Campus police have been ticketing customer's cars without stickers parked in the Supply Store lot.

Customers Angry

Fines Upset Store

General Manager of the Student Supply Store Mark H. Wheelless is concerned about the embarrassment being caused by tickets being issued customers parking in the Supply Store lot.

"The parking signs do read 20 min. customer parking. They park on that authority and go back out and find a ticket."

Even though the sign states customer parking, a customer will still be given a ticket if his car is not registered.

"It has caused embarrassment for us, not to mention the customer, and in some cases reared the extent that the customer returned the purchase with the ticket and told our personnel that if that's the reception he receives, we could forget him as a customer."

George R. Armstrong, assistant General Manager of the Store spoke of one particular incident.

"Also we have had visitors come on campus to see the store or visit the University and these people (the campus security men) without any thought of concern, gave them a ticket."

According to W.L. Williams, Safety and Training Officer for the University, visitors that receive tickets will not have to pay for them. The back of the ticket has printed instructions about how visitors can return their tickets.

"It is the initial reaction that hurts us. The people see these yellow tickets and they come storming back to us and want us to do something about it. We finally explain it to them," said Armstrong.

"It has been enforced more so in the last two months. It seems there has been a traffic officer on duty almost all of the time the last few weeks," he said.

According to Traffic Safety Officer Williams, the University Traffic regulations state in the traffic booklet that no faculty, staff or student with an unregistered vehicle can park on campus and anyone of those who park on that area of

Black Courses Planned

by Parks Stewart

"What the hell are soul courses worth in the real world?" asked New York Negro civil rights leader Bayard Rustin in an Associated Press interview last Sunday.

His opinion of the recent movement to add black-oriented courses to college curricula was that people should "stop capitulating to the stupid demands of Negro students" and should "see that they get the remedial training they need."

Chairman of State's Courses and Curricula Committee Dr. L.W. Seagondollar's opinion of "soul courses" is that "any suitable academically-sound course with a demand on the campus should be given serious consideration."

Although opinions differ concerning black-oriented courses, liberal arts Dean Fred Cahill said that the department has been and is working on two in politics, two in history, one in sociology, and one in literature.

According to Dean Cahill, PS 403-Black American in American Politics and PS 404-Black Political Ideology have passed from his department to be considered by the committee.

The history courses, possibly African history and

Barger Appoints New Assistants

Student Body President Jack Barger appointed Jim Hobbs and Rob Broman as his presidential assistants at the Wednesday evening meeting of the Student Senate.

Other important presidential appointments approved by the Senate were: Services Director-John Miller; Social Function Committee Chairman-Eric Moore; Student Orientation Committee Chairman-Dick McCaskill; Audit Board Chairman-Maynard Ernest; Traffic Committee Chairman-Don Johnson; Refund of Fees Committee-Rick Rice; Summer Traffic Board-Mike LaCorte; Summer Attorney General-Paul Duckwall.

Student Senate President

Eric Moore and Student Body Treasurer Rick Rice were sworn in by out-going Vice President Ronnie King. Moore administered the oath of office to the new senators as his first official duty.

The chief item on the business agenda of the meeting was the 1969-70 Student Body Budget, which was passed as amended after lengthy debate on several issues.

Against the recommendation of the Finance Committee, $400 was approved for the Rugby Club to aid in transportation to games. This is the first time SG has approved aid for an athletic organization.

Chancellor Praises Senate Successes

by Janet Chiswell

"The Student Government has been a feature of this University for a long time," commented Chancellor Caldwell in an address to the Student Senate and the senators-elect Wednesday evening.

The Chancellor complimented the Legislature on its work in the past year, noting "the successful efforts with the faculty for a new calendar arrangement," progress in the faculty evaluation and University housing, and the favorable impression of student leaders such as Wes McClure on the Visiting Trustees Committee.

Dr. Caldwell urged the senate to continue using the advisory committees and working for a better representation of the students.

"The Judicial Boards have a serious responsibility and must take their responsibility seriously," the Chancellor reminded the senators and added that there had not been a discipline case on his desk in the ten years he has been with the University.

Dr. Caldwell also commented on the "long overdue revolution" of the black people and related it to the University. "The goals of the black revolution are pretty clear to people who want to look at them honestly and pretty muddy to those that don't want to look at them honestly.

In reference to the new black studies courses which will soon be offered in the Liberal Arts Department, the Chancellor spoke of "exposing our intellects" to this accumulated knowledge which we have been ignoring for so long.

Reminding the senators that many of the problems of the black man on this campus can not be solved overnight, Caldwell added that "we can move. This is no time to be ignorant, no time to be complacent, and no time to be lazy."

Spender Criticizes Institutions

According to author Stephen Spender, universities could develop a "consciousness of society" and, in some cases, could lead society through the evolutionary changes which are now taking place.

Spender, author of "The Year of the Young Rebels," to be published in May, spoke at N.C. State University under the auspices of the Contemporary Scene Lecture Series.

"Fundamentally, the criticism of the university is that the institution tries to teach an ideology of an industrial, militaristic society which the young people reject.

He stated there are two types of revolutions, a "termitic" revolution, or a crumbling from within, and a political revolution in which "action" is the key word.

"The way the students see it, they are a termite revolution, crumbling the administration," he said.

He added that students should be allowed on committees, but with certain provisions.

"They should not be allowed to hire and fire faculty, for instance. The faculty would change every year or so, and they'd eventually all leave."

"Young people should insist on being part of the UN and its organizations on health, hunger, etc., and why shouldn't the student movement attack pollution? If masses of students had protested the California oil slick, it would have been impressive, because that was something everyone agreed on."

Batman, Design School, But No Engineers

It's that time again. Neuse time, that is. So come and join the Design-O's and have some fun.

For those of you that don't know what "Neuse time" means, it's the annual boat regatta down the Neuse River from Raleigh Beach to a point three miles down river. The object is to build a craft, not necessarily a boat, that can complete the course, fearsome rapids and all, that will not drown you in the process. That's all there is to it. Sounds simple, doesn't it?

The fun starts when you start to build your craft out of things that were never intended for this purpose, such as balloons, milk cartons, beer cans, beds, statues of Batman, and even old Volkswagens. All these have been used in the past. If you have never seen a Volkswagen or a statue of Batman floating down the Neuse River, you have not lived. Last year Ray Musslewhite, an instructor in Design, tried to fly. He had the wings and the whole bit. He didn't make it of course, but, as they say, it's the spirit of the thing that counts.

Thw whole thing started out as a design project given by Fred Eichenberger to one of his Design classes. The object was to build a craft that would complete the course and that would self-destruct at the end. The idea met with such success that it has become an annual thing. It is, in fact, the only worthwhile thing that takes place during the entire spring semester.

So far, only a very few people outside of the Design School have participated in the Neuse River Derby. Engineers, let that be a challenge to you. Surely, some of you can design something that will beat a Design-O. All you have to do is be original. That's something you won't learn in a textbook, by the way. So put them away and use your head for once.

If you don't want to design a craft, go out Saturday and watch all the idiots that will try to master the terrible Neuse. If not more so, than trying to navigate the awesome river.

Starting time is twelve noon Saturday, give or take a few hours. Be there. Either go down or sit on the shore, it doesn't matter. After all, it's better than baseball.

Professor Vincent Foote paddled his homemade Batman down the Neuse year before last.

Growing State 'Commands Elements Of Success' In Urban Society's Dilemmas

The growth of North Carolina State University since it opened as North Carolina A&M in 1889, is obvious to even the casual visitor.

Huge cranes frame the horizon as they brood over the mass of steel, glass and concrete always on the rise.

Physical growth is practically a campus institution.

Fortunately, State's growth has not stopped with its building program. As study lamps twinkle late into the night the growth phenomenon continues where it counts most: in the student body.

The institution, despite numerous curriculum

The University recognized long ago that such ends are impossible to meet with an all-male student body and an all-technical curriculum.

Consequently the military discipline of A&M has given way to a coed community in which the feminine viewpoint and physique have wrought changes in the student body which no doubt would leave Alexander Q. Holladay flabbergasted.

Coed enrollment has zoomed for several years now accounting for increased growth of the School of Liberal Arts and necessitating a residence hall expansion program.

But perhaps the greatest effect of increased coed enrollment has been that State men, who so often in the past had to seek female companionship miles away at UNC-G, Carolina, Salem or the like stay in Raleigh now more than ever before, dating on campus and finding increased pride in the broadened character of the student body.

Curriculum-wise there is also a change in attitude that doesn't show up in the statistics. With the expanded additions, remains heavily technological; consequently, its students have always been oriented toward problem-solving.

But whereas once State graduates were dedicated to finding solutions to predominantly rural problems, the University student of the Sixties is turning more and more to the dilemma of urban America.

And especially does the school concentrate on the problems of North Carolina. As the first volume of the State yearbook Agromeck so aptly stated in 1903:

"The college is so bound up with the best life of social studies program designed to arouse engineering interest in current social, political and economic problems, the University is turning over to society a man able to cope with the staggering problems of a world of computers and changing social standards.

The growing Liberal Arts curriculum oriented toward humanistic approaches to contemporary living and the increased awareness among all schools within the University that successful education is that which is applied to bettering society has come greater student involvement in all extra-curricular areas.

Whereas once the bulk of student discourse was confined to dormitory bull sessions, State students now find interest in a discussion of the draft system in a rally on the University Plaza, or debate the War in Vietnam at the Bar-Jonah, campus coffee house.

Such increased awareness of urban environment and its problems has even further effects. State students are exposed to a wider range of ideas than ever before and the consequences extend far beyond the scholastic or even intellectual realm.

For example, the school's athletes are smarter than ever before...and brain is an unbeatable combination that produced a Liberty Bowl win for the football team and a third place finish in the College World Series for the baseball squad. 1967 football captain Steve Warren was an academic all-American and swimmer Steve Rerych recently won two Olympic Gold medals.

And naturally this change took its toll on the Technician too, because there's so much to tell about State students and their growth.

Welcome home, Alumni—to a great University.

State College: A Time Of Change

The problems facing most universities arrived on the State campus this year.

To most alumni returning to campus this weekend, State College and A&M are fond memories of the "good old college days." There still are good old college days; however, today's students are concerned not only with a weekend date or who is going to win the big football game but are concerned with the fate of their fellow human beings, about the morality of a war which many students do not support, and the problems of living in a changing and complex society.

This year has seen the first demonstration on the University campus, the formation of a white activist organization, and problems of salaries for non-academic employees. Last year most of the problems that are now discussed freely were not even talked about on the State campus.

Out of the conflict on campus has come a greater maturity for not only the students but for the whole University community. Chancellor John Caldwell has continued to grow in stature and in respect, not only on campus but throughout the state. He has refused to be baited by anyone and has stuck to his principles under some of the most trying circumstances, when a lesser man would have given into outside pressure.

Alumni, understand that this is not the same campus nor the same times that you knew when you attended State College. We are living in a changing time, and the University must become involved in this change. But also with change comes the hope for better graduates and better citizens. A majority of students at North Carolina State University believe in change; however, they also believe in getting an education.

We should all be proud of a University that is able to cope with the growing pains of change without disrupting educational processes. But for N.C. State to continue to progress peacefully we need the continued, faithful support of every alumnus—whether you call A&M, State College, or State University "Alma Mater."

...And I Believed Them

by L. Russell Herman Jr.

We have been taught many things, by school, by our parents, by the church, and by society in general.

We were taught that we should stand up for what we believe in. We were repeatedly told stories that had the moral, "Don't go along with the crowd when it is doing something wrong. Stand up for what you believe in. Do what is right." These ideas seemed good to me and I believed them.

We were taught that we had a responsibility to help others. We were told the parable of the good Samaritan. We were told the story about the little boy who stuck his finger in the dike. We were taught that we had a responsibility to improve the world and make a better life for everyone. These ideas seemed good to me and I believe them.

We were taught to not take things for granted, to not take things at their face value. We were told the story about the little boy who saw through the Emperor's new clothes. We were taught to continually question and think for ourselves. We were taught to not let anyone else tell us what to think. These ideas seemed good to me and I believed them.

We were taught to not give in to taunts, derision, or ridicule when we were in the right. We were taught to say to ourselves, "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but words can never hurt me." These ideas seemed good to me and I believed them.

We were taught about our Declaration of Independence which states that "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness.

"That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.

"That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it..." These ideas seemed good to me and I believed them.

In the early grades in school we pledged allegiance to our Flag and country in a vow which included the words "with liberty and justice for all." These ideas seemed good to me and I believed them.

We were told often that although our country wasn't perfect it was the best yet. It was referred to as "the greatest experiment in self-government." We were told that our country had great potential for improvement and that it was our duty to constantly strive to point out its faults and to make it better. These ideas seemed good to me and I believed them.

We were taught to avoid violence. The church, our parents, and many others taught us to "turn the other cheek" and to not seek revenge. We were taught to do good instead of evil, to love our enemies, and to "do unto others as we would have them do unto us." These ideas seemed good to me and I believed them.

And still, even now, these ideas seem good to me and I believe them, but now it seems that those people and institutions that taught them to us no longer believe them. Maybe they still profess them, but they certainly don't practice them now.

I ask, "Why are these great ideals no longer believed and practices? I hesitate to use the word "hypocrite" but it seems to be appropriate.

An awful suspicion comes to mind. Do you suppose that they never believed these ideas? Do you suppose that they just used these ideas to keep us obedient and submissive until they had bled us for everything that they could?

No! I cannot believe that those poor souls were guilty of perpetrating these evils in a calculated, intentional manner. I believe, instead, that they were and are trapped and seduced into these wrongs.

They are trapped by their dependence on and pride in material possessions. They are seduced by their love of luxury, comfort, and financial security.

Because of these things that I believe, I seek certain sweeping drastic, and some would even say, radical, changes in society.

I seek genuine dedication to, belief in, and striving for the great ideals of justice, love, mercy, mutual respect, peace, and the common brotherhood of man. Each and every human being must become humane.

Let's face it. All too many high school and college actors are too busy acting like actors to play their part with any degree of characterization.

That this difficulty might cause As You Like It to be the only bad apple in this season's bushel for the Raleigh Little Theatre had this reviewer a bit worried. After all, with so many people on the stage, presumably with little experience, what was to keep this production from being just another learn-while-you-act high school affair?

Such pessimism. Better still, such unfounded pessimism. Yet with very few exceptions, the play came off beautifully.

Lots Of Fun

Heck, it was just plum fun. RLT couldn't have chosen a better play for the time of the year. Shakespeare's comedy spirit was well interpreted both in the acting and the set.

Generally, though, this theatre-goer is a little disappointed in Shakespearean plays in which the costuming follows modern lines. The bright costumes are undoubtedly one of the most appealing things about Elizabethan drama (in spite of all the crap about universality).

Bright clothes are coming around again, though. The mod outfits looked appropriate enough to make one reconsider that cyclic history jazz.

Thank goodness the King's English is one the wane. Because the actors didn't try to capture the heavy accent associated with the Elizabethan era, the audience managed to catch the more involved punning that is so often missed because of the audience's inability to catch every word and it's relation to the whole.

Music Background

Music, which should be the emotional backbone of Shakespearean comedy according to many critics, provided a nice backbone indeed for this production. From the quiet ballads to the rock-musical interpretations things came off in the best spirit of spring.

Ninth-grader John Hanley, as Hymen, is one heck of a soprano-singing little sprite. He'll be something to look forward to in next year's productions. Let's hope they use him.

Youthful Cast

Among the youthful members of the cast, all of whom played their parts with the charm that befits the delightful scenes in the Forest of Arden, Wrenn Goodrum held up quite well in a very demanding part as Rosalind. Jacques, the only character in the play whom Shakespeare never quite allows the viewer to understand, seemed to be well-represented by Eric Hurley's almost schizophrenic antics.

Ah, but it's spring. What am I talking all this technical trash for? Go see this thing between now and May 4 or May 7-11. Call 832-6384 or make your reservations by mail.

Bluegrass Coming To B-J

Those who have gotten a bit bored with the acid rock and folk music coming out of the Bar-Jonah this year are in for a treat tonight.

For that matter, fans of about any type of music should find a little of something they like in the "Old New Borrowed Blues Band's" performance. This variety stems from their willingness to pioneer songs and forms that are outside the popular spotlight at the moment.

After playing together for about three weeks, the band made its debut at the Mu Beta Psi Hootenanny a couple of weeks ago.

"We'd done a good deal of jamming together before that," explains Phil Johnson, "But we hadn't really sat down and done any arranging or worked on specific songs."

In addition to Phil, on vocals and twelve-string guitar, the band includes Mike McGuaran, buitar, banjo, bottleneck guitar, and vocals; Danny Perry, guitar; Bob Reed, bass; and David Burney, harmonica, recorder, kazoo, percussion, and vocals.

Material for tonight's concert will come from such diverse sources as the "Jefferson Airplane," the "Jim Queskin Jug Band," Fred Neil, Bob Dylan, and the "Lovin' Spoonful."

Drop in, between 8 p.m. and midnight. You might catch a breath of fresh air.

Student Center Work To Start

The construction of the new Student Center immediately west of Reynolds Coliseum will begin the week of May 5, 1969, and it will be necessary to close off the general area for construction purposes. The following specific areas will be affected:

1. All faculty and staff, and student parking bays between the Coliseum and Council Drive will be closed.

2. Council Drive and the associated walk (between Student Supply Store and Carmichael Gym) will be closed.

3. The six tennis courts east of Alexander Dormitory will be closed.

4. Certain parking spaces in the lower parking area at the southwest corner of Reynolds Coliseum will be eliminated.

The patience and cooperation of the faculty, students, and staff is requested during the construction of this long awaited facility. It is anticipated that it will take more than two years to complete the building.

Fun And Frolic Is Here

by Barb Grimes

Tra la, it's May. That means the season of fun and frolic is officially here. This weekend should indeed be a lively, if not unusual one.

While UNC is jiving with the Chambers Brothers, State Students can again thrill to Tarzan, the Ape Man this week's Sight and Sound movie. The 1932 flick starring Johnny Weissmuller will be shown along with "selected short subjects" at 6:45 and 9 p.m. on Friday in the Union theatre.

The Old New Borrowed Blues Band will perform in the Bar-Jonah Friday at 8 p.m. Don't let the name throw you, they play more than just blues!

The Raleigh Little Theatre will present "As You Like It" in an updated version of the old Shakespearean favorite (see Bernie's fantastic review). The play will run Friday through Sunday at 8 p.m.

On of the biggest events of the season is the annual Neuse River Derby. Design students and other daring adventurers will busily construct their crafts tonight in order to sail tomorrow. The race begins at 12 noon, give or take an hour. Come on out, it's great!

"We have discussed the situation several times with the Traffic Committee who had differing opinions. The one concurrence is to have a more descriptive sign placed there," he said.

"The Traffic Committee must make recommendations to the Chancellor and the Chancellor must then approve it. There is always room for change," said Williams.

According to assistant manager Armstrong, the changing of the sign is not really the answer since he feels the facility should serve the academic community it created by serving all the students, registered or unregistered vehicles, and serving them after they graduate.

"We feel the solution would be to keep the signs the way they are and allow anyone who wants to use the store to park there for the 20 minutes. This should not be paid parking. This is a service area," he said.

"Whether it is right or wrong is not for one person to say. Anybody who is an interested citizen can contact the Chairman of the Traffic Committee or petition the Traffic Committee based upon facts. It will then go before the committee," said Williams.

weekend Free Flick: "Our Man Flint" with James Coburn and Lee J. Cobb star in the spy adventure to be shown at 6:45 and 9 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday in the Textile Auditorium.

Those who have not seen "Conflict & Hope" should make it a point to be a Thompson Theatre Sunday at 7 or 8:30 p.m. This, the last of this year's inter-media plays, is a contemporary religious play "designed to recreate the feel of the communal," according to one of the cast.

Bunyan Webb, musician-in-residence, will perform Sunday at 8 p.m. in another of the University Concert Series. (See the article for further details.)

Still nothing of interest? Go out and see a good movie. Tolstoy's "War and Peace" is playing at the Varisty and "The Shoes of the Fisherman" starring Claudia Cardinale and Oskar Werner is now at the Village. IT beats sitting around and complaining about not being able to hear the Butterfield Blues Band over at Chapel Hill. Just wait till our All-Campus Weekend next year...

All in all, it may not be Chapel Hill, but then again they don't have the Neuse River Derby either.

Webb Gives Last Performance

Classical guitarist Bunyan Webb will present his last program as musician-in-residence at State Sunday at 8 p.m.

Webb will perform with an ensemble of other musicians and instruments in the Union ballroom.

Playing with Webb will be his wife, Susan, harpsichord; James Dellinger, assistant director of music at State, violin; Marion Scott, design student, viola; Thel Boyette, pre-medical student, cello; Donald Adcock, assistant director of music at State, flute; and special guest Dr. J.M. Tony Danby, NCSU mathematician, playing the oboe.

Webb will be leaving at the end of the spring semester after two years in the rotating chair of musician-in-residence. His tentative plans are to spend the summer with the Santa Fe Opera Company in New Mexico and to go to the New York City area to perform in the fall.

Sunday's program is:
"Concerto" by Vivaldi for guitar and strings; "Quartet" by Mozart for oboe and strings; "Sonata" by Schickhardt for flute, oboe and guitar; "Divertimento" by Haydn for flute, cello and guitar; "Sonata" by Telemann for oboe and harpsichord and "Harmonious Blacksmith Variations" by Handel, a harpsichord solo.

Alumni Return

Alumni Weekend will be celebrated by hundreds of State alumni on campus today and tomorrow.

Highlighting the alumni gathering will be golden and silver anniversary reunion banquets of the classes of 1919 and 1944.

Other activities will include a luncheon, campus tours, class banquets, a dance, a buffet breakfast, Chancellor's Forum and the annual awards luncheon.

According to Bryce Younts, director of alumni affairs, the weekend will get underway with registration, beginning this morning at 9 a.m. at the Erdahl-Cloyd Union.

An informal buffet luncheon will be held at 11:30 a.m. at the Union, followed by bus tours of the campus. Highlighting the tours will be a visit to Carter Stadium and a tour of the facility led by football coach Earle Edwards. A reception at the Chancellor's residence will follow at 4 p.m.

This evening's activities will feature class banquets beginning at 6 p.m. Those classes holding dinners in addition to the anniversary classes are the N.C. State Forever Club (previous to 1919 alumni), 1924, 1929, 1934, 1939, 1949, 1954, 1959, 1964. The evening will be climaxed with a dance and other entertainment at the Faculty Club from 9 p.m. to midnight.

A feature of Saturday's activities will be the Chancellor's Forum, beginning at 10:30 a.m. at the Union. At that time, Chancellor Caldwell and a panel of students and faculty leaders will discuss and answer questions concerning various aspects of campus life and growth of the University.

Prior to the forum a buffet breakfast will be held at the Union at 8:30 a.m. Tables will be set for classes to sit together.

The weekend will be climaxed by the annual awards luncheon in the Union at 12:15 p.m. Board Chairman L.L. Ray of Greensboro will preside. Following a brief report from Chancellor Caldwell, five special awards will be made to individuals who have made outstanding contributions to the advancement of the University and their community.

Linkmen in Tournament

When the ACC Spring Sports Jamboree opens here on May 8, the N.C. State campus will be flooded with the ACC's finest athletes in golf, track and tennis.

When the first round of the golf tournament opens on May 9, at McGregor Downs, the question on everyone's mind will be: "Can defending champion Jack Lewis of Wake Forest University snap back from his upset loss in the North and South Amateur golf tournament and successfully defend his ACC title." A lot of ACC golfers will be trying to pull another upset and upend the defending champions.

Among N.C. State's hopefuls is Richard Lee, a senior from Wake Forest. Richard is a big reason why State has improved its record from 1-7-1 a year ago to 4-5 this year. Richard is State's number one man and finished 16th in last year's tournament, only 12 strokes behind the winning Lewis. His one under par 71 on the second day was the 5th best round in last year's tournament. State's coach, Al Michaels, sees Richard as one of his most improved players and feels that he will do well in this year's

Another hopeful is co-captain David Williams, a senior from Greensboro. Williams has been one of State's most consistent winners this year and has had one round of 68 this season. David is hoping to improve on the 163 he recorded in last year's tournament.

Senior Charles Debnam, a Knightdale native, also recorded a 163 for last year's tournament, but should make a better showing this year. He has had two rounds of 69 already this year and his play has been steadily improving.

Clemson Game is Do or Die For Pack

North Carolina State, which has had trouble winning on the road, travels to South Carolina, Saturday, for a do-or-die baseball game with the Gamecocks.

Coach Sam Esposito's Wolfpack, defending Atlantic Coast Conference champions, has lost five conference games and cannot afford another game in the loss column. All five losses have been on the road.

The Wolfpack has played only three of its 11 ACC games (6-5) at home and has won all of them at Doak Field.

"We have been just a hit or a play away from having another good season. We aren't out of the race yet, but anymore losses would make it difficult for us to win or tie for the title," says Esposito.

The Wolfpack and Gamecocks were rained out of a doubleheader on April 18 in Raleigh. Last year, civil disturbances forced cancellation of a doubleheader between the two schools at Columbia.

The Pack's pitching has been effective, but the inability to get the key hit, which came last year, has been the biggest drawback to State. Three times against Maryland the Pack left the bases loaded without a run in an 11-inning 5-4 loss, and in a 2-1 loss to Duke, Tuesday, State left the bases loaded, after only one out in the last inning.

"(Chris) Cammack is the only man hitting consistently for us," adds Esposito.

Cammack, bidding for all-America honors at third base, is the ACC's leading hitter with a .475 average. He added a home run and two doubles in the Duke games and now has four doubles, three triples and two home runs in 18 games.

Mike Caldwell, 5-2 for the year after losing a four-hitter to Duke, is the likely pitcher for State in its game with the Gamecocks, Saturday.

Even though North Carolina has moved to the front of the ACC baseball race, too many games remain for a significant edge to the Tarheels. At the moment, it is still a six-horse race, with everyone except Virginia and South Carolina in contention.

The Tarheels have moved to the top on the strength of Eddie Hill's allround hitting, Skip Hull's home run blasts and the pitching of Tom Buskey and John Yancey.

The batting lead is still the property of State's Chris Cammack, now batting .481. He is followed by Maryland's Jim Norris, .400, one of four Terps to make the top twelve listing this week.

Significant pitching performances have been turned in by Maryland's Phil Cordry, who has a 4-1 record and has struck out 52 batters in 35 innings, and Leo Hart, Duke's football-baseball sophomore, who has back-to-back shut outs and a sparkling 0.67 e.r.a.

A year ago N.C. State won the conference title on the last day of the season. It appears that nothing will be settled any earlier in 1969.

Clogston Honored

Two "institutions" within an institution will be honored with a testimonial dinner at North Carolina State University here on May 8 at 7 p.m. in Reynolds Coliseum. About 1,000 persons are expected.

The "institutions" are Roy Clogston, athletics director since 1948, and Paul Derr, head track coach and head of State's physical education department. Both are retiring on July 1 after a combined service to the University of almost half a century.

Tickets for the dinner, sponsored by the department of athletics and the Raleigh Merchants Bureau, cost $5 per person and may be bought until May 1 through the Wolfpack Club, P.O. Box 5657, Raleigh, N.C.

Seeking its third title in four years, defending champion Duke University will depend heavily on two all-America performers when the Blue Devils host the fourth annual WTVD North Carolina Track and Field Championships Friday and Saturday.

Distance man Ed Stenberg, the outstanding performer in the 1968 meet, and super hurdler Jeff Howser make Duke a prime contender again in the meet, along with North Carolina, North Carolina College, and Johnson C. Smith.

Duke won last year's meet with a total of 59 points. North Carolina finished second with 52. Johnson C. Smith placed third.

A total of 19 teams are entered in the meet with more expected. Teams competing include: Davidson, East Carolina, Fayetteville State College, High Point College, Livingstone College, North Carolina A&T, North Carolina State, Shaw, St. Augustine's College, Wake Forest, Winston-Salem State, Greensboro College, Campbell College, Catawba College and Pembroke State College.

Stenberg, a senior from Columbus, Ga., will be out for his third win in both the Jim Beatty mile and the Dale Ranson two mile. As a sophomore in 1967, he established a 4:13.2 mile record and a 9:12.3 two mile mark. Stenberg has done well this spring, including a 4:12.3 clocking in the mile at the Carolina Relays Saturday.

A junior from Charlotte, Houser took the 120-yard high hurdles in last year's meet with a time of 13.9. He finished second in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles. Rated as one of the nation's best, he also was victorious in the Carolina Relays with a record-equaling 14 seconds flat.

Field event qualifying will begin at 4:30 p.m. Friday with running event trials set 15 minutes later. Finals in the seven field events start at 2 p.m. Saturday with the 10 running events set for 2:45 p.m.

Gold wrist watches will be presented to all winners and members of winning relay teams. Medals will go to second and third place finishers.

A coaches' scratch meeting will be held at 11 a.m. Friday. A special reception and dinner for participating coaches and officials is scheduled for 6:45 p.m. in the Varsity D. Room of the Indoor Stadium.
