While this building stood, the Student Union, Gardner Hall, Williams Hall, Harrelson Hall and the Library sprang up about it. For the first time in the memory of many State students there will be an announced march on the capitol.

Student Government officials anticipate that the rally will last for approximately 30 minutes. Present at the rally will be cheerleaders, the marching band, the football team and Student Government officers.

Prior to this time, although parade permits had been taken out there has been no march on the capitol which has been officially sanctioned by SG.

If the past is any basis for predicting the future, the freshman class may not have a secretary.

According to Ron Stinner, chairman of the Elections Committee, nobody has yet signed up Secretary of the class, or for Ag, Design, Education, and Forestry senators. Also, there have been no nominations as yet for graduate senators. Stinner stated that the books will remain open until 5 p.m. Friday at the Main Desk of the Student Union.

In other nominations, five people have posted their names for the presidential race while two have signed for treasurer. Five have also signed for the vice president's position.

Tickets NSA Regional Meet To Be Held Here

No more date tickets are available for the State-UNC game this Saturday.

At press time yesterday, only 100 student admission tickets remained.

According to Dick Farrell, Coliseum Box Office manager, the gates of Kenan Stadium will open at 11 a.m. Saturday for admission to the game and exchange of stubs.

By Jim Kear
A hundred student leaders from surrounding schools will gather here next month to discuss some of the problems of any large university.

It was disclosed today by Terry Lowder, National Student Association co-ordinator for State, that the Fall Regional Assembly of the USNSA for the Carolinas and Virginia will be held here November 16-17. From ten to fifteen large coed universities are expected to be hosted by the local delegation in cooperation with the regional chairman, Harry De Lung from UNC.

The decision to hold the conclave at State was made last spring in Greensboro by the NSA Regional Executive Board, according to Howard Price, former NSA Coordinator for State. Price said this assembly is one of two annual regional meetings which follow the national convention held in August.

As a departure from usual practices, Price continued, the regional meetings this year are to be divided into the large universities and the small colleges. In this way the discussion topics can be restricted to more universally pertinent problems that are not common to both the large and the small institutions.

Activities during the assembly will include a keynote speech, main address, banquet, informal panel and discussion groups, and research guidance on the main topics. The delegates will take the opportunity to bring up current problems and situations common to their respective schools with the idea of benefitting the other institutions present. Discussions in such cases will range around various solutions to the problems as utilized by the individual universities.

Topical, preplanned discussions, in the form of a research seminar, will deal with the more prominent problems that arise among student body dealings. Such main topics include community issues and their effect on higher education, the effect of outside pressures on campus procedures, the delay of educational progress by social pressures, and such current popular issues as the speaker ban law.

According to Tom Covington, assistant director of Student Activities, "details are just being formulated for the meetings since we were only notified of the plans last week." Covington expressed hopes that the success of this assembly could lead to further such meetings on the State campus.

Covington and Governor's Attorney Joel Fleishman will act as research advisers to the discussions.

NCS Livestock Winning Prizes At State Fair

State's entries in livestock competition at the State Fair are winning prizes.

Judging in several divisions of beef cattle competition has left a number of prizes in the hands of Animal Science Club boys from State. Some twenty-five members of the club have been handling and caring for the State-owned animals this week at the fairgrounds, according to Dewitt Grady, Animal Science Club treasurer.

The results of the judging thus far show a second place, a third place and several close placings in the wide-open adult division events. Entries have ranged all over the state with several out-of-state entries in most divisions.

"We have done mighty well so far," said Grady, "and we hope to do even better by the time judging is over Thursday." Today's events were to finish up the cattle divisions and cover the sheep judging in which State has won championships in the past two years.

The club members have been caring for all the entries while at the fair in addition to helping with several booths and exhibits.

Infamous Madame Arriving Today

Vietnamese bombshell Madame Ngo Dinh Nhu is scheduled to arrive on campus this afternoon but will not receive an official reception by University officials.

Public Relations Director Hardy Berry plans to meet Mme. Nhu at the Raleigh-Durham Airport and escort her to the campus. Chancellor Caldwell is reported out of town today on a speaking engagement.

Mme. Nhu is scheduled to hold a press conference at 4:30 p.m. today to be followed by an address in the Union Ballroom at 6 p.m.

Lectures Committee Chairman Steve Johnston told The Technician that visitors from Duke The address will be carried locally on television over WUNC-TV, Channel 4, and the public has been requested to stay at home and watch the program on television because of the limited seating facilities.

and Chapel Hill are expected for the speech. He urged all State students to come early in order to get a good seat.

Round And Round Go The Election Books

Some freshmen wishing to sign up as candidates in the freshmen elections may have had trouble tracking down the election books.

At the second Student Government meeting of the year, it was decided that the books would be set up at the Main Desk of the Erdahl-Cloyd Union, according to Ron Stinner, chairman of the Elections Committee.

Stinner pointed out at the third meeting, however, that there was a clause in the Constitution stating that the books must be located in the Activities Office. In keeping with the Constitution, the books were moved to the Activities Office.

In the October 7 issue of The Technician it was stated that the freshman election books would be located in the Student Union. In accordance with the move made in order to comply with the Constitution, a correction was run in the October 10 issue.

Tom Covington, assistant director of Student Activities, noted the article naming the Union as the location of the books and moved the books from the Activities Office to the Union without notifying Stinner, according to Stinner.

Finally Covington and Stinner got together, but they were still faced with the problem of the clause in the Constitution. Covington then made the Main Desk of the Union a part of the Activities Office.

Pause for a moment, kill that last blade of grass. Rub it out. And with the passing of that final isolated piece of greenery Campus Pride Week comes to a close, and the curtain draws over the final scene. (Photo by Andrews)

Pack Meets Heels 53rd Time

By Martin White

The 1963 meeting of State's Wolfpack and the Tar Heels of North Carolina will be the 53rd meeting of the two teams since their first game in 1894.

In this 69 year old rivalry, Carolina has a decisive lead with 36 victories. State has only 10 wins in the series and there have been six ties.

Since the Atlantic Coast Conference was formed in 1953, there have been 10 meetings of the two teams, each winning five. In the past seven years, the Wolfpack has made off with five wins, holding our brother institution to only two wins, in 1959 and 1961.

Heard in the Raleigh camp, "Best Carolina team I've seen," and "Carolina is one of the nation's best pass defense teams." These compliments are duplicated in the Chapel Hill camp by

"I consider N. C. State as the cream of the Atlantic Coast Conference."

These quotes, made by the opposing coaches in Saturday's clash, only partially show the respect, not fear, that the two teams have for each other.

"This is the big one," is a common statement heard in both camps and throughout the state as all indications point to a record sell-out crowd in Kenan Stadium. The contest has created more interest than any in the past 15 years.

In the eight major team statistics for the ACC, the Tar Heels have a definite advantage over the Pack. Carolina ranks second in total offense, rushing offense, passing offense, and total defense. In these four categories State is third in all except rushing offense, where it is fourth. In rushing defense, State is second and Carolina is fourth. In pass defense, the Heels held first place while State is fifth.

As for pre-game favorites, Carolina has been given the edge, perhaps a junior edge.

Where's That Stadium?

Great cries have been heard across the campus since noon yesterday when the last student ticket to the State-Carolina game was issued by the Coliseum Box Office.

Large numbers of students who will be denied the joy of seeing the Heels join the ranks of the defeated again this year will probably become quite angry with the folks at the box office. But they can not sell something that they do not have.

Therefore, a sizable portion of the State student body will have to resign themselves to an afternoon in the dorm by the radio.

It seems that the total outlay of student and date tickets allotted to State was 7,000 out of a total Kenan Stadium capacity of approximately 47,000. Thus, if 4,000 students got tickets and 3,000 of them purchased date tickets, the total allotment was spent, and another 3,000 students got no tickets at all for what many students consider to be the highlight of the football season.

The game is being played in Carolina's stadium, as usual; and few will dispute their right to allot the seats as they see fit.

Let's get that new stadium built so we can afford to beat Carolina here in Raleigh and allow all our students to attend if they so desire.

The Last Word

We went over to Duke the other day.

We also went over to Carolina.

And we were wrong, because somehow the students at those two institutions managed to keep themselves from walking on the grass.

They evidently have something that most State students don't. Pride.

Pride enough to not sling insults at sister schools.

Pride enough not to jeer at a performer.

Pride enough not to plaster dirty notes on the windshield of the Governor's car.

Prime enough not to walk on the grass.

Maybe its a small thing, pride, but without it man is an animal, just another beast who paces the earth in search of food and shelter.

Pride, its a small thing, but it is what makes men great.

And the chances are that you don't have it.

You go to State.

—CM

New Name For State?

Perhaps it had to happen, but for some strange reason we'd hoped it never would. It's just that, well, State College has always had such a nice, unspotted reputation. And now, well, we can hear the Birchwags already.

"Dictator's den," they'll probably be saying of State, once the Dragon Lady, Mme. Nhu, has spoken there.

In a way, that's why we don't mind the one-upmanship visible in State snagging Mme. Nhu over us here at Carolina.

After all, just think how confusing it would be if we were known as a "Dictator's Den" as well as a "Red Nest."

Besides that, State needs a good short nickname, now that it's name has been made so lawd-awful long. Still, we're sad to see it happen. They do so much else at State besides invite Dragon Ladies to speak, just as most of us at Carolina are involved in a few other things than simply holding cell meetings.

WKNC Closeup Set This Week For Repairs

There's going to be something new in the air in a couple of weeks: WKNC.

WKNC will sign off the air October 18 for two weeks. During this time, extensive changes will be made in the equipment and in the programming.

When the radio station signs on again November 4, there will be two broadcasting studios instead of the one in operation now.

The present system of programming of shows will get a facelifting with new shows being added that will offer more to the students at State and Peace College, according to manager George Heedon. One such show will be the Time Roundtable, sponsored by Time magazine. This show will consist of a series of discussions on contemporary issues. State students will participate in these discussions.

Letters To The Editors

The Chancellor Gets A Letter

Editors' note: The following is a letter received recently by Chancellor Caldwell. We feel that it is a sincere tribute to State and should be printed here.

Dear Chancellor,

I was graduated from N. C. State in M.E. Department. I want to show my greatest gratitude and appreciation to you for being educated in such a fine school under your administration.

Two years ago I came to Raleigh from Formosa to start my graduate work. At first, I could not speak and understand English well enough to enjoy my school life at N. C. State; yet with the warmth and friendly atmosphere given so generously by you, the faculty members and all the staffs at N. C. State, I made out my M.S. all right and had quite a good time, too.

I want especially to express my hearty thanks to the International Student Center of N. C. State. The associate director, Mrs. Margaret Woodhouse, has been so kind to me as well as

Russia: New Days, Enthusiasm, Hope

Editors' note: This is the third in a series of articles written by Garland McAdoo, president of the YMCA, who toured Russia this summer.

The Revolution was in 1917. Vladimir I. Lenin and the Bolsheviks came to power and initiated the greatest experiment in Marxian philosophy ever attempted to that time. Lenin, the founder and doctor of the Soviet state, revised, extended, interpreted, and applied the Marxian economic philosophy to the young state during the turbulent years following the Revolution.

Forty years have passed since the death of Lenin. But he still lives in the hearts and minds of the people. He has become a sort of god for the Soviets; his writings are gospel; his tomb is sacred; his philosophy is a prime mover in the life of the society. Lenin's picture is found in every office and nearly every public place. Hundreds of public places are named for Lenin—the subways, libraries, theaters, stadiums.

In the years following the death of Stalin, with the emergence of Khrushchev to the leadership, the government has loosened many restrictions on the people and has allowed for considerably more freedom and easiness of life. Many years have passed since force labor camps have been necessary; the Secret police is no longer an instrument of fear and power; blatant religious persecution has ceased; cruel coercion to comply with the ideology to conform to the system no longer exists. The days left with the death of Stalin.

Asked whether or not another "Stalin" could come to power in the state, the Russians reply, "No." Nowadays people are too well educated to be deceived; the party checking apparatus of the system would detect the kind of individual that would usurp the power of the people. Stalin is regarded as a clever, deceitful man with a magic personality that charmed people for whatever he wanted. By exposing him the present government has assured the people of no more leaders as Stalin.

One of the most striking observations of the Westerner is the single-mindedness of the people. All seem to be united under one cause. Answers to questions are nearly always the same. There is no basic disagreement with the operations of the government, no different ideas about the outside world, or about the internal facets of the Soviet world.

How can a government that operates in the austere, economic and political economy of Russia solicit and maintain the support of the people? There is no evidence of force—only a subtle, sometimes not so subtle persuasion of a complex nature.

The answer lies somewhere, deep in the Russian soul—somewhere before the years of 1905, 1910, 1917, 1922 and to the present day. From their creation as a natural people, their history has been filled with suffering, exploitation, wars, and fear. The situation today is a long awaited time of freedom. This is a new day. There is work to be done, a nation to build, a goal to reach. Life has hope and promise; individuals see themselves as principle elements in building a new utopia—the Communist society. During these days now they agree to follow the leadership of the wiser members of the party.

There is a chance of enthusiasm among the young; there is a sense of purpose in life. The new confidence in the government and the regard for Khrushchev reflects the new ability to live without fear, poverty, or oppression.

Socialism has freed the Soviets of many of the worries of life—how to find work, afford adequate medical care, educate children, find old-age security, find a place to live. The freedoms of the western world—the so-called "freedoms to" are not valued as highly by the peoples of the East.

Socialism is a fact in the Soviet state. Communism is the goal. The State labors, the people labor to effect this end. However, the situation is very different than Marx or Lenin first supposed and radical departures from theory will have to be made if the Soviet society is to grow and prosper.

hospitality. Hope I will have a chance to see you and my most favorable school again in the near future.

May God bless you!

To the Co-Editors:

The Constitution of the Student Government of N. C. State provides for the representation in the Legislature for the Graduate School.

This year the Graduate School will have seven senators, to be elected in this fall's election. Every year the majority of these positions are left vacant because no graduate student has had enough interest in the student affairs of our university to even run for these offices.

With 1,156 graduate students now enrolled at our school, it seems pathetic that even seven of these students cannot find the time nor the inclination to serve in a capacity which allows them a direct voice in the governing of their university. I would ask the students of the graduate school to consider this situation and to find the time and interest to serve their fellow students.

The percentage of students who vote in our campus elections has always been low, but it is even lower with graduate students. This fall there will be ten polling places open; and it requires only a short pause in your schedule to vote.

Graduate students, is it unfair to expect you, at least, to vote? I think not.

Dormitory Football Ends Fourth Week

By Don Green

The second half of the dormitory intramural football season started this week with only two teams still unbeaten.

Alexander kept its record unblemished by downing Berry 18-0. Creech ran for two scores of 41 yards and 4 yards while Bowling threw to Culbertson for the other TD. The win assures Alexander tie of at least a first place tie in Section #2.

Bragaw North #1, 3-1, holds the second position in this section. In Wednesday's contest, Bragaw posted a 39-0 romp over Syme. Leonard passed for four scores as Doughton caught three and Shotwell caught the fourth. Doughton ran for the other TD.

Watauga squeaked by Welch-Gold-Fourth, 20-19, to keep a clean slate in Section #3. Lineberger scored on an interception and on a TD pass while Anderson threw to Campbell for the third Watauga score. W-G-F scored its TD's on an interception by Moss, a pass from Vinson to Moss, and a Vinson pass to Montgomery.

Bragaw South #2 took over second place in Section #3 with a 19-18 victory over Owen #1. Bragaw scored on three passes from Fulf. Catching the passes were Enscoe, Stutts, and Butler. Davis ran for two of Owen's TD's and threw to Ellen for the other score.

In Section #1, Tucker #1 downed Bragaw North #2, 21-2, to move into a tie with Bragaw for first place. Price threw to Henderson for two Tucker scores and ran for the third TD.

In the other Section #1 contest, Turlington took its first win of the season by defeating Bagwell 27-6. Kirk scored twice in the game on passes from Helms and Cranford. The third score was a pass from Helms to Cranford. Bagwell tallied on a pass from Williams to Fry.

Owen #2 took over first place in Section #4 with a 12-6 win over Tucker #2. Holthouser threw to Hartgrove for one score and ran for another. Becton defeated Bragaw South #1, 9-6, to take possession of second place in the section. Krider tossed to Fitzsimmons for Becton's score.

Dormitory Volleyball

By Don Green

After two weeks of dormitory intramural volleyball, five teams remain undefeated. Eight games were played in Monday night's action.

Two of the five undefeated teams are in Section #4. Alexander and Turlington held on to their perfect records by taking 2-1 victories over Tucker #1 and Bragaw South #2.

Welch-Gold-Fourth is the only unbeaten team in Section #2. In this week's action, W-G-F downed Tucker #2 and Bragaw South #1 moved into a tie for second place with Owen #2 by beating the Owen team 2-1.

All four teams in Section #3 have 1-1 records. Bagwell beat Owen #1, 2-1, and Watauga beat Bragaw North #2, 2-0.

In Section #1, Becton and Bragaw North #1 remained undefeated by taking wins over Syme and Becton. Becton down-

Coach Edwards Says:

Our game with South Carolina last Saturday night resulted in our best defensive effort of the season. We were able to do well against their fine quarterback, Dan Reeves, who was returning to action after an injury and who may not have been at his peak.

Although we scored three times, one of the touchdowns was directly the result of a good defensive effort by Don Montgomery who blocked and then scored with a South Carolina punt. We failed to make good on several fine scoring opportunities, and are working hard this week to correct the little mistakes that stopped us.

In our next game we meet a rugged opponent at Chapel Hill. In conference statistics, they rank ahead of us in five of six divisions. Any improvement in our team over the past year we attribute chiefly to the added experience of our players, but here again, UNC has the best of us in returning 29 lettermen, the highest number in the conference. From a personnel standpoint, in addition to other good football players, we face an All-American candidate in Lacey, the fastest football player in the conference in Ronnie Jackson, two of the biggest backs we will meet in Willard and Kesler, and two fine quarterbacks, Junior Edge and Gary Black, who run as well as they pass. We know what we are up against, and are doing everything we can this week to be ready for the game.

Intercollegiate Bowling

By Ron Lipsius

Two State Wolfpack intercollegiate bowling teams, sponsored by the Erdahl-Cloyd College Union, will open the season Sunday at 4:00 P.M. with a match at Western Lanes against local competition. Although only three regulars from last year's championship teams are returning, the two five-man Wolfpack teams appear to be much stronger.

In the tryouts completed two weeks ago, the top eight finalists had an overall 182 average per man for the 15-game qualifying roll-off. This is an increase of almost ten pins per man over last year's teams, which had little trouble beating out Carolina for the league championship.

This year the league hopes to expand from its initial membership of Wake Forest, Duke, UNC and State, to include teams from ECC and ACC. Because of this expansion the final league schedule has not been completed, but the first league match is expected to be here in Raleigh the first weekend in November.

The match this Sunday will pit State #1 and #2 against a junior all-star team and the Western Lanes traveling team. Both opponents are expected to give the State teams a high scoring exhibition match.

Leading the junior all-stars will be 16 year old Sonny Hayes, a newcomer to Raleigh, who is carrying a 207 average after holding a 193 average last year in Atlanta, Ga. Supporting him will be Buddy Hoch, currently the North Carolina Sr. Boys Singles Champion, with a 191 average, and Artie Ingram with a 187 average. Rounding out the team will be Trip Plymace (172 avg.) and Dennis Cuddy (162 avg.).

The Western Lanes traveling team will be composed of the top league bowlers from Western Lanes, and will have a team average of 175 per man.

The line-up for the two State Wolfpack teams will be the following:

This year's IDC Ball is slated for October 26, the night of the Duke football game.

The ball, to be centered around the theme of "Harvest Moon," will be held in the Erdahl-Cloyd Union. Since the entire Union will be used, no one will be allowed in the building without an IDC bid that night.

The featured band to perform at the ball will be the Glenn Miller Orchestra. While they are playing on the main floor, a second band will play downstairs in the Union snack bar.

The dance is to start at 8 p.m. and will last until midnight.

Flop!

The "unguided, unsponsored" tour remained unsponsored last night.

SG officials and administrative staff were the only persons available at the proposed eight p.m. meeting.

Students remained very much in absence.

The sponsors of the tour announced that it had been called off—with a poster on the front of the Student Supply Store.
