pants, but final choice usually depends upon his spouse's opinion. To the question, "Who actually purchases the pants for the male members of your family?" 8,322 or 57% said "Husband," 4,526 or 31% answered, "Wife," 1,752 or 12% answered "Other" (mother, father, friend.) However, when it came to question two, "Does any female member of the household exert any influence on selection of male attire?" 11,388 or 78% answered "Wife." Only 2,190, or 15% denied such influence.

Oddly enough, in answering question one, husbands and wives seemed to have sharply differing opinions. 5,840 male respondents or 40% said they chose their own clothing free of distaff influence. But 2,920 or 20% of the women claimed they made the decision. In describing the extent of his wife's influence, one husband laconically wrote, "Damn little!" Another wrote, "I buy them, but my wife wears them." Asked who bought the men's clothes in the family, one housewife answered, "I hope he does!"

Responding to the question, "Does any one female member of the household exert any influence. . . ." one respondent roughly replied, "It depends on whose household I happen to be temporarily associated with. Since I'm easily influenced, I have quite a collection of trousers."

Individual comments on the extent of that influence varied from a terse, "50-50" to a timid, "I don't dare make a move without her." A Bronx, New York housewife reported, "I make the decisions about male clothing. If I say I don't like the pants, he buys them. If I say I like them, he buys something else."

One of the H.I.S. survey questions which evoked many controversial responses was Question 7: "Should women help men select clothes?" 4,380 or 30% answered "No," 8,906 or 61% said "Yes," 1,314 or 9% undecided. One male respondent, evidently henpecked, wrote, "Sometimes I think men should help women pick men's clothes, but no one ever asks me." Another male answered, "No! No reason. I'm just a male supremacist."

To Question 3: "Which do you consider more difficult, choosing a man's suit or choosing a woman's dress," 10,658 or 73% said choosing a dress was harder. 2,920 or 20% claimed choosing a suit was more difficult. 1,022 or 7% were undecided. One man wrote, "I don't select women's dresses—just ogle what's inside." Another chortled, "A woman's dress—it's harder to fill!" One housewife observed, "Women's dresses—because styles, colors and fabrics vary so greatly and change so often. Men's clothing at least has the illusion of stability." A man answered, "A woman's dress. A man's suit is a matter of deciding whether it will be brown, blue or grey. But choosing a woman's dress de-

Once again I am proud to report that two of the organizations with which I am affiliated have something of an unusually interesting nature to offer to the students of our fair college. Last semester the Theater Committee of the College Union bought out the Sunday performance of TEA AND SYMPATHY at the Raleigh Little Theater; this semester the College Union, in association with the Little Theater, will make available, free of charge, another outstanding drama.

THE LARK, a stirring presentation of the story of Joan of Arc, begins its run tonight at the Little Theater. Next Sunday State College students will have their chance to attend. If you are interested, I would suggest that you pick up your free ticket at the College Union between 3 and 9 p.m., from now until Saturday.

There is something distinctly annoying in being asked for identification of any kind; it implies a sort of distrust that I do not personally care for. However, as I strolled into the C. U. Platter Party last Friday, I was asked to prove I was a student. Now, I do not deny that certain undesirable elements do now and then show up at these weekly dances; still, it seems to me that there must be some better

Damn the world'. Is it worth it? Struggle, labor, bend the back until it barks with pain. And tell me friend, what's the use? We must all meet our doom, our own little private end. Why prolong the increasing struggle with nature, that cruel and unseen tender of all. Why walk and shout and run and crawl to keep our systems from crying out in hunger? The "sleep" is the only and most perfect answer.

Everything is without meaning. All is done day by day. We are bringing about the end of all mankind. It is unavoidable, inevitable. One fine day soon the sky will suddenly darken with falling bombs and maybe a few will say, "I told you so". The rest will be worrying whether or not there is anything that can be done about it. No, nothing can be done. It is too late. The debris of the once proud race that let its lust overcome what little reasoning it had left will be spread over the ruins of the once-proud land. There will be no one left around to say, "Well, that's the way the onion peels". Mankind will have at last reached paradise. He will just be beginning the eternal "sleep" that promises so much. There will be no more grieving, no more pain, no more persecution. Man will no longer have to care. I doubt that he does now.

And 6,132 or 42% answered "Men" to the H.I.S. survey question, "Do you think male clothing fashions are designed to please men or women?" 4,964 or 34% said "Women," 3,504 or 24% were undecided. One woman replied, "To men, mainly because if fashions were designed to please us women, many styles—including the pegged pants—would never have lasted as long as they did." Two respondents had rather original answers to the question "Should women help men select clothes?" One replied, "Yes. It gives them something to do and keeps them off the streets." The other answered, "No. Most women don't even know how to select their own."

"Hei Chusnesse!" This sounded too much like that First-Sergeant I had in Germany, but it couldn't be! This was State College and how the — could he have made it here; impossible!

I turned around and saw Wayne Philbeck plowing his way through the rush-hour at nine in the morning. What a sight it was; half the crowd was still asleep, but Wayne made it.

"How about writing our column this time Nik?" "Good grief," I thought, but that was all I was stuck with the job. In case you read this column, don't be bitter, just be patient.

Last meeting of The Veterans' Association was Friday, March 18th. I was late getting there, but so were a few others. The two most interesting subjects that were discussed were the "Beautiful Legs Contest" and the coming general campus elections.

First things first. It is now official that the Veterans' Association has entered the "Beautiful Legs Contest," so don't be sore or offended if one or more of our members should approach your wife, sweetheart, or mother with a phrase such as: "Excuse me lady, but your legs are extremely pretty. Could I have a word with you?"

Well, so much for that. All we want you to know is that we are not sharking around, but we are legally in the race.

Now to the political side of the story. In the past most students have voted at the polls without the faintest idea of whom, where and what they were voting for.

It is time to do something about this. The Veterans' Association invites all forthcoming candidates to appear at one of our meetings and deliver a short speech so that we will know who he or she is, and what he or she plans to do in office. In short, let's make this an active campaign and not just a "name on paper" contest. It would be very effective if as many organizations as possible would do this.

The Association had their banquet Saturday night. From the number of tickets sold and the number of people present, I must say it was a "hit."

The spirit was high and the food excellent. Chancellor Caldwell was the guest speaker. He was accompanied by Mrs. Caldwell. Also present were Mr. and Mrs. James C. Brooks, he is from Southern Bell Telephone Company; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Bomar, he is the Association's faculty advisor; and Miss Margaret Allen, the Veterans' Secretary. Our president, Wayne Philbeck, did a "pro job" as emcee.

Honorary membership in the Association was extended to Chancellor Caldwell. He said that he was delighted to accept. The Chancellor's speech was very entertaining, informative, and complimentary. I believe that those who attended will vouch for this. The final part of our program was the presentation of Membership Drive Awards.

I have saved this for the last because it came as a pleasant surprise and was a heartwarming gesture on the part of Chancellor and Mrs. Caldwell. At the banquet Chancellor and Mrs. Caldwell extended an invitation to those present to join them at their home for a dance following the banquet.

From the crowd that came to the dance I would say that almost everybody at the banquet was present. The dance was everything you could wish for—perfect.

Ice Show Head Loses Family In Air Crash

For the second time within a month, tragedy has struck the officials or troupe of entertainment artists scheduled to appear in the Reynolds Coliseum at North Carolina State College.

The Northwest Airlines plane crash at Tell City, Ind., late Thursday claimed the lives of the wife and three children of Morris Chalfen, owner of "Holiday on Ice," which will be presented in the State College Coliseum April 12-16.

Chalfen's family was headed to Miami to attend the opening there Friday night of "Holiday on Ice."

Killed in the Tell City crash were Chalfen's wife, the former Marty Collins, who skated in the big ice production for several years prior to their marriage in 1950. She was a native of Shumaker, Ontario.

His three children whose lives were lost in the tragedy were Morris, Jr., age 2; Linda, 6; and Debbie, 7. The family nurse, Ann Wahl, also was killed.

Chalfen was in Paris at the time of the accident and is now flying home.

The Chalfen family resided in Minneapolis, Minn. Mrs. Chalfen and their children departed on the ill-fated voyage from Minneapolis yesterday afternoon for the Florida city.

Red And White Tussle Scheduled Saturday

RALEIGH—Coach Earle Edwards will get a final off-season look at his North Carolina State football squad Saturday afternoon in Riddick Stadium.

The Wolfpack will end 20 days of Spring practice with an intrasquad game set for 2 o'clock. The contest is sponsored by the Monogram Club and the public is invited.

Edwards has divided the squad into four teams for the preview attraction with the first and third combining to meet the second and fourth.

Starting for the first team will be John Gill and Jim Tapp at ends, Collice Moore and Graham Singleton at tackles, Joe Bushofsky and Alex Gilleskie at guards, Bill Hill at center, Roman Gabriel or Gerry Mancini at quarterback, Al Taylor and Claude Gibson at halfbacks and Roger Moore at fullback.

It is not known whether or not Gabriel, the Wolfpack's All-America candidate, will play. The husky sophomore is a candidate for the baseball team and has been dividing his time between the two sports.

The first team will be coached by Edwards and Bill Smaltz.

The second team, which will be coached by Al Michaels and Carey Brewbaker, will have Roy Stephenson and Dennis Kroll at ends, Bert Wilder and Tommy Avent at tackles, Harry Puckett and Jake Shaffer at guards, Jim Fitzgerald at center, Tom Dellinger at quarterback, Bob Wolf-er and Randy Harrell at half-backs and Ron Wojcicki at full-back.

Wojcicki, a quarterback last year, has been working out at fullback during spring practice and probably will be used at that position this fall.

There are 17 lettermen on the 75-man squad, including five starters from last year's team. Several players who figure prominently in the '60 plans will not play Saturday because of injuries. They include end Johnny Morris and tackles Nick Maravich and Tiny Reynolds.

"We are anxious to see the results of our practice," Edwards said. "We have made several changes in our offensive formations and are trying several players at new positions."

The intrasquad game will be played under actual game conditions.

Notes From The Wolfpack

Two State golfers were recently elected to membership in Phi Kappa Phi, honorary scholarship fraternity. They were Jimmy York of Raleigh and John Isenhour of Salisbury, both of whom have scholastic averages of 3.5 or better.

Football coach Earle Edwards has one record to be proud of.

Postponement

The baseball game that was to have been played yesterday afternoon between the N. C. State Wolfpack and Dartmouth was postponed late Wednesday morning. The two teams were scheduled to meet this afternoon in a doubleheader.

In the six years Edwards has been at State he has given scholarship aid to 101 boys and all but 14 graduated or are presently completing requirements for their degrees.

When the 1960 football season rolls around, several State players will be playing new positions. End George Vollmar has been shifted to tackle, Ron Wojcicki has moved from quarterback to fullback, Graham Singleton is at tackle, Fred Bernhard is at center, and John Stanton is halfback.

Three football players will be counted upon for action on the Wolfpack baseball team this fall. They are Roman Gabriel, Bernie Latusick and Jake Shaffer. Don't yell "Jim" when the Wolfpack baseball team is on the field or you'll get four answers . . . from outfielders Jim Lancaster and Jim Story, second baseman Jim Cox and pitcher Jim Overby.

Soccer Notice

Spring soccer practice will begin Monday, April 4. Practice sessions will be held on Tucker Field on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 4:00 to 6:00.

An important squad meeting will be held prior to the start of practice on Wednesday, March 30, at 7:30 in the bandroom of Frank Thompson Gymnasium. All candidates for the next year's soccer team are expected to attend this important meeting.

VA Banquet Termed Success

The Veterans' Association, an organization that has enjoyed varying degrees of success in past years, certainly reached its peak last Saturday night when they held their annual Membership Drive Banquet at the Reinlyn House.

Chancellor John T. Caldwell, the guest speaker for the occasion and receiver of an Honorary Membership to the Veterans' Association, played a major part in making the event a success when he announced, immediately following the introduction of guests, that all veterans, their wives or dates, and other guests were invited to his home after the banquet to sit and chat, play games, drink coffee, eat pizza, etc.

Wayne Philbeck, president of the Veteran's Association, said, in an interview with The Technician, "I think the event was something that this organization needed. With the good times that everyone seemed to be having, there is little reason why the VA can't rise to the heights of importance that it has enjoyed in the past."

The man walking away with most of the honors for the night was Gene "Gabe" Hartsell, who entertained those present with witty remarks and handicraft. Hartsell was cited as "the person who had given the most of his time and effort during the past years by going above the call of duty in every way". For his devotion to duty, Hartsell was awarded the "Golden Goblet".

Besides Dr. Caldwell and Mrs. Caldwell, other guests at the affair were Mr. and Mrs. James C. Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bomar, and Miss Margaret Allen.

One of the highlights of the banquet was the last item on the program which was the presentation of the Membership Drive Awards.

The scene of the occasion shifts from the Reinlyn House to Chancellor and Mrs. John T. Caldwell's official residence here at State College following the presentation of awards. Five Track Members Slated To Appear In Florida Relays

Five State College track speedsters left with their coach today for a trip to Florida. The object of the journey is not pleasure, however, but to capture laurels from the other Eastern States teams competing at the annual running of the Florida Relays in Gainesville Saturday.

Hank Hoomani and Tom Stradley will be running in the 100 yard dash. Along with John Davis and Neil Reeling, the two will participate in the sprint medley and the mile run.

Accompanying the boys will be Jim Joyner, a regular who is acting manager for the trip, and Mike Shea, who will coach the team. Joyner, incidentally, is from Jacksonville, so the group may stop off for a brief visit there.

A CAMPUS-TO-CAREER CASE HISTORY

"The telephone company really helps you grow with your job"

John T. Bell majored in History and Economics at the University of Georgia. On graduating in June, 1957, he joined the Southern Bell Telephone Company.

Today—less than three years later—he is a Public Office Manager for the company at Orlando, Florida. His office serves 50,000 telephone accounts and handles more than a million dollars' worth of revenue every month.

John says: "I chose a telephone career over a number of others because I was impressed by the company's Management Training Program and the opportunities offered for rapid advancement. It was the best decision I ever made."

John got his initial training at Jacksonville and Daytona Beach, where rotational assignments familiarized him with overall company operations. Then he transferred to Orlando, where he trained as a business office representative, attended an instructor's school, and then taught classes himself for several months.

Dealing with people—his "first love"—is John's main job as Public Office Manager. Besides handling personnel and other administrative duties in his office, he makes many customer contacts in and out of the office. "I'm kept busy giving talks about the company at meetings of business and civic groups," he says. "Also, I work closely with leading citizens on various civic projects. It's mighty satisfying, and I feel it's making a better manager of me. The telephone company really helps you grow with your job."

Why not look into career opportunities for you in the Bell Telephone Companies? See the Bell interviewer when he visits your campus—and read the Bell Telephone booklet filed in your Placement Office.

At left, John Bell explains a telephone training device to Miss Carolyn Dent of the Orlando office. At right, he and banker William Dial discuss the local United Fund Drive, in which both were active.

At The College Union

By Ann Smith

Every Friday night from 8 until 12 there is a gathering in the CU Snack Bar better known as the Platter Party. Usually everything runs smoothly, but once in a while somebody gums up the works. Occasionally the above mentioned somebody is a State student; when the somebody isn't from State, the gumming is caused by an off campus juvenile. This is when the Dance Committee pulls the ID check.

People under the age of 16, unless escorted by a State student, are not allowed to attend the Platter Parties. Please remember this when the complaining about the ID checks begin. If there is any complaining to do, please do it to the committee members.

Sal Salvador and his Jazz Quartet will present a Jazz Concert at 8 p.m. in the CU Ballroom on Friday, March 25. A coffee hour will follow this Music Committee sponsored event.

Another Photoscope will be held Wednesday, March 30 at 7:30 p.m. The program will be a Critical Discussion of Portrait Photography. This is the program that was cancelled because of the weather on March 9.

All campus photographers are invited to the Photography Committee meeting at 7 p.m. prior to the Photoscope program. The committee's program and budget are being planned for next year.

THE CARNIVAL IS COMING!

The Carnival Kickoff Dance will be held Friday, April 1, at 8 p.m. in the CU Snack Bar. There will be live music. All students from schools participating in the Carnival are invited to attend.

Friday noon is the deadline for signing up for the trip to Manteo this week-end. Please sign up at the CU Main Desk.

The movie for this week-end will be "Hondo." The movie stars John Wayne, Geraldine Page, and Ward Bond. It is the story of a man who kills an outlaw and takes off through deserts and mountain wildernesses to reach the man's wife, who had been deserted in hostile Apache territory.

Escrito decorating will be discussed at this week's Ceramics Class. The class is held every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the CU Craft Shop.

Jose Greco and his Spanish Dancers, sponsored by Friends of the College, will make an appearance in the Coliseum Thursday, March 31, at 8 p.m. State students and their dates are admitted free upon the showing of their ID cards.

The Theatre Committee has once again bought out the house for the Sunday, March 27, performance of The Lark presented by the Raleigh Little Theatre. This event is free to State students and their dates. Tickets can be picked up at the College Union Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday (March 23, 24, 25) between 3 and 9 p.m.

Entertainment Unlimited

Alton Lee

Well, let's start this week off with something of a dig!!! It never ceases to amaze us that it takes five people to write a show like "Ozzie and Harriet". Most of the scripts appear to have been completed on a postage stamp five minutes before shooting time. And yet, many times the shows are fairly enjoyable!

If you buy records or have a favorite artist, you probably find it more difficult every day to find the label on which your favorite singer is cutting discs. Bobby Darin, Clyde McPhatter, The Everly Brothers, Della Reese, and Sam Cooke are only a few of a host of artists who have two companies releasing their records.

There's a very simple explanation for this. Many artists change companies for better contracts. The company with which they formerly worked continues to release any records they'd made.

Brook Benton used to record for Epic. As soon as he made a hit on Mercury, Epic started releasing everything he had ever made for them. Don't despair! The records with the old company will soon run out.

Last year, sometime, we did a column on outstanding people in the entertainment world from North Carolina. Remember? Well, recently, we had the pleasure of leafing through an old annual from Atlantic Christian College in Wilson. The book was dated 1941, and guess who was in it? Ava Gardner. Miss Gardner was a freshman in 1941 at the school; and surprisingly enough, she has not started fudging on her age yet. Providing she was the regular age when she started college!!!

The people who write songs must really have it bad. Johnny Preston's new tune, "Cradle of Love" is made up of nursery rhymes. It looks like a hit!

Other tunes to watch. Bobby Darin has finally released "Clementine" with a plug for North Carolina in the tune. Also, Monte Kelly's "Summer Set" is swinging forward. The Fireflies are lighting up the musical scene with "Because of My Pride." Whether they should be proud of the tune is a record of another speed. "Someday" by Della Reese may be a very big hit someday very soon, and we couldn't forget the tune by the Crests—not too recently released—"Step by Step". It just could step up the musical charts.

"The Lark", an extremely amusing and enjoyable play, is due at the Raleigh Little Theatre starting this week end unless it is postponed after this writing.

Pat Boone may get an hour long show beginning next fall. Incidentally, the Pat Boone flick, "Journey to the Center of the Earth," reaches the center of the Varsity Theatre screen on March 31st.

TV fans should also be happy to know that "Perry Mason" has been renewed for next season.

As far as we're concerned, none of the tunes nominated for the academy awards should receive them. They are: "The Hanging Tree" "Strange Are the Ways of Love", "High Hopes", "Five Pennies", and "The Best of Everything." What happened to such motion picture tunes as "Pillow Talk", "My Faithful Heart", and "Theme from A Summer Place" to name but a few? The Academy Awards are due on April fourth, if you're interested.

Overheard in regard to "Suddenly, Last Summer", "It was worse than "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof"; "it was stupid." Friend, it isn't all that's stupid.

Lucky Strike's Dr. Frood reveals

A Foolproof Method for Rating Your College

Dear Dr. Frood: Do you believe in the theories that Shakespeare was actually either Marlowe or Bacon?

English Major

Dear English: All rot. I have done considerable research on the subject and can prove that Marlowe was actually Bacon, and that Bacon (who was a bit of a ham) was, in reality, Marlowe, and that Shakespeare, an itinerant grape squeezer who could neither read nor write, was, in fact, Queen Elizabeth!

Dear Dr. Frood: I have a very serious personal problem. I am secretly engaged to three students here. Just between you and me, however, they are all fools. I really love a certain Professor Bowdley, who is married. What should I do? Needless to say, this letter is not for publication.

Millicent Tweedley

Dear Millicent: Your secret is safe with me. I've left strict instructions not to print our correspondence. Confidentially, however, you'll never get Bowdley. I wrote Mrs. Bowdley about the situation, in order to advise you better, and she says Professor Bowdley is too old for you.

Dear Dr. Frood: Whenever I am with girls, I stutter. Frankly, I think it is because my parents never told me about the birds and the bees. What can I do?

A. W. Shucks

Dear A. W.: You had better read some books on the subject. I especially recommend Mildred Twiddle's "The Bees Are Your Friends," and Agnes Moffet's "Songs in the Treetops."

Dear Dr. Frood: Is there any accepted method for determining the academic ratings of American universities and colleges?

I. V. Leeger

Dear I. V.: Of course. Simply take the total number of graduates and divide by money.

Dear Dr. Frood: Whenever I put my Lucky down, my roommate picks it up and finishes it. How can I stop him?

Put Upon

Dear Put: Light both ends.

Dear Dr. Frood: I am just a little bit worried about exams. I have not attended any classes this semester. I have not done any reading, either. I must be in Aiken for the polo matches until the day before exams and, of course, will be unable to study. Any suggestions?

Buzzy

Dear Buzzy: Do you think professors' hearts are made of stone? Just tell them what you told me. I am sure they will understand, and if they don't excuse you altogether from exams, they certainly will arrange some nice little oral quiz you can take at your leisure later on in the summer.

Very, very deep in the jungle lived a colony of white monkeys. Now, as you know, throughout the world generally, white monkeys are a minority. There are very few white monkeys in comparison to the many black, brown, grey, pink and other colored monkeys. Therefore, this particular group was very special by its own nature.

To add to this, our group of white monkeys had moved to a relatively new area and were settling there—real pioneers, so to speak. They took homes, food, and freedom from the small red monkeys who were inhabitants of the area at the time of their migrations, and since the presence of larger animals was somewhat inhibited by the terrain, they became essentially “kings of the jungle”.

Being relatively smart and very industrious, the whites began to work toward civilizing their monkey world. Soon they realized that they were short of labor. The chief of the white monkeys called a conference, and it was decided that other colored monkeys would be imported from surrounding areas.

But importing “labor-saving devices” was soon found to be like eating peanuts—the more you get, the more you want. Finally there were nearly as many colored monkeys as there were whites. By this time signs of friction were beginning to appear, and in order to relieve tension, concessions were made by the chief of this time, later known as “the Great Emancipator.” Some believe him to be the greatest monkey of all time. It is debatable.

In any case, once the gates were open, it was (to coin a phrase) hell to close them. The colored monkeys pressed for freedom, taught themselves, and began to entertain ideas of overthrowing the white regime. The white monkeys, of course, did not wish to relinquish their strangle hold on power, and thus began to stiffen, and even use doubtful tactics to retain their established status. Several black monkeys were found hanging from grape vines as a result of the conflict. The situation grew worse.

Forty years of uneasy truce rolled by. Both sides were still bitter, still distrustful, still anxious. The House of Monkeys' Committee on Interspecies Relations held their annual meeting and reported the situation was at a standstill. The problem, as far as the committee could ascertain, was the same as forty years before—no better, no worse. And with that statement, business was concluded. As it turned out, this happened to be—and pardon the pun—the most costly bit of monkey business which the monkey world had ever known.

There was one detail which the committee overlooked. Monkeys multiply. Especially black monkeys. Since no monkey census was available, the committee had no idea of the increases in population. Since the white monkeys had been so busy keeping their power and trying to keep the colored monkeys in their place, they had little time to reproduce.

Since the colored monkeys had nothing else to do after work, they did what came naturally. Actually they did more than what came naturally. For twenty long years the clan had been in action, silently, smoothly working. Monkeys multiplying madly.

The time for action had arrived, agreed the colored monkey leaders: “We will demonstrate our strength, peacefully... peacefully.”

Suddenly, on a bright March morning, the square at the monkey capital was filled with a silent mass of black. The streets for miles around were filled—but there was no sound. Only thousands of black monkey eyes, brown monkey eyes, red monkey eyes, yellow monkey eyes. One gigantic blanket of color, spread out over the jungle, as if to smother it.

“Disperse them,” cried the white leader to his guards and police.

Rapidly the guards picked up their monkey weapons and flung themselves at the group. No one moved. They started swinging their weapons. Still no one moved. A black monkey went down, blood gushing from his head.

That was the signal. Thousands shouted and moved to battle. Blood covered the jungle; the plains turned crimson. Groans of agony and shouts of triumph filled the air. The battle swelled.

7:30 a.m., two days later: The African sun rises over a dried blood lake, filled with battered bodies. Some black, some brown, some grey, some white—all spotted red. A new “king of the jungle” appears—the vulture. Those few monkeys who survived were journeying to new horizons, or old homes. All was quiet save for the flap-flap of some solitary scavenger's wing. The air reeks with foul smell. The wingbeat ceases. All is silence.

But man is secure from this animal violence. Man is civilized, and monkeys are primitive. Man has advanced beyond the monkey, beyond savagery, beyond the “law of the jungle”—

Tommy Collins, is currently one of the top skating stars of “Holiday on Ice” and was to have performed in the opening at Miami Friday night.

It was a family custom of the Chalfens to attend the show's opening in Miami.

After the show winds up its stand in Miami, it will play in New Orleans and will then move on to the State College Coliseum here.

Art Johnson of the “Holiday on Ice” staff, who is now in Raleigh preparing for the show's opening here, said the show will be presented in Miami despite the air tragedy.

Chalfen, whose entire family was killed in the air crash, is an internationally known figure in the theatre and entertainment field.

to beasts or helpless animals. Loser and victor alike, must have suffered and wondered.

Perhaps it is good, that one forgets quickly, and it is extremely seldom, that I recount those days. Some incidents were even quite funny, not to say morbid. Perhaps the phone call I received, asking me to catch the streetcar to the front-line, in order to fight the Russians; or the first encounter we had with some of the Soldateska; the two large and war-weary soldiers greeted with loud bravado by us, mostly in German to which we added Russian endings. It might sound better and friendlier. My father invited them in, and presented his nervously grinning family. They responded with equally nervous grins and sat down.

“Of course, not all our experiences were so funny or fortunate for either side. My father was later beaten beyond recognition while warding off a group of drunken soldiers, giving my mother and sister a chance to escape out of a back window. The Russian officer quartered at our home took my father to the Russian Military Hospital, and ordered that he be treated with the best of care. This incident happened a year later, after we left Berlin and re-established ourselves 175 miles away. Somehow, we had to leave this part of the country in order to return to Berlin, which had meanwhile become occupied by the Americans, and it was the same Russian officer, who had helped my father, who took us back to Berlin in his private car. He told us on the trip, that his entire village and family had been wiped out by the Germans.”

Reuer, who has the ability to pick up languages by ear, had had a short encounter with Russian in high school, and is now taking a course in Russian under Prof. Harold L. Titus at State College. He speaks English with no accent (or did so before his residence in Dixie), and can manage to stay on his feet verbally in French and Spanish.

“I have personally benefitted from and been much impressed by certain characteristics which oddly enough both Americans and Russians share, a simple, sincere and warm friendliness, interest and generosity on the part of the private citizens. When such an opportunity to pursue further the potential on this presents itself, my obligation is a pleasure.

“My attitude toward this experiment is one of great joy and hope. As long as individuals of all walks of life from both countries are able to meet each other, there is a chance that the little contacts may some day grow and expand into a vast movement among all peoples.

EAT, DRINK AND BE MARRIED

On a recent tour of seventy million American colleges, I was struck by two outstanding facts: first, the great number of students who smoke Marlboro, and second, the great number of students who are married.

The first phenomenon—the vast multitude of Marlboro smokers—comes as no surprise for, as everyone knows, the college student is an enormously intelligent organism, and what could be more intelligent than to smoke Marlboro? After all, pleasure is what you smoke for and pleasure is what Marlboro delivers—in every puff of that good golden tobacco. If you think flavor went out when filters came in—try a Marlboro. Light up and see for yourself... Or, if you like, don't light up. Just take a Marlboro, unlighted, and puff a couple of times. Get that wonderful flavor? You bet you do! Even without lighting you can taste Marlboro's excellent filter blend. Also you can make your package last practically forever.

No, I say, it was not the great number of Marlboro smokers that astounded me, it was the great number of married students. You may find this hard to believe but latest statistics show that at some coeducational colleges the proportion of married undergraduates runs as high as thirty percent! And, what is even more startling, fully one-quarter of these marriages have been blessed with issue!

Here now is a figure to give you pause! Not that we don't all love babies. Of course we do! Babies are pink and fetching rascals, given to winsome noises and droll expressions, and we all like nothing better than to rain kisses on their soft little skulls. But just the same, to the young campus couple who are parents for the first time the baby is likely to be a source of considerable worry. Therefore, let me devote today's column to a few helpful hints on the care of babies.

—And a twist of lemon peel.

First of all, we will take up the matter of diet. In the past, babies were raised largely on table scraps. This, however, was outlawed by the Smoot-Hawley Act, and today babies are fed a scientific formula consisting of dextrose, maltose, distilled water, evaporated milk and a twist of lemon peel.

After eating, the baby tends to grow sleepy. A lullaby is very useful to help it fall asleep. In case you don't know any lullabies, make one up. This is not at all difficult. In a lullaby the words are unimportant since the baby doesn't understand them anyhow. The important thing is the sound. All you have to do is string together a bunch of nonsense syllables, taking care that they make an agreeable sound. For example:

Go to sleep, my little infant,
Goo-goo moo-moo poo-poo binfant.

Having fed and serenaded the baby, arrange it in the position for slumber. A baby sleeps best on its stomach so place it that way in its crib. Then to make sure it will not turn itself over during the night lay a soft but fairly heavy object on its back—another baby, for instance.

And when baby is fast asleep—the little angel!—why don't you relax and give yourself a treat? With Marlboro—or if you like mildness but you don't like filters—with Philip Morris made in long size and regular by the sponsors of this column.

This is the B-52. Advanced as it may be, this airplane has one thing in common with the first war-galleys of ancient Egypt... and with the air and space vehicles of the future. Someone must chart its course. Someone must navigate it.

For certain young men this presents a career of real executive opportunity. Here, perhaps you will have the chance to master a profession full of meaning, excitement and rewards... as a Navigator in the U. S. Air Force.

To qualify for Navigator training as an Aviation Cadet you must be an American citizen between 19 and 26 1/2—single, healthy and intelligent. A high school diploma is required, but some college is highly desirable. Successful completion of the training program leads to a commission as a Second Lieutenant... and your Navigator wings.

If you think you have what it takes to measure up to the Aviation Cadet Program for Navigator training, see your local Air Force Recruiter. Or clip and mail this coupon.

There's a place for tomorrow's leaders on the Aerospace Team.
