U S Citizens Warned To Leave Cuba Quickly

The United States Sunday advised American citizens still in Cuba to leave the country "in the near future."

Officials here said the Swiss Embassy in Havana began circulating notices telling the Americans it would be in their best interest to get out of Cuba. The Swiss have represented U. S. interests in Cuba since this country severed diplomatic relations with Premier Fidel Castro.

The officials said no immediate threat against the Americans prompted the step.

They said it simply was considered wise at this time to get as many Americans as possible out of Cuba. They noted that the U. S. citizens were advised to leave, not ordered to get out.

The Swiss began contacting the Americans in Cuba as Republican and Democratic senators showered the Kennedy administration with suggestions on what to do about the

Kennedy Confers On Laos

WASHINGTON—President Kennedy cut short a Virginia weekend late Sunday to fly back to Washington for top-level conferences on the growing Communist threat to the Western-supported government of Laos.

The President, apparently getting closer to some urgent decisions on U. S. policy toward southeast Asia, met for about 90 minutes with Secretary of State Rusk, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and other diplomatic and military aides.

Rusk, who spent a good part of the day at the State Department conferring with his aides, told reporters as he left the White House that the session with Kennedy concerned Laos "and other matters."

Rusk, who returned to the State Department, refused to elaborate. But it was increasingly obvious that the United States and its SEATO allies were approaching the point where they must make some basic decisions unless the Communist-backed Pathet Lao Rebels heeded a British-Soviet appeal for a cease-fire.

Intervention Discussed
Most of the public discussion here centered on the possibility of some form of military intervention by the SEATO allies. They are pledged to protect the integrity of Laos if the little southeast Asian kingdom requests help.

However, there also was a possibility of some action in the United Nations, perhaps a request for a joint police action such as was conducted in Korea. Although such a move would be subject to Soviet veto in the Security Council, it could be approved by the General Assembly.

Questioned about the meeting, associate White House Press

The All-Campus Sing is sponsored by Mu Beta Psi, music honorary on campus, and is open to all students who wish to participate. The winners of each division are awarded a gold loving cup appropriately engraved. The event is held each year on the Parent's Weekend on Sunday afternoon. This year there were approximately three hundred guests attending. This is the largest crowd that has ever witnessed one of these events.

We Should Be Happy

We should be happy. Our old rival, Carolina, has received another kick in its teeth along with its probation, and its much-publicised fight with Duke.

When we read about the scandals earlier in the year, we were shocked and horrified like every other basketball fan; but when the news was released that Carolina and possibly another big four school were implicated earlier this week, we didn't know what to think. Along with the bigtime basketball which has come to our state, we also find that bigtime racketeering and gambling has invaded.

The first question that came to our mind was, "Is it worth it?", and the only answer that we could give is that it is not. If athletics which make us famous all over the nation also can indirectly make us notorious, it is time to re-examine the goals of the athletic programs.

Athletic programs are food for almost every student at a college. It gives them something to identify their school with other than a nuclear reactor or a mathematics text book. They offer needed entertainment for students who need diversion from their studies. Athletic programs are the basic of school spirit—an indefinable concept which never-the-less means much to any college. Athletic scholarships are given to men who might not otherwise be able to obtain a college degree. All of these advantages and many more are realized from athletic programs, but there are also disadvantages.

The one most cited is the high degree of professionalism which is evidently attained when an athlete is "paid" for his athletic prowess by grants-in-aid etc., but we do not hold that this is a grave disadvantage. What we do not like about athletic programs is the fact that they seem to too often to require underhanded dealings.

We have been on probation, Carolina is on probation, and we would be willing to venture a guess that within five years one or two other schools in our area will find themselves under NCAA ban.

A Carolina athlete has been found to be one of the main cogs in the basketball "fix ring", and another is under heavy suspicion. There are hints that another school in this area will also be questioned in this matter.

If athletics are going to breed these types of dealings, we want no part of them; but we do not feel that it is necessary for athletics to become so corrupted. Our school has had a successful athletic program this year, and there has been no hint of any "dirty dealings" since the probation four and a half years ago. We have fielded good teams composed for the most part of decent people, and we can see no reason why this cannot be done at other schools. Until it is, there will be the dirty rumors and the righteous scorn of the American people to athletics.

Carolina has had its comeuppance. We should be happy, but for some reason we are sorry—and sort of sick.

To The Editor

Of The Technician: Mr. Duncan Stuart's comments in Thursday's Technician are disappointing to me as a student and as a member of the State College community. I challenge Mr. Stuart to prove the charge "... teaching is the last thing the administration concerns itself with..." In my four years as a State College student an attitude diametrically opposed to that suggestion has existed. For the last two years, I have been privileged to meet the faculty and administration officials in the liaison committee; I have been awed by the vigor and dedication displayed by these men. It has been hypothesized by Mr. Stuart that the selection of a teacher by a committee of seniors representing every department and recommended by their respective department heads are not mature enough to identify those professors who are dedicated, competent, and "of the outstanding classroom teachers." Do students actually postulate the fully prepared, boring lecturer? It is suggested that the administration consider as a proper measure of teaching abilities the record of the number of committees on which a teacher serves?

This award was initiated to encourage and recognize men who excel as classroom teachers. We students are interested in teaching proficiency and seek to express our appreciation to professors who are also interested in this proficiency. Can you, then, brazenly, and ungratefully assert that "We don't really need this sort of thing?"

To The Editor

Of The Technician: Time marches on and another year is approaching its end. Many things have been completed and others have been started which must be carried into next year. Our elections for student government leaders and officials are over and the officers for next year have been elected. NCS Pershing Rifle Company Largest In Tar Heel State

By Jim Jones

North Carolina State College's Company L of the 4th Regiment of the National Society of Pershing Rifles is the largest and most active unit in the Tar Heel State. It was the first company organized in the State, and it quickly has grown to be an important unit of one of the most highly regarded honorary military societies in the United States.

The National Society of Pershing Rifles was founded in 1894 at the University of Nebraska as a national honorary military society by the late General John J. (Black Jack) Pershing, commander of the American Expeditionary Forces in France during World War I. General Pershing founded a military society when he was a military instructor at the University of Nebraska; the society later became known as the Pershing Rifles.

As stated in the preamble to the constitution of the Pershing Rifles, the society was formed with the purpose to encourage, develop, and preserve the highest ideals of our military profession, to promote American citizenship, and to provide appropriate recognition of a high degree of military ability among the cadets of the senior Reserve Officers Training Corps.

The number of companies has increased over the last 60 years from the one original unit to almost 200 units throughout the United States, and a new company has just been formed at the University of Puerto Rico.

Each company is formed and controlled by the ROTC cadets at the individual university or college, and all participation, with the exception of drill on regular drill days, is strictly an extra curricular activity. Regular Army, Air Force, or Naval Officers who are military instructors at the respective schools act as advisers to the companies.

National organization of the Pershing Rifles is basically the same as that of the armed forces. National headquarters is located at the University of Nebraska; fourteen regimental headquarters are scattered throughout the United States. Each regiment is composed of a number of companies which are controlled by the respective regimental headquarters; these, in turn, are controlled by the national headquarters.

The National Society of Pershing Rifles has its own constitution, colors (blue and white), flower (white rose), standards, and jewels. There are Standing Operating Procedures similar to armed forces operating procedures.

Each company is required to submit monthly, semi-annual, and annual reports to its regimental headquarters on finances, manpower, social activities, publicity, and personal appearance.

Each year a national assembly, or convention, is held to determine policies, make amendments to the constitution, and handle matters of national importance. Soon after the national convention, a regimental assembly is held at each regimental headquarters to determine plans and procedures for the following year; another regimental assembly is held in the spring to follow up on these events.

Although the Pershing Rifles is a military society and cadets spend much time working on both precision and standard drill, parties, banquets, and dances are held throughout the year to create fraternal friendships.

COMPANY L-4

Now to take a look at Company L of the 4th Regiment, located at North Carolina State College. Company L is composed of approximately 90 men. This is a large number compared to the few men who organized the company in 1953.

Membership in the company is competitive basis. Each fall, a large number of cadets are selected as prospective members. These cadets, called pledges, must complete their pledge training and meet the requirements set forth for a Pershing Rifleman before they can become members.

During the time a cadet is a pledge, he learns his duties as to military service and to the Pershing Rifles. He is taught the basic rifle movements that all ROTC cadets must learn. After he has mastered these movements, he is taught the intricacies of fancy drill. If he progresses rapidly, he is moved out of the pledge platoon into the crack drill team. In the crack drill platoon, the cadet participates in parades and drill competitions, advancing in skill and rank as his length of service increases.

Membership in the Pershing Rifles gives a cadet a taste of military service life and a chance to learn discipline and military courtesy, both of which make him a better individual.

Company L-4 has its own staff officers who are elected by the members, or brothers, of the society. These officers work hard to serve their men and school and to better educate themselves toward the goal of becoming officers in the armed services of the United States.

State Drops To Third; Deacons Here Tuesday

By Earl Mitchell
Sports Editor

North Carolina State dropped out of second place in the ACC baseball race as a result of losing one game of a double-header with Clemson on Saturday. Wake Forest holds down second place with a 6-2 mark while State is in third with a 6-3 slate.

If State had won the second game against Clemson they would have had a 7-2 record and sole possession of second place. On Friday State whipped South Carolina 3-2. In the twinbill against Clemson on Saturday, State won the first contest 2-1, but dropped the second one 11-6.

In other ACC action Saturday, Carolina stomped South Carolina 11-1, Duke edged Maryland 5-1, and Wake Forest decided hapless Virginia 8-0.

ACC STANDINGS

Wake Forest	6	2
State	6	3
Duke	5	3
Clemson	6	6
Maryland	3	7
South Carolina	2	8
Virginia	1	6

In the Friday game, State won that one in the eighth inning when they plated the deciding run. South Carolina took the lead at 2-0 with runs in the sixth and seventh frames. State came back with two runs in the bottom of the seventh and one in the eighth to win the ACC battle.

Bob Conner went the distance for the Pack and picked up his third win against no setbacks. It was the first start of the year for the Wilmington ace and he went the entire distance allowing only six hits and one earned run.

With chances to boost their conference record to 7-2 and have lone possession of second place, State took on Clemson Saturday afternoon in a double-header. State took the first one in a cliff-hanger, but the second game was a bad dream for the Wolfpack. Joel Gibson, pitching a tremendous first game with the exception of the first inning, gave up only two hits to Tiger hitters and struck out 13 of them. At one point in the game, the State ace fanned eight straight. The string was ended when Elmo Lam, the Tiger's leading hitter, punched out a single with one out in the sixth inning. The Clemson pitcher, Damon Vincent, got the only Tiger hit of the first game.

Gibson got off to a terrible start by walking the first three men that he faced. The fourth man, Dave Lynn, grounded to Vernon Strickland at third and Strickland forced Art Ricketts at the plate for the first out. Jack Veronee grounded to the Pack second sacker George Easterling. Easterling errored the ball and Nicky Lomax scored. Easterling jumped from goat to hero in the seventh inning, however. Gibson retired the next two batters and ended the inning.

In the second inning, Gibson led off the inning with a double to centerfield. He moved to third on a balk. Roman Gabriel went down on strikes and then Don Montgomery sent Gibson home when he grounded out second baseman to first.

In the bottom of the seventh inning, Montgomery singled to lead off the inning. He moved all the way to third when Jerry Cordell bunted and Lynn bobbled the throw. Hayworth fled out to the second baseman and then Easterling hit his game-winning single.

In that first game, the Wolfpack picked up only three hits while Clemson had two. Each team had two errors.

It was Gibson's fifth win of the season in five starts. Gibson has finished every game that he has started this year and has only one loss.

The second game of the twinbill was a far cry from the first. The Tigers pounded out 13 hits including three home runs and five doubles. The 11-6 decision that the Tigers registered could also be attributed to five errors made by the Pack.

Clemson struck for two runs in the second inning on the strength of two doubles. State came back with a run in the bottom half of the inning when Wilson Carruthers, who was credited with the loss for State, scored on a single by Ray Perry. Clemson then scored one run in the fourth and fifth innings, two in the sixth, three in the seventh and two in the eighth.

The Tiger's three circuit blows were credited to Dave Lynn, pitcher Gene Harberston, and Nicky Lomax. Lynn, who led Clemson in the second game with three hits in four trips to the plate, also had a double, scored four times, and had one RBI. Lam and Pete Ayoub each had two doubles in the win.

Perry and Strickland had two hits in five trips apiece.

Netters Win; Runners Tie

In minor sports action over the weekend, the State netters stopped Wake Forest College Friday afternoon 8-0. On Saturday the State track team had to settle for a 65-65 tie with Wake Forest.

In the tennis match the finals doubles match was called when rain started late in the afternoon. All of the wins were decided in two sets with the exception of the number one singles where Mustaq Saigal was forced to go to three sets before winning his match.

The win pushed the season's mark for the tennis team to 10-3. The next match will be tomorrow afternoon when State takes on powerful North Carolina.

In track, both State and Wake Forest were hoping to grab their first win of the season, but they were forced to settle with a tie.

George Vollmar was the only double winner for State as he won both the shot and discus. In additions to Vollmar's first places, State managed to pick up six more.

WKNC

By Jim Myhre

Jim Myhre

Do the students here at State really listen to WKNC? That is a question a lot of people have wondered about. The answer is definitely yes. Whereas the popularity of the other radio stations in Raleigh seem to rise and fall, the popularity of WKNC seems to stay about the same. The only really drastic change in WKNC's popularity is when WKNC broadcasts one of the football or basketball games. Naturally, more students listen during these times.

Various means have been used to determine whether or not many people listen to WKNC. Each year near the Carruthers, who pitched seven and two-thirds innings, gave up all 11 runs with six of them being tabbed as earned runs. The next game for the Pack will be tomorrow afternoon when they face the Deacons of Wake Forest College. The game is slated to get underway at 3:00 p.m. on the State diamond.

end of school WKNC staff members conduct a survey throughout the dorms. The results of this survey are used not only by WKNC, but also by the other radio stations in Raleigh. The information gained from these surveys is passed on to each station's sponsors and various other interested people.

Another method used for determining the number of WKNC's listeners is a telephone-response program. Listeners are invited to call the station and request songs. The amount of response gives some indication as to the station's popularity. This method is not very accurate. Since Bragaw Dormitory students do not need to spend a dime to call, most of the response comes from that dorm. Consequently, complete campus coverage is not determined.

Numerous other hints of the amount of WKNC's listeners occur from time to time. Requests from students and faculty to broadcast special events give some indication of student listening.

In 1958 Company L-4 received material as a gift from Burlington Industries, Inc., for fancy red uniforms. These uniforms, when worn with white scarfs, black helmets, white gloves, and black boots with white laces, have become the trade-mark of Company L-4.

Just recently, however, a new uniform was issued to replace the red one. This new uniform is khaki, and it will be worn with a red scarf and a garrison cap, the rest of the uniform accessories remaining unchanged. The red uniform will be retained for special performances.

This year a new concept in a trick drill has evolved at State College. This concept has been realized in the "Marching Sergeants", an eight-man crack drill unit of the Pershing Rifles. This unit is especially suited to perform in areas of limited space, such as a basketball court. The unit's initial demonstration took place during halftime of the State-Carolina basketball game on Jan. 18, 1961. Their appearance was so well received that they have since received many invitations to give similar performances. One of these performances was at the Dogwood Festival held in Charlottesville, Va., where they marched off with first prize.

Some of the activities in which Company L-4 has participated this year include: homecoming parade, halftime show at homecoming game, China Grove parade, escort for Miss America in the Salisbury parade, Faquay parade, half-time shows at State-Carolina and State-Villanova basketball games, films for television, Governor's Inaugural Ceremonies and Parade, regimental inspection, and regimental drill meet.

COLLEGE MOVING FORWARD.

I would like to ask for the support of all who did not vote for me in the election. The next few years will be very important in helping to determine the place which STATE COLLEGE will take in this nation in the future.

As we strive to place the STUDENT in a definite place of importance at State, we must all strive together. We must be active, carry our share of the load, and be ever conscious of needed improvements and demands of the quest for more knowledge.

Let me urge each and every one of you to use your senators, to express ideas, and problems to them, and at the same time expect them to keep you informed.
