SG Pledges To Find Jobs

Student Government, stating that "it realizes the importance of a summer job for a student," has decided to conduct a second attempt at finding jobs for Students.

With its mailing list increased to about twice what it was last year, the Student Government Summer Employment Commission will contact industries and businesses across the state and in various parts of the country. Then, using the information supplied by State job-seekers, the commission will match technical and non-technical jobs with the State students wishing them. Included in the 1000 companies contacted are establishments in "all kinds of metal work, textiles, and food processing," according to commission chairman David Moore, a CE major.

Last year's effort by the commission achieved the placement of about 75-100 students, according to last year's chairman, Chip Andrews. Andrews headed the commission last year. Moore further stated approximately $500 was expended on the project for the past year. This year the commission will be combined with the State Placement Center and its director, Raymond Tew.

Interested students can pick up applications beginning the first day at the CU information desk. The deadline for their return is set for February 14.

The commission, numbering five persons, with the help of volunteers from Sigma Kappa sorority, will be processing applications for the new coming in. According to Moore, responses from state businesses are expected to begin arriving the beginning of next semester.

Commencement Comments Sought

Comments are being solicited from seniors concerning commencement activities.

The Commencement Advisory Committee, a faculty committee appointed by the Chancellor to advise him on commencement activities, has decided after inquiring among the faculty that this year's commencement will be conducted along the same pattern as last year's.

However, Ed Bailey, president of the senior class, has requested suggestions for improvements on the ceremonies from graduating seniors to be submitted to him by February 11. Particular areas of concern are: 1) Goodwill Diplomas; 2) announcement of "Graduating Awards;" 3) Academic excellence awarding out of the diplomas. Bailey stated that the class had worked very hard for this moment and deserve the best possible graduation.

Suggestions should be addressed to Ed Bailey and left at the Erhard-Cloyd Union main desk.

Food Science Building To Be Dedicated Today

The site for N. C. State's new $2.3 million food science building, located at the intersections of Dan Allen and Sullivan drives, will be dedicated by Consolidated University President William C. Frazier at 11 a.m. today.

Presiding at the ceremonies will be Chancellor John T. Caldwell. Other speakers will include Governor Terry Sanford, who has made the expansion of food processing industries a major concern of his administration, and State Senator Ralph Scott.

The new building will consolidate the food science department which is currently housed in Polk, Scott, and Kilgore Halls.

Annual Christmas ConcertTonight

The annual Christmas concert, to be presented by the N. C. State musical organizations tonight at 8 p.m., is expected to be one of the largest ever held.

According to J. Perry Watson, director of music, the concert has been growing over a period of time. Several years ago the band and glee club gave their concert in the ballroom of the Erhard-Cloyd Union. In recent years, however, the size of the audience has increased so much that the program has been presented in Reynolds Coliseum.

Several areas of the program have become traditional, according to Watson. Mayor Jim Reid has given a narration of "Twas the Night Before Christmas" in past years and will do so again this year. The Varsity always concludes its part of the program with Deck the Hall, a Welsh carol, and the concert always ends with the Glee Clubs and Symphonic Band combining efforts in "Overture of the Bell" by Roy Rhodea.

Consolidated Student Council Votes for N.C.S. University

The Consolidated Student Council passed a resolution supporting the name North Carolina State University for the Raleigh branch last week in a regularly scheduled meeting in Chapel Hill. The resolution, introduced by the chairman of the States delegation, Bob Self, called for the endorsement and support by the body for the name NCSCI.

The text of the resolution reads as follows:

WHEREAS, the name North Carolina State of the University North Carolina at Raleigh is both ambiguous and awkward,

WHEREAS, this name is only a compromiser and can not be acceptable to the Trustees of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, the Administration of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, and the Student Body of North Carolina State University of the University of North Carolina at Raleigh;

WHEREAS, the proposed name change, University of North Carolina at Raleigh, would undermine to a large extent the international reputation for excellence in the region of technical knowledge and research which has been achieved under the name North Carolina State . . . ; and

WHEREAS, no extra benefit will be given to the taxpayers, citizens, and voters of North Carolina, with the name University of North Carolina at Raleigh that they would not receive with the name North Carolina State University;

WHEREAS, the objectives of the Consolidated University of North Carolina can be realized without the name University of North Carolina at Raleigh;

WHEREAS, the name University of North Carolina at Raleigh would imply that State has been demoted to the Raleigh branch of the institution in Chapel Hill; therefore stifling school pride and a sense of identity;

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED,

(1) That we, the Consolidated Student Council, do endorse and support the name North Carolina State University for the Raleigh institution of the University of North Carolina.

(2) That a committee headed by President Lyndon Johnson in August, Deadline for the University's application is December 19.

The program is open to students from families whose annual income is around $6,000; according to Kingston John, director of Financial Aid here.

Johns stated that the program would probably apply to around 300 students, based on an unofficial estimate. Such students must also be in "good" academic standing, he said.

Wages will be at least $1 per hour, Johns said.

The institution's share of the program will be 10 per cent. This amount will be in addition to that already spent on student employment, according to Johns.

Applications for students interested in the jobs are available at the Financial Aid Office in Peale Hall.

Econ, Ag Econ, Dept Combined

The departments of agricultural economics and general economics will be merged into one department to be effective August 1, 1966. Subject to approval by the Board of Trustees, Chancellor Parson, and announced yesterday by Dr. C. E. Bishop, new head of the Department of Economics. According to Chancellor Parson, this merger will bring about a new Department of Economics, and it will give State a strong economics department in the combining of research, teaching and extension faculties.

The economics department in the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences was the larger of the two departments with the other under the School of Liberal Arts primarily a service department providing courses for engineering, physical sciences, education, forestry, textiles, and design students. The head of economics in liberal arts, Dr. Ernest Swann, will be named research professor of economics next year.
The Classic Case

There isn't much left to say about Coach Case that hasn't already been said. He has been called the Father of Big Time Basketball in the South, the greatest coach ever to be in the South, and many other well deserved superlatives.

So what is left to say?

That he built men? That he has an unbelievable record? That he left the team in good hands?

These things are obvious, and most of them have already been said at least a dozen times this week.

It is a lonesome thing to see a man whom everyone loves, step down from a position he has held for 19 years. It hurts even more that he had to do it due to his health.

State took a great loss Monday when Case retired. Not only because of his coaching ability, or the value of his name in publicity releases, but a loss of a man, as a man. He who brought so much to Raleigh, and added so little in return.

But what is the greatest loss?

It is the loss of the man who was devoted to N. C. State and to the members of his teams.

In every way, from the day Everett Case arrived at Raleigh, all the day he retired, he devoted himself entirely to the effort of making State a great University. He did it in every way he knew, through building boys into men, sending them out to uphold the name of their school.

Even in retirement, Case was placing the university first. It Wouldn't be a good thing, he explained, for something to happen to him this season while acting as head coach. Therefore, he stepped down.

Built during the period from 1946 through 1957, Case built the most successful basketball dynasty the South has ever known. He led State to victory after victory, including 10 consecutive or more victory seasons, and 10 conference championships.

In the 1949-1950 season Case established the Dixie Classic tournament, which became the most respected and feared tournament in the nation. His teams won the Classic seven times. No team from outside the big four ever won the Classic.

The Classic tournament belonged to Coach Case in many ways.

Last year the administration decided to reinstate the Classic as a four-team, two-game series. However, a two-game series is not as a tournament.

The Classic brought many visitors to the campus and to Raleigh. The merchants benefited from the tournament as much as the teams. Chas. L. F. Buck has said it was "the finest thing I ever participated in as a player."

This was Everett Case's tournament. The final tribute to Case would be to re-establish the Dixie Classic tournament in his name.

FOC Brings 'Cultural Refreshment'

By JIM ROBINSON

In bringing Richard Tucker and Robert Merrill to the State campus, the Friends of the College have filled a need. Tucker has been successful in his campaign to haul cultural refreshment to a thirsty audience.

A more than one person attending the Tucker and Wednesday left realizing he had had an opportunity to hear two of the United States' greatest voices. Both nights the Reynolds Coliseum was just about full;

Together the two were again forceful but natural performance of Tucker and Wednesday left realizing he had an opportunity to hear two of the United States' greatest voices. Both nights the Reynolds Coliseum was just about full;

Both singers displayed excellent control of tone and ex- ecution combined with strength and rhythm precision. The tone of Tucker was close with a duet from the opera, "La Fura dels Baus," while Robert Merrill demonstrated his excellent diction with a duet from "I'm Crying In Spain." Merrill, a tenor, also with the Metropolitan Opera, performed the second part of the beginning with a similar mixture of arias and excerpts.

Campus Comments

By THOM FRASER

We think that this article written by the sports editor of the University of Chattanooga Echo is one of the best we have seen in long time.

See that funny looking old man yelling nasty things at the people in the terraces? He is the conductor. He is very much like some of them to get to stand on the sidelines. Some alums have lots of spirit; they carry it around in little paper sheets. Some alums are not as bright as they look. They must have him get his name on the paper much more. I would put his name here if I was writing this article.

See that man climbing on the cheerleader's stand? He is playing the bass drum. I think that he must have him get himself up there 'cause he can't walk very well. In fact, he can't even crawl very well. He must be shy now because his friends say he feels no pain.

See that man in blue? He's a friendly policeman. He's been nice to me. I have been pulled over by him but I never have his name. I have put his club in my mouth 'cause he figures it would fit just as well as their feet, but his mother always taught him to be nice to children of any age.

It seems that N. C. State, BG and Bob Holmes aren't the only ones having parking and other problems. If we are to accept literature as published by the Daily Tar Heel as reflecting contemporary life, the University of North Carolina at Whiskey Hill is having its share of campus difficulties:

Gonna sing you a song 'bout morality,

Line up your men in the middle.
Parkin' your car now is a sin.

(Repeat after each stanza)
State and Wake and State and Wake-Mara.
Get ninety-nine years behind the bar.
In the federi' gummatin' of this country,
You can own a motel and go free.

But here at home in Chapel Hill.
I've got a gun 'round my neck.
Bill's got a list of names real long;
He'll get you if you done wrong.

If your Cher ain't listed there.
You will find your transcript bare.

If you are here on scholarship.
There isn't no way you can be.
For driving your Ford round this town.
They'll put you six feet underground.

I know somebody whose name is Kate.
She's the worst thing that has happened.
FBI has got a list of names,
And she's the worst thing you can be.

If you go to your apartment.
You won't find the rent.
Twas a fellow they said did in his wife.
The judge he said "young man, it's life."
If you go to your apartment.
You won't find the rent.
Just you watch out for the dean.

There was a man who stole some grain,
From Ag Department he sought to gain.
He sought to pay it up in corn.
But kiss your girl and you'll get bail.

The FBI is interrogating;
Thats the way we can get this whole thing.
You think subversives get off light.
If you do the Honor Council fight.
North Carolina State, victorious in its first outing under new head coach Press Maravich, takes on Southern California in a two-game series, Friday in Greensboro and Saturday here in Reynolds Coliseum.

State, in making the transition in coaches from retiring Everett Case to Maravich, is now playing under its 12th head coach in basketball.

The Wolfpack edged Maryland Tuesday at College Park, 63-62, in Maravich's first encounter, after splitting its first two games as Case bowed out of active coaching. State opened with a victory over Florida, 73-60, but lost an Atlantic Coast Conference game at Wake Forest, 86-84, under Case.

The weekend series with Southern Cal will be the first games between the schools, and it will be the opening game of the 1964-65 season for coach Forrest Twogood's Trojans. Southern Cal, rated a good bet to displace UCLA as the West Coast's top team, returns six lettermen, including four starters, from the 1963-64 team which finished strong. The Trojans, despite an eight-game losing streak in mid-season, ended with a 16-16 record overall.

"We have not settled upon any permanent lineup and are likely to play 10 men or so a game until we get what we feel will be our best combination," says Maravich, who plans no major strategy changes for the Wolfpack.

Senior center Larry Lakins, whose field goal provided the winning margin against Maryland, leads the scoring with an 18.0 mark.

Miss America steps out on campus in the high-stepping Oldsmobile 442

If you can tear your eyes off pretty Vonda Kay Van Dyke for a moment, we'd like to tell you about the car: Oldsmobile's new 4-4-2. Earns its name from a 400-cu.-in., 345-hp V-8...4-barrel carb. and twin pipes. Red-line tires, heavy-duty suspension, three transmission availabilities line up the package—no matter what F-85 V-8 coupe or convertible you pick for your 4-4-2 action! But the real clincher is price: 4-4-2 prices start lower than any other high-performance car in America designed for everyday driving!

Vonda, by the way, is not included. But that's no problem for a tiger like you!

Watch for the 4-4-2... coming to your Oldsmobile Quality Dealer's soon!
