IFC To Investigate Damage To Tractor

Some State fraternity men damaged a heavy elevator grader on Fraternity Row this past Friday night.

According to R. W. Moore, head of the company improving the grounds around the new Fraternity Row, the machine, which is valued at $15,000, was rolled into a ditch and possibly hit a tree. Moore said that the machine was driven for about 10 minutes Saturday morning and "locked up."

Moore reported that it may cost as much as $1,800 to $2,000 to rebuild the motor.

Police were called to the Row several times during the night. Some bystanders thought that the presence of the police infuriated the 100 or more students in the area.

Moore said the college officials were cooperative and helping the students to find the men responsible. The equipment has been moved away from the grading site to a better-lighted area.

Tom Covington, assistant director of Student Activities, said he is going to turn the entire matter over to the Interfraternity Council Investigations Board.

Bo Duncan, chairman of the board, has had meetings all week long and is "striving to get to the bottom of the issue." Duncan is slated to give the findings of his board to the Division of Student Affairs tonight.

"The students have been clamoring for the right to govern themselves," said Covington. "I have turned the entire issue over to them. This is an excellent chance to prove themselves."

Stewart Explains Policy Concerning Housemothers

Dean J. J. Stewart, dean of Student Affairs, last night expressed thanks to Joe Moore, president of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity on his letter concerning housemothers. (See letter, page two.)

"I am grateful that Joe and I could come to an understanding over this issue," Stewart said. He made the point that when Fraternity Row was in its planning stages he had to present the project to various boards, such as the Board of Trustees, Board of Higher Education.

At the meetings of such boards Stewart noted that housemothers would definitely have an apartment in the houses and would be present at all times when the house was in operation.

"The fact that housemothers might not be residing during the summer was never discussed," he said.

Students Circulate Petition For Lowenstein

State students are standing up in defense of a State professor whose dismissal has been requested by persons outside the University.

The protest takes the form of a petition being circulated at present among State fraternities, according to Curtis Moore. It refers to Professor Allard K. Lowenstein of the department of social studies who has been active for the past year in the civil rights dispute, said Moore.

Originated by Biff Mullins and drafted by Moore and Fred Millhauser, the petition states that Lowenstein has been an asset to the University, has been responsible in his duties toward the University, has acted as a citizen and an individual, and has not been negligent in his duties or activities as a members of the University faculty. The petition claims that pressure has been brought to bear by "persons outside of the University community" to have Lowenstein dismissed because of his political beliefs and his desire to enforce them.

According to Moore the paper urges the officials of the University to resist these pressures and retain Professor Lowenstein.

The petition was introduced into fraternities as a way to obtain initial support from concentrated, organized groups, said Moore. Plans at present call for circulation from door to door in the dormitories to begin some time next week, he said.

Sanford Praises Students At Joint Activities Banquet

Governor Terry Sanford praised State students for their contribution as "persons aware of human problems," and received praise in turn from NCS's Student Government in the form of an award at the first Joint Student Activities Banquet last night.

Sanford, as keynote speaker, answered a "local commentator" who claimed that the family visited by President Johnson last week was "well-off." He described the father as "a hard-working man who served his country well, and had the misfortune of a series of bad breaks, ending as a tenant farmer."

Sanford went on to praise the "over 700 students throughout

North Carolina who had volunteered for 100 positions available as North Carolina Volunteers.

Sanford was preceded by Chancellor John T. Caldwell, who stated his pride in campus leaders, and hoped they would be future leaders who "resolve issues in a fashion that befits civilized people." Calling a university campus "an amazing place having many different viewpoints which are not being smothered."

Campus leaders also received awards at the banquet attended by over 200 members of publications, the Erdahl-Cloyd Union, Student Government, the Interfraternity Council, and the Interfraternity Council.

The Student Government recognized John Carr as best parliamentarian, John Atkins as best speaker, and Doug Lientz as best rabble rouser.

The Publications Board, giving a new award, recognized The Technician as the publication showing "the most initiative and originality" for the year.

The Erdahl-Cloyd Union recognized Dave Stuart and David Goddard for outstanding service.

The Interfraternity Council recognized Farmhouse Fraternity as having the highest overall average and Kappa Alpha as having the highest pledge average. Dave Phillips, Union Social director, was recognized for "outstanding contributions by a non-fraternity member."

Art Mattox received the outstanding senior award from the Blue Key honorary fraternity.

Following the Awards, Chancellor Caldwell made his remarks, and Governor Sanford presented the keynote speech.

In his speech, Sanford also answered NCS alumni in stating that graduating students must be "a part of stopping the divisive action" of the alumni.

Sanford pointed out that Governor O. Max Gardiner stated in his will that the thing of which he was proudest was the original consolidation of the University.

Sanford reminded the students that "this institution, with its three branches, is paid for and owned by 4,600,000 citizens of North Carolina—including the farmer, who never had a chance to study agriculture, except from the south end of a plow; the salesgirl, whose only course in business administration was learning to make change at the five and 10 cent store; and the maid, whose only course in the social niceties came from behind the mop."

"I hope as you go out from this campus," Sanford continued, "you will never forget that the diploma you carry with you is not only a certificate of achievement, but a debt which you have incurred to the faculty and the administration and the trustees of this University and to your parents and to all the citizens of North Carolina."

In final action of the banquet, John Bynum presented an award to Sanford for "Outstanding service to education in North Carolina."

More Agromecks To Come

If you didn't get your Agromeck yesterday, you're just too slow.

All 3,700 copies which were delivered by the printers were distributed within three and a half hours, according to Editor Bill White.

Have no fear, however, if you got left out today. Next Tuesday 2,300 more copies will arrive and will be passed out at the Agromeck office in the basement of King Religious Center, starting at noon. The reason for the split shipment, White said, is a delay caused by mechanical trouble at the printing company.

"They will be distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis since there are fewer Agromecks than there are students," White said. Last year almost a thousand Agromecks went unclaimed, so the number ordered was cut this year. Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity will be responsible for the distribution.

Commenting on the new yearbook, White indicated special recognition is due Dan Derby and Bobby Dobbs for the layout of the opening section and Presley Gilbert for the copy. The use of color photos throughout the opening section is a new innovation, White said, and this annual contains more color than any previous issue.

Deadline Nears For Coed Housing Requests

As the June 1 deadline nears for coeds to request off-campus housing, only 20 have asked for permission to live somewhere other than the coed dorm.

Approximately 40 incoming freshmen and new transfer women students have applied for rooms in Watauga Hall, the boys' dorm which will become the first coed dorm on the State campus.

Around 50 vacancies remain in the dorm. John Kanipe, assistant director of Student Housing, said yesterday, that applications were coming in nearly every day from new students. He said his office does not plan to force any coed to live in the dorm.

"I think we will have enough people who want to live in it to fill it up," Kanipe explained. The department of Student Housing is requesting all non-resident, single, undergraduate coeds to live either in the dorm or in approved off-campus housing. Approximately 56 students who are now enrolled and are expected to continue in September fall in this category.

All freshmen and new transfer coeds who have these requirements are required to live in the dorm, Kanipe said.

Students who request off-campus housing will not be notified of approval or disapproval until after the June 1 deadline, Kanipe said. He explained that the Housing Department has not officially approved any off-campus housing yet.

"We are waiting to see how many apply before we make any decisions," Kanipe added. If decisions are to be made to determine who among the coeds requesting off-campus housing must live in the dorm, the final word will come from Kanipe, N. B. Watts, head of the Student Housing, and Mrs. Julia Miller, advisor to the women students. The decision will likely be based on grades, classification, and reasons for wanting to live off-campus, Kanipe said.

Kanipe plans to name within a week three coeds as floor counselors in the new dorm. The counselors will be upperclassmen. They will be paid around $200 or more per year by the Housing Department.

Kanipe said he has witnessed more favorable interest in the dorm in the past few days than he has altogether in the past month.

What's The Use?

What is the use?

This must be in the thoughts of the officers of the Interfraternity Council today as the IFC Investigations Board seeks to find out just who did what in connection with the motor grader incident this past weekend.

But State's IFC officers are not alone with these thoughts, for they are shared by thinking fraternity men all around the nation who fear that fraternities may indeed force themselves off American campuses.

These fears are well-grounded. It is discouraging for fraternity officers to argue their cases for fraternity self-government and responsible campus participation only to see these arguments, and there are many good ones, go up in smoke as the result of discrepancies in individual conduct such as has occurred here recently.

There are on every campus two types of students, the responsible and the irresponsible. It is quite natural for both types to be found in fraternities. To a great degree the success of a fraternity system can be measured in its ability to influence its members to become responsible members of the society. When the system fails to work, its existence becomes subject to question.

In the final analysis, the fate of the fraternity system rests in the hands of the individual members. IFC is powerless without the support of every fraternity member. IFC can scream for the right to manage fraternity affairs, but it cannot work miracles without support.

This writer is still convinced that the university administration would like to remain in the background in fraternity matters. It has demonstrated this by its willingness to allow the Investigations Committee to have a crack at solving the grader incident.

The power of the fraternity system, in the personages of the Investigations Board and IFC itself, to govern itself effectively is on trial here this week. Two or three of the men involved last Friday night have come forth and admitted their involvement, and they are to be commended on their honesty if not on their judgment. The people who were responsible for the actual damage to the machine have remained unnamed, however, despite efforts of the Investigations Board to find out who wrecked the grader.

Someone has the information IFC needs to deal effectively with this matter. The failure of that someone to deliver these facts may result in great losses to the fraternity system here, for other agencies will have to take a hand in the affair much to the detriment of the IFC.

The modern campus community demands that fraternities govern themselves, which involves governing their individual members, or be governed by an IFC or the university itself.

State's fraternities are very fortunate in that they still have a choice as to the means of their government. That choice may be made this week.

The $1,800 in repairs on a motor grader is not the going price for an effective fraternity system.

AN EXPLANATION, AT LAST
To The Editor:

We the member of Tau Kappa Epsilon would like to reveal our present standing on the house-mother issue. Our president and representatives went to see Dean Stewart on Tuesday, May 12, 1964. At this meeting Dean Stewart explained the policy clearly for the first time. Dean Stewart informed us that in order to obtain the loans for fraternity housing the college officials assured the various government agencies involved that housemothers would reside in the houses during all phases of their operations.

Had this been pointed out to us earlier, we would not have been forced into a position of direct opposition to the Student Activities Office. Also, if communications between the Student Activities Office and the I.F.C. had been better, many other problems would not have arisen.

Since Dean Stewart has given us a valid reason for having housemothers during the summer, we will follow this University policy even though it might involve a financial loss.

We certainly appreciate Dean Stewart's interest and concern in our problems.

ELECTION YEAR IS HERE
To The Editor:

This year our young citizens—more than 9 million of whom will be eligible to vote for the first time—will help elect a President of the United States. Hopefully, your newspaper will become, for some of them, a forum for discussion and debate of the campaign issues and personalities.

Angel Awards Presented

Four Angel Flight members received citations at joint Army-Air Force ROTC awards ceremonies held at the Coliseum last Tuesday.

Top award as "Outstanding Angel of the Year" went to Diane F. Barriere, who holds the rank of Angel captain.

"Drill Merit Awards" for outstanding improvement and exemplary performance in close order drill went to Janet M. Ferrell, who holds the rank of major and is Angel Flight commander, and Rosina Coburn, who is a first lieutenant.

The "Angel Pledge Award," honoring the pledge who demonstrated the most outstanding initiative and devotion went to second lieutenant Barbara Beville.

I believe that college students of this generation have a vital interest in the social problems and possibilities of their communities, their nation, and their world. They recognize that politics is a primary instrument of change, and that they, as heirs of policies made today, properly belong as active participants in the thick of an important election campaign.

On behalf of the National Young Citizens for Johnson Committee, I cordially invite your students who are interested in joining with us to contact me without delay.

NEW METHOD FOR COLLECTION OF OUTSTANDING DEBTS

The Student Council at the University of Virginia has set up a new policy for collecting outstanding debts.

The administration is abandoning the old policy of withholding the grades of students who fail to pay their debts.

For a debt to be deemed authentic, the creditor organization must have tried all available means to assure its collection including a letter to the debtor's parents or guardian informing them of the debt.

After the validity of the debt has been established, a memo of the outstanding debt shall be forwarded to the Dean of the University.

The Dean's Office shall send a letter to the offender and to his parents or guardian informing them that nonpayment of such debt has been recorded on the offender's permanent personal record and will be cleared upon payment of the debt.

STUDENTS CONVICTED FOR FALSIFYING CLASS ROLLS

Three Carolina students received probation sentences for falsifying class rolls in the Men's Honor Council trials.

Two of the defendants had left town and had asked a friend to sign them present at the class. The friend did so, not thinking that he was doing anything of any consequence.

When the teacher called the roll orally at the end of the class trying to catch the man who had been seen earlier motivating friends to sign him in, the two students he had signed in were discovered to be absent.

All three turned themselves in and pleaded guilty, saying that they had not realized the seriousness of the act at the time. Each received indefinite probation.

Photo Contest Winners Named

The final results are in from the annual photography contest sponsored by the Photo Club.

The contest, which was open to all members of the Erdahl-Cloyd Union, drew 17 entrants in the black-and-white division and even more in the color division.

Five awards were given for each place in each division. Ten dollars was awarded for best-in-show in each division, six dollars for a first place, four dollars for second, and two dollars for third. A total of $138 in prizes was given. The money was provided by the Erdahl-Cloyd Union, whose gallery committee worked on the contest with the club.

The multiple prizes in the divisions were holdovers from previous contests, according to A. C. Cooley, outgoing president of the club. The contest was operating under a new format in order "to try to get away from the traditional formats of photography contests in which there were categories with no entries," Cooley said.

The judging was done by Brian Shawcroft who also serves as advisor to the Photography Club. Emphasis was placed on "photography as a creative art". Bases for the judging were technique, composition, and originality.

Winners of first place awards in the black-and-white division were Jan Lindstrom, 2 Frank Hough, John Paul, and A. C. Cooley. The best-in-show award in the division went to A. C. Cooley for a photograph of a Future plans for the Photo Club were announced by Jan Lindstrom, incoming president. The club "... will put a big emphasis on taking more pictures," Lindstrom said. "We will schedule shooting sessions at least once a month and activities will include shooting still life, field trips, and night photography," he added. Lindstrom also stated that emphasis would be placed on the creative approach to photography.

The overall program for next year is entitled "Photovision II".

Why pay less than $10 for a canvas shoe?

Frankly, the Sperry Top-Sider canvas oxford is the most expensive you can buy. But it's worth every penny. The famous, exclusive anti-slip safety sole has made it the only shoe for men and women who know boats. (Great tennis favorite, too.) And the rest of the shoe makes it perfect for all casual wear: The non-chafe loose lining, that relaxes your foot. The double-deep heel cushion. The tailored looks. So why pay less, when you could wear fashion's famous Sperry Top-Sider canvas oxford for $9.95?

Shananigans Survey Held In Syme

By Dwight Minkler

Ed. Note:

The following story is true. The names have been changed at the request of the guilty.

I walked into the room. Tommy Ballafatso lay on his bed, a Falstaff in his hand. Bud sat backwards in his chair, sipping a Bud. The place was Syme basement last Friday afternoon.

"Hello, I'm doing a story on the shananigans that go on in Syme basement. Can you help me?" I said.

"Hell, you've come to the right place," screamed Tommy. "My best shananigan this year was cutting off the cold water for the entire dorm. Ha! The PP was so damn smart it took them 30 minutes to find out where the cold water came from."

Then Bud broke in: "We had a cat that was preserved in formaldehyde. It was well dissected with the entrails hanging out all over the place. A week ago we nice and neatly inserted the cat in our floor counselor's bed. Upon discovering the cadaver, he put a note on his door that read 'No more tom cats, please; only pussy cats.'"

Another boy, who prefers to be called C. C. Maverick, told this story: "This semester the lounge of this floor was closed down for about two weeks because we were caught playing a fast, all-night game of eight-handed bridge." Then Butterball added, "When the lounge was closed, every thing was locked—except one window. I mysteriously crawled through the window and mysteriously turned on the TV full-blast. Two days later PP turned it off."

Butterball continued: "Last semester two students, who are now ex-students, got drunk. It was about 11 p.m. and they were feeling pretty hot, and they kept getting hotter and hotter. Then they started talking about which one could run the fastest. Finally Joe bet Bill that he could beat him around the block. And Bill said he wasn't going to run, as hot as it was. So Joe told him to take off his clothes. 'I will if you will,' he said. So they did. They raced around the block. Three girls were sitting in a car up by the Y. They just kind of screamed and hid their faces."

Then Bud broke in: "Have you read the sign on the commode door?" he asked. "It says, 'Flush twice; it's a long way to the cafeteria!'" I assured him that I hadn't read it.

Then Butterball eagerly claimed the scene again: "Last Christmas we 'borrowed' a Christmas tree. We stuck the eight-foot tree in the back of a Corvette. We came screaming down past the Stadium about 11 p.m. Some campus cops were sitting there, you know. We cut off the lights and screamed up a one-way street the wrong way. When we got back to this room, we hung the tree up on the steam pipes with an old neck tie. Then we decorated the tree with about 150 beer cans we had drunk. About four days later we threw the tree out on Pate Street and burned it with firecrackers to help it along. PP had the mess cleaned up by the next morning."

C. C. Maverick sighed: "I've been here three years; and this year has been the quietest. It's been down right boring!"
