Stilted Building Impresses Student In Ag Open House

By Ernie McCrary

"I liked the big round building up on stilts."

This was the answer by an Amherst, Virginia, high schooler to a question about what had impressed him most at Saturday's open house sponsored by the School of Agriculture.

Most of the guests, however, were North Carolinians, and they came from all over the state.

In talking to about 50 of the visitors as they ate lunch in the new cafeteria, at least one unanimous opinion about the open house was apparent—they liked it.

The most frequently mentioned specific activity which they enjoyed most was the talk acquainting them with entrance requirements and details about the curricula offered. A Montgomery County girl who attended the open house last year said she thought this year's was better because "they told more about the courses and curricula." A junior from Farmer High School in Randolph County said this year's was better because there was more supervision.

Many of the students said they plan to come to State, but a majority of them expressed more interest in engineering than agriculture.

One member of a group from Granville County criticized planning for the trip at the local level saying, "We didn't know we were coming until yesterday—we didn't even know what it would be about." He seemed to be most upset over the fact that he had not known beforehand that the pool would be open for the use of the visitors, and he had not brought a bathing suit. The students had nothing but praise, however, for the open house program itself.

Some random comments:

"I liked the Biology Department's talk about cell structure best—and the film on diseases of tobacco."

"The cafeteria is really nice. The food is delicious; that is, delicious compared to what we get at school."

"I hope I can come back next year. I've really enjoyed it."

"What have I been doing all morning? Freezin' to death!"

WKNC Back On Air

At 2 p.m. today a new WKNC signed on the air.

Early on the morning of October 19, State's radio station, WKNC, signed off and started a two-week remodeling period. Included in this remodeling was reorganization of the staff, a change in programming and a rebuilding of the studios.

As soon as the station signed off the air on the 19th, the equipment was moved out of the studios to make way for the PP carpenters who moved in on October 21. New tables with formica tops were built into two of the three studios. These tables were designed to improve programming by making the operations of the announcer simpler. The station also has the use of two studios to originate shows from, instead of the previous one.

Along with rebuilding of the station, the frequency of the transmitters was changed from 580 to 600 kilocycles, providing better signal to the students.

Under the new organization, production will be streamlined so that everything will not have to be approved by one person who is not usually at the station. Now the project director is in control of all that goes on the air. Under him are editors of the various types of broadcasting such as news, sports, and music.

The candidates for the freshman elections will be given free time on the station to campaign. The president will be given five minutes and the others will get three minutes apiece.

Starting today WKNC will be on the air from 2 p.m. until at least 5 a.m. This is to entertain the students who are staying up late, according to George Heedon, station manager. There will be a chance for more student participation and a change in types of music played will be noted, Heedon said.

Seven SG Members Opposed Resolution Which Hits Gag Law

A resolution urging repeal or amendment of the speaker ban bill passed Student Government last Thursday by a tally of 26-7.

The resolution, introduced by SG Treasurer Herb Goldston, stated that HB 1395 "if allowed to continue in force may do irreparable harm to the excellence and academic freedom of colleges and universities in North Carolina," and mandated the President of the student body to organize programs for the purpose of educating the students of N. C. State and the citizens of North Carolina as to the gravity of the bill.

After debating for fifteen minutes on the floor of the Legislature, President John Bynum moved the previous question and called for a roll call vote. In the roll call, seven dissenting votes were cast.

In other action of the evening, the Campus Welfare Committee was mandated to "investigate the possibility of a system whereby students would not have to pay for local calls, but would pay for long distance calls."

The mandate was introduced by Bill Howle (Sr. Text.) on behalf of the Rules Committee.

Scholarships

Four scholarships for this scholastic year have been announced.

The winners and their scholarships are Joe B. Duncan, recipient of the Luther W. Cartwright Jr. Memorial Scholarship; James Lee Zimmerman Jr., Burlington Industries Foundation Scholarship recipient; Eugene H. Major Jr. and William D. South, co-winners of Crown Zellerbach Foundation scholarships.

Duncan received his scholarship for the second straight year.

Wayne H. Linville, last year's winner of the Burlington Industries Foundation Scholarship, maintained his high academic record and was again awarded the scholarship for his senior year.

Poet To Read Works In Student Union On Wed. Night

Charles Edward Eaton, author of "Countermeasures" will be the first speaker on this year's Poetry Circuit.

Eaton's reading will be held at the Student Union Wednesday at 8 p.m. The reading will be open to the public without charge.

Eaton's varied career has spanned several locales and professions. A Phi Beta Kappa, he studied philosophy at Princeton and taught English in Puerto Rico, returning to this country to receive his M.A. degree at Harvard, where he studied with Robert Frost, upon whose recommendation he was awarded a fellowship in the Bread Loaf Writer's Conference.

His poetry and prose have appeared in over 40 publications both here and abroad. "The Shadow of the Swimmer," his second volume of poetry, won the Ridgely Torrence Memorial Award and his third volume, "The Greenhouse in the Garden," was a runner-up for the National Book Award in 1957. Recordings of his poems are in the permanent collections of American poetry at the Library of Congress and Yale University.

Eaton, who presently lives in Connecticut, will appear at several North Carolina campuses during the winter.

Campus Creek Turns Green On Halloween

St. Patrick's Day must have come on Halloween this year... even the branch turned green.

Evidently someone put a chemical in Rocky Branch as a halloween prank to turn it green. This branch, which runs through the back of the campus, was bright green all day Friday and the part of the branch further into town was green Saturday.

The IDC car-wash area was also green Friday.

The Irish on campus thought it was a great day for the Irish.

Four Candidates Sound Off

Voting time for freshman elections is almost here, but so far four candidates have turned in campaign statements to The Technician.

The deadline for receiving such information, as stated in last Wednesday's issue, was 7 p.m. Sunday.

Forest Edwards Jr., one of four candidates for Textile senator, lists these as the things he will try to accomplish if elected:

1. Get summer jobs for State students with North Carolina industries.

2. Get students to co-operate with the Physical Plant in improving campus grounds.

3. Support the investigation of traffic problems at the intersection of Dan Allen Road and Yarrowborough Drive and the intersection of Dan Allen and Dunn Avenue.

4. Promote the investigation of non-student parking in the lot beside the A and P Store.

5. Work in every way possible to promote school spirit through Student Government.

6. Work with Tompkins Textile Council in promoting its interests.

Skip Wooten, candidate for vice president, states, "The duties of the officers of the freshman class are what one makes them. Most of the past officers have made them prestige jobs. As a result, the freshman class is badly in need of organization. I will assume the leadership and as much of the responsibility as I can toward this goal."

Presidential candidate Jeff Page says progress and unity at State can be achieved in two ways. The first is to elect competent men to Student Government positions. The second, he says, is to communicate with those elected to let them know student's wishes.

In outlining his formula for improvement, he urges all freshman to support him in the primary. He hopes "that the Class of '67 will be long-remembered at State and that its support will enable me to serve every freshman in the best way possible."

Chris Conte, candidate for freshman class secretary, proposes a four point resolution: To keep accurate records of all class meetings and activities; to carry on class correspondence; to assist other class officers in every way; and to cooperate fully with other campus organizations.

A complete list of the names of the 53 candidates and the offices for which they are running will be in Wednesday's paper.

Poll locations for next Thursday's voting are Harrelson Hall, Textile Building, Becton, Berry, Bagwell Quadrangle, Student Supply Store, Tucker Dorm, front of Student Union, Leazar Cafeteria, Carmichael Gym, Syme Dorm, and the Reactor Building.

State To Have A Telescope

State will have a telescope.

A telescope, containing a 12½-inch reflecting mirror, will top the new physics building by spring semester, according to John Stevens, president of the Science Council. Able to reveal about fifteenth magnitude stars, it will sit on the center of one of the four concrete columns which pierce the physics building from top to bottom. This will minimize vibration interference. "The PSAM school has appropriated money for the telescope," Stevens commented. The exact cost of the project could not be estimated, however.

Sam Barham, a senior in NE, is head telescope-maker. Other interested State students are helping to construct the apparatus, Stevens said.

The use of the telescope will most likely be restricted to an astronomy class. "Eventually an astronomy club will probably be formed," Stevens speculated. Use of the telescope would naturally be extended to the members of this club, he said.

Justice At Its Best?

The Honor Study Commission is now investigating the honor system.

In its recommendations, it is expected to "alter the system or propose a new one," according to a member of the commission.

This renovation of the Honor and Campus Codes has been needed for some time. The biggest challenge facing the commission will be to find a way to combat the student and professorial apathy toward honor on this campus. They are wished the best of luck in this effort.

It is hoped, however, that the commission, in doing a thorough job, will consider other shortcomings in the codes and apply remedies for them.

One shortcoming of the system appears to be the anonymity of the person on trial. This paper has asked that names of persons convicted of violations be published. This would bring the punishment 'home' to the student whenever he sees someone he knows listed as an offender.

Coupled with this action should be a change in the policy of a first offense being placed on the student's permanent record.

The issuing of a reprimand, rather than a mark on the student's record, for a first offense under the honor code guarantees that many students and professors now afraid of the results of reporting an offender would do so with the knowledge that the student would now have a second chance.

This inclusion of a reprimand would also eliminate some of the unfairness connected with the present policy of permanently expelling a student from school on his second honor code offense. Although this is an effective policy in some ways, there is a cruel side of it.

An exact definition of what constitutes cheating has never been given in the case of using other student's materials. In many cases, "poop" is considered acceptable, while in other cases, copying of lab reports constitutes grounds for conviction.

Under the Campus Code, students are often placed in double jeopardy. If the student is tried downtown, then charged under the campus code, he is being judged twice for the same crime. One answer to this problem might be an investigation of Raleigh's court system. It could be possible to set up a lawful trial with a judge from Raleigh's city court and a jury of students. This idea has been tried in the teen-age courts and has proved rather effective.

Another body the commission should consider is the Judicial Candidate Approval Board. From actions last year, it appears to be possible that candidates for the judicial boards can be disqualified for the flimsiest of reasons. The JCAB is a negative approach to the problem of student apathy. Rather than allowing the student body to choose candidates, it assumes that the students are incapable of judging their candidates. It also gives the possibility of a "claque" controlling the approval of candidates.

The Honor Study Commission has a hard job ahead. It is hoped the commission will accept these suggestions with the same careful scrutiny which we intend to give its decisions.

Letters To The Editors:

Students Lauded; Tickets Hit

To the Editors:

On behalf of the Erdahl-Cloyd Union and the Erdahl-Cloyd Union Lectures Committee, I would like to commend the student body on their behavior at the Madame Nhu lecture the evening of October 17.

By good behavior, I specifically allude to a sense of responsibility among the student body and to those people attending the lecture; I personally refuse to believe that the lack of physical protest from our students stems from what has been termed a "politically apathetic" campus. As everyone in this area was well aware, the N. C. State campus was host to the only appearance of Madame Nhu in the entire South; the "responsibility" we were thus allotted, that of representing the mind of the South before the eyes of the world, was, needless to say, astounding.

We carried through with the tradition of "Southern hospitality" in the face of precedents set on college campuses before her appearance here. May I add that Madame Nhu has encountered no major egg- or rock-throwing incidents along the rest of her tour; I would like to conclude that we have set a new precedent.

No better reward for our efforts has been received than the verbal "thank you" expressed by Madame Nhu just before her departure; she complimented: "I've heard a lot about the American South, and I'm glad I had the chance to see it for myself. My only previous impression of the South came from reading the book, Gone With the Wind."

Steve Johnston
Lectures Comm. Chmn.

To the Editors:

Why is it that the students, for whom the ball games are supposedly intended cannot even obtain tickets? An article in the Durham Morning Herald said there were only 7,000 tickets available for students for the Duke game. The enrollment at State is over 8,000 so there are not even enough tickets for the entire student body, much less their dates.

Even if a student is able to obtain a ticket, where does he sit? Most likely he sits in the end zone where he can clearly judge the point after touchdown and field goal. If a student is lucky he may sit on the ten yard line. After all, the college already has our money, so why should we have good seats?

I went to the box office at eleven o'clock Monday morning. Where are my seats? They are seven rows up in the end zone. If the good seats are a first-come-first-served basis, student tickets should have been reserved since mid-September.

This is not fair to the students.

The Saga of Bobby Hawkeye or
How I Became a Wolfman

SCENE ONE: The day Bobby Hawkeye leaves for college.

Who will ever forget the day . . . the whole town turned out . . . (well, maybe not the whole town) . . . to see Bobby Hawkeye off to North Carolina State of the University of North Carolina at Raleigh (I said it and I'm glad).

Mama Hawkeye wept softly as she thought of losing her one and only son; Papa Hawkeye laughed hysterically as he thought of gaining his one and only automobile. Clara Comefetchingly held her Bobby's hand tightly and promised to be forever fruitful and write each and every day, no matter what.

SCENE TWO: Some weeks later.

"Hi, Mom. Hi, Dad. How ya doing? . . . Well, I, didn't come home last weekend because last week was rush week . . . Rush week? Well, that's when all the fraternities rush the new students to get them to pledge . . . NO, NO, man . . . Sorry, Dad . . . Father. What you do is go around to all the houses and talk to the brothers . . . No, Dad, you don't get adopted—well, not exactly. You know—brotherhood in the old Greek tradition . . . No, Mama, I'm not renouncing my U. S. citizenship. Well, anyway, I went around to a bunch of the houses; then went to some of the parties. Man, talk about a blast, wild, really flying . . .

"No, Mom, I didn't change my major to aeronautics. What I mean is that I had a good time at the parties . . . No, I didn't forget my manners. I was very polite. But, anyway, I've decided to pledge Sigma Omega Mu . . . Yes, I know there's an academic side to college life and I'll concentrate very hard on my studies. Why, right here in this rush book it says that fraternity men have better grades than non-fraternity. See, Dad . . . Yes, I saw these girls . . . well, I know they aren't exactly dressed for a formal tea, but you've got to realize that college life is, well, sort of different. Besides, living at a fraternity house would be more like living at home. The only thing is, I sort of need some money, and, well, I could use the car; it would make it a lot easier to get around."

SCENE THREE: Bobby Hawkeye talks to Clara Comefetchingly.

"Well you see, babe . . . Now Clara, don't cry. Anyway, I've decided to join a fraternity . . . Now, Clara, don't cry. That doesn't mean I don't love you. It's just that I don't think I'll be able to write every day anymore . . . Now, Clara, don't cry. I'm not going to turn into a wolf or leave forever or something like that. Listen, what say we swing out tonight and . . . Now, Clara, don't cry."

SCENE FOUR: The day after Bobby Hawkeye leaves to go back to State.

Mama Hawkeye wept softly as she thought of losing her one and only son to a housemother. Papa Hawkeye cried openly as he thought of losing his recently acquired automobile. Clara Comefetchingly wept and writes tear-stained letters to Dear Abby.

Wolfpack Uses Elements To Edge Cavaliers, 15-9

By Martin White

The wind, an alert defense, and a determined offense provided the Wolfpack with the essentials of victory in Norfolk Saturday as the Pack edged the Virginia Cavaliers, 15-9.

Virginia scored first in the contest and held the Pack to only two points in the first half. Virginia's score came in the first period after the Pack was forced to kick from its 20 yard line. The punt went only 18 yards and the Cavaliers took over on the 38. Ten plays later, the Pack trailed, 7-0. State scored a safety in the second period when Rob Faircloth blocked a Virginia kick at the 30 yard line. The ball rolled into the end zone where it was covered by the Virginia kicker for two points.

Before half-time, the Pack drove deep into Virginia territory three times without scoring. The drives were stopped inside the 15 yard line, twice on downs and once with an intercepted pass.

The Wolfpack dominated play for most of the second half, but could not score to climax any drive. The first State touchdown came late in the third period after Don Montgomery blocked a punt at the 27 yard line. Montgomery scored on the play, but it did not count as Glenn Sasser was caught clipping. With the ball on the 21 yard line, Pete Falzarano made eight yards and then Mike Clark drove the final 13 yards in two plays to put the Pack ahead for the first time 8-7. Gus Andrews' kick made it 9-7.

In the final period, it was again a Virginia punting situation that provided State with a scoring opportunity. This time a bad pass from center did not allow time for the punt and the kicker was nailed on the 17 yard line. State took over and scored eight plays later on a one yard drive by Falzarano.

With ten minutes remaining in the game, Virginia scored a safety due to a bad pass from the State center that was fumbled by the kicker. This completed the scoring, but the Pack had to fight to hold its 15-9 lead. The cause was aided by the following State kick-off which the wind stopped in flight. The ball fell to the ground after covering enough yardage for an on-sides kick. State recovered and held off the Cavaliers for the remainder of the game.

Speech Class Hits Gag Law

By Dick Paschall

"With the intelligence of most students, I don't believe a subversive could sway students or faculty members. If he could, then our cause for freedom is lost."

These are the words of a member of Dr. Jack Porter's ENG 231 class which meets at 1 p.m., Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Recently, Dr. Porter's speech class began discussions on topics of interest to State students. The first group discussion topic was "Should the 'Gag Law' be repealed?"

Naturally, in a panel-type discussion such as this one, views are presented on every aspect of the subject. There were pros and cons to this issue, too.

Drill Team Decal

The Marching Cadets, the drill team of the Air Force ROTC at State, now has a decal. The decal pictured above is now on sale at the Student Supply Store for fifteen cents. The Marching Cadets is a recognized military fraternity for Air Force cadets.

"The present trend is toward making friends with those in communist countries and only through greater understanding can we make friends," reported one panelist. "Open lines of communication are the best means we have for achieving a better understanding."

Another student adopted an opposite view: "There is more confusion than at any time in one's life while he is in college. His views can more easily be changed. Many college students are not mature enough to listen to a communist speech without being swayed by the speech."

Those in favor of the law generally reasoned that the law will tend to decrease the popularity of leftist organizations and discredit these groups. The unstable students who are looking for new "kicks" will not be as easily influenced by socialistic and communistic ideas if they are not given the opportunity to hear open speeches by persons advocating such ideas.

Opponents of the law generally are dismayed that the integrity of both students and teachers of the state-supported institutions should be censored and that freedom of expression should be denied on the very campuses which encourage this vital point of the United States Constitution.

The majority of the students were in favor of the law being repealed as soon as possible.

-Campus Crier-

The Forestry Club will meet in room 159 Kilgore Hall at 7 p.m. Tuesday. Dr. J. V. Hofmann will be the guest speaker.

There will be a meeting of the State Amateur Radio Club Tuesday night at 7:30 in Riddick 111. All interested persons are invited to attend.

The PSAM is working towards a monthly publication. Any Students interested in any aspect of the publication should contact Comer Duncan at VA 8-4629.

There will be a meeting of the American Institute of Aeronavics and Astronautics Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Broughton 111. Mr. C. L. Davis of Douglas Aircraft Company will speak. Visitors are welcome.

Strings Forming

Budding young Heifetzes are being encouraged by the Student Union.

For the second consecutive year, students will meet weekly under the direction of the Richard Southwick to play and practice string music. The group, sponsored by the Union, hopes to give a public performance eventually.

Interested students are invited to attend a meeting Monday at 7 p.m. in Pullen Hall.

BOARD PLAN

For the budget minded student, there is still time to take advantage of the Board Plan for the rest of the semester and save 15-28% of the $2.20 per day meal rate. You can buy the balance of the plan in two payments of $40 and $40 for the 7-Day or $35 and $34 for the 5-Day Plan. First of two payments must be made by 5:00 p.m. Friday, November 8, at Leazar Hall Cafeteria Office. First meal on the 7-Day Plan will be breakfast Saturday, November 9, 1963. First meal on the 5-Day Plan will be Monday, November 11, 1963.

For the student on a weekly budget, we suggest the $10.00 value coupon book selling for $9.00. These may be purchased from cashiers at Leazar or New Cafeterias.
