All American Returnees Slip By Varsity

There have been many break-ins in the past. Last year three faculty members caught a student in the act of stealing a sculpture then on display. Paintings have been stolen. Sculptures have been broken.

Students at the School of Design indicated disgust at the events, and one student indicated he was beginning to wonder why he was studying architecture here if these were the types of persons he would one day have to serve.

State Faculty Club Elects New Officers At Business Meeting

The 1962 officers of the State College Faculty Club were announced Thursday at a luncheon and business meeting.

The new officers, who were elected by mail ballot, are Paul H. Derr, president; Thomas I. Hines, executive vice-president; John H. Harris, membership vice-president; James S. Fulghum, Jr., treasurer; and Dr. Key L. Barkley, secretary.

Out-going president Dr. George B. Lucas was named director-at-large for a four-year term.

The business session consisted of a progress report on the new Faculty Recreation Center and a report on the membership drive.

John Harris, membership vice-president, reported that the club had 519 members as a result of a recent membership drive.

Petition Presented; College Says No

It was announced today that the petition to extend Christmas holidays had been turned down by the administration.

The petition, which asked that Christmas holidays begin on the 16th rather than the 19th as originally scheduled, had been signed by 3503 students. It was presented to the Student Government Thursday night by Walter Baldere. A motion to support the petition was approved by a vote of 20-7 and Norris Tolson, President of the Student Body, told the Student Government that he would present the petition to the Dean of Student Affairs, who would in turn discuss it with the Chancellor.

The petition was presented Friday afternoon, and, after careful consideration, the administration announced that the demands could not be met.

In a statement released by Norris Tolson, it was announced that the demands of the petition cannot be met at this late date. It was pointed out that N. C. State has more holidays than either Carolina or Woman's College, the other members of the Consolidated University, and that a calendar similar to theirs would provide us with fewer holidays. Tolson announced that he would appoint a calendar committee to study the present situation and present ideas to the administration. He also pointed out that the present calendar is a product of many changes which were incorporated last year, such as the reading days before exams, the placing of commencement after exams, and the allowance of more time between semesters to process records.

Tolson stated: "I am not happy with the present arrangement; Dean Stewart has informed me he is not happy with it. You have stated this in your vocal disapproval and your petition. I commend you for your united effort to express your opinions about the issue. It is commendable that you were diplomatic and discreet in your disapproval. Your voice has been heard and,

Russian Ag Expert, Embassy Secretary Visit State College

The School of Agriculture was the highlight of Russia's top agricultural expert's visit to State College last Monday.

I. E. Emelianor emphatically attributed the efficiency of the American farmer to factors other than free enterprise. He pointed out that they have an advantage in climate, mechanization, and the fact that their land was not a World War II battleground.

Emelianor was accompanied by Nikifor Levchenko, the Russian Embassy's second secretary.

They also visited the Department of Modern Language and the D. H. Hill Library.

When told that 42 students at State College were studying Russian, Levchenko remarked, "I thought you would have 700 or 800."

Why The Gates: A Traffic Problem

By Bill Bryan

What is to be the fate of the controversial gates behind Tucker and Alexander Dorms?

The gates were installed at the beginning of this semester by request of the Traffic Committee. M & O is responsible for their construction and upkeep.

According to Mr. N. B. Watts, Director of Student Housing, the gates were planned and constructed solely to benefit the occupants of rooms facing the road behind dormitory row. Several hundred students are required to live and study only a few feet from what would have been a major thoroughfare since the blocking of Dunn Avenue. "With parking area still easily accessible, it is to the benefit of the dorm residents to have all through traffic stopped," said Watts.

Among other things, some girls driving behind the dorms have complained to the police about the "indecent dress and behavior" of dorm residents, thus creating more problems for the Traffic Committee. It is still not known just why the girls were looking in windows, but this was just another problem to contend with.

Mr. Watts went on to explain that the whole problem stems from the fact that another road for through traffic is needed. Dunn Avenue was closed last year as part of a broad plan of improvement including a proposed new road over the present location of Rocky Branch. The defeat of the recent bond proposal quickly put an end to such plans. Therefore, the only answer to the problem as it now stands is a set of gates to control all through traffic.

Mr. J. McCree Smith, Director of M & O, also plays an important role in the gate controversy, since his department is responsible for the maintenance of the gates. Referring to recent vandalism which has resulted in total destruction for the gates several times, Mr. Smith stated, "The students have gotten into the fever of the contest now; the harder we work to replace the gates, the harder they work to tear them down again."

He went on to say that even though the gates have been continually torn down, M & O, in conjunction with the Traffic Committee and Student Housing, will doggedly keep replacing the gates.

Mr. Smith explained that the gates were of light construction at first to safeguard cars that might accidentally hit them while closed. However it is becoming apparent that more durable construction is needed since a stolen Forestry truck plowed through the gates last Halloween night. In the future the gates will sport new steel pipe reinforcements.

One To Two

The reprint of The News and Observer editorial on this page is a kind of private joke. Anyone who knows anything about the recent campus issue of "Christmas vacation vs. school" would find it rather amusing.

The main argument used by the professional reporter uptown is that "Why can't State College get out on the 16th like everybody else?" This statement might not sound strange coming from a freshman's mother, but the idea of a grown newspaperman saying something to that effect is disappointing.

It has been pointed out several times in policy statements from Holladay Hall that the State College school schedule has not been designed primarily to persecute the student body. The holidays, according to the administration, have been worked into the revised calendar in the only possible manner. The whole problem was brought about in the first place by changes proposed by the faculty and the student government last spring.

The most obvious shortcoming in the editorial was lack of information. The editor's only source was evidently the statement released last week from Dean Stewart's office, which listed clearly the reasoning of the administration. Moreover, the write must have read only the last half of the release—the part dealing with "maximum use"—which was entirely beside the point.

Even college newspaper editors know that journalism depends on the gathering of facts—facts which make up a complete and unbiased story. The responsibility of the editorial writer is even greater, in that his opinions are to be well-informed and carefully-planned.

It would seem, then, that the writer of "Two to One" might produce a more effective editorial if he knew a little bit about his topic. Is there an old adage which says, "If you don't know what you're talking about, keep your mouth shut"? If there isn't, there should be.

The only other thing wrong with the article is the writer's logic: WC and UNC get out on the 16th of December; therefore, NCS should get out on the 16th. Of course, our students feel that they should get out this Saturday; their reasons are quite a bit more competent than those of the editorial writer, however.

State College is a lot different from UNC. And it's a hell of a lot different from Woman's College. Even if the schools were almost the same, why should we do things their way, just because they outnumber us "Two to One"? It just might be that the merits of a policy should be judged on the results it gets, not the number of schools which have adopted it.

On the other hand, The News and Observer has to fill space with something. But, good grief!

"THANKS FOR TH' DISCUITS, FREDA, I'LL EAT THEM WITH LUNCH."

Chris

By Bill Isler

It was raining outside on a rather dreary Sunday, and Beverly and I had just finished lunch. We were going through the main lobby of the C. U., and she noticed this big sign "XMAS" in the north gallery.

"Oh Webb! Look at the exhibition! Let's go look at it!" Well, I was kind of thinking of better things we could do, but what can you do . . . ?

Well, we went in behind a bunch of guys with London Fogs and blue jeans on. "How about this one? hahahaha" "God Almighty! That's about cool!" "Are these things drawn?" "Damn! Pretty good artist!" "This is what I need, over here." "Crap. Old Fitzgerald. Christmas spirit!"

"Heheheheh. Look at that, though." "Uh, Oh! Ha ha This thing is about cool—that one specially." "Ho, ho. I like that one, too."

Well, they were laughing, and all some of the posters were real funny. One of them had Santa Claus coming down the C. U. fireplace chimney, stuck, cussing, and one had this drunk pulling along a telephone pole, singing "Bringing in the yule log . . .", and there were a couple of other funny ones—there was also this one we couldn't figure out of some footprints going by a Salvation Army pot or something.

The Beverly spotted another real cool one of Santa Claus holding a huge sack and his pants had fallen off. We rolled.

"What's this around here supposed to symbolize?" "That's the morning after." "Hahaha. Typical after-Christmas morning."

Well, it really did look like the morning after, all right, and it seemed a little bit out of place at the time. But then the guys noticed this poem.

"Furlingetti. Purty good, y'know it. That's a good'un by Furlingetti!"

"Oh I've heard that before. It stinks."

"That is . . . that ain't Christian."

After they had finally gone, we went over to look at the poem:

Christ climbed down from his bare tree this year and ran away to where there were no rootless Christmas trees hung with candycanes and breakable stars Christ climbed down from his bare tree this year and ran away to where no fat handshaking stranger in a red flannel suit and a false white beard went around passing himself off as some sort of North Pole saint crossing the desert to Bethlehem Pennsylvania in a Volkswagen sled . . . Christ climbed down from his bare tree this year and softly stole away into some anonymous Mary's womb where in the darkest night of everybody's anonymous soul He awaits again an unimaginable and impossibly Immaculate Reconciliation the very craziest of Second Comings

Lawrence Furlingetti "What is it talking about, honey?" Beverly asked. "What does it mean?"

"I don't know," I said, "Just a minute."

"Let's go, honey," she said. "Just a minute. Just a minute." It hit me then, right then. I had it figured out this time.

I looked back around at the pictures on the bulletin board, and at that thing I thought was just a pile of trash in the corner. I went back to the poster with the footprints in front of the Salvation Army kettle, and I figured that one out, too. And I got sick at my stomach.

"What's wrong, Honey?"

"Come on. Let's get the hell out of here."

As we were going out, I heard a couple of little kids: "Daddy, how do you like that tree? It's metal." "We've got a metal tree at school." "Wonder what it's made of." and I felt sorry for those kids, surrounded with gilded Christmas trees, and tinsel Christmas trees, and tinfoil, pink plastic, gold Christmas trees, and black, and powder blue Christmas trees, "hung with electric candles and encircled by tin electric trains and clever cornball relatives."

Seven o'clock and the doors open for another presentation in the Friends of the College series. And with the opening of the doors one can see a wonderful view of human nature at work. It's really amazing to watch the people as they come in. Stylish women with their furs, henpecked husbands, and an air of dignity casually choose their seats down front. The executive in his $100 suit trails behind his little "woman" and reluctantly settles down for another two hours of what she calls "culture." The Ivy Leaguer, vest and all, sits down, stamps out his cigarette, and begins reading the program.

The freshman pledge with his newly acquired pledge pin, Meredith date, and $2.50 pipe relaxes, confident he's got her snowed. The "I don't give a damn about anything except Maverick" student shuffles down the aisle in his usual attire of faded blue jeans, stretched sweater, and filthy tennis shoes. The old ladies, usually four in number, tear down the halls, up stairs, and plop down in their seats talking the entire time. Young married students, happy to get a free nights entertainment—no matter what it might be—come early to get a good seat, only to find they didn't come early enough. The lights go out, the audience gradually hushes, and the performances are seen on the stage. An hour passes.

Intermission. The fur draped woman complains they're not very good. The executive asks his wife if she's ready to go, only to receive a kick and glare. The Ivy Leaguer "lights up" and continues to read the program. The pledge makes a joke and laughs—confident the poor girl doesn't have a chance of resisting. The Maverick kid leaves. The old ladies excitedly talk of the Jack Paar Show. And the married students, impressed with what they've seen, discuss the next performance. Again the lights go out; 25% of the people stumble back to their seat in the dark. Another hour passes. The first encore sees the executive leaving with or without his wife. Four or five encores later everyone else leaves having enjoyed a wonderful evening of entertainment.

Two to One

(The following editorial appeared in the Dec. 8 edition of The News and Observer.)

TWO TO ONE

In fixing the college calendar N. C. State officials have, of course, no greater duty than "to find ways to make maximum use" of the college's classroom and laboratory facilities. Still a similar duty rests upon authorities at the other branches of the Consolidated University. So State students and citizens, too, may wonder why two branches can so arrange their Christmas holiday schedule that classes will end on Saturday, December 16, while State students will only be released on Tuesday, December 19.

Obviously there is a good deal to be said for the position of many of the students that the later closing will prevent them from securing holiday jobs. Naturally no classes will be held on Sunday, December 17. Probably only Monday, December 18, will constitute a real day of college work. Certainly the intervening Sunday may mean not only a late start for students seeking jobs but also little gain in the use of facilities. One day cut off at the end of the holidays would provide the same number of class days and bring the boys back after New Year's Day.

Undoubtedly Dean of Students J. J. Stewart Jr. is correct in his statement that the college has never had a holiday "when some students did not desire to leave early for what they consider good reasons." Still the fact that the other two branches of the Consolidated University can close on the earlier date raises the real question as to whether State College is right in this matter or the other two branches are wrong.

Alumni Win; Pack At Maryland Tues.

By Richie Williamson
Sports Editor

The old age and lack of practice failed to show with the State alumni team as the stars of old came from behind to edge the varsity 84-82 Saturday night. The alumni, playing with seven All-Americans, refused to be counted out after being behind by as much as 12 points in the second half and called on their experience to thrill the 5,000 fans with a great comeback that brought memories of old.

It was 6-8 John Richter that provided the scoring punch for the alumni with 27 points. He was helped by the ten points contributed by Lou Pucillo and Sammy Ranzino who also provided excellent back-court play to spark the team.

For the varsity Jon Speaks had his best night of his young career as a Wolfpacker as he connected on 12 of 16 from the floor and 11 of 13 from the free throw line for a total of 35 points. Speaks was accurate on his long jumpers and drove for the basket several times after faking the defense.

The Pack held a 44-39 lead at half and built this lead to twelve points early in the second half. But the alumni narrowed the gap to five with nine minutes remaining. The alumni finally got the lead at 77-76 on a basket by Ranzino, and Sammy quickly hit another to make the lead three.

The teams traded baskets to the score of 84-82 when Dan Wherry went to the free throw line with one-and-one as the clock showed five seconds. Wherry missed his first toss, and Richter grabbed the rebound to end the game.

Alumni coach Butter Anderson started with five All-Americans and used a total of fourteen men. Coach Case was without the services of Russ Marvel who was injured, and John Key and Jim Whitfield who were on the sick list.

Travel to Maryland
The Wolfpack travel to Maryland Tuesday night for a conference game with the Terps. Case hopes that his squad will be at full strength for the battle with the experienced Maryland team.

Maryland was rated as an outside chance to take the conference on the basis of their eight returning lettermen. This season they have dropped two non-conference tilts by close margins. However, the Terps are always tough on their home court.

Leading the team will be Bill Stasiulatis, Bruce Kelleher, and Bob Eicher, all of whom averaged 10 points a game.

Swimmers Break Two Conference Records; Deacons Here Tonight

Just as Coach Willis Casey predicted of his swimmers that they would break the conference records in the 400 yard medley relay and the 400 yard freestyle relay against Duke, the State tankmen came through in great form to smash both records in the conference dual meet Thursday night, which State won an easy 68-26 victory.

The first event of the evening saw Smokey Ellis, Pete Fogarasy, Ed Spencer, and Bill McGinty swim the medley relay event in the record time of 3:47.7. It eclipsed the old record of 3:50.0 formerly held by the State quartet of Ellis, Fogarasy, Spencer, and John Wilcox.

The other record was set in the last event of the evening in the freestyle relay with a time of 3:23.7 by Spencer, Wilcox, Ellis, and McGinty. The old record was held by North Carolina with a time of 3:26.5 set last year.

The two records boosted State's total to seven records held by Wolfpack swimmers out of ten swimming events in dual meets. Since the meet was the first to be held in the new pool, all of the times were new pool records.

The margin of victory would have been much larger if Coach Casey had not decided to use reserve swimmers in order to save his top men for the record-breaking efforts. Casey also switched some of his men from their speciality to other events.

Pete Fogarasy did not swim the breaststroke but was a double winner anyhow with victories in the 200 yard butterfly and the 400 yard freestyle. Dan Derby was also a double winner with a first in the 200 yard individual medley and a tie for first with

THE GIFT HORSE

I know how busy you are—studying, going to class, catching night crawlers—but let me interrupt your multifarious activities—studying, going to class, helping old grads find their dentures after Homecoming—to remind you that busy as you are—studying, going to class, searching for meat in the dormitory stew—time and tide wait for no man, and the Yuletide will soon be upon us. Busy or not, we must turn our thoughts to Christmas shopping. Let us, therefore, pause for a moment in our busy schedules—studying, going to class, rolling drunks—to examine a number of interesting gift suggestions.

We will start with the hardest gift problem of all: What do you give to the person who has everything? Well sir, there follows a list of gifts which I will flatly guarantee the person who has everything does not have:

1. A dentist's chair.
2. A low hurdle.
3. A street map of Perth, Australia.
4. Fifty pounds of chicken fat.
5. A carton of filter-tip Marlboros.

"What?" you exclaim, your young eyebrows rising in wild incredulity. "The person who has everything does not have a carton of filter-tip Marlboros?" you shriek, your young lips curling mockingly. "What arrant nonsense!" you gasp, making a coarse gesture.

... endear yourself to your girl's roommate

And I reply with an emphatic no! The person who has everything does not have filter-tip Marlboros—not for long anyhow—because if he has Marlboros and if he is a person who likes a mild, mellow, hearty, flavorful cigarette—and who does not eh? who does not?—why, then he doesn't have Marlboros; he smokes them. He might possibly have a large collection of Marlboro butts, but whole Marlboros? No. An emphatic no!

Now we take up another thorny gift problem: What do you buy your girl if you are broke? Quite a challenge, you will agree, but there is an answer—an ingenious, exciting answer! Surprise your girl with a beautiful bronze head of herself!

Oh, I know you're not a sculptor, but that doesn't matter. All you have to do is endear yourself to your girl's roommate, so she will be willing to do you a favor. Then some night when your girl is fast asleep, have the roommate butter your girl's face—quietly, so as not to wake her—and then quietly pour plaster of Paris on top of the butter and then quietly wait till it hardens and quietly lift it off—the butter will keep it from sticking—and then bring you the mold, and you will pour bronze in it and make a beautiful bust to surprise your girl with!

Remember, it is important—very important—to endear yourself to the roommate, because in case the plaster of Paris won't come off, you don't want to be without a girl for the holiday season.

© 1961 Max Graham

Your gift problem is no problem if you will give Marlboros to your filter-smoking friends and the new king-size Philip Morris Commander to your non-filter smoking friends. Try a Commander. This Yuletide season, or any other season, you'll be welcome aboard.

WHEN DOES A LUCKY TASTE BETTER THAN A LUCKY? There's a dangerous question because, as you well know, college students are crazy about Luckies and smoke more of them than any other regular. Still, there is one kind of Lucky that tastes a little bit better than any other kind. These extra-special Luckies are the ones you get for Christmas. The only thing better than a Lucky is a free Lucky. Ask for a carton this Christmas.

CHANGE TO LUCKIES and get some taste for a change!
