'Friends' Revived

The "Friends of the North Carolina State College Library" has been revived.

The revival of the organization was marked by a dinner meeting Friday in the College Union at which Elbert E. Foster, Charlotte attorney, was named president.

In his acceptance speech Foster stated the following objectives:

(a) A long-range program of fund-raising through private resources to assist in expanding the libraries of the College,

(b) An endowment fund for the exclusive use of the libraries,

(c) A program of annual giving by the alumni of State College and interested citizens and industries,

(d) Appropriate projects and programs for the Library,

(e) Contribution of books to the various departments of the College.

According to Dr. Lodwick Hartley, head of the English Department, the continued development of the D. H. Hill Library to meet the growing educational and research demands of the Research Triangle will be the organization's primary purpose.

Minneapolis Symphony Here Thursday Night

"The Friends of the College, Inc." will present as the fifth concert of its series the Minneapolis Symphony with guest pianist Byron Janis.

The concert will be held at 8 p.m., February 14, in the Coliseum. The Minneapolis Symphonic Orchestra, formed in 1903, has risen to the forefront of the orchestra ensembles under the prominent conductors, Eugene Ormandy, the late Dimitri Mitropoulos, Antal Dorati, and the incumbent, Stanislaw Skowaczewski, a 38-year-old native of Poland.

Byron Janis has played the piano in Paris, Moscow, London, and New York. According to the New York Times, "Men and women in the audience wept" in Moscow.

Janis played his first concert at the age of nine in the Pittsburgh's Carnegie Hall. Working his way up, Janis made front-page headlines around the world when he received the greatest reception ever accorded to a visiting American artist to the Soviet Union.

NCS May Receive Dorm, New Buildings

State college will receive $5.6 million for capital improvements if the budget which the Governor presented to the General Assembly Friday is approved.

The bulk of this outlay for State will be spent on a 300-woman dormitory, two 800-man dormitories, and a new Food Science building.

Stolen Hubcaps Net Suspension For A Senior

Thievery doesn't pay.

At least according to the Honor Code Board it doesn't, because it slapped a two-semester suspension on an Ag Institute senior last Thursday evening for stealing hubcaps.

The student, who had been tried previously for the crime by local authorities and given a six month suspended sentence, was found unanimously guilty by the Board members.

Some other recommendations for new buildings and additions to the college, however, were not included in the proposed budget. These recommendations, which included a half-million dollar forestry building, a $1.4 million physical science building, and a nearly $1 million School of Education building, were proposed by the Consolidated University but were pared by the Advisory Budget Commission. Other items which had been proposed but were not included in the budget as submitted to the General Assembly were a Central Research Shop, renovations to Nelson and Polk Halls, and additions to Robertson Laboratory.

Other items which were included in the budget for State were requests for a one-half million dollar addition to Gardner Hall, $300,000 for air conditioning D. H. Hill Library, and almost $1 million for repairs and improvements to the nuclear reactor facilities and the rewiring of Ricks and Patterson Halls.

The budget called for slightly more than $6 million for capital improvements at Carolina.

Correction

There was an error made in last Thursday's issue of The Technician. Edward Albee, author of several sell-outs off-Broadway, will not speak tonight as announced, but Monday, February 18, in the CU Ballroom.

Physics Prof Freyre Resigns Position

Dr. Raoul Manual Freyre, associate professor of physics, has resigned and accepted a position with a Boston industrial concern as a theoretical physicist.

According to sources in the Physics Department, Dr. Freyre was forced to resign and move to a more stable climate due to his health.

"Best professor in the department" and "a great loss" were typical comments from students that had the Cuban professor for sophomore physics or one of his advanced courses.

"It has been a pleasure for me to work with you all for the past six years," said Dr. Freyre in a farewell letter to the faculty and graduate students. He hopes to continue teaching, in the form of extension courses, when he is settled in Boston. "We are sorry to see him leave," said J. J. Lynn, acting head of the Physics Department.

Leaders In Engineering Will Give Lectures

Top men in the field of engineering will speak this semester in the School of Engineering's lecture series.

The lectures are given in Riddick Auditorium at 3:30 p.m. on the following dates.

March 11—"Recent Research in the Reactor Field" by Dr. Irving Kaplan, professor of Nuclear Engineering, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

April 8—"Contemporary Developments in Fluid Turbulence" by Dr. Stanley Corrsin. Dr. Corrsin is the head of the Department of Mechanics at Johns Hopkins University.

May 13—"An Interdisciplinary Approach to Bio-Engineering" by Dr. Roy Bainer, dean of engineering, University of California at Davis.

The series is designed to stimulate the faculty and students of the School of Engineering in areas of research and professional activities in the engineering field.

Norman Thomas Top Socialist, To Speak Here

Norman Thomas, six times Socialist candidate for President of the United States and the leading spokesman for the Socialist Party, will speak in the CU Ballroom on February 17.

Thomas, who has run for public offices including governor of New York and U. S. Senator has remarkably, never held an office.

In his presidential platform of 1928, Thomas included such things as old age pensions; accident, health and unemployment insurance; unemployment relief by the building of public works in times of depression; and, the restraint of the Supreme Court from passing on the constitutionality of acts of Congress.

Thomas ran for president in '28, '32, '36, '40, '44 and '48.

Peruvian Project Receives Grant

State College's Peru Project has received a grant of $150,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation, according to Chancellor Caldwell.

The money will be used in developing research and teaching programs in agricultural economics and sociology at the Universidad Agraria at La Molina near Lima, Peru.

According to Dr. H. Brooks James, dean of the School of Agriculture, the grant will also provide for the expansion of the professional staff in Peru to about twenty-five members. Since the project's start in 1955 six to eight staff members have regularly been assigned to it.

Dean James said Dr. C. E. Bishop, head of the Department of Agricultural Economics and Sociology at State, will be in charge of the expanded program.

Dr. J. A. Rigney, head of the Department of Experimental Statistics, was recently appointed director of the agricultural mission for Peru.

Under the Alliance for Progress, the United States has granted Peru a five million dollar loan to be used for construction of a new campus for the agricultural college at La Molina. Several State professors have aided in developing plans for the new campus.

State Students 'Taste' Research

Four State students will have a chance to get their first taste of scientific research this summer.

An $11,200 National Science Foundation grant has been awarded to State College according to Dr. John J. McNeill, assistant professor in the Department of Animal Science. It will enable four junior or senior students to participate in actual research work. Dr. McNeill said that the students selected will work on established research projects in the Animal Science Department, probably in the areas of biochemistry and metabolism. Students with strong backgrounds in chemistry are being most seriously considered for the positions, he added.

McNeill said the grant also provides for a similar program in the summer of 1964.

The Foundation grant is part of its nation-wide program of undergraduate research participation. Several other departments at State have similar grants.

Do Something Constructive

Groups which are interested in State College such as the Alumni Association have been extremely active in the name change controversy this year, and they now have the chance to continue their activism in an area of betterment for State College which is less emotional but can mean much more than a mere name.

"The Friends of the Library of N. C. State College" which was formed in 1947 but has been inactive in recent years has recently reorganized. The inadequacy of the State College library is an old story and one which we have discussed often, and it is gratifying to see this vital step being taken. If there is anything on the campus which needs friends, it is the D. H. Hill Library. It ranks near the bottom of major universities and institutions of higher learning in the nation in numbers of books and periodicals.

The major reason for the ranking lies in the inadequate support which the library has received in the past. Working under an insufficient budget, the library has found it impossible to buy many publications as they were printed and now, when the budget has been somewhat increased, it still cannot fill the gaps which have been created. It has all it can do just to keep abreast of new publications.

In his speech before the group, the new president, Elbert E. Foster, listed as the objectives of the group the establishment of a fund raising program through private sources, to build an endowment fund for the library, to implement the program of giving by the alumni of State College, to determine projects and programs for library fund raising, and to secure the contribution of books of interest to the various departments of the College. These are noble aims, and can do much; but this organization cannot do everything alone.

We cannot help but wonder what might have been accomplished along these lines earlier this year if some of the energy which was expended in the name change battle had been expended towards the betterment of the library. The alumni and the students of State through the "Friends of the Library" now have the chance and the obligation to work for the expansion of the library. The fight for a better library may not be as stirring or produce as many headlines as the name change battle, but it will certainly mean more to the future of the college.

More Ideas

John Stuart Mill, one of the most brilliant men which this world has produced, has remarked that all ideas should be expressed. If they are right, they will be accepted; if they are part right and part wrong, the right will be accepted and the wrong rejected; and if they are wrong, they will be rejected.

All ideas at State College are not expressed. In fact, almost the only ones are those of the small minority of senior staff members of The Technician who have access to the editorial column. Our Letters to the Editor column is open to any student who has a gripe, an idea, or a question which he wishes to pose.

Our ideas are not always correct, and the ones in the Letters to the Editor column may not be also, but only upon the expression of all ideas can the truth ever be found.

The Rest, Delightfully: UNC At Raleigh

This is reprinted from the Feb. 9 edition of the Daily Tar Heel.

Suffix is all we lend,
No more may we append;
As now my violent friend,
The battle nears its end.
As to much fame they claim,
Their name remains the same.
Oh praise to that great name.
Ah yes, that's fine and great.
Of course, there's more to know,
There's yet an ugly blow.
For "State" though that they be,
The rest, delightfully,
Says "UNC at Raleigh."

Think not we chide in glee,
Grave matter this must be.
For just a while ago,
The name change caused much woe.
Though why we do not know.
But yet, like all the rest,
Our patience stood the test.
Bad things, to great degree,

Said "State" of UNC.
'You bums' so loud they cried,
Such charge, how best denied?
Ignore the lot? We tried.
And now no tempers flare
So comment, brief, we dare.

You've got your name, your pride;
And none was e'r denied.
So now let's go from here,
To heights not reached this year.
This system, it must be,
If grow will UNC.
Sure, that much you must see.
Though suffix we append,
No harm do we intend.
Consolidate we must,
So let's begin with trust.
And if you dislike us,
We'll never board a bus,
The "Hill" is fine for us.

Lest some of the more serious and concerned individuals involved in the squabble over the proposed name-change think we made light of an issue not best handled in such a manner we would like to direct their attention to a short quotation which seems to best approach an understanding which we would like to presuppose as existing on both sides of the family. It is a "family" argument isn't it?

We would like to think so and as such, we find the following extremely apropos:

"The world's greatest need . . . is mutual confidence. No human being ever knows all the secrets of another's heart. Yet there is enough confidence between mother and child, husband and wife, buyer and seller to make social life a practical possibility. Confidence may be risky, but it is nothing like so risky as mistrust."

The speaker was Arnold Toynbee. His topic of concern could well have been the proposed consolidation of three fine branches of one great university. (CW)

Collegiate Clothes Accent Ferrante And Teicher

By Steve Johnston

They might have been college students but of course they weren't. They were Ferrante and Teicher.

The dress was informally collegiate; blue shirts with button-down collars, dark colored socks, and loafers. They laughed and kidded with each other, using phrases and quips generally reserved for the younger set.

As I left my seat there in the coliseum and walked toward the stage where Ferrante and Teicher were practicing for their evening performance, Ferrante stopped playing and turned toward me. I introduced myself.

Ferrante braced for my first question. When I finally managed to blunder it out, he replied "Yes, we have a favorite audience; it is the college audience. They are more 'hep' and respond quicker; there seems to be more unity in the reactions to our joking and innuendoes." "Our schedule? Busy. Last year from January 2 until December 8 we were in New York, our home, for only 21 days, and that time was spent making recordings. We had been in California six different times, and had traveled to London, Paris, and Rome."

"We practice in snatches. Business occupies all of our time. We don't practice more than three hours on the day of a concert, but on an off day we may practice for eight to ten hours a day; we lose track of time."

When I asked about hobbies, Ferrante laughed. He admitted that he had a yacht once, but it sat unoccupied in the dock for two years so he finally sold it; Teicher still has thousands of uncatalogued stamps.

"Yes, we have run into humorous situations on the stage. Here in North Carolina, in Montreat, a leg popped off one of the pianos and landed in the middle of Teicher's lap; that incident happened before we carried our own pianos, so now we carry our own."

He began to pull at loose bits of skin at the end of his index finger; I wondered just how much those fingers are worth. "One million dollars," he replied. "Teicher's are worth a million more; and besides that, we each have an additional one million dollars of insurance on the rest of our bodies."

I listened to Teicher continued practicing in the background; he began to play popular show

Letter To The Editor

Student Lauds Good Music

To the Editor:

I would like to comment in regard to the letter written to The Technician by Thomas D. Harrill. But first, we need to understand that WKNC is the college radio station and should program on the level of college students. It is my understanding that when a student comes to college, he should not only grow and mature in his ability to reason, but should also learn of the better things that life has to offer, especially in music. Rock 'n' roll ("about three different notes and a beat") is not one of the better things. When a student comes to college, his musical interests should expand; he should become more aware of the different types of music and the place for each type in his life.

If some students want to listen to rock 'n' roll, that is their business. They should have no trouble at all finding the monotony of the same songs every hour over the well-known local rock 'n' roll station, during the major portion of the broadcast day. Leave WKNC as it is for the many of us who appreciate the finer types of music. Therefore, I want to commend Lewis Nelson, the manager of WKNC, and the staff for keeping the standards of the college radio station high by programming music worthy of one's time.

A Review

Ferrante And Teicher

By Grant Blair

Some people enjoy good music. Of course, the ten-year old on the third row in front of us was a little too young to appreciate good music. So he went to sleep.

He enjoyed the distinction of being the only somnambulist in the Coliseum, as the rest of the audience sat in rapt attention throughout a truly enjoyable concert.

Ferrante and Teicher did more than present good music. They seemed to enjoy the entire presentation. Their first two presentations were "Highlights

From 'Carmen,'" with a Spanish flair, and "Reverie," a quiet duet. "Brazil" marked the beginning of their cutting up. "Gigi" followed, and in "African Echoes," they used two pianos to combine the effect of drums, guitars, autoharps, and oddly enough as pianos.

The remainder of their selections were highlighted by more cutting up and some of their great hits, such as "Misty," and "The Apartment." There were three encores, during which Ferrante identified himself for the first time, and they both played "Exodus."

Final Shot Fatal To Pack

By Carlos Williams

Back in December, in a game against Maryland, the Wolfpack elected to go for one shot to break the tie and it gave them their first conference victory of the season. As the clock ticked off the final seconds, the play was set up and John Key was chosen to make the last second attempt. Key hit on the shot and State came out with a 76-74 win.

In almost complete defiance of expectation, the Wolfpack held Duke to a close battle for their 56-55 victory over State last Saturday night. In the last seconds of the game, State set up to try for the one last shot that could give them a win over the undefeated ACC leaders. Once again Key was to make the decisive shot.

The Pack held the lead at 55-54 with just more than two minutes of the game left. Then Mullins scored giving the lead to Duke once again. State decided to hold on to the ball and to play for one good shot. Three times the Wolfpack called time out to talk things over with Everett Case, with 1:42, 35 seconds, and 16 seconds remaining.

As the end grew near, Ken Rohloff worked the ball in and passed to Key for one last try. The ball rolled and fell. Pom Sinnock tried a shot that also failed. In desperation, Auksel attempted to tap the ball but the game was over. State had lost 56-55.

Pete Auksel lead the scoring for the Wolfpack with 15 points as State pushed for what would have been the biggest upset in the ACC this season.

With the shot above fell State's chance for a win over Duke as center John Key made a last second try for the lead in Saturday's game with the Blue Devils. State used a slow pace and a zone defense to its best advantage to hold Duke to a final score of 56-55. Had the ball bounced the other way, the Wolfpack win would have shaken the ACC. Swimmers Win Eight Straight

The undefeated State swimming team won its eighth consecutive victory Friday afternoon defeating Va. Tech 59-35.

Double victories were scored by Smokey Ellis and Dan Derby. Dick Paolette broke the school record, which he himself held, in the 200-yard back stroke. The Wolfpack won every event except the one-meter diving and the 400-yard freestyle relay.

The Wolfpack meet Carolina Wednesday in the State pool in what should be the toughest meet for both teams.

Directors Meeting

There will be an athletic directors meeting for the following fraternities at 4:15, Monday, February 11, Room 211, Carmichael Gymnasium, by request of Art Hoch: AGR, KA, Kappa Sig, LCA, PKA, Sigma Chi, Sigma Pi, and Theta Chi. Attendance at this meeting is very important.

Frosh Baseball

Candidates for the freshman baseball team are asked to attend an organizational meeting on Wednesday, February 13, at 7:30 p.m. The meeting will be held in Room 11, Carmichael Gymnasium. Coach Jim Edwards will conduct the meeting.

Wrestlers Win

The State wrestling team edged the strong Davidson Wildcats 16-13 Friday afternoon for their sixth straight victory. The Wolfpack are now 8-1 for the season.

Down 8-0 after the first two matches, Steve Barnes, the Wolfpack's 137-pounder, started things off for State by pinning Lanier Burnes for his seventh pin in a row. Followed up with decisions by Fred Cook, 147 pound division, and Richard Huntley, 167 pound division, the Wolfpack managed to tie the score at 11-11. Undefeated Jim Sawhill decisioned Tom Day in the 177 pound division to break the tie and give him his eighth victory.

State's next match will be Thursday when they meet Pfeiffer.
