Pre-registration Added To Regular Summer Registry

By Grant Blair

Doing away with the old sometimes calls for duplication. That's what students registering for Summer Sessions will encounter next month.

There will be a pre-registration for summer sessions May 4th extending through May 15. According to Jack Suberman, director of Summer Sessions, this pre-registering will in no way alter the regular registration to take place June 9, but will give students who have their schedules set up by that time a priority on the scheduling of courses.

Suberman emphasized that this in no way officially keeps the student from having to register June 9 nor does it prevent a student from registering at a later time.

He said, however, that students "ought to get around during this period." Explained Suberman, "The Summer Session is and has been growing. It is now possible for a properly qualified student to get from 12 to 18 hours off during the summer by attending both sessions."

Suberman also added that registration would take on a new look this year, with the consolidation of roster pickups and registration taking place at Frank Thompson Gymnasium. "We hope to eliminate some of the lines at Pullen we have previously experienced," he commented.

He also added that the out-of-state registration fee will be up this year from $11 to $17. He stated that the in-state fee will stay the same at $7.50.

Suberman estimated that approximately 5,500 students will attend this year's summer school. He pointed out that the estimate could be more properly broken down to about 3,300 the first session and 2,200 the second session.

Engineer's Fair Opens At Ceremony Friday

By Charles Wood

The 1964 North Carolina State Engineer's Fair will be officially opened at 2 p.m. Friday.

Stokes White, chairman of the Engineers Council, announced that opening ceremonies will include introduction of the Departmental chairmen. The State Pep band will play the fight song and visitors will be entertained with a rocket display by a number of engineering students.

"At noon Jim Sanford, the chairman of the Fair Committee and I will extend an invitation to all high school and college students to visit the exhibit. We are expecting a large turnout this year," said White.

On Saturday the fair will open at 9 a.m. and run until 5 p.m. Each department will have various displays of some of the facets of study in its field. Displays will be judged by four judges—two technical and two non-technical. Stokes added in a note of interest that one of the non-technical judges is a student at Meredith College. The winning displays will be announced in The Technician Monday night.

Moore Named Manager For Sen. Jordan

Curtiss Moore, a junior in political science, has been named as statewide college campaign manager for Senator John R. Jordan a candidate for lieutenant governor.

In making the announcement to The Technician, Howard Twigg, Jordan's campaign manager, said that Jordan was "very happy to have Curtiss join his campaign group, and exemplify the senator's concern with education all over North Carolina." Twigg mentioned that further efforts will be made to organize student organizations at other colleges in the state.

Moore is a former news editor for The Technician and a member of Farmhouse Fraternity. He is presently a member of Thirty and Three and is one of the newly elected NSA delegates.

Alumni Weekend - Poll Action

By Ernie McCrary

The North Carolina State Alumni Association probably will not take any action for at least three weeks on the results of a poll of State faculty members regarding feeling about the name "North Carolina State University."

Association President Edmund Aycock told The Technician he could not comment on the poll, conducted by the Wake County Alumni Club, until the Board of Directors of the Association meets and discusses the information. The next meeting, he said, will be May 1 and 2.

Aycock said the poll is still incomplete. "Quite a few cards have come in since the first report was given to us," he added. The Wake County Club has turned all its information over to the Association, which will decide what action, if any, to take.

The response to the questionnaire was good, Aycock said—"Much better than expected."

The weekend of May 1-2 has been declared alumni weekend at State and around 1,000 old grads are expected here.

According to H. W. "Pop" Taylor, director of Alumni Affairs, this year's reunion will be of all classes whose last numerals are four and nine, with the class of '14 celebrating its Golden Anniversary reunion and the class of '39 celebrating its Silver Anniversary reunion.

Activities begin Friday afternoon with the initial registration and a reception that night at the Chancellor's home. A banquet at midday Saturday will end the formal events for the returning State men. It is at this luncheon that the 1964 Alumni Athletic Trophy will be awarded to one of this year's athletes.

Product Design Students Win Alcoa Contest

The winning design in the Alcoa Aluminum Design competition has been selected.

The third year class in product design received the award for the design and construction of a camping trailer for a small car.

The trailer is seven feet, six inches long, 56 inches wide, and 29 inches tall. Ground clearance is 6 inches, and the track is 50 and one-half inches. A tent is permanently attached to the trailer, and is supported by air tubes fed by an air tank contained in the front section.

The top section of the trailer unfolds to form a bed six and one-half feet by four and one-half inches, which is larger than a standard double bed. Further sleeping area is provided on the ground behind the trailer body.

The body is constructed of aluminum sheets with paper (See TRAILER WINS, page 4)

CUSC Plans To Be Made At UNCG Meet

The Consolidated University Student Council will hold a CU Day on Saturday to discuss plans for the upcoming year, according to Butch Fields, chairman of the State delegation to the CUSC.

From 2 to 4 p.m. the Harlequins of Duke University will present a concert at Elliot Hall on the UNCG campus. The plans are to have the concert outdoors if the weather is permitting.

Following the concert will be a social hour and meetings of the CUSC delegates in the Religious Activities Room.

At the end of the meetings the Ambassadors Combo will entertain the delegates from the different schools in a party from 8 p.m. till midnight.

NSA Benefits Named By Lowder

Schools which are members of the National Student Association receive benefits from a program whose basic investment is three times the dues of the member schools, according to Terry Lowder, NSA co-ordinator.

In observation of NSA Week here, Lowder has pointed out a number of projects in which only NSA members have access to. They include the Student Government Information Service, the Book Cooperative, the Student Discount Service, free receipt of the regular USNSA News and the monthly Student Government Bulletin, and assistance from a number of advisory clinics.

In addition, students at NSA affiliated schools may apply for scholarships to the International Student Relations Seminar and various regional seminars, Lowder said.

Most of NSA's projects are directed toward improving student government, Lowder reports. NSA feels that most student governments owe their basic weaknesses to their lack of philosophy of purpose, and action and the association attempts to help member student governments to find meaning for their endeavors, Lowder explained.

According to the NSA official, only the responsible member school which actively participates in the association by using its publications, attending its conferences, and working with its officers can expect to receive maximum benefits from membership.

YAF Versus NSA

YAF Gives "Other Side" Of NSA

YAF is manning an opposition NSA booth on the ground floor lobby of the Union.

The booth is designed to give "the other side of the NSA picture," declared Willard Preussel, YAF member. The Student Government NSA Committee is presenting information for NSA this week in a Union booth; so YAF is showing students an opposing view, he said.

The YAF booth is open from 2 to 5 p.m. each day through Friday.

Students Dismissed

Three students were tried on theft charges last week by the Honor Code Board.

All three were found guilty of stealing bicycles between Owen and Tucker. Two of the students were dismissed from school due to prior convictions and the third was placed on a three-semester probation.

At the same meeting, Mike Scofield, a junior in political science, was elected chairman for next year and Biff Mullins, a junior in history, was elected clerk.

Trailer Wins

honeycomb material bonded between the sheets. The total weight is about 250 lbs. No suspension is used due to the light weight, and the feeling among the designers that a sprung trailer would tend to accentuate the "rear wheel steering effect" characteristic of most rear engine cars.

The eight students who participated in the winning project are Jerry Eckstein, Bill Fishburne, Ted Hoffmann, Alex Holden, Gene Messick, Mike Neilson, Lou Rainey and Al Wordsworth.

According to Professor Papanek, who assigned the project, the trailer will be flown to Chicago for display in the Alcoa Building and for publicity pictures. Either class representatives, or the whole team, will accompany it.

The Alcoa Design Contest winning trailer is shown in the erected position. The tubes hold two pounds of pressure supplied by an air tank stored in the front of the trailer. The total erection time is two minutes.

A ROBE BY ANY OTHER NAME

With the Commencement Day just a couple of short months away, the question on everyone's lips is: "How did the different disciplines come to be marked by academic robes with hoods of different colors?" Everybody is asking it; I mean everybody! I mean I haven't been able to walk ten feet on any campus without somebody grabs my elbow and says, "How did the different disciplines come to be marked by academic robes with hoods of different colors, hey?"

This, I must say, is not the usual question asked by collegians who grab my elbow. Ordinarily they say, "Hey, Shorty, got a Marlboro?" And this is fitting. After all, are they not collegians and therefore loaded with brains? And does not intelligence demand the tastiest in tobacco flavor? And does not Marlboro deliver a flavor that is uniquely delicious? And am I not short?

But I digress. Back to the colored hoods of academic robes. A doctor of philosophy wears blue, a doctor of medicine wears green, a master of arts wears white, a doctor of humanities wears crimson, a master of library science wears lemon yellow. Why? Why, for example, should a master of library science wear lemon yellow?

Well sir, to answer this vexing question, we must go back to March 14, 1844. On that date the first public library in the United States was established by Ulrich Sigafos. All of Mr. Sigafos's neighbors were of course wildly grateful—all, that is, except Wrex Todhunter.

Mr. Todhunter had hated Mr. Sigafos since 1822 when both men had wooed the beautiful Melanie Zitt and Melanie had chosen Mr. Sigafos because she was mad for dancing and Mr. Sigafos knew all the latest steps—like the Missouri Compromise Samba, the Shays' Rebellion Schottische, and the James K. Polk Polka—while Mr. Todhunter, alas, could not dance at all, owing to a wound he had received at the Battle of New Orleans. (He was struck by a falling praline.)

Consumed with jealousy at the success of Mr. Sigafos's library, Mr. Todhunter resolved to open a competing library. This he did, but he lured not one single patron away from Mr. Sigafos. "What has Mr. Sigafos got that I have not?" Mr. Todhunter kept asking himself, and finally the answer came to him: books.

So Mr. Todhunter stocked his library with lots of lovely books, and soon he was doing more business than his hated rival. But Mr. Sigafos struck back. To regain his clientele, he began serving tea at his library every afternoon. Thereupon Mr. Todhunter, not to be outdone, began serving tea with sugar. Thereupon Mr. Sigafos began serving tea with sugar and cream. Thereupon Mr. Todhunter began serving tea with sugar and cream and lemon.

This, of course, clinched the victory for Mr. Todhunter because he had the only lemon tree in town—in fact, in the entire state of Maine—and since that day lemon yellow has, of course, been the color on the robes of masters of library science.

(Incidentally, the defeated Mr. Sigafos packed up his library and moved to California where, alas, he failed once more. There were, to be sure, plenty of lemons to serve with his tea, but, alas, there was no cream because the cow was not introduced to California until 1937 by John Wayne.)

JOHN CALVIN HAS A DISCERNING EYE

At 26, he is an account executive with Leo Burnett Advertising in Chicago. John usually puts in a 10-hour day in a 3-button suit. But comes the weekend it's out for a sail on Lake Michigan followed by a relaxed evening at the club. If the occasion doesn't rate strictly formal wear, then Cricketeer sportcoat and slacks are a must. All John's clothes have the same, traditionally natural lines. The same flawless tailoring. The same neat pleatless trousers. And the same name on the label: Cricketeer. This one, a Club Cloth sportcoat, $39.50. Solid coordinating slacks, $14.95 up.
