NSF Backs Research

Four "junior scientists," all students at North Carolina State College, are engaging in scientific projects made possible through a $5,395 grant from the National Science Foundation to support the college's Undergraduate Research Participation Program.

The research participation is an interdepartmental program of the Departments of Animal Industry and Entomology, School of Agriculture.

The program is an effort by the Federal government to spur the advancement of scientific research through the encouragement of young people to follow careers in science.

Directing the program is Dr. John J. McNeill, research assistant professor in the college's Department of Animal Industry.

Students participating in the program are Mrs. Jane Wolfe of Jamesville, John Edwards of Waynesville, Talmadge Brown and Frank Ziglar, both of Raleigh.

Mrs. Wolfe's study involves the colorimetric method for the determination of iron in biological materials. This project is under the supervision of Dr. Gennard Hatrone of the college's animal nutrition section.

The study of the enzymes involved in protein degradation by the lactic acid bacteria is Edwards' research project. This project is under the supervision of Dr. Marvin Speck of the college's dairy manufacturing section.

Brown is studying the harmonic control of early embryonic development in sheep. Supervising the project is Dr. Lester Ulberg of the college's animal breeding section.

Ziglar's project, hydrolysis of fats and fatty acids by lipolytic enzymes, is under the supervision of Dr. Samuel Tove of the college's animal nutrition section.

Dates For Class Ring Orders Set By Ring Comm.

Ring representatives from the Herf-Jones Company will take orders for class rings on February 6 through 10 at the College Union. The Herf-Jones company was designated the official ring company by members of the ring committee which took bids on November 4th.

The eligibility to order class rings rests with the Student Government Resolution 1-2/18/60-1, which reads as follows: "... that second semester juniors with a 2.0 or above scholastic average be allowed to order their class rings during the second semester of their junior year and receive the said rings upon arrival; all undergraduate students shall present their roster slips and registration cards and I.D. cards to the ring company representatives, ... that any senior be allowed to order a class ring."

Student Spirits High For Game After March

By Mike Lea

Approximately five hundred State students marched to the Capitol last night to cheer the Wolfpack in their game with the Carolina Tar Heels tonight.

Marches of this type have been a State tradition for many years, but this is the first one that State students have staged this year.

The crowd was more orderly than it has been in the previous years and previous parades. Only spasmodic firecrackers were thrown, and no one was seen engaging in any acts of vandalism.

This orderliness can probably be attributed to the very good cooperation of the Raleigh Police Force, which led the parade down Hillsboro street. This was a very welcome about-face by the city police who have become notorious on campus for their actions during a parade last spring.

At this parade, which was staged to support President Eisenhower's stand at one of the Summit Conferences, the Raleigh Police threw teargas at the paraders and arrested several students for "Parading without a Permit."

This time, however, a permit had been registered with the Police Department; and there were no hints of any student-police friction.

The parade started in the area between Owen and Tucker Dormitories around 9:30 p.m. and didn't gain much impetus until about forty-five minutes later after the group had visited Bragaw to pick up more students (and had been greeted there by water bombs thrown from the upper floors by students who were making such remarks as "Freshmen go home" or "Freshmen go study" or "Freshmen go —.")

Such remarks as these did not dampen the high spirits of the marchers (although some of the bombs dampened their clothes), and the crowd moved back up the campus, gaining more and more as it went along.

After the crowd had visited all the dormitories, it began its long hike to the capitol. When it arrived at the gates of the College, it was met by John Kanipe, a Student Government member, and some representatives of the Raleigh Police Force. Kanipe told the crowd that a permit had been registered and that the police would lead the students. When Kanipe made this announcement, a large roar went up from the crowd and the students swarmed onto Hillsboro.

When the crowd arrived at the Capitol, they began a Pep Rally with the usual "Rip 'em Up, etc." cheer. From this old favorite, they went to other cheers that to say the least, were slightly anti-Carolina.

About eleven o'clock the crowd dispersed and the students trudged back to the college with sore feet and a newfound respect for the Raleigh Police Force.

New Look In Textiles Shown To Foundation Meeting Here

Officers and directors of the North Carolina Textile Foundation got a glimpse of the "new look" in textile education at North Carolina State College today.

More than 40 of the State's top-level industrialists accepted Dean Malcolm E. (Sandy) Campbell's invitation to observe the educational programs, research functions, and industrial services of State College's world-famed School of Textiles.

Dean Campbell and his associates, tracing 100 years of textile education, will tell how modern textile technology has evolved from a 19th century "how-to-do-it" process of learning to the current idea of higher learning based in sciences, technology, and the humanities.

Objectives of State College's School of Textiles, organized before the turn of the century, will be outlined by Dr. Campbell, beginning at 11 a.m.

Short, informal talks on various phases of the college's research and education program in textiles were given by Prof. E. B. Grover, Prof. H. A. Ruthenford, Prof. Dame S. Hamby, G. H. Dunlap, and W. E. Smith.

A luncheon was held in the Rebel Room of Balentine's Restaurant, Cameron Village, at 12:30 p.m.

Starting at 1:45 p.m., the visitors toured the multi-million dollar facilities of the Nelson Textile Building, headquarters of the college's School of Textiles.

"What's New in Japan?" was the subject of a talk by William A. (Bill) Newell, formerly director of research in the State College School of Textiles and now product planning director for the Whittin Machine Works, Whitinsville, Mass., who will speak following the tour. Newell recently visited Japanese textile centers.

A discussion followed Newell's speech.

Later the group attended a dinner at the College Inn and will be guests of the School of Textiles at the University of North Carolina - North Carolina State basketball game in the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum at 8:15 p.m.

Officers of the North Carolina Textile Foundation, Inc., are:

W. H. Barnhardt of Charlotte, president of Barnhardt Brothers, president; J. A. White of Greensboro, vice president of J. P. Stevens and Company, Inc., and P. Huber Hanes, Jr., of Winston-Salem, president of the Hanes Knitting Company, vice presidents; A. Alex Shuford of Hickory, president of Shuford Mills, treasurer; and Thomas N. Ingram of Charlotte, executive vice president of the North Carolina Textile Manufacturing Association, secretary and assistant treasurer.

The Textile Foundation, established in 1942, has had a total income exceeding $1,800,000. It is supporting a broad range of teaching and research functions in the State College School of Textiles.

Mental Telepathy In Infants Studied By Psychiatrist

Dr. Joan Fitzherbert, a psychiatrist, suggested Tuesday that telepathy may be the answer to several puzzling factors for mother-baby relationship.

She said a baby, even before it is capable of reasoning, may be conscious of love or lack of love and even may know if parents are going out for the evening.

Dr. Fitzherbert, medical director of a child guidance clinic, said one puzzling factor is that mothers sometimes know their children are in danger even when they may be far away. Another puzzling factor, she said, is that babies sometimes become restless when their parents are planning an evening out.

Dr. Fitzherbert said many years of study have convinced her that while the baby is developing its reasoning power it receives information from its mother's mind.

Dr. Leon Helguera, of State's History Dept., spoke of the importance of civic responsibility to the members. He remarked "it's time we took the sugar coating off the bitter pill and swallowed it", in noting a society that spends three times as much money on advertising than on education. He said, speaking to the campus leaders, "you must lead and not be led—you must never stop questioning. Such men will not always be popular."

Initiated into this leadership fraternity were three honorary members—Dr. Kingston Johns, of the counseling center; Mr. Sidney Knowles, of the English dept.; and Mr. James Fulghum, head of dormitories at State.

The active initiates are: Mike Perry, Sanford, N. C.; Bill Jackson, Winston-Salem, N. C.; John Curlee, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Dick Williamson, Canton, N. C.; Roger Bone, Nashville, N. C.; Ed Tolson, Tarboro, N. C.; Charles Sparrow, Charlotte, N. C.; John Wilcox, Tampa, Fla.; Jimmy Futrell, Potocosi, N. C.; Jim Groce, Asheville, N. C.; James Hart, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Ervin Lineberger, Dallas, N. C.

Comments From The Editor U.N.C. Fans Injured

Last week's story on the University of North Carolina's probation has many Carolina students, fans, and alumni fired up. It seems that the story hit many of them like a bolt of lightning. The Tar Heels were all ready to take the "mild" probation in stride, but when last Wednesday night's edition hit the campus, the country clubbers did not like the statements that were printed in the story. It seems that they could not accept some true facts about their idols.

We would like to clear up some of their minds since some of them misinterpreted some of the statements. We did not say that Carolina's players were "the highest salaried college basketball players anywhere". We stated that "they were PROBABLY the highest salaried college basketball players anywhere."

The Carolina fans were very glad to see the school come away with a one-year probation. It is true that they supplied the facts for the NCAA. We are proud of them for doing that for one reason. If they had not supplied the books, they would have probably had a stiffer penalty hanging over their heads tonight.

We have received many letters and phone calls concerning the editorial and story. It is a shame that they could not have been printed in tonight's issue. The majority of them were from Carolina fans . . . and some of the words they used could not have been printed since it would have taken some censoring.

The Daily Tar Heel thought that the manner in which the papers were distributed over the Chapel Hill campus last Wednesday night was completely wrong. We will agree with them and say that none of our members on the staff had anything to do with the incident.

It seems that the Daily Tar Heel had a field day about four years ago with State College when we went on probation.

We hope that all the Carolina fans did not think that we wanted them to come over to Raleigh and cry on our shoulders. We will agree with all the Carolina fans in saying that it is a shame that it had to happen to such a fine group of boys. But that is the breaks.

It appears that we stepped a little too hard on Carolina's pride and joy. They probably felt that all of the State students should have gone over to the Hill and patted them gently and said we are behind you. It appears from this corner that there would have been very few students over at the Hill from State.

The probation hung us for five years. We are sure that the Carolina students, fans, and alumni will not be hurt too much by the MILD probation.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

Fraternity Flashes

The fall semester is almost over. All that remains are examinations and the moaning or celebrating resulting from these little gems which enable our instructors to find out how students react under pressure. Here's hoping that there will be more celebrating than moaning, as it looks mighty good to have that Fraternity average for the semester above the campus All Men's Average.

Fraternity Row seems to be progressing at a slow but steady pace. Each fraternity is now in the process of deciding on the final design of its new house. Mr. Milton Smalls has preliminary plans drawn up for each individual house and these plans are being submitted to the housing committee of each fraternity for revision and final approval. Undoubtedly there will be some word in the near future from Dean Bowers and the building committee of the IFC as to deadlines for final approval of plans, statements concerning available funds for furnishings, and possibly, a predicted date for the starting of construction.

I haven't been able to obtain any information concerning the dates during which open rush will be declared for an organized Spring Semester rush week. The IFC has been considering several possible dates. However, no definite dates have been announced. Most houses on campus anticipate taking fairly large pledge classes for the spring semester.

Therefore, it would be to mutual advantage for the fraternities of the IFC to take spring rush a bit more seriously than has been the case in past years. There are a great number of potential rushees on campus who need a little friendly prodding and a warm invitation before they will take part in fraternity rush week. The IFC could help along these lines by promoting rush week and encouraging the rushees to turn out in force.

John Pungur Suffers Eye Injury

John Pungur, a sophomore forward on the Wolfpack basketball team, suffered an unfortunate incident in last Saturday's game with Wake Forest. He received a finger in the pupil of his left eye. He is currently in Baptist Hospital at Winston-Salem where he is waiting to receive word on the extent of the injury of his eye. Both of his eyes are covered with bandages. He has had to lie flat on his back. It is expected that he will be out for two weeks depending upon the extent of his injury. However, the accident might cause permanent damage to his eye.

It is hoped that some of his friends and students will write him a get well card to hurry him on his road to recovery.

Pungur was coming into his own and had been a starter since the Dixie Classic.

NoDoz alerts you with a safe and accurate amount of caffeine—the same refreshing stimulant in coffee and tea. Yet non-habit-forming. NoDoz is faster, handier, more reliable. CU Photography Club Offers Varied Programs

At one time or another anyone who has ever snapped a picture has had the desire to become a better photographer. If you want to learn how to take pictures, to develop and then to print them, and how to improve your photographic technique—or if you are an amateur who would like to help others develop an interest in photography—well, then, the College Union Photography Committee has something to offer you.

Rodney McCurry is chairman of the Photography Committee. This year Rodney was the instructor of the six weeks Beginner's Photo Course given in October, and which will be repeated in February. The committee sponsors a program known as "Photoscope" which is held the first and third Wednesday of each month for the enjoyment of all campus photographers. The committee is also responsible for the Darkroom where College Union members may develop their film and print their pictures. There are two photographic contests sponsored by the committee each year; and photographic displays are shown in the building at various times. This year the committee has invited the students from some of our local girls' schools to participate in its program with the hope that these schools will begin their own photographic programs.

Bill Bell is the subcommittee chairman in charge of the Darkroom. He and his committee members check the darkroom daily to see that all the equipment is in order. They are responsible for the Darkroom Test which must be taken in order to get a pass to use this area. To obtain a pass, one must take a written test on the rules governing the Darkroom and also be able to demonstrate the ability to print a picture.

Zack Taylor is Photoscope chairman. This subcommittee plans the programs to be presented each first and third Wednesday by the Photography Committee. The programs include speakers and critics on techniques of black and white and colored printing, films on photographic procedure, and outings such as the recent night photography shooting session. The program is varied in an effort to meet the desires of everyone.

Ken Crowell and his subcommittee are responsible for all the publicity for the Photography Committee. They write the news releases for the Technician and other papers, and also make the posters for all the events. A new project for this group is the Photo Newsletter which will be sent to all committee members to tell them of programs being held and also giving tips on photo shooting and printing. The Swap Shop will also be included. This is a section in which members may advertise equipment they wish to trade or to sell.

The Contest subcommittee is led by Sam Barham. This group plans the contests held by the Photography Committee. Each fall the Miss Photogenic Contest gives photographers a chance to see and to photograph pretty girls, and it also gives some of our local girls a chance to display their modeling ability. This project is certainly one of the most outstanding programs of the entire year for the committee. The annual spring photo contest awards prizes to campus photographers for black and white as well as for colored pictures. All College Union members who are interested in photography are urged to enter their work.

The Photography Committee is now getting ready to display some of the pictures taken by members of the group in a showing during the Fine Arts Festival held in February at the College Union. Coming in the very near future will also be a One Man Show of photographs taken by one of the student photographers of the group.

Country "Clubbers" Visit Big Barn

By Earl Mitchell
Sports Editor

The hour of reckoning is at hand. Tonight in Reynolds Coliseum the Carolina Tar Heels, ranked sixth in the nation in both polls, visit the State Wolfpack and, brother, it "ain't" for a tea party either.

Heels Ranked 6th

Coach Frank McGuire brings his Carolina five to Raleigh tonight to renew one of the most intense rivalries in national collegiate basketball today. When the Heels come to Raleigh or the Pack goes to The Hill for a cage tussle, you can throw all the previous games out the window.

The Tar Heels were recently put on probation for one year by the NCAA, but they have not let this slow them down one bit. Within six hours after they were put on probation, they smashed Wake Forest in high style in Woolen Gym. Monday night they beat Maryland 58-52 despite the Artic-type second half that saw only four Heel floor shots drop through the hoop.

Almost the entire offensive punch of the Carolina team lies in York Larese and Doug Moe, both of whom are All-American candidates. Both these sharpshooters are averaging over 20 points per game and if State hopes to win tonight they will have to put the clamps on both of these boys.

Huddock Spells Trouble

Teaming with Moe on the Carolina front line will probably be Jim Huddock, a 6-7 junior, and Dick Kepley, a 6-9 senior. Moe stands 6-6 giving the UNC club a forward wall that averages about 6-8. Kepley has not turned in performances this year that were expected of him to date. Huddock is a rough competitor in the rebounding department.

In the backcourt along with Larese will more than likely be Don Walsh. Walsh has not been an offensive threat to many of the teams that the Tar Heels have faced so far in the season. Larry Brown, a sophomore mid-jet, will undoubtedly see a great deal of action in the backcourt. Brown has a fine two-handed set shot that falls through the hoop with alarming regularity. Yogi Poteet, a junior, will also see some playing time before the night is over.

The number one benchman in the frontcourt is 6-7 Ken McComb, who is also a tough man under the boards. Harry Jones, a big 200 pound 6-7 junior, could also see some action.

Board Power

So far this season, the Tar Heel board strength has been the best in the ACC. Carolina leads the ACC in rebounding according to the latest figures with an average of 53 grabs a game.

After getting off to a slow start with two setbacks in a row, the Tar Heels have come on fast and are now ranked in the sixth position in both the UPI and AP polls.

Turning our attention to the Wolfpack we find a team that has been plagued by a disease called lose-the-game-in-the-second-half or commonly called fall-apartitis. In the games that the Pack have lost this season they have been ahead at half-time in all but one of them. Last year against the Carolina five, the Pack put on brilliant second half rallies that scared the Heels out of their country club lounge chairs before losing.

Punger Out

State will be playing under a slight handicap tonight in that they will be without the services of sophomore forward John Punger. Punger was forced to leave the Wake Forest game last Saturday after he had been poked in the eye by a stray finger. He was forced to remain in a Winston-Salem hospital until the latter part of this week. He will definitely be out of action for the rest of the semester according to officials.

The starting spot vacated by Punger will probably be filled by Russ Marvel. The other starting spots will be filled by Stan Niewierowski, Pack scoring leader, Moose DiStefano, Dutch Muehlbauer and Ken Rohloff.

In a reserve capacity, the Pack has Bruce Hoadley, Terry Litchfield, and Jon Speaks along with Dan Wherry playing the chief roles.

91st Meeting

This will be the 91st meeting between the two schools on the hardwood with UNC holding the margin of wins in the meetings with 54 to only 36 for the State forces. On Monday there were about 2,000 ducats left for the battle tonight and box office manager Dick Ferrell said that he had had the greatest demand for student tickets for this game than any game this season.

The big battle is slated to get underway at about 8:15 following a freshmen game between the two schools.

length of time will be disposed of according to college policies.

To provide more time for studying for examinations, the D. H. Hill Library will extend its hours as follows: Sunday, January 22, it will remain open until 11 p.m. No service after 6 p.m. The library will also be open until midnight on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of exam week with no service after 10 p.m.

Every student who is repeating a course for credit this semester should secure a special IBM card (one for each such course) from his adviser or department, complete it and bring it to the Registration Office, 12 Holladay Hall, immediately. This applies only to courses previously taken at State College. The Registration Office has worked out plans to correct all totals in semester hours and points automatically when the fall academic reports are run by IBM if this information can be secured in time to process it. This will be a wonderful service to the Students, advisers, and Deans or Directors of Instruction; therefore, it is hoped that the students concerned will co-operate in helping furnish this information promptly. All of these cards will be checked against the official records in the Registrations Office before the IBM work is done and must be in that office by 5 p.m., Tuesday, January 24.

The meeting of the Amateur Radio Club set for this Thursday has been cancelled.

On February 4, the CU Dance and Social Committees will sponsor the Spring Get Acquainted Dance in the CU Ballroom. It will last from 8 til 12 p.m. and the dress is semi-formal. The theme is travel throughout the world, but you won't have to travel far for female companionship since nine (9) girl schools have been invited. Come on—come one and all to the best dance of the social season.

The CU Social Committee is having at 7 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday (January 23, 24, 25) during exams a coffee hour in the College Union for all students. Free coffee and cookies will be served. Come by the Union and relax for a few minutes and have some battery acid (coffee) before you start the evening's studies.

Students desiring to obtain tickets to the State-Virginia game that is to be held in Greensboro's new coliseum may do so by going by the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum Box Office. Tickets are being sold at half price. A student may also pick up a date ticket for half price. The price of the tickets are $1.25. The game is to be held January 31 during the semester break.

Graduate Study Opportunities Announced

The Counseling Department Office, at 201 Holladay Hall, has received a number of communications announcing fellowships and other graduate study opportunities which may be of interest to graduating seniors and graduate students. A separate release will be issued describing a graduate student exchange arrangement with the Technical University of Hanover, Germany. A few examples of announced opportunities for graduate study in the United States are given below. To pursue most such opportunities the student contacts the individual institutions at which the fellowships or assistantships are offered.

National Defense Graduate Fellowships — 1500 fellowships available for study in 1961-62 in the humanities, education, engineering, social sciences, biological sciences, physical sciences & mathematics. Stipends of $2000 for 1st year of study, $2200 for second, and $2400 for third, plus $400 each year for each dependent. Preference given to students interested in college or university teaching. Students apply directly to institutions with approved programs. It is appropriate for a student to write to the institutions in which he is interested to inquire about the availability of fellowships and assistantships in general, and to include an inquiry about National Defense Fellowships.

The J. Spencer Love Fellowships at the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University. One man chosen each year from each of five southern states—Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. The awards range up to a maximum of $5000 for two years, in accordance with individual need. The Harvard University School of Business Administration also offers a number of other financial aid arrangements, principally a program of deferred payment. Apply to the Director of Financial Aid, Harvard Business School, Soldiers Field, Boston 63, Mass.

The North Carolina Scottish Rite Fellowship to study in the School of Government at George Washington University. The fellowship amounts to $1,800 and is to be awarded to a recipient of a bachelor of arts or a bachelor of science degree from a college or university in North Carolina. The purpose is to educate students for leadership in federal, state and local government. Candidates are recommended to the Education Committee of the North Carolina Bodies of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. Inquire at 201 Holladay Hall.

The Cornell University Graduate School offers both fellowships and assistantships in all fields. Included among these is the Hannibal C. Ford Fellowship which offers $4,000 toward the first year of graduate study in mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, engineering physics, or mechanics and materials. The fellowship is provided by the Ford Instrument Company, Division of Sperry Rand Corporation. Apply before February 10th to the Graduate School, Cornell University, 125 Day Hall, Ithaca, New York.

The Johns Hopkins University offers fellowships for study toward the degree of Master of Arts in Teaching. Open only to college graduates who have not completed teacher training. Apply before March 1st to the Director of Admissions, the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore 18, Maryland.

undergraduate degrees in engineering, physical science, or social science. Apply before March 15th to the Director of Graduate Studies, Department of Industrial Administration, School of Engineering, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

Other announcements include fellowships for graduate study in Physiological Chemistry at Washington University, St. Louis; and financial aid for the Master of Business Administration program at Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah. Announcements of scholarships in Law have been received from the University of Virginia and from Wake Forest College.

HOW SMALL CAN YOU GET?

Today let us address ourselves to a question that has long rocked and roiled the academic world: Is a student better off at a small college than at a large college?

To answer this question it is necessary first to define terms. What, exactly, do we mean by a small college? Well sir, some say that in order to be called truly small, a college should have an enrollment of not more than four students.

I certainly have no quarrel with this statement; a four-student college must unquestionably be called small. Indeed, one could even call it intime if one knew what intime meant. But I submit there is such a thing as being too small. Take, for instance, a recent unfortunate occurrence at Crimscott A and M.

Crimscott A and M, situated in a pleasant valley nestled between Denver and Baltimore, was founded by A. and M. Crimscott, two brothers who left Ireland in 1706 to escape the potato famine of 1841. As a result of their foresight, the Crimscott brothers never went without potatoes for one single day of their lives—and mighty grateful they were! One night, full of gratitude after a hearty meal of French fries, cottage fries, hash browns, and au gratin, they decided to show their appreciation to this bountiful land of potatoes by endowing a college. They stipulated that enrollment should never exceed four students because they felt that only by keeping the college this small could each student be assured of the personalized attention, the camaraderie, the feeling of belonging, that is all too often lacking in higher education.

Well sir, things went along swimmingly until one Saturday a few years ago. On this day Crimscott had a football game scheduled against Minnesota, its traditional rival. Football was, of course, something of a problem at Crimscott, what with only four students enrolled in the entire college. It was easy enough to muster a backfield, but finding a good line—or even a bad line—baffled the most resourceful coaching minds in the country.

Well sir, on the morning of the big game against Minnesota, its traditional rival, a capricious destiny dealt Crimscott a cruel blow—in fact, four cruel blows. Sigafos, the quarterback, woke up that morning with the backbone fever. Wrichards, the slotback, was unable to start his motorcycle. Beerbohm-Tree, the wingback-tailback, got his necktie caught in his espresso machine. Langerhans, the fullback, was stolen by gypsies.

Consequently, alas, none of the Crimscott team showed up at the game, and Minnesota, its traditional rival, was able to score almost at will. Crimscott was so out of sorts that they immediately broke off football relations with Minnesota, its traditional rival. This later became known as the Dred Scott Decision.

So you can see how only four students might be too small an enrollment. The number I personally favor is twenty. How come? Because when you have twenty students and one of them opens a pack of Marlboro Cigarettes, there are enough to go around for everybody, and no one has to be deprived of Marlboro's fine, mild flavor, of Marlboro's easy-drawing filter, of Marlboro's joy and zest and steadfast companionship, and as a result you have a student body that is filled with sweet content and amity and harmony and concord and togetherness and soft pack and flip-top box.

That's how come.

You will also find twenty cigarettes—twenty incomparable unfiltered king-size cigarettes—in each pack of Marlboro's new partner in pleasure—the Philip Morris Commander. Welcome aboard!
