Broughton Campaign Headed By Pittman

Frank Shields Pittman Jr., a 21-year-old senior majoring in agriculture, has been appointed head of Democratic gubernatorial candidate J. Melville Broughton Jr.'s statewide "Students for Broughton Committee."

"I have always thought it wholesome for young people to be active in politics," Broughton said in announcing Pittman's appointment.

"In doing so they will think more about their government and work for its improvement. They will become acquainted with the issues facing the State, and their participation will show to the public that students and other young people deserve a part in shaping the future of North Carolina."

Pittman, whose father served in the N. C. House of Representatives from 1955-1957, will help organize groups supporting Broughton on other state campuses.

Each campus "Students for Broughton" group will include a steering committee and a college manager. Broughton said he would appoint the committee members in a few days.

"We will also appoint soon a state chairman for this aspect of our organization," Broughton added.

Through Pittman and the other students, Broughton said he hopes not only to aid his campaign for the Democratic nomination but also to "interest young people, both college age and older, in the Democratic Party and spread the base of popular government."

Pittman is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Pittman of Scotland Neck.

Symposium Successful: Ivey

by Jerry Williams

"From my point of view the Union Symposium last month was a success," says James Ivey, Special Projects Director, but he adds that more money is needed to improve the program in the future.

"With the competition from Friends of the College two of the three nights and from weekend Christmas parties the attendance made me feel the project was a success," he said.

According to Ivey, about 350 people attended the Thursday night, Dec. 7, session to hear Arthur C. Clarke speak, while 250 turned out for Alice Hilton's lecture the following evening. "But the thing that pleased me was that 150 attended Saturday night and 18 of those stayed until 10:30 to talk to the speaker, Alvin Toffler.

Also, we've had many calls for transcripts of the Symposium tapes. We're going to make them available to the students in the library," he said.

Although Ivey had "nothing concrete" planned for next year's Symposium, he had many ideas to improve the affair.

"Our basic drawback is a lack of funds; I'd like to have a top-notch Symposium with a budget of about $5,000, but that will take more support," he said. Last month's project cost $2300.

"I'd also like to have enough money to hold seminars with the speakers throughout the day. We could have the lectures stay here two days instead of one and have an open discussion with all three speakers on the second day," he continued.

Ivey compared the Symposium at State with that of Carolina which works with a much higher budget and has already invited five speakers, including Assistant Secretary of State William P. Bundy and author Edgar Snow. That Symposium is held every other year and this year will be conducted from March 31 to April 3.

"This sort of thing is upmost in people's minds at the Union. There the administration, student government and the Union each give $1500, while here the Union contributes $1500, SG $500, and the administration nothing.

"We'll have to solicit more foundations and a few banks and get more money from SG and the administration. We can't solicit individual students as Carolina does, but we can set up opportunities for donations," he commented.

"I want the Symposium to become of such magnitude that the transcripts would be bound like theses in the library and made available for researching students to cite.

"We'd like to bring in people who could work with and lead seminars with certain departments, as Clarke did, but first we're going to have to sell people on the importance of the Symposium," he concluded.

1967: Bowl, Booze, Bricks

Hindsight Is Always Better

Nineteen sixty-seven saw conflict and violence on most fronts in the world. State too had its share of big news. Here, chosen by the Technician news staff, are the top ten stories of the year.

1. October 7, 1967—State beats second-ranked Houston 16-6 in the Astrodome. The Technician printed in red and the Pack went undefeated for four more games.

2. December 17, 1967—State beats Georgia 14-7 for the school's first bowl victory.

3. Wes McClure elected president of the student body March 8, 1967. His victory over Bill Iler was believed by some to have been realized due to charges against Iler in the Technician.

4. Spring, 1967, Department of student housing approves a liberalized list of dorm regulations which stressed individual student judgment.

5. Student Government sets referendum on Carter Stadium seating after some students charged they had been "sold down the river." In the fall the referendum attracted a small turnout and students remained on the "sunny side" of the stadium.

6. Spring 1967 Physical Plants tells male Alexander Dorm residents to find other rooms so that renovation could be completed for female students who now room there. Pressure from student leaders caused the PP to reconsider, and residents remained until the end of the semester.

7. Hotel Sir Walter donated to N. C. State foundations.

8. Physical Plant moves toward completion of Union Brick Mall.

9. Plans revealed for new student Union to be completed in the early 70's.

10. Father Gordon Kendall leaves State under pressure from Bishop Vincent Waters because of Kendall's participation in Raleigh peace vigils.

SG Puts Bounty On Vandal's Head

by Craig Wilson

Student Government will allocate $50 from its contingency fund as a reward for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the vandals responsible for recent defacing of the Bell Tower.

At Wednesday night's SG meeting, Sandra Sharpe, PS-AM senator introduced under emergency legislation a bill calling for the student legislature to donate and offer the reward and send a mandate to the proper authorities that the tower painters be prosecuted as violators of the campus code and North Carolina statute.

The legislation, which was co-sponsored by Bill Laughon, engineering senator, caused a stir on the floor. Ivan Mothershead, an alternate who was instrumental in having the proposal placed before SG, spoke in defense of what he termed "the defacement of our symbol." "It (the Bell Tower) as a memorial to our war dead, is like apple pie and everything else American. I think we should be offended."

Recently vandals used light paint and wrote "Dear Bears," "Kyoties Are Kool" and "Fly United" on the base of the monument.

Mothershead originally suggested that the reward money be solicited from SG senators. He suggested that 50 cents per person would raise the needed funds.

Although the bill had been read twice, there was misunderstanding on the part of some senators on the first vote which passed the measure 32-29. Many legislators indicated they did not wish to donate personally, and a motion for reconsideration was allowed.

The bill once again passed, but not without opposition. Ed Chambers, engineering senator, questioned the rationale of allocating the money. "I do not think our system is being used properly by allocating funds for finding criminals," he said.

"Personally I think the whole thing is too emotional," he continued. "There have been many things on campus this fall worse than this... like stealing cars."

The Elections Board chairman also noted the bill might imply admission that the Honor system doesn't work.

Worth T. Blackwood, Chief of Campus Security, told the Technician that at 12:25 a.m. January 1, security officers noticed the bell tower painting, and that at 1:35 a.m. approached someone painting a bench at the Student Supply Store.

"He had very long hair, was a white male about 5'9" tall, and wore a plaid coat," said Blackwood.

"When our officers approached him, he dropped his paint and ran. The men chased him, but lost him," he said. "But we're still looking and think he can be identified if seen again."

Blackwood also noted that a ticket window at the Coliseum, as well as a stop sign and pavement near the Frank Thompson Theater were also painted.

Johnson In '68? Vote In Primary

by George Pantan

State students along with several million other college students will be allowed to vote in a straw national presidential primary this spring.

Student Government voted to sponsor the presidential primary on campus at their meeting Wednesday night. The primary is sponsored nationally by Choice, a project of Time Magazine. The ballots and publicity material for the primary will be furnished by Time, with the local sponsoring organization providing the poll workers.

President Wes McClure said it would cost approximately $140 to run the polls for the primary. If the students vote on the North Carolina gubernatorial or senatorial primaries, it would cost an additional $140. The additional cost would be incurred by the cost of printing the ballots.

McClure said that having most of the college students in the nation voting in a presidential primary is a new idea. "It will indicate to the candidates what a substantial part of the country believes," he said.

The balloting will be held on April 24 throughout the country and Time expects a turnout of several million voters. They will list three choices for the office of President. Only the student's first choice will count in the balloting with his second and third choices being used for statistical analysis.

The ballot will also include three or four referendum questions of national importance.

The Big One..

Amidst the rah-rah's of last Monday's bowl games, one could hear the disgruntled tones of die-hard State fans who thought the Wolfpack should have played in one of the "major" games.

But collegiate football—that great equalizer of academic institutions—while denying the Pack ranking and recognition, allowed the Kool Kyoties a better fate than most of the big names.

While Wyoming, the only undefeated team in the land, and Alabama and Tennessee, great standard-bearers for the fabled Southeastern Conference, were taking it on the chin, State loyalists were resting in their TV lounges still wallowing in the aftermath of the ACC's first win over the SEC in 24 tries, a 14-7 victory over Georgia in the ninth annual Liberty Bowl.

Memphis has seldom seen a more exciting contest as the Wolfpack used the brutal defense that had propelled it to eight regular season wins to repulse the suicidal thrusts by Vince Dooley's Dogs in the last 3 minutes.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal said "Football as it was played in Memphis Memorial Stadium can live forever. There's nothing in the world that can kill it."

A Liberty Bowl photographer along the sidelines said he had never seen goal line stands like State's.

Georgia coach Dooley hinted that State could easily have been undefeated this year.

And two Wolfpack supporters swore that the June Taylor dancers spelled out NCS on the Jackie Gleason Show that Saturday night.

Sports Illustrated even conceded in a recent article that based on toughness of schedule and other factors weekly polls often neglect, State should have been included in the top ten.

But a sportswriter's vote could never rate the excitement or personal satisfaction that the Pack brought back from Memphis. And most of Raleigh likes it like that.

It was a colorful day at Memphis for the big game between State and Georgia. Almost every one of the 35,000 fans had a small American flag to wave. (photo by Hankins)

Draft Females

The law states that all males over the age of eighteen owe service to their country in the form of military duty. There are deferments to a few who can show reason why they should not be required by the military and the rules are strict.

A seemingly unrelated fact is that this month a person will have to pay six cents to have a letter mailed via Federal mail. Each year it becomes more expensive for the Federal government to keep up its many services.

A little thought would reveal that there is some type nonconformity of policy which is being paid for by the taxpayer.

If the obligation, that everyone supposedly has by law, were some form other than military, then those who are not able to serve in military could aid government services in other fields. The example of the postal system is just one of many examples. There are many fields where a top notch physical condition is not required. A trick knee does not hurt one's typing or office work.

Service to one's country does not necessarily mean carrying a gun, especially when services are so badly needed at this time.

The obligation should also extend to the big exempted group . . . all females over the age of eighteen. It seems a little strange to say that only males owe service to their country. No one would advocate that females carry guns on the front line, but they could perform other useful services. It is no more un-American for females to serve in a useful capacity than it is for young males to non-voluntarily risk their lives every day.

The "draft" laws as they stand at this time are in bad need of revision. What was originally a necessity in time of need has lost its proportion. It is the policy of the United States to continue the war in Viet Nam. Due to the unpopularity of the war at home, the manpower needed to "serve your country" must come from the draft, and the draft is the dictate of brave General Hershey.

When a memorandum from Hershey can take away deferments and mangle the future of the individual, and his potential, because he feels the need to protest what he does not believe in, then something is definitely wrong. What happened to the principles that we are supposedly fighting for?

The draft is now a necessity but it should be kept within proportion and reason. If the reason for the draft is that there is an obligation which must be met, then everyone should be considered for whatever capacity they might be able to serve. At the same time, deferments that are given, should have an integrity fitting the deferments.

Incompetence, Perhaps?

In the Contention section of this page is a letter, written by William Jones, Coordinator of the Student Government Traffic Committee, in response to a Technician editorial. The response that Jones has put forth is, in itself, enough to convict the traffic committee of incompetence.

Jones seems to be unaware that there are any problems which should take a dominating interest. After all, no one has taken him by the hand or cornered him against a wall to tell him that they are sick of paying outrageously high fines, tired of dodging misguiding traffic, or fed up with the pseudosystem of parking distribution. Perhaps the committee should take off their binoculars and go find out what the situation is all about. If not, maybe someone will finally tell Jones what is going on.

It is nice to know that the committee is working on something, however, Jones assures us that the situation is being looked into but that evening parking took up this semester. By the time that the "slow deliberation" is over, parking problems should be closer to solution. At present rate of progress this should take place sometime in the spring of 1983 . . . if nothing else comes up before then.

Jones brings up an interesting point by saying that he will "be inclined to do nothing unless . . . pushed." It should go down in history with the Physical Plant motto of "inconvenience is progress." This is the attitude that has led to the fouled up situation that the traffic is in now. It looks as if some one will have to take the committee by the hand to show them the problem and keep kicking them in the teeth until something is done—which amounts to more than "slow deliberation."

If this response of the committee is representative, then the committee might as well give up and go home. The solutions are not going to come out of the woodwork and Jones is not going to get fan club mail. This does not make the problems any less severe nor does it justify Jones or the committee sitting around waiting for someone to tell them what to do. The situation is bad and warrants work and solution now.

If the Jones response is representative of the views of the "authorities", then the committee as well as the traffic situation ought to be junked in hopes of a brighter future with a fresh start.

Remove Chip Mr. Lee

To the Editor:

I am directing this letter to Mr. Jim Lee, who I hope will give up his absurd quest for a way for him to earn his rights, long enough to read it.

Mr. Lee, in your search for bigotry in Messrs. Stahl and Hurley you have completely missed the point. You do not have to earn your rights or expound the virtues of your past life. There is no set rule for attaining social recognition. Only by your actions can you reach that goal. The fact that you are in college, attempting to educate yourself and preparing for your future as a constructive member of our society, speaks for itself. It is, as Mr. Cox put it "outcasts . . . who are as lazy as to sit on their front porch all day while their kids play in the street, and go down to the welfare department every second Friday to pick up their checks" who need to earn their rights (and also their livings). It is to these people, who riot through our streets, to these lazy, ignorant, and almost barbarous individuals, that you should direct your energies, in hopes of upgrading them. When these people can think for themselves and can show initiative and responsibility, then they too will have earned their rights.

Get the chip off your shoulder Mr. Lee. Quit looking for bigotry, hidden inside of people, when there is so much ignorance glaring conspicuously from so many.

Nothing Unless Pushed

To the Editor:

The implications made concerning the dormancy of the University Traffic Committee are neither correct or fair to the members. It is unfortunate that the committee's activities do not measure up to the standard set by yourself. It is also unfortunate that you lack the courage to contact a member (sic) of the committee with definite proposals.

In order to set the record straight, you may be surprised to know that the speeding and traffic flow problems are now under study by sub-committees of the University Traffic Committee. I am sure the problems of redistribution of parking spaces will come up early in the Spring, along with the subject of registration fees and traffic fines. The reason that these subjects have not been studied already this year is because the problem of evening parking has taken (sic) most of the semester to solve. Change is taking place, but the process of deliberation is slow.

I do not feel the University Traffic Committee should have to defend itself from anyone who spends all his time complaining. In the three year period which I have been associated with the Student Government and/or University Traffic Committees, only one student has bothered to contact me personally with a complaint. He offered no solutions, yet because I became aware of his feelings on the problem I was able to derive a solution. Mr. Editor, you have never contacted me, nor has anyone else this year. If no one is going to speak out, then I must assume that they don't really care, and consequently I will be "inclined to do nothing unless . . . pushed."

William F. Jones

Drop Honor Code?

To the Editor:

Is the Honor Code becoming a mere formality on the N. C. State Campus? Is it just another card we sign at registration? It seems as if the Honor Code, its effectiveness and its application, needs serious consideration. The present Honor System simply just does not work: There are numerous cases of cheating at State and very few convictions.

There are two solutions to the problem: 1) each student should become aware of the policies in the present Honor Code and make it his personal responsibility that they are fulfilled, or 2) the mere facade of a superficial honor system should be abolished. Why should we have an honor code which no one supports? It needs to be either enforced by each student or dropped by the student body.

The problem consists of a personal conflict between universal ideals and loyalty to peers. Sure, most students would like to see a more honest atmosphere, but at the same time they hesitate to report the cheating and stealing which they see. The problem is as simple as this: if a person wants an honest environment, he must be willing to turn in violators. What we should do at State is have an election by all the students as to whether to enforce the code or drop it. The outcome of this election should determine the future of the Honor Code. If it is dropped, the degree of cheating would not be increased, since signing another card at registration does not change a person's moral values. However, if it is supported by the majority, every student should make it his personal responsibility to enforce the code, resulting in a more honest, trusting atmosphere where a person's grades are indicative of his intelligence, interest, and amount of studying.

Flunk Out And Live

(Editor's note) This is a very true view of Exams from The Tiger, the Clemson newspaper.

It builds up to unbearable proportions. It engulfs even the most complacent mind with its profressive claws, and with a terrible squeezing force it crushes you into an acceptable mold until there's not much left for you to do but surrender.

You stare at the piles of books needing to be read in front of you before the final exams squeeze your mind dry of the "important" facts found within those covers, and it seems endless. You can't do it! You just can't do it!

You have to, though, because you have to worry about the people who mean something to you who base their judgment on the results of your quiz grades. You don't have a mind to them, or any business in college, if you don't have the facts to prove that you have successfully mastered the art of memorization and organized vomiting.

"Why not quit right now?" comes the bitter suggestion, and you sit there and think about that for a few minutes, and does it ever sound good to take a few months off just to sit and think for a while, but then you realize the mockery of his suggestion because about two weeks after you set your worried little feet outside of the protection of this place you would be running and screaming and wondering how in hell you were chosen to be a target for all those little yellow people. Get the hell out of my room, and turn-

OF THINGS MAGICAL AND WONDEROUS

It is now 1968, for those of you who are still groggy from the New Years revelry.

1967 was a year that should be, in most cases, forgotten. For those who like to decry such things, it was probably the start of the Year of Jackpot—no one has yet guessed exactly what the Year of the Jackpot is.

Lyndon Johnson, our self-appointed King, managed to bungle through yet another year. In his search for whatever it is he searches for, he "guided" the nation's way through Vietnam, the Middle East crisis, civil unrest, and the thousand and one things that plague the United States. Despite his best efforts, most of us are still here to "enjoy" the fruits of the new year.

Charles DeGaulle, France's answer to Bozo the Clown, proved himself quite capable of doing what he thinks best for France, to hell with the rest of the world.

Lewis Hershey, he should be called God instead of General, once again proved that he has a sense of destiny rivaled only by Ivan the Terrible. In 1967 he was able not only to preserve his "system", but he also managed to get rid of some of those pesky college students who seem to think that war is a bad thing.

Hubert Humphrey was there, hidden somewhere between a paper chamber pot and L.B.J.'s daughters.

Getting closer to home, Jesse Helms has since the dawn of time proclaimed the evils of this generation. Whilst raking in money hand over mouth he continues to amaze everyone in his ability to find fault with anyone who disagrees with him.

J. McCree Smith and the Physical Plant, or Captain Crunch and the N.Y.P.D., was once again able to show that "inconvenience is progress". Throughout the year, they made life a continual bore for those here at State.

The Traffic Committee once more proved its mettle by managing to completely confuse and frustrate everyone but the F.P. in its quest for Holy Grail of parking fines and little else.

I can say little about the Honor Code Board for I continue to get anonymous phone calls from members of this quasi-omnipotent organization.

And so 1967 ended, finally. It was interesting.

The devaluation of Belly Button lint must stop.

Spann's Free Speech

To the Editor:

It is difficult to follow Mr. Spann's line of thought in his article on the Draft Rally in the December 8 issue of The Technician. Mr. Spann states that the speakers were denied their freedom of speech by the students, then he ridicules the students at the rally for this. By this Mr. Spann is suggesting that the student's freedom of speech be denied. Freedom of speech is a two-way street and both parties at the rally had open discourse of speech. Even at a professional performance if the program is intolerably poor, the audience lets this be known. If Mr. Spann was at the rally, he could hardly say that the speakers were eloquent and the program well organized. All the remarks made by the students were not in good taste or justifiable, but a great many of the remarks were well deserved by the speakers.

Perhaps Mr. Spann's view of freedom of speech could have been better depicted in a cartoon with three State wolves gagged, hands tied behind their backs, and chained to chairs in a neat, orderly fashion instead of the one used in the afore-mentioned issue of The Technician.

"I Want To Be National Champ," Said Hicks

By Steve Barksdale
"I want to be national champ." To any ordinary wrestler these words may sound a bit on the unreachable side, but not so with the Captain of the Wolfpack wrestling team, Greg Hicks. One can readily see that there is a strong possibility of Hicks reaching his goal because he is expected to repeat as the Atlantic Coast Conference champion this year. Success has been no stranger to Greg throughout his wrestling career. In three years at Greensboro College where he also played football and baseball, he captured one second and one third in the 141 pound weight class in the state meet. After graduation, Greg was lured to State by their chemical engineering program.

This is now Hicks' fourth year of wrestling for the Wolfpack. He started in the 147 pound class and has moved steadily to where he now reigns as ACC champ in the 160 pound class. The friendly, redheaded senior currently is undefeated in the 167 pound class. Greg has been the ACC champ for the past two years along with being the North Carolina AAU champ. This year, which he considers his best so far, he has added the Southern Invitational Championship to his honors.

Greg seems to enjoy being the captain of the Pack's matmen. He says that he enjoys being a leader and likes to set an example for the other wrestlers. "I like to try to pin because sometimes it inspires the others," as he puts it.

As long as injuries are avoided, Hicks thinks that this will be the best State wrestling team ever, even after some early season losses. He expects the return of Don Jordan and Chuck Amato after the football season to make the Pack the best team in the conference.

Greg attributes the changing of his style and the development of his ability to the late coach Al Crawford. He considers Coach Jerry Daniels as a "Fine coach and a very good friend." Even if the Pack wrestler's don't succeed in the conference this season, Coach Daniels can be assured of having at least one champion—Captain Greg Hicks.

Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight co-sponsored a carnival and banquet for charity before Christmas at the YMCA. Festivities began at 2 p.m. with the carnival, consisting of a kissing booth, fishing booth, bean bag game, darts, etc. Represented at the function were students from UNC, ECU, VMI, A&T, Duke, and State. Each school presented information concerning its particular program, and movies were shown.

Carolina Sets Symposium Topic

The annual Carolina Symposium will be held March 31 through April 3 in Chapel Hill, on the topic, "Red China and the West."

The symposium will feature William P. Bundy, Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs speaking on the Western view of China. Also featured will be author Edgar Snow speaking on Red China's view of the West. Other sneakers include Han Suyin, Alexander Eckstein, and Franz Schurmann. Negotiations with further high-level European and American officials are still in progress.

The Symposium will be broadcast live over statewide educational television.

An invitation is extended to the students and faculty here at State to participate in this symposium. Watch the Technician for further details.

If we were happy with the world the way it is, we wouldn't need you.

Kids choke on polluted air. Streets are jammed by cars with no place to go. Italy's priceless art and libraries are ravaged by floods. This is the way the world is, but it's not the way it has to be. Air pollution can be prevented. Better transportation can be devised. Something can even be done about the weather. Many people at General Electric are already working on these problems, but we need more. We need help from young engineers and scientists; and we need help from business and liberal arts graduates who understand people and their problems. If you want to help solve important problems, we'd like to talk to you. We'll be visiting campus soon. Drop by the placement office and arrange for an interview.

State's two star sophs set up a play against the Indians of William and Mary in a game played before the Christmas break. Vann Williford (14) poured in 30 points in Tuesday night's rout of Atlantic Christian College and Nelson Isley (10) added 18. Both are averaging in double figures with Williford at 12.4 and Isley at 10.3.

Pack Records 1-4 Mark During Christmas Break

When most of State's population was home for the holidays, there were a few students still on campus. These hearty souls were State's basketball team, who had five games scheduled during Christmas break. Included in these games were two holiday tournaments.

The first game that the Pack played was against the Hoosiers of Indiana, ninth ranked nationally. The Hoosiers came south with hopes of a easy game, but found out different. They had to go into overtime to defeat the Wolfpack by the score of 101 to 97. The game was tied 85-85 at the end of regulation time. State was led by Bill Mavredes and Vann Williford who had 23 points apiece and Eddie Biedenbach with 19 points. High scorer for the game was Indiana's Joe Cooke with 27 points. He was followed by Vernon Payne and Bill DeHeer who scored 21 points apiece.

State next journeyed to Boston to participate in the Boston Garden Invitational Basketball Tournament. In the first round, State played Boston College, another nationally ranked team and the second in a week. State was never in this game as Boston College jumped off to an 80-11 lead in the first 15 minutes. State cut the lead to 36-25 at the half before Boston College got a hot hand and moved away to an 64-41 lead with 6 minutes remaining. Bob Dukiet, a sophomore who started for BC's injured Bill Evans, scored 23 points to lead the Eagles while Steve Adelman and Jim Kissane added 13 points each. Dick Braucher led State's scoring with 19 while Bill Kreter had 9 and Eddie Biedenbach 8.

After losing the first round, State was paired against LaSalle in the consolation round, and had very little luck with them either going down under a 68-63 score. State was

In their first game of the new year, the Wolfpack exploded for 111 points in coasting to an easy 111-52 win over the visiting Bulldogs from Atlantic Christian College in a game played January 2nd.

Sophomore Vann Williford scored 30 points to lead the Pack to their largest margin of victory, 59 points, in 17 years.

The Pack started out cold, with the Bulldogs taking a 4-0 lead before Dick Braucher broke the ice for State with a basket at 15:02. The Pack's pair of sophomores, Williford and Nelson Isley entered the game at this point, and just over a minute later, Isley tossed in a basket to tie the score. State took the lead for good 30 seconds later with a basket by Joe Serdich.

The Pack built up their lead as the Bulldogs were able to score only two points in a span of eight minutes.

The half ended with the Pack ahead 43-23, a margin that is very seldom exceeded. But the Pack wasn't through.

With 9:12 left in the game, Williford tied the high scoring total for one game with his 23rd point. Then less than two minutes later, he set a new record with a three point play.

With over seven minutes left, Head Coach Sloan pulled out four players, Williford, Isley, Bill Mavredes, and Eddie Biedenbach, to standing ovations from the crowd of 5,851 fans watching the game. But still the Pack wasn't finished.

Sloan put his big four back in with 2:55 left and they responded by pouring on the steam. Williford scored a three point play with 2:01 left in the game to push the Pack over the 100 mark for the first time in over a year.

Besides his 30 points, Williford hauled in 19 rebounds to become the team one game leader in both departments. He is now averaging 12.6 points per game and pulling down over ten rebounds per game.

Other high scorers for the Pack were Serdich and Isley, who tied for second with 18 each, and Braucher with 16.

Co-captain Eddie Biedenbach still is not playing at full strength after a leg injury in the Pack's 68-68 loss to LaSalle in the Boston Gardens Invitational Tournament.

Tomorrow night, the Pack meets conference rival Maryland in a game starting at 8 in the Coliseum.

The Pack's last game before exams after tomorrow's clash is with arch-rival Carolina on Wednesday night. If you have not already picked up your tickets, you need to do so before 4:30 today.

Forward Doug Tilley poured in 33 points in the preliminary game Tuesday night with the ACC frosh to lead the Wolflets to a 113-73 win.

The Wolflets had four others in double figures. They were Joe Dunning with 20, Mike Turner with 17, Dan Wells with 14, and Al Heartley with 12.

High scorer for the Bulldogs was Norris with 25, followed by Wilson with 14, and Jeffcoat with 11.

The Wolflets, whose record now stands at 3-2, meet Louisville in the preliminary game tomorrow night starting at 6.

"I never feel like a rookie"

"Sure it's my first year with B&W, but I've been too busy to think about that. I've been working in my field all along, and the training sort of blends right in."

If Randy Trost sounds like a B&W booster, you should hear what his supervisor says about him.

We're looking for aggressive, talented young engineers like Randy. We want you if you want significant responsibility from the start. In fact, we need more engineers than ever before. That's because we're growing faster. Sales were $560 million last year. Up 17 per cent.

That's how it's been from the beginning. We started out making steam generation equipment. That led to atomic power stations, nuclear marine propulsion equipment, refractories, specialty steel, machine tools, computers, and closed-circuit TV. (And we still make the best boiler in America.)

If you'd like to talk with Randy Trost about B&W, call him collect at our facility in Lynchburg, Virginia, AC 703 846-7371.

In the meantime, be on the lookout for the B&W recruiter when he visits your campus.
