Bribery Trial Opens; Gallagher Testifier

By Mike Lea and Curtiss Moore

"I don't really know myself what I did in the ball games," ex-Wolfpack Basketballer Don Gallagher said in Wake County Superior Court last week. "I had to keep my standards high enough to start."

Gallagher, who is presently a lieutenant in the Army, was testifying as a state's witness in the trial of two St. Louis men, Dave Goldberg and Steve Lekometros, on charges of bribery and conspiring to bribe basketball players to shave points in basketball games. Four State College basketball players, Gallagher, Stan Niewierowski, Anton Muehlbauer, and Terry Litchfield are implicated in the point-shaving and are slated to appear in the trial.

The trial, which moved into its sixth day today has heard testimony from Gallagher, Joseph Greene, and Aaron Wagman. Wagman and Greene have pleaded guilty to charges involving bribery. State basketball coach Everett Case is also slated to appear as a state's witness, according to Wake County Solicitor Lester Chalmers.

According to the testimony of Gallagher and Green, they first became acquainted in the summer of 1959 at a hotel in the Catskill Mountains where they both were working. Greene later offered Gallagher $1,000 to shave points in basketball games, and Gallagher accepted, they said.

Don Gallagher who testified in the "fix" case in Wake Superior Court last week is shown in action during his college basketball career at State.

Gallagher received $5,000 from Greene, according to their testimony, but had to return $2,000 after two games with Duke did not go as Greene wanted them to. Greene and Gallagher testified that after the game against Duke, which was played February 9, 1960 in Raleigh, Goldberg and Lekometros talked to Gallagher.

Telling about this meeting in his testimony, Gallagher said that Greene had warned him that someone in the crowd had come to his house and told him "a guy" wanted to talk with him. He also said that Greene warned him that someone had a gun and that he should be careful. Gallagher then said, "I had every intention of being careful." He added that he walked past a parked car and saw three people in it. After he had passed the car, he said, a man whom he identified as Goldberg got out of the car and spoke with him.

Gallagher said that Goldberg asked him what happened and "What went wrong." Gallagher said that he explained to Goldberg that State was "clicking" and that Duke was down." Gallagher described Goldberg as

Caldwell Supports Change; Students Protest And Picket

Chancellor Backs Stand Of Sanford, Friday

In a statement issued Monday Chancellor Caldwell said, "I join with President Friday, the Governor, and the Trustees of the State's university" in the proposals for the planned expansion of the consolidated university functions and the adoption of "a new nomenclature."

Dr. Caldwell said, "Much is at stake for North Carolina; much is at stake for the College. It is heart warming that the members of this great and loyal family of 'State' should not wish suddenly to lose the name which has identified the object of its affections and the source of its pride."

He referred to the proposals by the governor and William C. Friday, consolidated university president, to change State College's name to the University of North Carolina at Raleigh. In a companion move Woman's College would become the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. State College students and alumni have opposed the move, supporting instead North Carolina State University.

"But I feel it a duty," he added, "to appeal to you members of this wonderful family to grasp the full meaning of the State's whole university to its people and the positive advantages to this College of our moving with a giant step into a new era of service and recognition."

Dr. Caldwell emphasized the planned expansion of the academic program at State College. He said, "What this means for the strength and growth of the College is plain. We must support this step."

But he said, "as the stature and recognition of the academic work on this campus continues to reach new heights, every

F H Pickets Chancellory Against Name Change

By Grant Blair

Verbal protests against State College's proposed name change were scheduled to become physical ones today.

The FarmHouse Fraternity announced its intention last night to picket the Chancellor's house today in a protest against Caldwell's recent statement favoring the proposed changing of State College's present name to the University of North Carolina at Raleigh.

"Tuck" Nobles, spokesman for the fraternity, announced that the picketing was scheduled to begin no later than twelve noon today.

In a statement to The Technician, Nobles commented on the action: "We feel that we can call the student's attention to this problem by starting in this location. This picketing is being conducted primarily by individuals of the FarmHouse Fraternity. It will be carried out in a quiet, orderly, manner in accordance with city ordinances, and will last until desired attention is obtained."

Nobles stated that Raleigh ordinances allow only ten picketers on one city block and that they must stay at least fifteen feet apart and carry signs 2' x 2'.

Nobles encouraged "other groups and interested persons to join us." He added, "We hope that through the cooperation of students we may also set up pickets in other appropriate areas, such as the Governor's mansion and President Friday's house." Through this we hope to attract statewide attention and support in maintaining State College's traditional name or a change to North Carolina State University." He also stated that anyone "interested in participating" should contact Joe Hollowell, Preston Cornelius, or "Tuck" Nobles at the FarmHouse, VA-84464.

Chancellor Caldwell had no comment on the picketing.

New Library Shown In Open House At McKimmon Village

There will be an open house at McKimmon Village tonight. Lasting from 7 until 9 p.m., the open house will serve as a dedication for a library in the Village which was organized by the College Union according to Tom Dossenbach, a resident of the Village. The new library now has about 500 volumes being composed of histories, biographies, autobiographies, childrens books, and fiction, Dossenbach said.

Any faculty, staff members, or students who wish to donate books can bring them to the College Union or to the library, Dossenbach stated. The library is to be operated by the Ladies Auxillary of McKimmon Village and the hourly schedules will be posted on the door of the library.

Notice

An important meeting of the Student Legislature will be held Thursday night at 6:00 p.m. in the College Union.

The change in time of the meeting is designed to prevent conflict with the eight o'clock Friends of the College program.

The meeting is open for attendance by all students.

Choir Appears Tomorrow

The internationally famous "Angels in Pigtails," Germany's Obernkirchen Children's Choir, will appear tomorrow night at eight o'clock in Reynolds Coliseum as the fourth production in the Friends of the College series.

Ranging in age from five to fifteen, including thirty-odd male and female voices, the chorus was organized in 1949 by Edith Moeller, a social worker and musician, affording the more fortunate children of her community the chance to help the less fortunate. Miss Moeller's work began with homeless children during the war; when her building in Obernkirchen was taken over by the government for use as a hospital, she began fund-raising performances for a new headquarters.

The chorus was originally intended to serve only the small population of Obernkirchen, raising money and stimulating interest in its project. A British welfare officer heard one of the early local concerts of the choir and was so impressed that he arranged for them to visit England. Encouraged by this, the choir entered the 1953 International Eisteddfod in Wales and won first prize and world-wide support. It was here they were dubbed "Angels in Pigtails" by the famous Welsh poet Dylan Thomas, a title that has followed them ever since.

The earnings of the Obernkirchen Children's Choir rent and equip a spacious villa near Obernkirchen for the homeless children of the area.

Let's Fight On Realistic Grounds

This editorial is the opinion of the editor, and is not necessarily the opinion of The Technician or of staff members. Since it is a view of a small minority of state students, equal space will be given for a rebuttal.

We have already commented on the changing of the name of State College, but after talking to many people and studying the reasons for such a change we have had to change our opinions. Our first thoughts on the subject were based on emotion, just as much of the present State College feeling is, but more than emotion should play a part in a decision of this nature.

The main arguments against a change of name have been that tradition at State would be hurt and that the college would lose part of the fine reputation it has built up in its own name.

To a certain extent, this may be true, but it is not completely so.

A case in point might be the high school from which I graduated. A few years ago its name was changed and it moved to a new location. For a few years it was called by both its new name and its old, but the old has gradually died. This has not weakened my feeling for the school, hurt its spirit, or hurt it in the eyes of the community.

The same would be true of State College on a national level. Although a name-change would be made official, it would not gain acceptance for a few years, and then the college would gradually become known under a new name. Educators and responsible persons throughout the nation would realize that it was the same school, and it would still retain its function in the eyes of the state.

On the "tradition" argument, we would like to pose a question. Will students feel any differently towards the school itself under a different name?

State College in itself is not complete. It is a fine technical school, and the liberal arts program will make it a more complete institution; but it will never have some of the facilities offered at UNC and WC just as UNC and WC will never be comparable to State in certain areas. Among the three, however, almost every field of human knowledge is presented. The three schools comprise a university in the truest sense of the word. We must remember that the proposal which asks for a change in name also calls for closer ties within the Consolidated University. These closer ties will add much to the programs of the three schools and it is evident that a name-change which in itself seems unimportant is the only way in which these ties can be expressed.

Also we would like to hypothesize a situation in which State College became State University. Woman's College evidently cannot keep its present name under the proposed system of admitting male students to the institution, and it would probably become "The University of North Carolina at Greensboro." Any new colleges coming into the University system would almost surely take the name "The University of North Carolina at . . ."

In other words, State would be out in the cold. A strong university system would be built up identified with these schools, and State would still be a fine technical school . . . but it would be no more.

The main question to ask, however, is not how it will affect State College but how it will affect higher education in the state. Closer ties between the schools can only become recognized by a common name, and closer ties will benefit higher education in the state.

The name "The University of North Carolina at Raleigh," however, is being fought at this school for a legitimate reason. The proposed name seems to imply inferiority of State College to the University at Chapel Hill, and no State student or alumni can accept this connotation. Recently Chancellor Aycok of Carolina made the statement that UNC was not among the better universities in the nation, but no one could make the same statement about State. It is among the better technical schools.

Although we feel that it is important that a common name be given to the units which will comprise the university system, and that this will strengthen higher education throughout the state, we understand the position of seeming inferiority which is being placed on State College.

Alumni and students are fighting the change, and after all is said, we would venture to say that this one point is what is prompting the fight.

There is a way around this, one which is something of a compromise, but retains a common name and does not have the connotation of placing State on an inferior level. This is simply to name the units "The Consolidated University of North Carolina at . . ."

We think that it would be safe to say that the alumni and students will not win their battle to retain "State" in the name, but there might be a possibility of having our suggestion approved. The cards are stacked against their proposal, especially since the Chancellor's recent statement on the subject; but ours is worth a try.

A losing battle will gain nothing, but a battle on a different and more realistic field could gain much for higher education in North Carolina and would still be acceptable to State College.

Rapid Ticket Sellout Predicted For RLT

By Doug Lientz

Another rapid sellout of College Union tickets to the Raleigh Little Theater is expected for the next production, "Write me a Murder," according to Terry Lowder, chairman of the College Union Theater Committee.

Commenting on this, Lowder said, "Because of the great demand for tickets to the last Raleigh Little Theater production, 'Bells Are Ringing,' we are giving our tickets for this performance only to students. We are also keeping a list of those who fail to make use of their tickets. Any student who reserves tickets with us twice during the year without using them will not be permitted to reserve any for future performances."

The College Union tickets for this performance are for December 4 and 5, and should be reserved in the College Union main lobby between 4 and 8 p.m. Thursday, November 29. They are free to students.

"Because we ran short of tickets for the last production," said Lowder, "We would advise anyone wishing to reserve tickets to come at the earliest possible time."

"Write me a Murder" was written by Frederick Knott, author of "Dial M for Murder."

Included in the cast for the play are Katie Gauzer, Gene Hollahan, Roger Harris, Harvey Bungardner, Bob Maeus, Milton Dworsky, Dick Lucas, Norwood Massey, and Jeanette Webb.

Thirty Students Receive Course In Salesmanship

Thirty industrious students received certificates for Pre-Christmas Sales Training.

They received the certificates in a special sales training course given before the Thanksgiving Holidays. The course was conducted by the Wake County Distributive Education Service and Mrs. Anne J. Berry instructed it.

During the meetings, talks were given by Mr. Frank King of Nowell's, who spoke on salesmanship; Mr. Milton Self, district manager of Winn Dixie, and Mr. Jim Wilson, from Sears, who spoke on important characteristics of a good salesman.

Miss Louise Wooten, head of Student Employment, said that "boys who haven't taken the initiative in getting a job already, should apply now. They will have a much better chance of getting a job."

WC Poet To Speak

Dr. Robert Watson, a poet now teaching at Woman's College, will give a recitation of his works here next week, according to the CU Library Committee.

The recitation will be given December 4 at 8 p.m. in Room 250 of the CU.

Dr. Watson has studied at Williams College, John Hopkins University, and the University of Zurich, Switzerland. Dr. Watson's first volume of poems, A Paper Horse, was described as "readable, entertaining, thought provoking poems" by the Virginia Quarterly Review. The New York Times said, "Robert Watson is an interesting poet whose work is grained with its own kind of candor, subtlety and wildness waiting to break loose."

Starlight Club To Eat, Too

The Starlight Club will take on a slightly different look this Saturday night, according to Mac Lattam, chairman of the Dance Committee.

The Club's original motif will be retained, but this time there will be the added attraction of an informal dinner served from 6:30 to 8:00. Meal prices will range from $1.00 to $1.50. Short orders will also be available.

Taped dinner music will be played during the dining hours, and live band music will start at 8 o'clock.

Lattam said that the Starlight Club will continue its tradition of providing a lively dance combo. Harold White and the Swing Shifters will furnish Saturday night's music. They will offer a varied program of dance music, including request numbers, to please every individual.

Supplying Info Is Busy Business

By Cora Kemp

Located in the basement of Watauga Dorm is one of the busiest offices on campus.

Despite this weird location, the Office of Information Services, with only five full-time employees, not only releases the college's daily publicity to the outside world, but it also edits a massive quantity of publications for the students and faculty.

Just off the press is the office's latest publication—the yearly faculty and staff directory. Last month its latest biennial publication, the State College General Catalog, was released.

This year, the office is operating under a new director, Hardy D. Berry of Washington, D. C. Mr. Berry is chief coordinator of the daily innumerable activities carried on by his staff.

Associate Director Joe Hancock, who has been with the office for two and a half years, is personally in charge of editing the college's monthly magazine, The State College News, and the information bulletin, the Statelog, which is published monthly, September through May.

Mr. Hancock is also in charge of the various types of brochures released by the office. Any department or office may request that a brochure be printed for distribution and many special events warrant a printed program. The extension division of the college often has the office prepare promotional material and material used in the courses.

Mr. Hancock is presently compiling a research brochure for the Consolidated University entitled "The Consolidated University Research Brochure."

Another busy person in the office is Assistant Director Nancy Williford who came to work in the office about the same time as Mr. Hancock. She edits a number of biennial publications, including the State College General Catalog, the Graduate Catalog, and the Faculty Publications and Research Catalog. She is also responsible for the faculty and staff directory each Fall and the State College Story, a booklet published annually for prospective students.

Two full-time secretaries, Mrs. Nancy Moore and Mrs. Nancy Reid, assist in office projects, such as compiling brochures, writing news stories, or working on catalogs as well as keeping up with their routine secretarial duties. Additional personnel are employed to help out when the work piles up.

The daily news released by the office comes from many sources, according to Miss Williford. It is sometimes brought, mailed, or phoned in by the various departments. Often the local newspapers will request a particular story. A member of the office is assigned to check into the news if additional information is necessary. The office then sends copies of the articles to the local newspapers, radio and television stations, and the wire services.

Mr. Berry assumed the position of director September 1. He succeeded Rudolph Pate, who resigned to become associate director of development for the Southern Regional Education Board in Atlanta, Georgia. Mr. Berry is the former director of information at Montana State College. He has achieved national fame for his

College Bowling

State Meets Big Four

Powers Balanced As Frat Keglers Vie For Play-offs

By George Setzer

Action in fraternity bowling resumed this week after a brief holiday interruption. In pre-Thanksgiving matches competition was keen as several of the preseason "powers-to-be" were humbled, and no team survived the first two weeks of play unbeaten.

In section #1, Farm House and Sigma Chi rolled in the lead with respectable 7-1 records. Sigma Phi Epsilon posted the two week highs for single game and team series with 882 and 2441 respectively. In the battle for individual laurels, Bill Grant of SPE in a five night effort rolled both the section high game with 201 and the high series with 531.

Co-leaders of section #2 are Delta Sigma Phi and Pi Kappa Alpha with 7-1 records. PKA posted high team games with 816 and high team series with 2296. Straus of PKT rolled 210 for high single game honors, but was closely followed by Perry of PKA with 207. Rogers, of Sig Nu, had a sparkling 536 for high section series.

With promise of continued high spirited action and balance of power, the fraternity league could easily have its finest year of competition to date. The regular season will run throughout the remainder of the semester and the play-offs will be at the beginning of the spring term. The top three teams in each section will advance to the final roll-offs.

Saturday, the N. C. State C. U. Bowling teams will again meet the bowling teams of the Big Four. Two weeks ago the State team powered its way to a spirited victory over Wake Forest, Duke, and Carolina here at Western Lanes. The meet, composed of two five-man teams from each school, marked the beginning of the bowling season for the newly organized intercollegiate bowling league sponsored by the College Unions of each of the individual schools.

State, a heavy favorite on its home lanes, led the scoring early by throwing three big games at the opposition, and holding on to its lead through the final three games.

State #2 had team games of 815, 886, and 875, while State #1 turned out games of 864, 949, and 915 to give State a 1-2 finish in all but the first round. In that game Wake Forest started off hot and finished with an 850 game before dropping to 766 and 726.

Leading scorer for the day was Henry Griffin who rolled games of 191, 225, and 183 for a 599 series, and 212, 190, and 182 for a 584 series to average 197 per game. Behind him came teammate Roger Bailey with a 216, 201, and 185 for a 602 series. Other high scorers for State were John Brame (551), Arnold Hagar (533) and Bob Long (560).

The only individual scoring threats by the opposition came from Frank Ewing of Duke with a 187, 212, and 191 for a 590 series, and Richard McMahon of Carolina who averaged 176 for six games.

The meet on Saturday will be held in Chapel Hill at All-Star Lanes at 2:30 p.m.

Undefeated Sig Eps Top PKT For Volleyball Crown

By Vello Kuuskraa
SPE rushed into the lead in the fraternity intramural race with a hard-earned upset over last year's champions, PKT, for the volleyball title.
The Sig Eps used their two big spikers, Arganbright and Faeiten, to maximum advantage as they won the first game 15-8. The Phi Taus over-all height advantage was evident in the second game which went to PKT, 15-10.
PKT spikers, Skidmore, Thorn, and Mayton, were matched by the Sig Ep defense, with Wintzer and Morton the key men, as the Sig Eps came back from a 6-9 disadvantage in the all-important third game and won 15-11, an exciting, well-played contest which was high lighted by a real team effort on both sides.

The victory was extra rewarding for it was a reversal of last year's outcome in which PKT downed the Sig Eps in the championship game.
SPE entered the finals by defeating TKE 15-8, 10-15, and 15-5 in semi-final play. PKT reached the opposing spot by downing a stubborn Theta Chi squad 15-10, 12-15 and 15-1.
SPE ended the season with an unblemished record of 9-0. PKT came in second with 8-1.

Deadline Set

All entries for the Open and Wildcard basketball leagues must be made at the Intramural Office by Thursday, December 5. Only the first thirty-two open teams and first sixteen wildcard teams will be accepted. Play will begin after the Christmas holidays. Fraternity and dormitory regular intramural season will begin the week of December 10.

Notice

Intramural football teams which have footballs belonging to the intramural Department must return them to the gym by Thursday, November 29.

My wife and I are in Panama at the moment. She likes it. You know, Officers' Club, dances—that sort of thing. I like it, too. But whether I stay in the Army or not, the question is: Would I take Army R.O.T.C. if I had it to do over again? Yes, I certainly would. In spades, I didn't realize how lucky I was. At the time I figured: Okay, so I'll get my degree—get an Army commission, too, and pick up some extra money along the way! I wasn't the leadership type, I thought. I was wrong. Boy, was I wrong! Looking back on it, I wouldn't trade the leadership training I got for anything! Take my word for it, leaders are made—not born! Whether I stay in the Army or not, nobody can take away what I've learned. And let's face it, where can anybody my age step out of college and walk into a standard of living this good? Assignment: make our cars more rust-resistant

Result: '63 Ford-built cars are better protected against rust than ever before

To tackle this assignment, Ford Motor Company engineers turned to zinc. Galvanized, or zinc-clad, steel has long been noted for its resistance to corrosion. It presented special problems which had limited its use in automotive applications, however. It was hard to weld, difficult to paint.

Our engineers developed special techniques to solve the welding problem. They found a process which eliminates the crystalline pattern on galvanized steel and produces a surface that will accept a high-quality paint job.

Now zinc can be married to steel and used for vital underbody parts and rocker panels of Ford-built cars. The zinc coating forms a tough barrier to corrosive moisture—and if corrosion attacks, the zinc sacrifices itself through galvanic action, saving the steel.

Other avenues explored in the fight against rust also brought results: special zinc-rich primers to protect key body areas, aluminized and stainless steels to extend muffler life, quality baked-enamel finishes that are more durable (and look better).

Another step forward in total quality—and another example of how Ford Motor Company provides engineering leadership for the American Road.

Besides supervising the office, Mr. Berry often attends meetings, both in and out of town, connected with the college. Today, for instance, he is in Kingston attending an area meeting of alumni and others interested in promoting the Consolidated University. This particular meeting is sponsored by the Board of Trustees. Chancellor Caldwell will speak on the budget requests and other legislative proposals regarding the Consolidated University.

Commenting on his new position here, Mr. Berry referred to State College as the "most exciting institution of this size at which I have ever worked. The cultural and scientific complex that has developed around the college (in Raleigh) is just wonderful."

In a special statement, Floyd McCall, president of Student Government commented.

"It is unfortunate that our Chancellor has taken this stand behind President Friday, since it will cost the dedicated students, alumni, and friends, of N. C. State even more time and energy to preserve one of our most outstanding assets—the reputation associated with the name N. C. State."

The Chancellor had no comment concerning McCall's statement.
