Pack Trounces Blue Devils Greeks Open Doors

Heyman-less Duke Team Routed 71-55

By Richie Williamson
Sports Editor

North Carolina State turned in its most outstanding performance of the season in stopping the Duke cagers for the second time by a 71-55 score in Reynolds Coliseum last night. The Wolfpack were in complete control from the beginning and made a rout of the expected tight contest.

Thus, Coach Everett Case continues his mastery over former player and assistant Vic Bubas, who lost his fourth game in six meetings since taking the top spot at Duke. It was also the third in a row for the Casemen, who proved that the earlier one point win was no fluke.

It was a superb team effort for the rejuvenated Wolfpack who have been playing like the State teams of the past since the return of Ken Rohloff. Rohloff has teamed with Jon Speaks to give State the best backcourt combination since the era of Molodet and Maglio. This fact plus the improvement of the front line of Marvel, Auksel, and Pungler has sparked the team to four wins in the last five outings, the only setback being the overtime loss to West Virginia.

The wide margin can be attributed to the fact that All-America Art Heyman of Duke sat out the entire contest due to an ankle injury suffered last week. The Blue Devils were lost without his take-charge play which was evident in the lack of shots taken by the starting five. Only Jeff

Twelve Paintings By State Prof. Shown In NYC

Twelve paintings by a State College professor are now on exhibition in a gallery in New York City as part of a two-man show.

Joseph H. Cox, noted prize-winner in art circles and member of the State College School of Design, has been honored by having his paintings exhibited in the Art Directors' Gallery in New York City.

Cox, who has exhibited in many other cities, won the "Painting of the Year" award in an 11-state art show in Atlanta, Georgia in 1956. The following year he was awarded the Atlantic Art Association Show and the Purchase Award in the Norfolk Museum Art Show.

Cox's "Men and Nets", which was won for him the 1956 prize, was exhibited on the "Today" show on NBC-TV.

Russ Marvel, the senior center for the Wolfpack, scores two of the twenty-two points he scored in State's 71 to 55 riot of Duke yesterday. Marvel was high scorer for the game.

S G Head Protests Exam Ruling

A protest by the head of the Student Government has been submitted to the committee which recommended to the chancellor that senior exemptions for final exams be eliminated.

In a letter to the president of the Student Government, Norris Tolson, Dr. David D. Mason, the chairman of the Faculty Senate, indicated that the letter of protest to him would be forwarded to the committee.

The protest of Tolson was based on a reaffirmation by the Faculty Senate of an action which occurred in the fall of 1960. At that time a report of the Educational Policy Committee which recommended discontinuing senior exemptions from exams was sent to the Chancellor, along with a recommendation concerning commencement. No action has yet been taken concerning exemptions.

The administration of the Faculty Senate has expressed a feeling that the senior privilege has been greatly abused. Faculty sources

Tonight State's eighteen fraternities will officially begin the spring rush activities. For several weeks the lights have burned at the "frat" houses as the Greeks worked to prepare their houses for the throng of prospective rushees. In addition, most houses have elaborate social functions planned for the weekend, featuring combos and smokers.

According to I.F.C. Rush Chairman, Richard Barefoot, rushing hours will be as follows:
Wednesday—7-10 p.m.
Thursday—7-10 p.m.

Sigma Kappa Initiates Seven, Begins Rush

Having initiated seven pledges this weekend, State College's only national social sorority, Sigma Kappa, began informal rushing yesterday. The rush will continue through February 17.

Interested coeds may contact any of the sorority sisters who will arrange informal get-togethers. Peggy H. McConnell is rush chairman. Details of a party which will climax the two weeks of rush will be announced later.

The initiation was held at the campus YMCA Saturday afternoon highlighted by a banquet at Holiday Inn. Sunday morning the new initiates and the sisters staged a mock meeting and then attended church as is customary.

The new initiates are Mary Beth Key, Alice Herter, Mary Belanga, Faye Fakler, Anne Parker, Edna Suggs, and Harriette Williams.

The other current members are Peggy McConnell, Helen Wigg, Lane Davis, Ilona Evans, Ann Fakler, Flora Lester, Betty Harris, Sara Norman, Joyce Meares, Martha McLaughlin, and Fronnie Ward.

specified that after seniors had finished work and tests with a 'B' or 'A' average, many tended to ignore further work.

In an interview with The Technician, Tolson said, "The Student Government is planning to make an all out effort to have this decision reconsidered." Tolson has written to the Faculty Senate asking them to return the issue to committee and to allow students to appear before it. He commented that issues of this importance should allow student opinion to be felt.

Rushees are urged by the I. F. C. to visit as many of the fraternities as possible. Many of the fraternities will serve meals to their guests throughout the rushing period. In addition, such entertainment as speakers, movies, slides and in most cases refreshments, will be featured.

Chairman Barefoot pointed out that there are no formal rushing regulations for second semester and that the above hours are merely suggestions from the I.F.C. for the convenience of both the fraternities and the rushees.

Two Students Convicted By Honor Code Board

Two students were convicted of stealing at the January third meeting of the Honor Code Board.

One of the students had been apprehended attempting to sell a book he had found in a classroom. He plead guilty to the charge, and was placed on probation until June, 1962.

The other case involved a student who was apprehended attempting to steal an article from Kerr-Rexall Drug Store in Cameron Village. After being found guilty by the Raleigh City Court, he pled guilty before the Honor Code Board and was suspended from school through the spring semester of 1962.

Records of the trials were placed in both students permanent records, and letters were sent to their parents notifying them of the results of the trial.

Phi Kappa Phi Donates To Student Loans

The North Carolina State College Chapter of Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honor society has voted to contribute $1,000 to the Student Government Loan Fund.

The money has been deposited to supplement the resources of the present fund, which is used in making short term loans to students who incur unforeseen educational expenses or for those who require small sums to meet emergency needs. The fund is administered by the College's financial aid office.

Students who need amounts up to $50 make application to the financial aid officer, who reviews the case and completes a short term agreement with the applicant. Most loans are for thirty day periods. No cosigners or endorsers are required, and loans are usually completed at the time of application. Borrowers pay fees of twenty-five cents for loans up to $25, and fifty cents on loans of greater amounts. Fees collected are added to the principal of the fund.

The financial aid office enthusiastically reports that this very generous gift will make it possible to meet the demand for this type of student aid more adequately.

IBM Machines Save Work?

Although it is taught that IBM machines save effort on the part of individuals, it would be hard to make these students believe it as they filled out the endless number of cards prior to finishing registration.

Something Old

You've got to admit it—quality points are an incentive. Never is this feeling more widespread than at the beginning of a new semester when college students, scarred from the exam wars, vow and declare to make good grades this semester.

But what about the other half of the classroom team—the professor? What does the beginning of a new term mean to him, a fresh start in his chosen profession or merely a return to the front pages of the textbook?

To the true teacher—and there are many good ones at State College—a clean start does represent a chance to learn with many new intellects. The dedicated professor can look forward to instilling in his students a love and appreciation of the subject concerned.

A debatable percentage of instructors are merely going through the motions, deriving satisfaction from more tangible rewards: a regular paycheck, good hours, and maybe an attractive secretary. Teaching, to them, becomes a matter of lecturing to a classroom of gaping mouths.

Men of the faculty, there is a difference. Which kind of teacher are you?

Something New

The first meeting was last night, just before this issue went to bed; staff members of The Technician, including editors and club reporters alike, gathered briefly in the editorial offices of the paper to hear about the new special course in journalism being offered to them for the first time this semester.

To the old-timers especially, it was a big occasion. The initial session, containing general information and plans from faculty advisor Dr. Max Halperen, marked the beginning of a new period for State College journalism. The laboratory-type course is the culmination of a lot of planning and discussing by many imaginative people.

There are many reasons for taking this step. Staff members will study classic journalism methods in conjunction with actual work on the paper; in this fashion they will receive some college credit for work which until now has gone unrewarded.

Another main objective, of course, is the maintenance of high standards of writing in this newspaper. The staff as a whole should as a result of this course become much more aware of the techniques and practices used by the better professionals.

For this boost to our cause, we thank the English department, the student affairs offices, and Dr. Halperen.

We pledge our best efforts to make it work.

Stevenson Plans Lecture Here

Adlai E. Stevenson, United States ambassador to the United Nations, will deliver the first Harrelson Lecture at State College Wednesday, March 7, Chancellor John T. Caldwell announced today.

Stevenson will speak in William Neal Reynolds Coliseum March 7 at 8 p.m. The address will conclude a day-long observance by State College of its Diamond Jubilee.

The Harrelson Lectures, which Stevenson will inaugurate are a series of lectures to be presented at State College by scholars and world leaders. The lectures are provided for by a bequest from the late Col. John W. Harrelson, chancellor of State College from 1934 until 1953.

Business Office Assistant Named

A member of the Agriculture Extension Service has been named assistant business manager of State College.

Dr. W. L. Turner will assume his new duties as second in command to J. G. Vann, the college's business manager, March 1.

Dr. Turner graduated from State College in 1948 with a major in agricultural economics. He later earned a master's degree from State and a Ph. D. degree from Harvard University.

State Prof Offers Co-ed Housing

For the first time in the history of State College, the coeds have, not a dormitory, but a specific housing unit designed and built especially for them.

Dr. Key Barkley, a psychology professor here, opened his new apartment house for the coeds last week. The unique building will accommodate 32 students. It is conveniently located two blocks from campus at 2205 Garden Place.

Successful move in that direction. Several years ago, the college itself developed plans for converting part of the Alumni Building into a dormitory for the girls. However, the response from the coeds was so weak that the college was unable to fill even half of the rooms. The plans had to be cancelled and were never carried through.

The new building is not completely filled yet. Coeds who are interested may contact Dr. Barkley for additional information.

Dr. Barkley's attempt to remedy the housing situation for the coeds marks the first suc-

Duke Blue Imps Trim State, 95-85

The Duke freshman rolled to their eleventh win of the season by beating State for the second time this season. The Imps powered their way to a 95-85 verdict in the prelim to the varsity clash.

Forward Brent Kitching was most of the show as he pumped in 35 points to pace the winners. He got aid from seven foot Hack Tyson who added 19 points.

State placed four men in the double figures with Tommy Matlocks leading the group with 24 markers. Charlie Grob got 17, Larry Worsley 16, and John Smith 11 to help the Wolflets losing cause.

The Duke team opened up a nine point lead at half behind the accurate shooting of Kitching and increased this to eighteen before the game was over. The Wolflets used a full court press for the last ten minutes but found it ineffective until the last thirty seconds. In those few seconds the team scored four baskets on steals of Duke passes.

The two teams meet again on Saturday night in Durham as the preliminary to the Duke-Virginia game.

State Wins

Mullins and Buzz Mewhort were confident enough to shoot the ball while the others could only work the ball around waiting for someone to shoot.

John Punger continued to be the defensive ace against the Devils, drawing the assignment of Mullins after Heyman did not start. Mullins got only 13 points, well under his season average of 21. Oddly enough, the only two times that Duke has failed to have their top scorer under twenty points this season have been against State.

The shooting honors for the night went to Marvel with 22 points and 8 of 10 from the floor and 6 of 7 from the line. Rehloff, Punger, and Auksel all hit in the double figures to make the offensive a well-balanced effort.

The effort was evident in the shooting percentages for the evening as the Wolfpack connected on 31 of 58 shots for a 53.5 efficiency mark. The Blue Devils were not able to find the range with only 33 per cent of their shots being accurate. This was due greatly to the switching man-to-man defense that State used throughout the game.

The win last night gives the Wolfpack a 7-4 record for the year with an ACC record of 6-3. All of the conference losses were on the road and before Rehloff returned. It was the second conference setback for Duke, and once again put the top spot in the league up for grabs. State is again in contention for the lead, and with victories over Carolina and Wake Forest on the home floor, could easily tie for the top berth.

The Wolfpack travel to Virginia tonight for a conference clash with the Cavaliers, a game that was postponed earlier due to the weather. In their first meeting of the season, State trounced out a 99-72 victory.
