NCS, UNCR Probably To Pass Tomorrow

State College's new name will probably be "North Carolina State, The University of North Carolina at Raleigh" by the time you crawl into bed tomorrow night.

The name, as such, passed the Senate last Thursday. If it passes the House tomorrow, the college's name will be officially changed.

Just before the bill which contained the new name was passed, an amendment to the bill which provided that the new name of the college be "North Carolina State University of the University of North Carolina" was defeated by a vote of 34-12.

State College alumni who favored the name that was defeated were represented by Senator Henry Shelton who said that the name that was passed was "rammed down the throats" of the alumni.

The bill which passed with the new name includes the enlargement of the two-year colleges at Wilmington, Asheville, and Charlotte into four-year colleges. The bill also sets up the basis for approximately fourteen units of community colleges.

Faculty Legislated On Integration

Further checking into Faculty Senate records has revealed two resolutions adopted by the senate concerning State College integration.

In the past three years the senate has adopted two resolutions indicating approval of the integration of local business establishments. Dated November 1, 1960, the minutes of a Faculty Senate meeting contain the following resolution: "... that all students at State College regardless of race, color or nationality be afforded fair and equitable services from the businesses that surround State College and that are a part of the larger State College Community."

On May 8, 1962, the Faculty Senate passed a resolution entitled "A Resolution of Commendation," stating "Be it resolved that the Faculty Senate of North Carolina State College commend the North Carolina State College Student Government Legislature for its action on March 29, 1962 in unanimously passing the resolution entitled, 'A Resolution Urging Hillsboro Street Merchants to Serve All Students of North Carolina State College on an Equal Basis.'"

Dr. Carey H. Bostian, Faculty Senate chairman, pointed out that these are only two instances which indicate faculty sentiment on the integration issue, and that further research into senate minutes could reveal other action at earlier dates.

Drum & Bugle Corps First In National Competition

By Ron Bowers
The N. C. State Drum and Bugle Corps has been declared the best in the nation.

Last Saturday in Camp Kilmer, New Jersey, the N. C. State Drum and Bugle Corps compiled a higher score than any other unit, band or bugle corps, entered in the competition.

This was not the only tribute paid the corps for its performance, according to corps members: the corps received the only standing ovation of the day. The ranking officer in attendance, Major General Elder, rushed down from the reviewing stand to give his personal congratulations to the Corps, for "a fabulous performance," before the judges announced the results. No other unit received a personal visit from the General, the member continued.

The Bugle Corps was the only entrant to receive applause after each of the intricate movements—all other contestants received only seated applause after their entire performance.

The D&B Commander, Cadet Major Bagully, had only brief directions before the performance: "The judges will be anywhere and everywhere on the field—if one gets in your way, step on him! If you drop anything—even if it's your head—leave it!"

After the performance, he had quite a bit to say: He started with "At ease!—Gentleman, that was perfect! If we don't take first place with that, there

Faculty Head Answers

"I did not state an opinion that an action had never been taken, as was implied in the quotes used in . . . The Technician."

The above is a quote taken from a letter (text on page 2) addressed to the editor of The Technician from Dr. Carey H. Bostian, chairman of the Faculty Senate. Bostian was referring to an article which appeared in the April 9, edition of The Technician dealing with the recent integration controversy in Raleigh, and the actions which the Faculty Senate had taken.

According to Faculty Senate minutes from the past two years, the Senate has taken action twice in that period of time concerning integration affecting State students. In the first action which was taken, the Senate passed a resolution that all NCS students "regardless of color, race, or nationality be afforded fair and equitable services from the businesses that surround State College and that are a part of the larger college community."

In the second action, the senate commended SG for passing a resolution entitled, "A Resolution Urging Hillsboro Street Merchants to Serve All Students of North Carolina State College".

The dates of the actions were November 1, 1960 and May 8, 1962.

Hague Philharmonic Closes 'Friends' Series

The Hague Philharmonic Orchestra will appear tonight at 8 in Reynolds Coliseum in the last of this year's Friends of the College concerts.

The orchestra, under the direction of Willem von Otterloo, is making its first series of appearances in the United States. Appearing with the Philharmonic will be two master violinists, Theo Olof and Willem Noske.

Olof has performed as a soloist in Europe, Israel, Indonesia, and the West Indies. In 1951 he was one of the winners of the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium international competition. In addition to his fame as a violinist, Olof is the author of two books, "There You Stand," autobiographical material on his concert career, and a book written for children about instruments of the orchestra.

Noske has performed as concert violinist and solo recitalist in Europe, Australia, Asia, and the United States. He has also served as concert master of The Netherlands Chamber Orchestra and the Rotterdam Philharmonic.

Admission will be by season membership only.

Chester Bowles Highlights 'Developing Area' Series

Chester Bowles, recently appointed Ambassador to India and present Undersecretary of State, will speak in the first Colloquium On Developing Areas on Monday, April 29, at 1 p.m. in the College Union Ballroom.

The colloquium, presenting lecturers on India, Liberia, and South Africa, will begin Sunday night and extend through Thursday, May 2, according to Bill Maher, chairman of the CU Forum Committee, which will co-sponsor the event with the Raleigh Chapter of the American Association of the United Nations. Official lecture topics have not been released.

Angie Brooks, Assistant Secretary of State of Liberia and Liberian Ambassador to the United Nations, will open the colloquium Sunday night at 8 p.m. in the College Union Ballroom.

The final speaker in the event, Leslie Rubin, a former Senator in the South African Government, will appear in the CU Theater on Thursday, May 2, at 8 p.m., Maher said.

Bowles is a former Governor of the state of Connecticut, Ambassador to India, and partner in the advertising firm of Benton and Bowles.

Miss Brooks has served as Acting President of Liberia and has held the post of Chairman of the Fourth Committee of the United Nations, one of the highest posts to be held by a woman. She is a graduate of Shaw University, Maher noted.

Rubin's Senatorial position, in which he represented native Africans, has since been abolished by the South African government. He is now in exile and is professor of African Affairs at Howard University. While in South Africa, he was a leader in the Liberal Party; he was later appointed Professor in the University College in Ghana.

Attendance is open to the public. A coffee hour will follow each program.

Attending the colloquium will be a new stadium near the State Fairgrounds.

President William C. Friday last night told The Technician that it was hoped that by saving money on construction, no student fees would have to be used to pay for the stadium. Chancellor Caldwell commented last week that a possible two dollar raise in student fees might be used to aid the construction.

Jordan commented that the bonds would be sold so that the stadium could be financed "outside of the budget of the school." He said that it was not fair for the stadium to be paid for by the school budget which must be used for the construction of classrooms and dormitories.

Stadium Bill Slated For Introduction

State College may get a new football stadium, but legislation which is to be introduced in the General Assembly this week will not insure the construction.

According to Wake County Senator John Jordan, a bill will be introduced this week which, if passed by the General Assembly, will give the Board of Trustees the permission to sell bonds for construction of a new

Another Accolade

The State College Drum and Bugle Corps attracted notice before it went to the National Competition.

Lyndon Johnson, who the Corps greeted on his recent visit to Raleigh has commended them on the sharpness of their appearance.

In a letter to The Technician, Johnson referred to the unforgettable sight of the Honor Rifle Squad and the Drum and Bugle Corps of State College.

"The Rifle Squad is to be congratulated for its smartness of uniform, the Drum and Bugle Corps for the quality of its performance and its crisp presentation," he said.

Congratulations!

Our sincerest and warmest congratulations to the Drum and Bugle Corps on their win.

The knowledge that our corps is the best in the country, reflects favorably on our entire college and especially, our military department.

More than that, we wish to commend the students in the Corps for the sacrifices which they made to make this win.

When we called one member of the corps, he explained why the group won. "We were fabulous", he stated with pride. The pride reflected more than the win. It represented the work which was necessary for the unit to become fabulous. Extra drills, individual practice, and lower grades were the price the members of the unit had to pay.

There's a moral to this win, but we aren't going to bother to state it.

Just ask any member of the Drum and Bugle Corps.

Money, Money, Money . . .

One thing that continually concerns us about the new Stadium are the proposed methods of financing.

We question whether a new stadium can be effectively financed by gate receipts. The problem in the proposed method of finance will be in paying for the initial cost of stadium construction and at the same time paying for the expense of running the stadium. Even though the Chancellor has stated that student athletic fees will be increased only as a last-ditch measure, it is obvious that the administration, in mentioning a possible two-dollar increase in athletic fees to the Board of Trustees, has decided to use this as the next step if the gate receipt idea fails.

The administration has been placed in a peculiar position. It is asking the legislature not to increase student fees to finance new dormitories, which are certainly necessary, but rather to give the trustees power to increase student fees to finance a new stadium, which is certainly a luxury.

. . . And How To Get It

It's pretty obvious by now, however, that the simplest way for the administration to get anything it wants from the legislature would be to reinstate the Dixie Classic.

One administration official reported to us that the people now pressuring the Consolidated University to bring back the Classic are the same ones who refused during a previous Classic, to house a visiting team containing one Negro. After repeated calls to prominent people in the area, and repeated refusals, the college finally had to set up special quarters for the team in the infirmary.

More Blues

A number of people have asked us why we are concerned with State College's role in integration.

We offer two quotes. "The white man has murdered us at will, stripped us of our wealth and kept us ignorant of our true religion" —Malcolm X of the Black Muslims

"The Negro citizen . . . has come to the point where he is not afraid of violence. He no longer shrinks back" —Roy Wilkins, Executive secretary of the NAACP.

The Negroes attending college, the leaders of the South's integration movement are looking to the white college students and faculty for aid and support for their present nonviolent bid for equal rights. If the support is not forthcoming, then either violence or stricter segregation of their own race are the only choices left to them. GB.

Letter To The Editor

Integration

To The Editor:

It may be true that the Faculty Senate has not considered the subject of local integration recently, but the Senate did consider this matter in the fall of 1960. This was before Dr. Bostian was a member of the Senate and hence, he was not familiar with the action taken.

Quoting from the minutes of the Faculty Senate for November 1, 1960,

"Mr. Holtzman moved that the Faculty Senate go on record as approving of the sentiments expressed at the Liaison meeting. This implies that all students at State College regardless of race, color or nationality be afforded fair and equitable services from the businesses that surround State College and that are a part of the larger State College Community.

Mr. Eldridge seconded the motion and it was carried."

J. S. Doolittle
Professor of Mechanical Engineering

To The Editor:

On Tuesday night, April 9, Dick Paschall called me seeking information about actions of the Senate concerning efforts of Negro students to integrate the Ambassador Theatre and concerning the broader problems of integration affecting our students. I told him that I was quite certain that the matter had not been discussed during the 1962-63 year because no group or person had brought the subject to our attention. When he asked about discussions and actions during previous years, I told him that I could not remember any, but that I had not been a member of the Senate prior to September 1961. I did not state an opinion that no action had ever been taken, as was implied in the quotes used in the next edition of The Technician.

The next day I talked with the Secretary of the Senate and with the Secretary for 1961-62, and learned that the Senate had adopted a resolution on May 8, 1962, commending the Student Legislature for its action on March 29, 1962, when a resolution was passed urging all merchants on Hillsboro Street to serve all students on an equal basis. Since then I have found that the Senate on November 1, 1960 had passed a similar resolution. I have not had time to go through the minutes of previous years, but they may also show consideration by the Senate of this matter.

Immediately on learning of these actions of the Senate I attempted to get in touch with Mr. Paschal to provide the information that he had sought the night before. By the time the contact was made on Thursday, the next edition had been printed and distributed. Your editorial quite properly reminded the community of students and faculty of a responsibility in this area, but regrettably it left the impression that the faculty has not been concerned and possibly is not concerned at the present time. If I had known while talking with Mr. Paschal that you were writing an editorial on this subject, I would have urged a delay until there had been an opportunity to check the minutes of the Senate. It seems too much to expect an officer during one year to remember actions taken during previous years, especially those taken while he was not even a member of the Senate.

Although your office is sent minutes of meetings of the Senate, including copies of resolutions, I am enclosing excerpts from the minutes for November 1, 1960, a copy of the resolution of the Student Legislature for March 29, 1962, and a copy of the resolution of the Senate of May 8, 1962.

Since the edition of The Technician for Wednesday, April 10 was seen by very few students because of their early departure for vacation you may want to present another reminder to students and faculty in this matter. If you do, you will have available a record of what the Senate has done since November 1960.

With best wishes and sincerely yours,

Carey H. Bostian
Chairman, Faculty Senate

Price Discusses Writing

By Dwight Minkler

Reynolds Price writes for three palpable reasons: he writes to help himself understand himself and life; he writes to communicate with another individual of whom he is a personal acquaintance; and he writes to change, to change either himself, or another, or the world.

These are the reasons "why" Price writes, as he presented them to the last audience of the Contemporary Scene lectures given in the CU last Thursday night. Reynolds Price is an author, recently made famous by his first novel, A Long and Happy Life.

Price started off the evening with, "The making of any work of art is a mystery." He continued to show how science might attempt to discover the "how" of art by asking the following question, "Do you, Mr. X, compose with what type of cigarettes, weight of paper, typewriter, pen, pencil . . . or lovers on hand?" But Price made his point with the statement, "Why" is the most important question we most ask of a poem" or any other work of art. He said that the question of "how" is, at best, secondary. He then went on to tell "why" he wrote.

Apollo Club Makes Plans

The Apollo Club has planned its new format for the fall of '63.

Sessions for next year will be held at two week intervals instead of every week as they did this year. The meetings will occur on the Wednesday nights of September 25, October 9, October 23, November 13, and December 11.

There will be two speakers at each session of the club, but the meetings next year will be moderated by professors. Informal coffee chats will be held at the close of each program.

The subjects for the '63 Club meetings will be birth control and the population explosion, race relations, labor unions, the function of extremist factions in the US, and militarism.

The meetings will be held in the CU Ballroom from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Membership in the Club is established with the payment of six dollars to Miss Beckwith, secretary to Bob Hare in the King Religious Center.

Floor Counselor Lets Bulbs Go

By Dwight Minkler

Does your floor counselor visit you every week?

Believe it or not, that is one of his functions, according to a rule sheet sent out to each floor counselor. A "typical" floor counselor (as he appointed himself among the three counselors he had known from the same dorm) commented on this function assigned to him, "Well, I don't do it, but I think it's a pretty good rule. I started to say that there are some rooms on this Floor that I haven't been in, but I don't reckon there are."

Among other things, the floor counselor is supposed to enforce house rules, report damage, help students to become adjusted, and carry out the responsibility and use of the house keys.

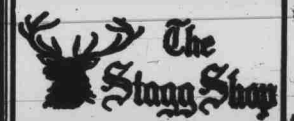

He is also supposed to be the last to leave and the first to come back over a holiday period. When Typical was asked about this requirement, his roommate jovially blurted out, "When were you ever last to leave or first to come back?" Typical retorted, "I was the last to leave on all holidays except Christmas. And if I wasn't the last, there were damn few people on this floor when I left."

When asked about light bulbs that had been taken out of the hall and put in the commodes on a Saturday night, Typical said, "You can't go raving up and down the halls. There is not much you can do about it unless you see it." He explained that the janitors put them back in their sockets the next morning. There was no use to report it.

A hopeful dorm counselor must have a 2.0 average and live on the floor of which he wants to be floor counselor. Applications must be made to the Dormitory Rental Office. It is not an elective position.

FILLING A WELL-NEEDED GAP

Although my son is a college freshman, I am glad to say that he is still not too old to climb up on my lap and have a heart-to-heart talk when things are troubling him. My boy is enrolled at Harvard where he is studying to be a fireman. From the time he was a little tiny baby he always said he wanted to be a fireman. Of course, my wife and I believed that he would eventually grow out of it, but no sir, the little chap never wavered in his ambition for one minute!

So here he is at Harvard today taking courses in net holding, mouth-to-mouth breathing, carbon tetrachloride, and Dalmatian dogs. It is a full schedule for the young man, and that, in fact, is exactly what we talked about when last he climbed upon my lap. He complained that every bit of his time is taken up with his major requirements. He doesn't have so much as one hour a week to sample any of the fascinating courses outside his major—history, literature, language, science, or any of the thousand and one things that appeal to his keen young mind.

I am sure that many of you find yourselves in the same scholastic bind; you are taking so many requirements that you can't find time for some appealing electives. Therefore, in today's column I will forego levity and give you a brief survey in a subject that is probably not included in your curriculum.

He's still not too old

I have asked the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes whether I might employ this column—normally a vehicle for innocent merriment—to pursue this serious end. "Of course you may, crazy kid," they replied kindly, their grey eyes crinkling at the corners, their manly mouths twisted in funny little grins. If you are a Marlboro smoker—and what intelligent human person is not?—you would expect the makers of Marlboro to be fine men. And so they are—wonderful gits, every man-jack of them—good, generous, understanding, wise. They are each tipped with a pure white filter and come in soft pack or Flip-Top box.

But I digress. We were going to take up a topic you are probably unable to cover in your busy academic life. Let us start with the most basic topic of all—anthropology, the study of man himself.

Man is usually defined as a tool-making animal, but I personally do not find this definition entirely satisfactory. Man is not the only species which makes tools. The simians, for example, make monkey wrenches.

Still, when you come to a really complicated tool—like a linotype, for instance—you can be fairly sure it was made by Homo sapiens—or else a very intelligent tiger. The question one should ask, therefore, is not who made the tool, but what did he do with it.

For example, in a recent excavation in the Olduvai Gorge a large assortment of hominoid fossils was found, all dating back to the Middle Pleistocene Age. Buried with the fossils was a number of their artifacts, the most interesting being a black metal box which emitted a steady beeping sound. Now, of course, zoologists will tell you that tree frogs make such boxes which they employ in their mating activities (I can't go into detail about it in this family newspaper) but the eminent anthropological team, Mr. and Mrs. Walther Sigafos (both he and she are named Walther) were convinced that this particular box was made not by tree frogs but by Neanderthal men. To prove their point, they switched on the box and out came television, which, as everyone knows, was the forerunner of fire.

If there is anything more you need to know about anthropology, just climb up on my lap as soon as my son leaves.

The makers of Marlboro Cigarettes who sponsor this column, often with trepidation, are not anthropologists. They are tobacconists—good ones, I think—and I think you'll think so too when you sample their wares—available wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states.

LIEUTENANT BOB AKAM, B.S. IN AVIATION ADMINISTRATION

"If I had it to do over again, would I take Army R.O.T.C.?"

Look at it this way. I like the idea of doing challenging work. That's why I volunteered for Special Forces. So you can see why I felt pretty good when the Army assigned me to Europe! Here I really feel I'm doing something for the cause of my country in these important times. How many jobs can you think of that start you off with this kind of responsibility? My wife's here, too, and she loves it. We get a chance to travel. We meet the people, learn new languages, customs. And there's a pretty active social life on post, too. But above all, I'm an officer with a job to do and with responsibilities to shoulder. I like it that way, and I have a hunch that my leadership training and experience will help me out whatever I do. Take it from me, if you're already half-way towards your commission, see it through. It's a good deal. I know."
