NCS Basket-weavers Show Form

From the looks of things, Carolina's underwater basket-weaving team will not have a chance against our boys. Note the excellent form displayed by our men as they hurriedly practice the weave. Our present State squad is ranked first in the nation. Poor Carolina! (Photo by Rudy)

Harrelson Area Rice Paddies Aid Research

The Harrelson mud flats are to be converted into experimental rice fields.

Dr. H. G. Hedgerow made the announcement early yesterday morning. "The mud is there," he said, "and we decided to put it to use. We plan to begin planting as soon as possible. It is hoped that several students will be employed to aid us in the planting."

The mud flats have been present since before the completion of Harrelson Hall. Many students have commented upon the richness and texture of the mud after a heavy rain.

"I wish to state," Dr. Hedgerow went on, "that

ROCT Units Plan March To Wilmington

State College's ROTC headquarters has announced that all air science and military science students will march in the Azalea Festival, April 6-8, in Wilmington.

When asked to comment a PMS stated that "although it is regrettable that there are not sufficient funds to provide buses for the journey, we do not feel that is too much to ask of the students to march from Raleigh . . . it will do the boys good."

The students are to form Wednesday, April 4, at 12 noon for the 120 mile march. ROTC headquarters announced that although classes will not be dismissed for the march, students will be allowed to make up classes missed at a later date.

"We're out to break a record," declared the air and military science professor, "and if it takes every ounce of our energy we'll do it, by Eisenhower!"

Officers are to fly down.

Mortuary Engineering

New Curriculum Planned

Equipped with three hammers, a keg of nails, a pile of pine boards, and twelve corpses, the new Mortuary Engineering Department is preparing to begin classes next fall.

The department is being created to fill the rapidly growing need for men trained in the various crafts needed to properly dispose of a human body.

The courses offered by the department will include Coffin Handle Polishing, Christian and Pagan Burial Customs, Elementary and Advanced Embalming Techniques, Grave Digging, Grave Design and Construction, and Funeral Advertising Methods.

The new department will offer a program leading to a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Mortuary Engineering. It is hoped by officials of the School of Engineering that this new program will satisfy the growing demand for a liberal arts curriculum at State College.

Facilities for the new department will include a coffin shaped building located behind Holladay Hall and a laboratory located in the marshes around Harrelson Hall.

The department head will be Dr. John M. Kelbert.

Correction

We wish to correct the readers who have informed us that the picture of the fallout shelter supplies which appeared on page one of our March 29 issue is upside down. The barrels are hanging from the ceiling.

Other members of the department faculty have not been selected as yet.

When asked to comment on the new department, Dr. Kelbert said, "The recent growth of the nation's population has resulted in an extremely rapid increase in the nation's death rate. The increase in the number of funerals required has caused a sharp rise in the salaries received by the average mortician. This has made the general use of college trained mortuary en-

SSS Announces New Coed Line

The Student Supply Store has opened a "pantie sideshow," featuring all styles and sizes of ladies' undergarments, for coeds this morning.

The manager of the SSS told The Technician that the shop was opened not only to make the coeds feel that they are definitely a significant part of the student body but also to alleviate some of their clothing problems.

Prior to the opening of the shop, he went on to say, the coeds had made "persistent complaints to our personnel concerning the lack of services maintained for them. We felt compelled to do something about the situation."

The sideshow carries a special style of panties designed by the Textile School especially for State College coeds. They are made of a delicate satin burlap material and are being sold at half price this week.

Martial law has been declared on the State campus.

The Student Government announced this move at a called meeting Saturday night. According to SG officials, this resolution was passed as a direct result of the Design School walk-out of Harrelson Hall.

A SG officer said that "if a student attends this school, he should attend all classes. Since we are the rightfully elected representatives of this, the student body of State College, we feel that it is our duty to see that the students of State College take advantage of all the opportunities which are offered to them. Since attending classes is one of the advantages and obligations of any member of a college community, we had to take this drastic step. After all, in the words of political science teachers, a governing body is set up to make decisions for the rest of the group which it is governing."

The Student Government resolution also stated that Student Government Vice-President who is a Pershing Rifle leader would be put in charge of the martial law proceedings.

Frat Row Zilched By Loan Bungle

Plans for State's long anticipated Fraternity Row have been discontinued, it was learned today.

According to an announcement from the federal loan agency which was sponsoring the project, Fraternity Row was intended for the campus of N. C. College of A. and T. The announcement stated that the mistake, which was apparently made in the 1930's, is still not fully understood. The agency did, however, give assurance that the matter would be thoroughly investigated by a Senate committee and the results would be known by June 1, 1971.

The Fraternity Row project, which would have involved twelve of State's eighteen fraternities, was in the final stages of planning. In the past several years many thousands of dollars have been spent by the fraternities themselves for planning expenses. At present it is still doubtful that the government will offer a reimbursement for these expenses.

The error was discovered during the recent renovation of a section of the archives at the Capitol. It is reported that a secretary noticed the blunder and brought it to the attention of the authorities.

The announcement also added the encouragement that through additional red tape and deliberation, it might be possible for both schools to receive aid for such a fraternity project.

Atop Harrelson

Docking Deck Due

The faculty will soon have a multi-level parking area which will be paid for by student donations, according to the chairman of the Steering Sub-Committee of the Traffic Committee.

To be located atop Harrelson Hall, the addition will provide four parking levels to ease the faculty parking situation. The cost of the structure will be held to a minimum, with the central ramp to be used as a thoroughfare; the ramp will be closed to pedestrian use.

Student solicitors have been selected to ask for donations for the project. They will canvass the dormitory areas this week for funds. Also, a booth will be located in the College Union for this purpose.

"It is hoped that all students will give generously for this desperately needed, albeit extravagant, project," said the chairman of the sub-committee. "The donors' aid will not go unnoticed; they will be given embroidered arm-bands emblazoned with the slogan, Gung-Ho."

This new project is another step in the overall effort to beautify the campus. The areas presently in use will be converted into more of M.&O.'s creations of beauty through the use of bricks, mud, dead shrubbery, and board fences.

State College fans will occupy the shady west side of Kenan Stadium during the State-Carolina game next fall.

For many years UNC officials have been successful in their efforts to segregate State fans and confine them to the east side of the stadium where the best view is the sun over the horizon. In defense of their actions, Carolina officials explained that there was simply not enough west side to go around.

This practice has been overcome for the first time in history due to the efforts of State's own progressive Student Government. In an interview with The Technician last night, I. M. Fullerbull, spokesman for the SG, explained how the organization managed to set this new precedent.

"After many years of useless fighting for our rights, we have hit upon a plan which would corner the tricky Carolina officials.

Our Student Government challenged the Carolina Student Government to a 'sudden death' decathlon, the winner of which was to be given the right to occupy the shady side of Kenan Stadium next year."

Continuing Fullerbull said "These loyal representatives who pledged their whole-hearted support to the student body during the last election sat out on a mission to Chapel Hill last Saturday to fulfill their promises. They performed to their greatest capacity and brought home a tremendous victory to the college. Please remember our devotion during the next elections."

According to Fullerbull, the decathlon events were decided upon in a joint meeting of the two bodies. Events in speed plowing, corn husking, cow milking, squirrel shooting, and wood whittin' were submitted by the State team. The Carolina team contributed the other five events, which included beer chug-a-lugging, panty raiding, (See DECATHALON, page 4)

We'll Show 'Em

It just isn't fair!

The recent Faculty Senate ruling that all undergraduate students must be in their rooms with the lights out by 11 p.m. is an infringement of our basic rights as young American men and women. Of course it is a good idea, but that is beside the point.

Were we consulted about the nightly-except-Saturday curfew? No, indeed, we were not. And after all, the restriction does apply to us—it looks like we could have been asked if we wanted a curfew, or something.

It was a nice gesture to extend the limit to 11:15 on Saturday night, though, even if we can't figure out what you can do in that extra fifteen minutes.

This whole deal is going to kinda cut down on the amount of study time, however. By the time you get back from Red's and call up a coupla girls and all, you've just about shot the whole night, there. We suppose the change will encourage afternoon study, since that's the only time left.

The point is that we were left out—yessir, we were left out entirely when the decision was made. And that rankles—yessir, that rankles. After all, we are paying tuition around here. Who are they to try and push us around? Yessir, who are they?

Well, we're not going to take it lying down. First of all we will write nasty letters to the faculty senators. Next comes the chalk-slogans-on-blackboards campaign. The finale will be a slam-bang march on Holladay Hall.

That'll show 'em we're old enough to make up our own minds, by George. Yessir, that'll show 'em.

Won't it?

A Longer Walk

The coming move of the State College library to Pullen has the whole campus buzzing with excitement.

How about that! Turning the D. H. Hill building into a College Union annex! Can you imagine the possibilities?

Of course there is one thing that concerns us about the library. I mean, after all, libraries have their place on a college campus, too. This move is really going to create some hardships.

Just think how far we'll have to walk from the CU to get a book. It must be—well, it must be at least a half mile extra, just one way.

It's a good thing we don't have to go to the library often.

Letters To Editor

Campus Pac, Professors Attacked

To the Editor:

The outrageous plans now pending before the Board of Directors of the College Union to send the five thousand cases of beer, which have been donated to the CU, back to the manufacturer may not be put into effect.

Although we realize that the recent failure by the College Union to get rid of their immense supply of Campus Pac's has discouraged them from attempting to put across any give-away scheme, I feel that they will have very little trouble giving away any amount of beer they may be able to obtain.

The claim that such a give-away will not benefit all State College students is also not sufficiently important to prevent the College Union from giving the beer away. After all, some of their other programs don't benefit the entire student body. The sale of newspapers and magazines is of benefit only to those who know how to read; a rare talent on this great campus.

Besides, the beer is being given to them. It seems very unfair to force the manufacturer to take such a large quantity of beer back and try to sell it. They won't make more than ten times what they are getting by giving it away.

What's wrong with having a little beer on campus at the present time? The five thousand cases now being hidden in the sub-basement of the CU will be only a minor addition to the amount now being illegally hidden in two or three of the livelier dorm rooms on campus.

The Committee for Lost Weekends.

To the Editor:

I wish to state that I feel that professors have an unfair advantage over students in that if they themselves are unable to write a sufficiently difficult quiz, they are able to consult one of their more capable colleagues and obtain questions that not even they can answer.

Faculty Passes Bill

Weekends Extended

In a surprise move last week, State College's Supreme Faculty recommended that all Friday afternoon classes and labs, as well as all Saturday classes be eliminated in the future.

The recommendation came on the heels of a complaint from the Campus Senators as well as the infirm staff concerning the poor physical condition of State students. According to reports, many students are nearing complete physical exhaustion, as well as nervous breakdowns, due to an abundance of high-school level labs, impossible, but time-wasting, problem sets, and shaft quizzes. These reports complained that students are required to spend valuable time on useless tasks and are not able to apply their energies to other phases of their education.

The Supreme Faculty decision was reached at the climax of a stormy session which was the scene of much name-calling and a well-placed punch applied to the nose of Silas Schwirtz, the moderator. Schwirtz was carried from the meeting and after a short recovery period was able to continue.

After considerable debate, the question was called to a vote and passed by the narrow margin of 5 to 4. The recommendation will pass on to Holloway Hall and is expected to become administration policy in the near future.

Is this fair? Is this fair? If stupid little students like myself want to ask someone to help us on a quiz, we are stopped the threat of action by the Honor Code Board, but a professor who needs help can ask anyone and get away with it.

There is only one way to remedy this dreadful problem. We must take action to obtain the formation of a Faculty Honor Code Board. With such an organization, we could see an end to quizzes more difficult than any one man could write. We would also see the departure of the most flagrant violators and a marked rise in the College's scholastic average. This would benefit the College by raising its standing in the nation.

Wouldn't these improvements be of great value to the College? Aren't they things that are desperately needed? Why then, don't we make the needed changes and raise State College to the top spot in the nation.

97,000 Watch Red-White Contest

An almost capacity crowd of 97,000 ardent football fans turned out Saturday afternoon in the middle of a hurricane to watch the annual Red-White spring football game.

The White team emerged victorious 127-6 in a contest that was much closer than the score indicated.

The brightest prospect of the day for Coach Earle Edwards' 1962 edition of the football year was a young, strapping lad by the name of Roman Gabriel. Gabriel has reportedly refused a pro contract with a National Football League team to play with the Plowboys next year.

The crowd of 97,000 was short of the expected capacity turnout for the spacious Riddick Stadium. However, the bad weather and lack of parking space contributed to the causes for another 10,000 staying away from the feature attraction.

Coach Edwards divided his team into two even units for the contest. The White team was composed of the first six teams while the Red was made up of an all-star selection from the fraternities, dormitories, Cary, Garner, and Daniels Junior High.

As stated before, the game was closer than the score indicated since it was a tie game at the opening kickoff. But from that time on the Red team slowly fell behind in the score.

The White defensive efforts were superb, holding the Red team scoreless except for a lone tally which occurred due to a mixup in assignments. Under the free substitution rule, the White team had both units off the field at the same time.

The result was a superb touchdown play by the Red team as they beautifully executed a triple reverse screen pass with a double lateral that sent Allivishus Quamquat Sigafos over with the TD.

Gabriel was easily the standout for the Whites (he was the only man on offense for most of the game) as he was responsible for 119 points.

am not sure if it is a football record, but it does top the basketball record of 116 points made by Ebo Francis."

Meredith College Voted Into ACC

In a move unprecedented in national history, the Atlantic Coast Conference voted yesterday to make Meredith College a member of the conference.

According to the conference publicity office, Meredith will begin official competition with the eight other member schools this fall.

The Conference Board had been debating between Meredith and Woman's College as to the new entry. The decision on Meredith came after the social dean at the school finally gave in to student requests that more active participation with other colleges be permitted.

The publicity office would make no comment on the additional request that a new sport, twisting, be added to the conference schedule so as to get the new member off to a good start.

A spokesman for Meredith stated, "We are glad that the conference has given us the opportunity to participate in physical contacts with the other schools. We feel that it is about time that the other schools are shown that a college from Raleigh will finally be able to compete with the ACC teams since State College has not provided good enough talent in the past."

Meredith had evidently expected the move since it had been recruiting outstanding performers from Peace and Saint Mary's Colleges. An NCAA investigator has also been on the campus observing the methods involved and said, "I cannot divulge information now, but I did get an eyeful."

State College students felt that the move would be an advantage in getting a chance to tangle with the local school. One statement was, "They may be tough while playing at Meredith, but wait until we get them on our home field."

Publicity director Frank Weedon was busy combing the record books to see if this was a first in football history. He commented, "I

When asked about his plans of enforcing the law that all design students must attend classes in Harrelson Hall, the leader said, "I think that it will be very simple to carry out my orders. At approximately 0800 Tuesday morning 3 April, the Pershing Rifles will form in front of Syme Dormitory in full Santa Claus dress and will march to the Design School in a series of right column, left column, right oblique, and left oblique movements interspersed with 'to the rear marches'."

"After reaching the front of the Design School, we will perform a group of rifle movements, culminating in the Queen Ann Salute. We figure that after seeing our sharpness, they will recognize us as the wild and woolly soldiers we are and that all the rebellion will be squashed."

Work in the field started Thursday with the mowing of the present crop of rye.

Name Changed: Wolfpack Out, Plowboys In

Beginning next September, State College athletic teams will no longer be known as the "Wolfpack."

According to a press release from the office of the Athletic Director, the State nickname will be the "Plowboys."

It is predicted that some careless sportswriters may mistakenly describe our teams in midseason as the "Wolfboys." This would no doubt be a little more colorful than the "Plow-pack."

Uniform changes will take place because of the new name, informed sources reported. The new uniforms, made of corduroy, will have bibs, which will at least make them distinctive. It is also rumored that the cheerleaders will follow the new trend by sporting straw hats at outdoor events.

As far as cheers at sporting events are concerned, the change has many possibilities. It is, after all, hard to find anything to rhyme with "State College"—just think of the possibilities present with a phrase like "MOO U."

Harrelson Hall Condemned By Design Students

Harrelson Hall is old fashioned, according to design students at State College.

Starting this morning, the design students will ignore all classes being held in that building.

In a meeting on the breezeway at Brooks Hall last night, 300 design students voiced their previously unspoken opinion of Harrelson Hall, State College's unique new circular classroom building. The building has been considered by nationally known architects to be ultramodern. However, the design students disagree.

A first year design student, spokesman for the group, said last night that all design students are required to ban all classes scheduled in Harrelson Hall until it is remodelled.

The students are protesting against the building for two reasons. They explained that Harrelson Hall's seventeenth century aborigine architecture is obsolete and that the color scheme followed throughout the building was outdated fifty years ago. They also complained that the circular halls are misleading.

"We hope that by establishing this new department, we at State College will promote the use of such personnel, thereby improving the quality of the average funeral."

It is also believed that the new department will soon be able to conduct research in certain areas of mortuary practices which have been handled by the same methods for several centuries. Among the projects which the department is considering is a system for putting coffins in orbit, thus eliminating the need for cemeteries.

shooting the bull, techniques in the Arboretum, as well as nude partying. There was no contest in the first five events as the State team confidently overpowered their opponents.

Mertimer Suggs of State set a new world record in the process of winning the plowing event. He and his mule turned one acre of ground in less than one hour.

After the State team lost the next three events, it was feared that Carolina might secure a tie, thus retaining the shady side. However, the State boys surprised the Tar Heels when they swept the beer chugging contest. The State team wound up their victory by making a tremendous comeback near the end of the panty raiding event to edge out their opponents and make the score a convincing 10 to 3.
