Edwards: 'Clemson Will Be Tougher'

UNC Student Hurt In Postgame Brawl

The Carolina student injured in the brawling aftermath of last Saturday's State-Carolina game was reported to still be in good condition.

Chapel Hill Police Chief William Blake had no further comment about the student or the brawl following the game.

Ronald Randall, a junior at Carolina, received a facial fracture in the melee which broke out after State fans taunted Carolina students with part of the goal posts.

In Good Condition

Officials at N. C. Memorial Hospital, when called Sunday night, reported that Randall was in good condition and that there had been "no change."

According to Chapel Hill Police Chief William Blake, policemen saw the fight begin and moved in to stop it. Sgt. W. F. Hester saw Randall the first time as one of some 30 students milling around in the fracas.

In a matter of seconds the officer saw Randall again, this time with a bloody nose. Chapel Hill Fire Chief James Stewart saw Randall about to hit one of the policemen from behind.

A student with Randall grabbed his arm to keep him from hitting the policeman. Chief Stewart also had gone over to help restrain Randall. Randall then broke loose and attempted to hit another policeman.

Then Patrolman George Penny and Detective H. R. Pender-

Student Rally Called 'Success'

A pep rally culminating in a march to the Capitol was held Friday night.

Head Cheerleader Tony Paget led the pep rally and members of the football team spoke before the group.

There was no estimate of the number of students at the rally, but it was remarked by a bystander that it was "the best attended in recent years."

The march to the capitol was described by a student leader as "for the most part orderly."

The Kick That Failed

The kick that failed. This unusual photo by Technician staff photographer Jerry Jackson should stand as one of the best of the year. The shot is Carolina quarterback Junior Edge's point after touchdown try. The kick clearly was wide giving State a 7-6 win over the Heels.

Wolfpack Smacks Hapless Heels

By Eddie Bradford

Wolfpack Coach Earle Edwards was in a satisfied mood last night but he did not care to single out any one player for special honors.

"The whole team looked good against Carolina; however, next Saturday's game with Clemson will be a harder game for us," commented Coach Edwards. He went on to say that "since Clemson lost last Saturday they will be up for us. The game will mean a lot to us and to them, so we will have to be ready for them."

State's punting was singled out as one of the chief factors in the game by both Coach Edwards and Carolina Coach Jim Hickey. Fullback Dave Houtz, who punted all but one time for State, put his foot into the ball six times for a 39.8 yard average. This figure may not seem great from a standpoint of distance, but when considering the fact that Carolina had to take over on their seven, two, twelve, and three yard lines during the second half, the kicks take on a different significance.

Although Coach Edwards would not be partial to anyone, he gave Houtz an indirect pat on the back when he stated, "We really had some good punts. They were a big factor in our winning, and of course we got several nice rolls on some of the punts."

Punt Final Blow

Dave Houtz's final punt of the afternoon just about ended all of Carolina's hopes of winning. The 54-yard beauty was returned to the Carolina 3 after the Tarheels forced the Wolfpack to punt. Houtz also drew praise from Carolina Coach Jim Hickey, when Hickey stat-

'Better Efforts' Implores McCall

Floyd McCall, president of the student body, challenged the Student Legislature to better efforts this year at a Student Government meeting held Thursday night.

The Legislature elected Butch Fields Assistant to the President and Norman Nifong as an ex-officio member of the Student Legislature. Also, Bill Isler was elected to the Board of Review.

Goalpost Goes

The goalpost came tumbling down Saturday afternoon in Chapel Hill as hundreds of victorious State students swarmed onto the field to get a piece of the posts for their rooms. There were many torn shirts and pants in the crowd as competition for the posts ran high. (Photo by Jackson)

Workshop For Assassins

By Doug Lientz

The new College Union Drama Workshop began in a blaze of assassinations Friday at 8 p.m. in Pullen Hall.

After a short description of the workshop by Rom Linney, CU Fine Arts director and director of the workshop, Terry Lowder and Stan Nemmers ran through a scene they had prepared the night before in order to demonstrate the way in which the workshop would work.

The first time through the scene, Lowder crept slowly into the supposed hotel room where Nemmers was sleeping and stabbed him with very little trouble.

They then ran through the scene a second time, with the parts reversed. Linney had during this time, however, told Nemmers to keep Lowder in the bed, and told Lowder to get up no matter what. This added to the struggle and made the scene more realistic.

'Die, Damnit'

The third time through the scene the struggle became so violent that Linney had to whisper "Die, dammit," to the combatants in order to stop the fight.

After the third time through the scene, Linney told those attending the session how he planned to operate the workshop. He explained that each week students participating in the program would put on one or two scenes, which the others present would comment on and attempt to improve.

Acting Exercises

Then he discussed two types of exercises in acting and asked four students to try to demonstrate them at the next session of the workshop, next Friday night.

The first of these two exercises is a "life study exercise," in which one actor goes out, watches someone else do something, and then copies the action himself.

The second exercise is a "sense memory exercise," in which one actor goes through some everyday action, such as drinking a cup of coffee, and then does the same thing without having the physical prop he normally uses, such as the coffee.

After the session ended, both Henry Bowers, director of the College Union, and Linney said that they were well satisfied with the turnout and feel that the workshop program is going to be a complete success.

Shown at the right, recovering from being murdered, are Terry Lowder and Stan Nemmers. The mock assassinations were used to demonstrate the method to be used in teaching acting in the College Union's new drama workshop. The workshop, under the direction of Rom Linney (shown at left), had its first session in Pullen Hall last Friday night at 8 p.m. The strain of opening a nonexistent door, and deciding to use a nonexistent dagger instead of a nonexistent razor to kill a man who refused to cease to exist was just too much for these diligent demonstrators. More Than Fractures

A Carolina student is in the hospital. State students are walking around with skinned knuckles and black eyes.

But the damage done is not restricted to the students involved in the fracas and cannot be measured in fractures and abrasions. A greater and less healable damage has been done to both the students of the two institutions and the institutions themselves. When a free-for-all between members of two schools develops, no specific blame is or can be placed on either one.

From all reports, Carolina started the fight; but State is not blameless. A few State students, after tearing down the goalposts as they were entitled to do, ran over to the Carolina side and taunted the Carolina supporters. While the Carolina students broke the gentleman's agreement by coming out of the stands; we will have to admit that the actions of some of the State supporters were not those of gentlemen.

Our whole society is based on courtesy, and it is something that all mature people should know. It seems that some students at both State and Carolina have some growing up and learning to do.

Congratulations

In spite of the little fracas that marred the end of the game Saturday, it was a great day for State College. It is always good to win, but a win by an underdog against their biggest rival adds more savor to a victory than anything else.

Congratulations to Coach Edwards for the fine job done with the team, to the quarterbacks for proving that Roman Gabriel is not irreplaceable, to the sophomores for playing like seniors, to the kickers for keeping Carolina on their own goal line, and most of all to Roger Moore for providing the edge of victory.

A Chance

The Student Government has a function and a place on this campus which it has not exerted in recent years. But this may change.

The main failure of the Student Government on this campus has been a failure in the Student Legislature. While the officers for the most part have been hard-working and competent people, the Legislature has been filled for the most part with people who have shown no interest in their position.

The Legislature Thursday night was impressive in the way it conducted business, and the interest it showed in the activities of the Student Government.

We hope that the individual members of the Student Legislature will carry on in the manner they started.

If they do not, Student Government will remain ineffective.

'Sound Of Music' Here In October

The Sound of Music, last and perhaps greatest musical of Rogers and Hammerstein will open in Raleigh on October 10.

Featuring a cast of 70, and a full orchestra, Sound of Music is the only full scale Broadway production to play in Raleigh in many years, and will be sponsored by the Raleigh Concert Music Association. Starring Jeanie Carson, Sound has played in well over 100 American cities this season. Miss Carson played the lead in the Broadway revival of Finian's Rainbow, and starred in the TV series "Dear Jeanie".

Sound of Music, which tells the story of the Trapp Family Singers, as taken its place as one of the longest running musicals in the history of the American musical theatre. The musical's book was written by Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse of Life with Father fame.

Other programs in the Raleigh Concert Music series will star Jean Madeira, leading mezzo of the Metropolitan; David Bar-Ilan, Israeli pianist; Toshiya Eto, Japanese violinist; and, Elinor Ross, dramatic soprano.

The membership campaign for the non-profit Raleigh Concert Music series is now in progress. Only persons joining the association during the campaign may attend these concerts, and no single tickets will be sold for any of the performances.

The membership fee of $6.00 for adults and $4.00 for students entitles the member to attend all five programs, including The Sound of Music. Memberships may be obtained by mailing a check for the number desired to the Raleigh Concert Music Association Headquarters in Stephenson's Music Company, or P. O. Box 10097. Further information may be obtained by calling TE 3-7561.

Expanded 'Free Flic' Program Begins

The College Union movie theater opened for business Wednesday night—after one false start.

The theater, now located in the Textile Auditorium in Nelson Hall was supposed to present its opening movie last Sunday, but difficulties with the new sound system forced a move to the old theater in the College Union, according to Henry Bowers, director of the CU.

Airplane Seller Meets Disbelief

By Doug Lientz
Even though they have been warned against buying from salesmen who do not have solicitor's badges, some freshmen are still purchasing second-hand aircraft from upperclassmen.

Friday night in the Leazer Cafeteria serving line, a freshman refused a chance to buy a plane from an upperclassman because he already had one.

The salesman did not stop then; he told him that a new model was being put into use this year. The freshman did not know whether he had the old model or the new one, so he decided to wait a while before buying a second plane.

Investigation has proven the claim that a new type aircraft is being put into use at State College is false. According to a source connected with Air Force ROTC, the same type of aircraft that was not used in the past is still not being used at the present time.

The aircraft presently not in use in the ROTC program is described as having two wings, a tail, and a fuselage. Most such planes have some kind of a motor attached.

State College has not switched to not using mercury capsules in its ROTC program. Anyone claiming that such a change has been made should be reported to some person in authority as soon as possible.

'Emphasis Change' Slated By PD

There will be a change in emphasis in Product Design this year according to the new head of Product Design, Victor Joseph Papanek.

The change will consist of stressing a new field of study—bionics. Bionics, an application of nature's principles in the development of industrial design, is basically design for need, instead of want.

Papanek noted, however, that no changes in curriculum have been proposed yet.

Papanek's appointment as an associate professor and head of the Department of Product Design became effective September 1. He replaced Austin Baer who resigned to enter private practice.

Before his appointment to State College, Papanek was a design consultant for numerous firms including Helena Rubinstein, Sylvania, Westinghouse, and Consolidated Vultee Aircraft. He has taught in both Canada and the United States and has published several articles, manuals, and handbooks.

Born in Austria, Papanek came to the United States at the age of fourteen. He has since become an American citizen. He is married and has a daughter.

The new movie theater was moved to the Textile Auditorium to alleviate the increased student population problem. The auditorium, with a seating capacity of 600, should "prove to be more than sufficient", Bowers commented.

Bowers also pointed out that new equipment is in the process of being set up. Two new projectors are being used. The projectors are built to conform to U. S. Army standards and are expected to be relatively trouble-free. A new screen for Cinemascope movies is also on order.

According to Bowers, a number of interesting films are expected to be shown this year, beginning with Rififi, which was shown Wednesday night. Following is a list of films to be shown in the new theater this year.

Pack's Passes, Punts Payoff

ed, "Houtz did a great kicking job. His kicking and our ball position deep in our territory were the deciding factors."

Many Sunday morning quarterbacks have been playing the last 55 seconds of the game over. Many of them have said they would have gone for the final TD, or at least tried for it. However, Coach Edwards was looking ahead when he kept control of the ball and ran out the remaining seconds on the ground. "We didn't need any more points, and there is a possibility that they (Carolina) could have scored if they had gained control of the ball," Edwards went on to say.

"Suppose that we had gone ahead and scored, and then missed on the try for the extra point. We would have had to kick off to Carolina and there is always a chance of a run-back. If they had run it back and scored, they could have won the game by making a two point play good. I didn't want to take any chances of losing, so we just ran the time out."

Passing played a large role in State's touchdown journey. Before seeing the quarterbacks in action against another team and under game pressure, Edwards did not know what to expect from them.

"There was nothing to go on," he pointed out. "We had only been practicing against ourselves. Sure, I'm pleased with both of our quarterbacks. I thought they did a good job. In fact, passing was more successful than I thought it would be."

One of the first things that was noticed from the start of the game on was State's defense. "We were very pleased with our defense," stated Coach Edwards. The Wolfpack was even tougher on the non-scoring portions on the field than they were at their goal-line. With Houtz's punting helping to keep the Tarheels bottled up, the home forces were wondering if there was another half of the field. In addition to the punting, the Wolfpack put up a defense that held the Tar Heels in check, with Wachtel starring on many of the defense plays. Bill Sullivan twice stopped fourth down threats in State territory.

It was a defensive contest from start to finish, and the Wolfpack stood the test with room to spare. The errant extra point placement with 4:23 minutes left to play hurt, but the Wolfpack, as a matter of fact, had missed three kicks of their own, all for field goals. So if anyone from Chapel Hill started crying about the missed kick, they can think what the score would have been if all the kicks had been good.

"The team put out a real effort," stated Coach Edwards last night. The players themselves felt the same way. "We wanted this one something awful," said tackle Bert Wilder. "There was a lot of hard hitting out there. Those Carolina boys are tough!"

Jim Rossi, who quarterbacked State's 67-yard touchdown drive in the third quarter, agreed with Wilder. "We never let up a minute," he declared. "We couldn't, with Carolina hitting like they were."
