

Gator Bowl, Possibly Sugar, Want Wolfpack Despite Loss

by Carlyle Gravely
Sports Editor

State's once-defeated Wolfpack, still a prime bowl prospect, is expected to know today whether or not it will go bowling on New Year's Day.

Speculation is that an invitation will come later today from the Sugar Bowl Committee in New Orleans. The bid, which State became eligible to receive yesterday, did not materialize although there were calls placed between Athletic Director Roy Clogston and Sugar Bowl scout Monk Simons.

One new development was a contact with Clogston from a representative from the Gator Bowl.

If State receives a bid from the Sugar Bowl, it is expected that it will be accepted right away, according to Clogston. However, he pointed out that the normal channels would be followed in receiving and processing a bid, including a vote by the team, athletic staff, and permission from the administration for the team to play.

Some of the reluctance of the Sugar Bowl to offer a concrete bid may be their battle to get Tennessee, probably the nation's number one team, and Oklahoma to play in New Orleans. Speculation is, however, that these two teams will meet in the Orange Bowl in Miami. State's eagerness for a bowl bid is natural since the last bowl they played in was the Liberty Bowl in 1963, which they lost 16-12 to Mississippi State.

Good Game ???

After the first seven minutes of Saturday's game with Penn State, the Wolfpack played some of the best ball that they have played all year. The defense was spectacular after the early lapse, and gave only 32 yards total offense to the Lions during the second half. The Lions never ran more than six plays in succession and made only one first down. They advanced no further upfield than their own 37, where they punted.

The offense, although they didn't score, played a better game in the second half. They were able to move within scoring range three times and converted twice. These conversions were on field goals by Gerald Warren for 23 and 26 yards. The third time the Pack approached within range, they were stopped only inches short of a score that could have given them a tie and enabled them to maintain their unblemished record.

After the game, Coach Earle Edwards blamed himself for not picking a play that might have worked better than the off-tackle drive that fell short. "I called the wrong play. I shouldn't have let them run the play that they did."

When asked to compare the Lions, who will now almost surely win the Lambert Trophy, symbol of Eastern dominance, with the other teams the Pack had played, he said, "They beat us, the others didn't."

After the game, Coach Earle Edwards blamed himself for not picking a play that might

Tunnel Vision!

"You are Now Entering The American Sector!"

"What the hell!" The aftermath of the Student Government paint-in at the Supply Store tunnel implants itself visibly on the mind of the unwary. It even leaves a lasting impression on those who are prepared for it.

A result of the "spring-board", and numerous illicit attempts at painting other tunnels on campus the paint-in Thursday is one of the few noticeable artistic accomplishments of Student Government.

A $20 paint fund was appropriated by S. G., and the "paint-in" began at 5 Thursday. It continued until paint ran out.

Some of the graffiti: "P. P. owes Porter, Hilton, Crawley Hanna, and Lewis $207.79".

"Mini skirts are close to the truth." "Mary Jane and I are having a good time and there's nothing you can do about it Mark!"

All in all it was one of the better activities of the Student Government. Dare we hope for more? Brick Miller

Dimmuck - Props Struggle Heads Freshman Runoffs

State freshmen go again to the polls tomorrow to vote for a class president in a run-off election between Tom Dimmuck of Raleigh and Roy Props of Ft. Deane, Va.

In last week's election, Dimmuck received 501 votes while Props received 298.

"I am again looking forward to a responsive turnout of the freshmen for tomorrow's runoff election," said Ed Chambers, elections board chairman.

"The most important race will of course be the one for presidency of the freshman class. There will also be a run-off for the vacant freshman Textiles senate seat among Ronald L. Matthews, Robert Gooch and Phil Ryalls.

"Due to the lack of interest among graduate students, no runoff will be held for graduate senator. Instead, Student Government President Wes McClure will appoint someone to that seat," Chambers said.

Although he is pleased that 48 per cent of the freshman class voted last Wednesday, Chambers criticized the students for their small turnout on the Carter Stadium seating referendum.

"I am extremely disappointed in the voter turnout for this issue. Less than 1,500 bothered to express their views on this important matter," he stated.

"If anyone thinks the Athletic Department will consider this referendum as significant they're mistaken because a turnout of less than 20 per cent seems to indicate that the student body really doesn't give a damn.

"I feel that the issue was well publicized so I can see no excuse for any student expressing his opinions. I hope to hear more complaints about 'sunny seats' in the future," he said.

The 1,874 students who voted on the referendum were instructed to give their preferences on three seating schemes. Of these, 898 preferred the student body sit in the west stands, 884 preferred all students on the east side—as it is now—and 92 favored a plan where the student body would be split into two groups and placed on opposite sides.

"But as I said before, over 8,000 students don't seem to care where they sit," said Chambers.

President McClure agreed with Chambers. "I was disappointed at the turnout for the referendum," said McClure.

"The results give us nothing to work with. Obviously, more than 20 per cent of the student body attends the football games but most of the people affected by the seating situation didn't use their opportunity to speak out about it.

"I thought that Ed Chambers did an excellent job of running an efficient election. There was enough publicity and the mechanics of the polls were well executed," he added.

starting next year. All these increases go into effect with the first session of summer school in 1968.

Student Accounts Supervisor W. R. Styons said state will not get a penny out of the increase. "The North Carolina Board of Higher Education proposed an increase in tuition based on the fact that it apparently cost more to educate a non-resident than we are now charging him," he said.

"The Legislature sanctioned the increase by increasing State's estimated receipts by $100 per non-resident student." State's budget was cut to compensate for the increase in revenue.

The State Board of Trustees then authorized the increase in tuition. They must do it under state law. There will be no extra money from the increase because of the budget the legislature enacted," he said.

"It is reasonable and it relieves state taxpayers. The individual taxpayer will get the benefit of the tuition increases. We don't want out-of-state students to be subsidized by state taxpayers," he continued.

"I think the new rates are

Non-Resident Tuition Justified

by Hilton Smith

State will get no revenue from an increase in out-of-state student tuition fees.

On October 6, the Board of Trustees authorized an increase in tuition for out-of-state students. The increase will be $50 a semester during the regular session and $2.50 per credit hour in summer school.

Graduate tuition will be increased by $5.50 per hour during the regular term.

An out-of-state undergraduate will pay $100 a year more proper for out-of-state students. I don't think this will cut down on the enrollment at all. There are plenty of loans and grants, and private institutions cost far more than this.

"I think it was the practical and logical thing for me to do. We charge the out-of-state student what it costs to teach him."

Styons pointed out that the $100 increase goes into effect throughout the Greater University branches and similar increases go into effect in all state institutions of higher education.

"I think the new rates are

Buddy Rich A Huge Success Saturday

Assoc. Features Editor by Max Hurlocker

Last Saturday night the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum rocked with the beat of the Big Band Era like it never had before, by Buddy Rich and his orchestra were there, and everyone really knew it.

This third concert of the New Arts, Inc. series this year started off with a bang the moment Rich walked on stage. His humor along with the terrific sound left an indelible impression in the minds of everyone present.

Rich, who first organized his present band about a year and a half ago, really outdid himself for the very receptive audience of students, dates, and townspeople.

The orchestration consisted of four trumpets, five saxophones (two altos, two tenors, and a baritone), three trombones, piano, bass, and last but not most, the drum itself—Rich.

Some of the most spine-tingling but sweet sounds ventured forth from the horn of Chuck Finley, lead trumpeter in the Rich Band. In fact, one might be lead to believe that he was reading from a piccolo score.

Sax solos frequented throughout the concert. The pretty and melodic were generally played by the tenor soloist, while the thrilling, up-tempo improvisations were left to the altos.

The indestructible Rich, which is a valid description because he had a heart attack several years ago, made quite an impression with his fine arrangements and musicianship. After his illness, doctors said that he would never play drums again, but, no one who was present for the concert could say such a thing. During one rendition, Rich beat out a brilliant tattoo which lasted every bit of five minutes—a feat of pure physical stamina.

The Coliseum was indeed Rich's last Saturday, and anyone there could attest to that fact. If for any reason you missed the concert, the Buddy Rich Band will be at Chapel Hill next weekend. Don't make the same mistake twice.

Welch, Scots At Coliseum Tomorrow

Two units of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II's Brigade of Guards will join forces for a military spectacle to be staged by The Friends of the College at the Coliseum on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. The Regimental Band of the Welsh Guards will combine with the Pipes, Drums, and Highland Dancers of the Scots-Guards to present the pageant of marching, music and dancing.

The Scots Guards have been here previously but this is the first time the Welsh and Scots have appeared together on this continent.

The Household Brigade—five regiments of foot guards in all—are familiar to visitors to London, for they mount the Guard at Buckingham Palace and other strategic sites.

These ceremonial music and marching pageants have become one of the most popular entertainments with American audiences, and are being brought back to Raleigh after repeated requests from both students and townspeople.

N. C. State students and their dates are admitted free. They are reminded that they must pick up their tickets at the Information Center of the Union, from their residence hall counselor, or fraternity housemother.

WKNC To Broadcast Soundtrack, Supremes

When was the last time you listened to WKNC-FM, State's own radio station.

If you are like most people on campus you know little or nothing about WKNC-FM, just that they do happen to play some pretty good music.

For an example:

Tuesday, November 14
9:00—On Interplay Two, the movie soundtrack for this week is "From Russia With Love."

Wednesday, November 15
8:30—Interplay One will spotlight the Supremes. John Moore is your host.

Thursday, November 16
9:00—Interplay Two will spotlight the music from the Broadway play "Man With a Load of Mischief."

WKNC-FM, located at 88.1 on the FM band, broadcasts from 6:30 p.m. until 12 midnight, six nights a week.

Be sure to listen in. A radio station of the quality of WKNC certainly deserves to be heard. You say you don't have time? Take time. Instead of going over across the street to have a beer or two, go next door and listen to a friend's FM radio.

Tune in the high quality of KNC at 88.1 MHz and thoroughly enjoy yourself. There are indeed few escapes from our academic chains during the work-a-day week. Do yourself a favor and listen in to your own radio station. It's FUN!

Football -- Good Running Backed By Good Blocking

All-Star Game Pits Edwards vs. Harp

The coaching staffs for the first Sudan Temple All-Star Game have been announced. The two teams will be headed by two of the most highly respected coaches in the business.

The East

For Earle Edwards, the highly successful coach of the North Carolina State Wolfpack, his position as head coach of the East team for the game will have added meaning, although he has coached in all-star games many times.

Why? Because it is the first in a series of games that will feature the finest senior football players in North Carolina, and it will be played in Carter Stadium, the beautiful home of the Wolfpack, of which Earle Edwards is very proud.

Looking at this year's contest, Edwards stated, "A lot of people wonder how the small college and the major college players stack up, and this game will provide a good indication.

Edwards staff will include Clarence Stasavich of East Carolina and Tom Caldwell of Elizabeth City State. Their team will be led by players from State and Carolina of the ACC and East Carolina of the Southern Conference.

The West

Duke's University's head football coach Tom Harp will make his third appearance of the '67 season at Carter Stadium and believe it or not it will be a new experience for him.

Harp, whose record on the N. C. State turf is 1-1 this year, will be head coach of the West team. It will be his first appearance as an all-star coach.

Teams for the game will be selected from North Carolina's major colleges and universities with Harp's team led by players from Duke and Wake Forest of the ACC and Davidson of the Southern Conference.

Working with the Blue Devil coach will be Davidson's Homer Smith and Bert Piggett of North Carolina A&T. It is the first all-star coaching assignment for Smith and Piggett.

The first annual Sudan Temple All-Star game will be held at Carter Stadium on November 25. Proceeds from the game will go to the Shriners' hospitals for crippled and burned children.

Lions Stop Pack Rally Foot Short

by Carlyle Gravely
It took just over six minutes Saturday afternoon for the Wolfpack's dreams of a perfect season to go up in smoke as the Nittany Lions scored twice. They then held off and stopped the Pack's final drive one foot short of a score and a tie to take a 13-8 win.

In that six minutes and forty seconds, the Lions drove 59 yards in seven plays for a score and sophomore line-backer Denny Onkotz returned an intercepted pass 67 yards for a second TD. Onkotz broke one tackle on the 45 of State and then had a magnificent block thrown for him by Jim Litterelle to seal his scoring run and State's doom.

After the seven minute lapse, the Wolfpack came to life but was not able to cash in on several opportunities.

"They didn't play catch-up football real well and they didn't have a great passing game. We thought if we could get ahead early and take away their punt-return game, we could win," said Penn State coach Joe Paterno after the game. They were able to do this in the game and the results show.

Onkotz was a trouble to the Pack all through the game, making six individual tackles and aiding in many others.

During the first half, the Wolfpack defense couldn't hold the potent passing of Lion record holder Tom Sherman, the strong running of Don Abbey and Charlie Pittman and the sure hands of Ted Kwalick and Jack Curry, as the Lions rolled up 208 yards offense while surrendering 105.

The Wolfpack won the toss and elected the wind, a plan which worked well against Duke but backfired Saturday. The Lions drove for a touchdown on their first possession. Three passes and four runs scored.

The second Penn State score came only three minutes later on a 67 yard pass interception return by Dennis Onkotz. The point was wide and the Pack was behind 13-0 before it even knew what had happened.

During the remainder of the game, the Pack fought back well but was not able to score a touchdown. They were stopped only inches from paydirt with less than a minute left. The Wolfpack's kicking expert, Gerald Warren, scored the Pack's only points as he made two field goals from 23 and 26 yards out to continue his lead in the national scoring by kicking ace with 64 points.

The Pack attempts to finish its most successful season in years with a trip to Clemson that will also decide the Atlantic Coast Conference title winner this week.
