Foreign Students Plan NCS Visit

Governor Terry Sanford has issued an invitation to all international students in the state to attend the second annual International Student Day at State College on Saturday, March 23.

An estimated 750 foreign students are enrolled in North Carolina's 58 private and public colleges. More than 400 of these students are expected to attend the International Student Day, sponsored under the auspices of the Governor's Office, through the Governor's Commission on Foreign Student Relations.

The students will tour various state buildings in the morning, according to the Commission. They will be noon guests at a luncheon at the College Union hosted by Governor Sanford. The Governor, Chancellor Caldwell, Floyd McCall, president of the Student Government, and Carlos Escallon, a Columbian student at State College, will speak at the luncheon.

Seven afternoon seminars on "Educating Free Men for World Citizenship" will cover different areas concerning free society, citizenship, and social and political responsibility.

Six Make Finals Of NC Summer Intern Program

Six State students are finalists in North Carolina's summer internship program.

This program, which is sponsored by the State of North Carolina, offers summer employment in fields of state government to college students.

State finalists are: Curtiss Moore, Robert Crutchfield, Larry Baucom, Glenn Chappell, William Haddon, and Walter Richardson.

on leave from the presidency of A & T College in Greensboro, will lead a seminar session on "Racial Justice in a Free World."

Former Congressman A. Paul Kitchin, now a legal counsel for a congressional committee, will touch on the subject of U. S. politics in a session entitled "Politics in a Free Society."

Herb O'Keef, editor, The Raleigh Times, will be in charge of a seminar on "Responsibilities of a Free Press."

Other seminar leaders will be John Winters, a member of the Raleigh City Council; Dr. Rolf Buchdahl, director of basic research for the Chemstrand Corporation Labs in the Research Triangle; Carey E. Haigler, director, Region 5, AFL-CIO; (See FOREIGN STUDENTS, page 4)

Nearly 140 Contest For Class, SG Posts

By Pete Warner
Candidates, candidates, candidates, and more candidates... all one-hundred and thirty-eight of them, excluding the ones run last issue.

The rising sophomore class officers races should prove to be one of the hottest this spring with ten candidates signed up to run.

John L. Sullivan and "Jackie" Mitchell have signed the election books to compete for the office of president of the sophomore class. The other candidates are "Jim" Miller, Rex Kelly, Gordy Eure, Dick Gabriel for vice-president; Joy Johnson and Betty Van Dyke for secretary; and "Chip" Andrews and Sylvia Williams for treasurer.

Candidates for judicial positions in the sophomore class are Pressly Gilbert, James S. Fulgum, and Steve Lanier for Honor Code Board; Charles R. Bennett, Stuart Allen Cooper, and Charles E. Wood for Men's

Notice

All students for the four major Student Government offices wishing to have their pictures printed in The Technician must have them at the Technician office at 6 p.m. Tuesday night. They will not be accepted after this time.

J C A B Boots Two; Both to Appeal SG

At its first meeting, the newly formed Judicial Candidate Approval Board disqualified two students.

The two students, Curtiss Moore and Mark Shanker said they will appeal the decision of the board before the Student Government at its meeting Thursday, March 21.

Moore had this to say about

Campus Code Board; and Sylvia Williams, Betty Van Dyke, and Rosina Coburn for Women's Campus Code Board.

For permanent senior class offices, John Stephen Singer, and John Earnhardt are listed for president. John Cameron is listed for vice-president, and Art Foland is listed for secretary-treasurer.

The School of Design candidates for senators are junior: John Atkins and Eddie Mills. Sophomore: Randy Croxton.

The School of Education candidates are senior: Douglas Crater, Douglas Williams.

The School of Engineering candidates are senior: Jim (O.J.) Smith, David Cale, E. (See CANDIDATES, page 4)

Textbook Tax Repeal Tops Bynum Platform

John Bynum, candidate for Student Government president, has released a nine point platform.

His first point is an attempt to get the three per cent state tax on text books repealed, as he feels that this would help students financially.

Second, he promises to work for preregistration in all Schools on this campus. He states that it has worked well in Civil Engineering and Textiles, and that it could easily help in every other School.

Giving the larger Departments on campus separate representation in Student Government is Bynum's third point. He says that this will give more equal representation. He adds that now the School of Engineering has about forty per cent of the students and thirty-three per cent of the Legislature.

He lists next on his program a series of SG-sponsored seminars to help develop the leadership potential on this campus.

Stronger emphasis on the Honor System during orientation week; a college-sponsored trailer park on campus; a program of campus beautification; definite office hours for SG officers; and creating an awareness in the students of constructive activities and major issues on the local, State, and national levels are Bynum's remaining points.

Fall Rush Held In Old Houses

Because of delays in the construction of Fraternity Row, fall rush will probably be held in the houses presently occupied by the 17 State College fraternities, it was announced in a recent IFC meeting.

The IFC has decided to hold off a final decision, however, until late in the semester when the actual completion date of the row can be more easily anticipated.

According to several members of the council, it is possible, although unlikely, that completion of the row will occur early enough in the fall semester to make a delayed rush in the new houses feasible. But if the new houses are not completed until December or afterwards, as the builder new expects to be the case, rush will probably be held in the old houses during the usual time at the beginning of the fall semester.

UNCR Again

State College is one step closer to being North Carolina State, The University of North Carolina at Raleigh.

According to unofficial sources, the Senate Higher Education Committee approved the name in the package higher education bill, but since all committee members were not present, the bill will be reviewed tomorrow.

Senator Ralph Scott stated that "I'm tired of all this wrangling," when he urged the committee to vote on the name change to clear the way for more important portions of the higher education bill.

Reports have been received that the State College alumni have an ally in the House Higher Education Committee; sentiment is on the side of the alumni.

The name change was designed to strengthen the Consolidated University as the apex of the state's system of higher education. The present name is one of three alternates submitted by the alumni directors, and according to Charles H. Reynolds, Alumni Association president, it is a third and reluctant choice.

Name Change Is Affecting Diploma Change

The diploma change issue seems to be stagnated until the General Assembly decides on a name for the college.

In a Friday meeting, the Chancellor and Student Government leaders decided that no action be taken until the General Assembly decides on a new name for the college.

According to John Bynum, Student Government treasurer, the Chancellor said that after a new name is decided on, a diploma committee will be set up in which the students will be represented.

Bynum indicated that the Chancellor's stand was that while the change would not be difficult to make, the fact that each generation of students might wish to change the style of the diploma makes a change difficult to make.

The Chancellor's order against the diploma change is dated February 12.

Engineers Turn Green

William Deal and David Putnam were named "Outstanding Senior in Engineering" and Hamilton Award recipient respectively at the St. Patrick's Dance held this weekend by the Engineers' Council.

Deal, an industrial engineering senior, maintains the highest average in the Engineering senior class. He has a 3.99 average out of a possible 4.00.

Putnam, a mechanical engineering senior, leads his departmental class with a 3.91 average. He was cited for exceptional leadership and a keen interest in extra-curricular activities during his college career.

The Hamilton Award is presented annually to the senior in engineering who has made outstanding contributions in the humanities field while at State College.

Staff Photographer Hugh Cashion snapped this scene at the St. Pat's Dance Saturday night using only the available candlelight.

FH SWEETHEART

Lynda Copeland from Edenton is the new Farmhouse Sweetheart. She was crowned this weekend at the annual Founders' Day Banquet. The banquet also featured the awarding of the Deane Award to the outstanding Farmhouse senior and the Robert F. Moore Award to an outstanding Alumnus.

A Little Too Far

There has been a trend on this campus in the last few years which we have supported, but recent happenings in the Judicial Candidate Approval Board have made us re-examine our views.

More and more, election of students to important positions on campus has become regulated and determined by small groups instead of majority decision. We will be the first to admit that publications have been one of the chief offenders, and that selection of publications heads have for the most part been kept out of the hands of the student body at large. The arguments are that the offices such as heads of publications are highly technical ones and should be above politics. Possibly this is true, but these policies have spread to other parts of the campus.

The Interfraternity Council now approves a slate of offices, and others running have little chance. The College Union has just recently changed its method of selection of president from the students to the Union Board of Directors. The Judicial Candidate Approval Board has been set up to regulate the selection of Judicial Board Members. There are also signs that restrictions may be placed on Student Government positions. The recent actions of the Judicial Candidate Approval Board to us graphically illustrates the bounds to which this regulation can be carried.

Curtis Moore, an editor of The Technician, was disqualified by the JCAB Thursday night. While personal friendship may enter into our feelings on this matter, we see no basis for his disqualification beyond the editorials (which have been shown to be perfectly factual) which he has written denouncing some of the actions of the Honor Board members.

His honor, his scholastic average, his interest in the HCB, and his knowledge of the Board has been unquestioned. These statements are made on unofficial, but reliable sources.

The decision, which was split three-two and was made by only five of the seven members of the Board shows that justice was not necessarily done. The chairman of the Woman's Campus Code Board and the faculty member of the Approval Board were not present at the meeting, and their votes could easily have changed the decision.

We will not labor this point too long because the official reasons for his disqualification have not been released, and our personal feelings could very easily enter into our views.

What we would like to draw from this example is the fact that too much restriction of candidates can be harmful. If we are to have a democratic student government, we must examine carefully every trend that takes the selection of campus positions out of the hands of the student body at large.

This centralization of power may be justified in some cases, but too much restriction carries with it the possibility of having in the future an entrenched campus leadership.

Letters To The Editor

Everybody Is Blasted

To the Editor:

Last year at approximately this time I was elected, by a very considerable majority of the votes, to a position on the Honor Code Board. This past September I was forced to leave school due to an illness which kept me in a hospital for three months. Naturally, I was forced to resign from the Honor Code Board at this time. Upon my return to school this semester, I decided to run for the same position on the Board again. Last week, I went through all the formalities of placing my name on the ballot, except final approval by the new Judicial Candidate Approval Board. Here I found a stumbling block. After a three minute interview before an only partially-assembled board, I found the following day that I had been determined unfit to run. I have been given two reasons for this decision.

Firstly, although the constitution of the Student Government requires only that a student have a 2.00 grade point average, this new JCAB has taken it upon themselves to decide that my 2.04 average is not worthy of an Honor Code Board member. This is in direct opposition to the constitution of the Student Government. I learned from one of the members of the JCAB that it was their feeling that I could not spare an average of one hour a week to devote to the Honor Code Board. I feel that if a student can meet the requirements of the SG, the decision as to whether or not he can spare the time should be entirely his, as he is certainly here solely for an education and not for a position on the HCB.

Secondly, my disapproval hinged on the fact that I was, at one time connected with Phi Epsilon Pi fraternity. The JCAB was of the opinion that a person affiliated with an organization such as Phi Epsilon Pi was unworthy of a position on the HCB. It appeared unsequential to the members of the JCAB that at the time of the incident at this fraternity, I was not a regularly enrolled student at this school, but was under a doctor's care at a hospital in Durham. Neither were they interested in the fact that I had not been affiliated with the fraternity or associated with any of their activities since June, 1962. Further, I was informed in the Student Activities Office that even an active association with PEP was no grounds for disapproval by the Judicial Candidate Approval Board.

I feel that in their first year of organization, this board has grossly overstepped its bounds and has based its decisions on a few very obscure generalities with no attempt or interest in establishing facts.

I feel that if this board is to succeed in its designed purpose, a more rigid definition of the requirements for candidates and a greater limitation of the powers of this board are necessary. I have already appealed their decision to the Student Government Legislature and feel that this injustice will be corrected.

Mark Shanker

To the Editor:

Again the axe has fallen, as it did previously on the senior exemptions and the name change. This time it fell on the request of the seniors to change the present typewritten "Liquor License size" diploma to a formal diploma more representative of the status and tradition of N. C. State College.

A motion backed by the Tompkins Textile Council to change the size and design of the diploma was presented to the Faculty Senate and Administration last semester via the Student Government. The feeling of the Textile Council was that the seniors have paid for their diplomas with four years of hard work plus cash withheld by the College for graduation fees, consequently, they deserve and should receive suitable diplomas that could be proudly displayed after graduation. The Textile Council was led to believe that there was and still is sufficient time remaining before graduation for the size and design of the diploma to be changed. However, when a delegation from the Textile Council returned from Dean Stewart's office this week they brought back information that the proposed change had been killed February 12, by the Chancellor without any notification or explanation to the Student Government or to the Textile Council.

The axe fell silent, quick, and sure, while our defeatest

Student Government Representatives backed down without a word. Will they remain quiet until the spring elections are over? How about our new candidates for campus offices?

Oh yes, does anyone know the sizes of the Chancellor's diplomas?

Larry Matheson

Editor's Note: The largest and most dominating diploma hanging in the Chancellor's office is from the high school from which he graduated.

To the Editor:

In your last edition, you struck out at the Elections Committee of the Student Government "with great vigah". The figure "forty minutes late" was slightly off. You missed by twenty minutes! John Cameron started explaining the Judicial Candidate Approval Board at 7:20. The chairman of the elections committee started the explanation of the rules at 7:40.

In your editorial you made the candidates sound like innocent victims the opposite, however, was true. Many—very many—of these little angels didn't bother to sign the nominations books until the last day—the day of the meeting. All of the "last day signers" had to have their averages checked before the meeting (from 4:30 to 7:00). With the help of another student, I checked the averages of over half the candidates running for office that afternoon. I arrived at the meeting at 7:20 with the nominations books. In other words, there was a TRE-MENDOUS run on the books that day.

There is no excuse for a candidate who plans to run for office to wait until the last day to sign up. The only reason that would cause a candidate to wait for such an unreasonable period of time is that he just wants an office—any office!

Ronald J. Bowers

To the Editor:

I have little doubt that what the average State College student wants and needs is a bit of humor and entertainment in his daily routine. Although we are not fortunate enough to have a campus humor magazine to provide this necessity, we are lucky enough to have The Technician. To be sure, a human interest story or two in an issue is (as the term implies) interesting to humans. It may even be entertaining to boot!

I have only one question to pose on this matter after reading the "riotous" edition of March 13. Since when does it become the responsibility of our sole newspaper—I use the term in the most literal sense—to offer this "human interest" at the expense of normal news coverage? To what Journalism authority do we owe the precedent that guided your presentation of those two quaint articles on the play Othello?

Certainly we're all dying to know why the audience was sitting in the aisles Tuesday night; and your description of how the brave M & O men met such obstacles is just short of a literary "great." And at last we know what the National Players' seamstress looks like, and the way Technician reporters spend their time. Would it be too much to ask to expect a few lines of praise or damnation directed towards the actual presentation of the Play? Perhaps even a photo of some of the actors would be noteworthy? If we are steadily nearing a planned acquisition of a campus humor magazine through these antics, however, do not let these suggestions stray you from your course.

A Review

'Tomorrow Is Our Turn'

By Herb Allred

Tomorrow Is My Turn is the story of people who wait for their chance in life. It is the story of hopes and ambitions and loves.

The stage is World War II France and Germany, and the movie is a story of their people—not the countries.

Jean, a French journalist, decides to become a war correspondent when the war breaks out not only for political and patriotic reasons, but also, as he says, to test his "performance under fire". He is captured by the Germans and meets a fellow prisoner, Roger, a small, meek baker who is not only cursed with the promise of the boring life of a baker, but is beset by frigid wife and an all-seeing mother-in-law who bursts into the bedroom when Roger and his wife are about to indulge themselves.

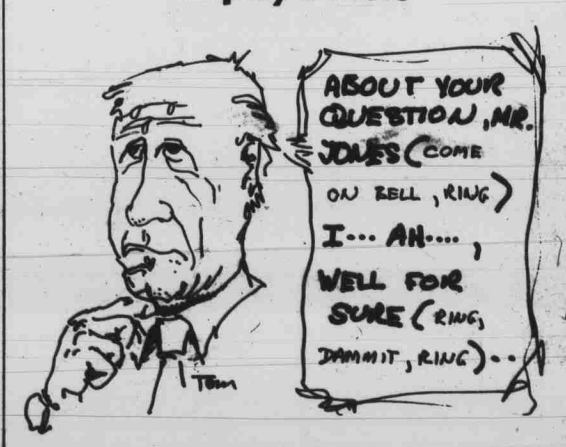

Both of these men are sent to work as farmers in Germany and soon come to know the people for whom they work as human beings, rather than enemies. As a matter of fact, old Jean becomes more than casual with the proverbial farmer's daughter and uses her as a means of escape. Roger also secretly in love with the farmer's daughter, whose name is Helga.

As the movie tippy-toes to an end, we see that some cats get what they want in life without really trying, and some others have to work for what they get, and still others find themselves staring into oblivion, despite all they can do.

The movie is presently playing at the Varsity theater.

Play-offs End 1963
Basketball Season

By Martin White
The 1963 intramural basketball season ended Thursday night in the Open League, Dormitory League, and Fraternity League with the finals in the Wildcard League to be played Wednesday night between the Grads and the Gunners.

In the opening game of the night, Wesley Foundation overcame a 6-8 first quarter deficit to turn back the Spastics, 35-29, for first place in the Open League. M. Smith led the Wesley team with 16 markers, W. Gregory was high for the Spastics with 17 points.

In the consolation play-offs, Sigma Chi downed Sigma Alpha Epsilon 55-49, for the fraternity consolation championship while Bagwell outlasted Becton 49-44, for first place in the dormitory consolation bracket. McLaurin with 15 tallies and Roberts with 13 points led the Sigs while Parker and Stalls with 20 and 10 points respectively led the way for Bagwell. For the losers, King and Everett with 11 markers each were high scorers for SAE; Davidson scored 13 points to lead Becton.

In the final games of the evening, Pi Kappa Alpha and Turlington won the crowns in the fraternity and dormitory divisions.

PKA had difficulty all the way in their 38-36 victory over Kappa Sigma. The largest lead of the game was 6 points, held by the PKA's with a little more than a minute to be played. The Kappa Sigs let it be known that they hadn't given up hope of scoring the next four points. When the final whistle blew, the KS's had just missed a shot at the basket that could have tied the score. Morrison with 13 points and May with 15 markers led PKA while Team scored 13 for the losers.

Turlington had little trouble in winning their crown from Watauga, 44-26. Fink netted 21 points to lead the Turlington scorers, followed by Marshall with 12 tallies. Bail scored 11 markers in heading the Watauga cause.
