Friends Of The College Presents New York City Ballet

The scene above is a hint of what State College students and "Friends of the College" may expect to see when the New York City Ballet comes to the Coliseum this week. The first performance will be Monday evening at 8 p.m., with successive performances on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. The complete ballet troupe and the 50-piece ballet orchestra under the direction of Robert Irving will be making its only appearance in this part of the country.

"Ellipsoid" Unveiled At Brooks

Yesterday in a ceremony in the garden of Brooks Hall, School of Design, a new modern sculpture entitled "Ellipsoid Construction" by Roy Gussow, professor of design at State College, was unveiled.

Dean Kamphoefner, opening the ceremony with a few comments about art and design in America today, pointed out a plan to "encourage competent artists in North Carolina." He stated that an ordinance in Philadelphia requires 1% of every building budget to be used for the beautification of the construction with art; "North Carolina should be thinking about the same thing."

The sculpture, started four years ago, is an ellipsoid construction on three major axes made entirely of six stainless steel sheets. It was hammered to shape and polished to a mirror-like finish. It appears to be a seamless solid. The base is a disk of black aggregate concrete.

Election Books Opened To Fresh Candidates

The nominations books for candidates for the freshman class officers and Student Government positions opened today in Room 206 Holladay Hall.

All freshmen who plan to seek an elected campus office this fall must register their candidacy with the Department of Student Affairs, according to Norris Tolson, Student Government President. Tolson added that candidates must bring a friend to undersign their nomination. The books close November 3.

The first balloting has been set for November 14 with a runoff scheduled for the following Tuesday November 21.

Registration procedure and complete election roles will be explained in Room 206 Holladay Hall when the candidate registers.

Professor Gussow was born in Brooklyn the year World War I ended. He came to State College from Colorado Springs Art Center in 1952 and is now a full professor in the School of Design. Gussow has exhibited his works in the most famous art galleries throughout the United States.

When Gussow was asked by Technician photographer Frank Justice to pose with the sculpture, he said quite typically, "the sculpture is more important than I am."

Washington — "The mission of the Peace Corps is to wrap up the ideals of America in an individual and send him overseas as a personal messenger of freedom."

These words were spoken by Robert Sargent Shriver, Jr., Director of the Peace Corps, at a special conference held here at the Sheraton-Park Hotel Friday and Saturday. The speech highlighted two days of discussions and lectures given by Peace Corps staff members to visitors from Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

The guests of the conference, who included Vice-President Lyndon Johnson's eldest daughter, Lynda Bird, were representatives of colleges, civic groups, and professional societies; invited, in words of Chairman Bill Moyers, "To receive information about the

Three State Coeds Found Near Death By Alert Landlord

Three State coeds were found near the point of death from carbon monoxide poisoning yesterday in their apartment at 2305 Clark Avenue. Abigail Bonnellow, Ali K. Nio, and Mrs. Tersita Ela, and one other girl, Mary Entwistle, a former State student, were reported to be resting comfortably in Rex Hospital.

The girls were found early Sunday morning by Dr. K. L. Barkley, owner of their apartment house. Dr. Barkley, a member of the State College Psychology Department, had stopped by to make repairs at the apartment.

An eyewitness reported that, after smelling smoke, Dr. Barkley rushed into the house and carried the unconscious girls out into the fresh air. Ambulances summoned to the scene rushed the girls to Rex Hospital. Oxygen was administered there immediately. The carbon monoxide came from a loose duct in the coal furnace which was blown loose by an explosion.

At 8:00 p.m. Sunday Mildred Emory of Rex Hospital stated that all the girls were resting quietly but were still suffering from effects of the poison.

During the visit the committee held interviews with the College Administration, the officers of the Faculty Senate, the American Association of University Professors, and the leaders of various student organizations which included the Student Government, the Interfraternity Council, the Traffic Committee, the Technician, the Y. M. C. A., the Honor Code Board, the women students, the College Union, and the Inter-dormitory Council. An additional report was made requesting the exemption of married students with children from ROTC.

Having heard these reports, the Board will publish a list of

The Joint Student Branch of the AIEE-IRE will hold a meeting Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in Room 242 Riddick. A demonstration of lighting techniques for home and industry will be presented.

Of those matters receiving emphasis, some rather outstanding points were made. After giving a resume of the Student Government goals and accomplishments during the past year, Norris Tolson, President of the Student Body, brought the Board's attention to what he called "matters which will enhance the growth and development of this institution." These matters were an improvement in both our inadequate library and housing facilities, a greater emphasis and backing of the Honors Program, and more adequate facilities for foreign students.

Peace Corps Meeting Held

Peace Corps and to have specific questions answered for those especially interested in applying for the Corps." And the number of those persons seriously interested in the Peace Corps at the conclusion of the meetings exceeded greatly the number interested beforehand.

Moyers, who serves as the Associate Director for Public Affairs for the Peace Corps, presided at the first session of the regional meeting, the last of nine such conferences held all across the country. He welcomed the visitors, who included representatives from five North Carolina schools—State College, UNC, North Carolina College, Atlantic Christian College, and Duke University.

Our Job Described

"What can you do for the Peace Corps?" stated Paul Geren, Deputy Director of the Corps, at the keynote meeting. "We seek your help in interesting our schools and other organizations in the training and orientation of the American volunteers, but most importantly we seek your individual help in the recruitment of the right persons to serve America."

"The Peace Corps' special work is to assist in the development of other countries by doing," Geren continued. "In holding out the possibility of aid to the host country, the Peace Corps also extends the prospect of assistance to the United States... There is no better way for Americans to learn about Nigerians, for example, than from Nigerians and no better way for Nigerians to learn about Americans than from Americans."

Nigeria, the focal point of recent unpleasant publicity about the Peace Corps, was nevertheless referred to frequently with pride by conference staff. The feeling present seemed to be one of relief, due to the fact that inevitable incidents have been kept to a bare minimum thus far in Corps activity. And, after all, the staff seemed to say, the Peace Corps is accomplishing a lot of great things in Nigeria that no one seems to be interested in.

Along this line, Shriver reported that relations with Nigerian officials and countrymen were in fine shape despite the publicity. The Nigerian ambassador, Shriver stated, has even visited the Michigan State training ground for another Nigeria-bound detachment of volunteers to assure the men and women that they will be received with warmth. "We have made mistakes in the past; we will continue to make them in the future," Shriver prophesied. "We hope, though, that the same mistakes will not occur again."

The Honor System

Lionel Trilling, one of our foremost literary critics, used as the main theme of his speech Thursday the idea that the morals of our culture are undergoing a change. He maintained that man is now conceiving an existence in which he himself will be responsible for his own behavior and will not rely on traditions in social conventions.

This statement may be true (and Mr. Trilling made a valid argument using the change in literature as an example), but by observing the world around us, we can see that this is not so now. People have to be governed and must have rules set up for them. It is a weakness of human nature that this must be so, but we have neither the time, space, or knowledge to begin describing human nature. It is enough to say that we have it and that we must live with it and that fair and consistent rules and laws are the best way that we can reconcile ourselves to this basic weakness.

The Honor Code on this campus is one of the many ways that people have set up to administer and to enforce fair and consistent rules. There must be some way in which the immature and dishonest person be punished and the honest person be protected. A person who will steal from his fellow student or cheat on a quiz should have regulations set up to remove him from our school. Our school has no need for people of this type, and we are more than happy for legislation to protect us from them.

Since a system for infractions of rules must be established, the system used on this campus is, we feel, the best answer to problems of student misdemeanors. Students are tried and judged by other students under rulings which were passed on from students of earlier years. The administration plays no part in the decisions and has no voice in proceedings of trials. This gives the accused person the benefit of being tried by persons who have faced similar problems and understand the factors which might enter into the commission of a misdemeanor.

Although we feel that the system we use is as perfect as conditions will allow, it cannot be termed a success. Last year, sixty-six cases appeared before the Board. We are not naive enough to believe that this was even a small percentage of the cases which should have been tried. We would like to say that only one per cent of our student body should be accused of breaking rules, but we cannot. Many cases of rules infractions are never reported because students who witness these misdemeanors are either afraid to report them or have cases of badly misplaced values. In the former, all that is needed is moral courage, but in the latter a self-appraisal is necessary.

This is the major weakness of the Honor System at this school. The fact that there will be people who break regulations and take unfair advantage of their fellow man is universal and unbeatable. What we can combat is the attitude of the student who sees infractions and does not have the courage or self-respect to do what he can to stop an unfair, uncalled for, and unwanted trait in his fellow man.

Until people can govern themselves competently, there is no chance of their breaking into the realms of human behavior which seem to be the proper ones for the human race and which Mr. Trilling predicts.

Trilling Predicts 'Freedom' For Man

By Mike Lea

"Man at this moment is considering the possibilities of an unconditioned existence," Lionel Trilling, one of the foremost literary critics of our time, told a group of State students Thursday night.

He based this statement on a discussion of literature through the ages because he feels that literature is the mirror of life at the time of its publication.

According to Dr. Trilling, this "unconditioned existence" means that man is becoming less and less dependent on moral codes and is becoming able to rely on himself as his own judge of proper behavior.

He stated that the manifestation of this change in literature is the emergence of a new type of main character, the anti-hero. In earlier times the anti-hero was a typical "bad guy." He appeared in all walks of life from a character in The Iliad to the paid gunslinger in tales of Western America. These anti-heroes were usually ill-formed or had some other characteristic which immediately set them apart and doomed them to failure.

These "buffoons" of earlier literature have now assumed a more important role, Mr. Trilling stated. This new importance was first found in Dostoyevsky's Notes From the Underground. In this book, the actions of character who was "anti-hero" in nature were studied and in some ways explained. He explained that this has started a trend of "humanizing" the villain or "anti-hero. He is no longer all wrong, but is now a victim of circumstances.

The older, more traditional hero stayed within the bounds of traditional thought, but the anti-hero breaks with them. This breaking with society expresses a sense of individual power and liberation, according to Trilling; and this break is the one which he feels is parallel to the one which he describes as taking place in our society.

Dr. Trilling also held an informal question and answer period with the accelerated English classes Thursday afternoon.

George Wallace, President of the College Union announced the initiation of a new film series of movies of classical import along with the formation of several new clubs to correspond with newly emphasized interests.

An organization of women students, represented by Miss Frances Goodwin, told the Board of their acquisition of, for the first time, a part-time counselor. She is Mrs. Julia Miller, wife of Dr. Howard Miller, head of the psychology department.

Merrill T. Leffler, chairman of the Honor Code Board reported an increase of 100% in the cases with which this committee deals. Leffler attributes this to "an increasing respect for the Honor System."

Coed's Corner

Women's Code Board Needs Improvement

By Dale Thompson

There is a Campus Code Board for women. But there is no Campus Code for women. This does not mean that girls can get away with anything. But it does mean that they can be accused of anything that falls in the category of "unladylike conduct." And "unladylike conduct" is not defined by the Board.

Shocking? Perhaps, but true. The only code for women on the State College campus is that they conduct themselves in a "ladylike manner." But the Student Government has failed to define this conduct. While I do agree that all women old enough to come to this school should be able to tell what a lady is and to act like one, I do feel that the school or the Board should set down some rules on the coeds.

The Campus Code Board is run exactly as any other jury system is—that is, an accusation is made, the defendant is brought to trial and permitted to face her accuser, and after the presentation of the evidence, a decision is rendered by the board of guilty or not guilty or no trial. The no trial ruling is the only way in which the Board can say that the case should not have been brought to trial in the first place. I am not saying that we should have a police corps to determine such matters (heaven forbid!), but I am saying that there should be some way to determine whether or not an accusation deserves serious consideration. And the only way to do this is to spell out in some way the meaning of unladylike conduct. The fact that this has not been done is not the fault of the Board. It would, in fact, require a change in the charter of the Board to permit the setting up of any form of regulation of accusations.

As matters stand now, anyone, student, faculty, or someone not at all connected with the college, can make an accusation and, once this is done, nothing and no one can stop the trial.

Please do not make the mistake so often made about this column, that I am for the complete abolition of the Campus Code Board. I AM NOT! I am, however, for more regulation of coeds and more order in the manner in which a person may be brought before the Code Board. And if it will take a movement of the student body to do this, then I am for that, too. One of the most effective ways of regulating girls' conduct would be to regulate housing. One way that this could be done would be to provide us with a list of approved housing.

And by this I do not mean a list such as there is now, where anyone may list a room and there is no real way to tell whether the room is acceptable except by going to see the room. Surely someone could check to see at least if the room is habitable by women and whether or not the owner will accept women. If this list were kept, and coeds were required to live in approved housing, then the college could set regulations as to hours, etc. This in itself would be somewhat of a guide as to the meaning of the term ladylike behavior and would make accusations more definite.

The lack of this small amount of regulation is not the fault of the Board. Nothing can be done as the matter now stands. But something should be done—because until something is we have the same thing as a Supreme Court without a Constitution or laws, and this hardly makes sense.

A Letter

To the Editor:

Regarding your photograph and caption entitled "Battle Weary Cadets Take Forced Excursion" in Wednesday, October 18, 1961, issue of The Technician:

It is our opinion that the caption under the photograph is in bad taste. We believe the Bataan "death march" is no laughing matter. The "Japanese taskmaster" is an officer in the United States Army and a member of the faculty. We not only consider this in bad taste, but also disrespectful to his position. In short, this type humor stinks.

Entire Team Delivers Sermon As Pack Preaches To Deacons

By Benny Pearce
Sports Editor

A snarling team of wolves was turned lose in their home den Saturday night and came up with a 7-0 victory over the Deacons of Wake Forest. It was the first home game for the Wolfpack in over a year. The last previous home game for the State gridders was with Maryland, Oct. 8, 1960.

The Wolfpack, for the first time this year, lived up to pre-season expectation. Wake Forest had proved the week before that they had a good team by downing the Clemson Tigers. It took a truly fine performance by all the Wolfpack members to leave Riddick Stadium with a win under their belt.

Roman Gabriel displayed a sensational knack of signal calling against Wake Forest. On several third downs with several yards to go for the first down situations, Gabriel would take the ball himself and fake a pass and then run for eight or nine yards for the first down. Gabe's passing was superb as usual, completing 11 of 17 for 70 yards.

Gabriel had much help in defeating the Deacons. Little Joe Scarpati played his best game of the year. He made several fine runs and was a mainstay in defending against the Wake passes.

Tony Koszarsky had his best running game of the year, picking up 44 yards in nine carries. He was also exceptional on defense.

Al Taylor, Jim D'Antonio, Carson Bosher and Dave Houtz also turned in fine performances of running with the ball.

Although the Deacons were able to pick up much yardage over the right side of the State line in the first half, the defensive line completely stopped the Wake Forest backs in the second half. Instrumental in the improved lineplay were Dennis Kroll, Nick Maravich, Fran Pallandrani and Bob Royer.

Old reliable, Tom Dellinger, played his usual fine game in the defensive backfield.

All in all it was a fine effort by the entire Wolfpack squad. Improvements in the running attack and defensive line may serve notice that the Wolfpack will be tough to handle from here on out.

Coach Billy Hildebrand of Wake Forest said after the game, "State did better on the ground than we had anticipated. They hurt us all night with the short pass." To Wolfpack fans it sounds good to hear a rival coach praising State's running game for a change.

Next Saturday the Wolfpack will face its toughest conference competition of the year when the Blue Devils of Duke University will be visiting at Riddick Stadium. The Blue Devils are currently tied for the conference lead with Carolina. Both teams have a 3-1 conference record. State is third with a 2-1 record.

Coach Earle Edwards says, "We still have a lot of improving to do to play a good game against Duke. If the present trend of improvement continues, the Duke team could be in for a rough time."

Dorm Swimming To Get Underway

Wednesday Night
By Earle Mitchell

Dormitory athletic teams have a full week facing them this week with action slated in football, volleyball, and swimming.

The annual dormitory swimming meet gets underway Wednesday night with the preliminaries in all events with the exception of diving. The starting time for the preliminaries is 6 o'clock with the finals in all events scheduled for 7:30 November 1.

Shutouts were registered in five of the six dorm football games played last week. Tucker #2 was the only losing team to score a TD, but they were decisively beaten by Watauga 19-6. Bragaw North beat Owen #2 6-0, Syme crushed WG4 29-0, Berry downed Owen #1, 14-0, Bagwell slipped by Turlington 7-0, and Bragaw South out-classed Tucker #1 19-0.

A total of 12 volleyball games were played last week with the following results: Bragaw North 2, Tucker #1 1; Bragaw South

THE DATING SEASON

I have recently returned from a tour of 950,000 American colleges where I made a survey of undergraduate dating customs and sold mechanical dogs, and I have tabulated my findings and I am now prepared to tell you the simple secret of successful dating.

The simple secret is simply this: a date is successful when the man knows how to treat the girl.

And how does a girl like to be treated? If you want to know, read and remember these four cardinal rules of dating:

1. A girl likes to be treated with respect.

When you call for your girl, do not drive up in front of the sorority house and yell, "Hey, fat lady!" Get out of your car. Walk respectfully to the door. Knock respectfully. When your girl comes out, tug your forelock and say respectfully, "Good evening, your honor." Then offer her a Marlboro, for what greater respect can you show your girl than to offer Marlboro with its fine flavor and exclusive selectrate filter? It will indicate immediately that you respect her taste, respect her discernment, respect her intelligence. So, good buddies, before going out on a date, always remember to buy some Marlboros, available in soft pack or flip-top box in all 50 of the United States and also Cleveland.

A girl likes to be taken to nice places

2. A girl likes a good listener.

Do not monopolize the conversation. Let her talk while you listen attentively. Make sure, however, that she is not herself a good listener. I recollect a date I had once with a coed named Greensleeves Sigafos, a lovely girl, but unfortunately a listener, not a talker. I too was a listener so we just sat all night long, each with his hand cupped over his ear, straining to catch a word, not talking hour after hour until finally a policeman came by and arrested us both for vagrancy. I did a year and a day. She got by with a suspended sentence because she was the sole support of her aged housemother.

3. A girl likes to be taken to nice places.

By "nice" places I do not mean expensive places. A girl does not demand luxury. All she asks is a place that is pleasant and gracious. The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, for example. Or Mount Rushmore. Or the Taj Mahal. Or the Bureau of Weights and Measures. Find places like these to take your girl. In no circumstances must you take her to an oil-cracking plant.

4. A girl likes a man to be well-informed.

Come prepared with a few interesting facts that you can drop casually into the conversation. Like this: "Did you know, Snookiepuss, that when cattle, sheep, camels, goats, antelopes, and other members of the cud-chewing family get up, they always get up hind legs first?" Or this: "Are you aware, Hotlips, that corn grows faster at night?" Or this: "By the way, Loverhead, Oslo did not become the capital of Norway till July 11, 1924."

If you can slip enough of these nuggets into the conversation before dinner, your date will grow too torpid to eat. Some men save up to a half million dollars a year this way.

Just tell us in 25 words or less, what you like most about Sheaffer's all-new $2.95 Cartridge Fountain Pen. Write your entry in ink on any sheet of paper, enclose it with the top from a package of Strip cartridges, and mail it to: Sheaffer "Pen Money" Contest, P.O. Box 4399, Chicago 77, Illinois. Entries accompanied with your name, address, school name and class must be received by November 7, 1961.

Entries will be judged on the basis of their believability and freshness of thought. Judges' decisions are final and all entries become the property of the W. A. Sheaffer Pen Company. None will be returned. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded. Every college student in the United States may enter, except employees of W. A. Sheaffer Pen Company, its subsidiaries, its advertising agencies...the independent company judging entries...and members of their immediate families. Contest subject to federal, state and local regulations.

Winners will be notified by mail approximately four weeks after contest closes. List of winners available after close of contest if request is accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelope.
