Pack Entertains Tar Heels

by Jack Cozort

The unbeaten Wolfpack from N.C. State puts its perfect record and No. 10 national ranking on the line tonight when they play the UNC Tar Heels in Reynolds Coliseum.

The traditional rivalry has been sold out since Monday afternoon, and should be one of the top attractions of the year.

The Tar Heels sport a 9-2 record and the No. 4 ranking in the country, with losses coming at the hands of second ranked Kentucky and third ranked South Carolina.

The Pack, on the other hand, has been superb in their first ten outings this year, beating teams such as Auburn, Vanderbilt, VPI, Maryland Northwestern, and Virginia.

State brings two men into the game sporting 20+ points per game averages. Vann Williford and Paul Coder are scoring at 23.0 and 20.7 respectively while Ed Leftwich is adding 17.6 per game.

Carolina's big weapon this year has been Charlie Scott, as expected. The All-America is averaging 24 points per game to lead the Heels.

Scott has been aided by Lee Dedmon and Bill Chamberlain. The 6-10 Dedmon adds lots of scoring punch inside, and Chamberlain, just recovered from an illness, is tough from the corner.

"I don't think they will play a slow-down, deliberate type of game against us like they did South Carolina," Wolfpack Coach Norm Sloan said. "I think they'll play their normal speed. They will go back to their fast break."

"I think it will be an outstanding ballgame. I think it will be fast, exciting, one of the top games of the year."

Complete Sellout

Box office manager Richard Farrell noted that 7,500 students tickets were handed out for the game, the second time he can remember such a happening in the past 13 years.

Tickets went on sale at 8:30 Monday morning and had disappeared by 2:45 that afternoon. Students will be occupying all of the downstairs seats, including the end sections.

Farrell added that he pulled the remaining general tickets for student use on Monday morning when he realized the student demands.

"The students have just been great," Coach Sloan noted. "It has meant more to the team than we can really express. The average student does not realize what an inspiration he is to the ball club."

"The fact that the students have been so vocal and so loud during the games has helped tremendously," he continued.

State Participates In Pollution Control

State will participate in a pioneer program of study in air pollution which will be the first of its kind in the nation.

Officials from State, UNC-Chapel Hill, and Duke University signed into being Monday The Triangle Universities Consortium on Air Pollution.

According to Dr. John D. Middleton, commissioner of the National Air Pollution Control Agency, the agreement among the three schools is a milestone in bringing together intellect, imagination and vigor to apply to the solution of our problems today.

The federal agency which is sponsoring the consortium has its main office in the Research Triangle Park and is gradually moving all its facilities there.

Under the agreement, State, Carolina, and Duke will work together in training air pollution control technicians, will interchange faculty, students, and research facilities, and furnish technical advice to state and local air pollution agencies.

"The concern we organize today to overcome (air pollution) is not a question of a more wholesome life, it has become a matter of survival," stated former governor and new president of Duke University Terry Sanford.

According to Sanford the universities should be committed to finding how to conquer pollution, how to put it into a realizable program, how to get the political-industrial complex jolted into carrying out the reforms.

"The important point is that we gather to declare publicly our intention to set forth our best efforts in attacking a problem that last week caused the President of the United States to assign the very highest national priority," stated University President William Friday.

State will be involved in several ways. An interdisciplinary scientific group has been named on the campus to develop courses of study and training programs in air pollution.

The first course, to begin this month at the National Air Pollution Control Center in the Triangle, will be a graduate level course in meteorology. It will be available to State students.

A doctoral level program in air pollution is being developed here and is expected to have about 20 students by this fall. Students are expected to be able to earn a minor in air pollution control in combination with major work in other fields, primarily biological sciences and engineering.

Most Students Excluded

From Raleigh Auto Tags

The Raleigh City Council in action Monday apparently excluded most city college students from buying new city license tags.

The action, passed unanimously by the council, amends the new city tag ordinance to exclude temporary residents, like college students, from buying the $1 tags.

The City Council adopted a new city tag ordinance in November requiring vehicles owned by all residents to display a city tag. A resident was defined as anyone living in the city for at least 60 days.

The adoption was followed by a resolution opposing the ordinance from State's Student Government and an opinion from State Attorney General Robert Morgan stating that the ordinance could not be applied to college students who did not vote or pay taxes in Raleigh.

However, the Attorney General's opinion is not binding on the City and does not have the force of law.

In early December, Councilman Robert Shoffner, former foundations and development director at State, proposed that the residency requirement be changed from 60 days to one year. The proposal was sent to the Law and Finance Committee for study.

The amendment sent out of the Committee and passed by the Council Monday requires persons who intend to be permanent residents of the city for more than 60 days to buy a tag.

Most college students here do not intend to be permanent residents here, so they will not be required to buy a tag.

"It copies the objective I had in mind," said Shoffner. "It does create some enforcement problems for the police. They will have to use considerable judgement."

City tags are now on sale downtown at city hall. Any questions about an individual's situation should be directed to them.

"I wish the students could hear all the comments the players make in the dressing room about the crowd. Vann Williford said he's never known anything like that in his life."

Parking Gates Going Up

by Hilton Smith

Chancellor John T. Caldwell announced over the holidays that the long delayed traffic gates will be installed and in operation sometime in February.

"The volume of pedestrian and vehicular movement on the North Campus is increasing at a rapid rate. Safety for our students and faculty dictates that vehicular traffic be regulated and controlled."

"During the past few months the Parking and Traffic Committee has received numerous comments and complaints regarding speeding, unregistered vehicles parking illegally, and double parking," he said in a statement.

Installation of gates on North Campus has been approved by the Attorney General and the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees.

The gates will be set up at entrances to North Campus. One gate will be manned all day. The rest will be automatic. All gates would be open during peak periods in the morning and afternoon.

The gates would also be open nights, Saturday afternoon, and Sunday.

According to Caldwell savings in manpower through reduced ticket inciting and processing should compensate for the cost of gates in perhaps three years.

The gates have been delayed for a number of reasons since announcement of them last fall. For one thing, low bids for the gates were objected to by one of the building companies.

RECORDS

by John Wren

Blues fans please take note: Canada has just produced a blues group to be reckoned with.

About a year-and-a-half ago Joe Mendelson ran an ad in a Toronto newspaper saying he wanted to start a blues band. Next day he got a call from Mike McKenna, formerly guitarist with Luke & the Apostles and The Ugly Ducklings—a couple of Canadian groups that almost made it—and the McKenna Mendelson Mainline was born.

They gathered up Tony Nolasco for drums and Mike Harrison for bass, paid their dues for awhile, grew a lot, then split for England and a well-deserved record contract.

They laid down some tracks last June and have just released them under the misleading title Stink (United Artists UAS-6729). They most emphatically do not. What they play is electric blues, the blues of the sixties, and they do it with style, dignity, and a great deal of competence.

The material, all by Mendelson, ranges from the rag-time flavored "Think I'm Losing My Marbles," through the more serious "T.B. Blues," "Better Watch Out" and "Drive You," to their masterpiece, "Bad Woman," twelve minutes and twenty seconds of pure gut feeling.

This is asphalt blues, trolley car and smokestack blues, trying-to-hitch-a-ride-at-three a.m.-and-it's-raining blues. It's the way you feel when your love life's got you down and the world gets a little too close. "Stink" tells it like it is. The McKenna Mendelson Mainline is a soul-satisfying experience.

It's funny how people's ideas change when enough pressure is applied. When we were little kids we were told that Pete Seeger was a dirty old Communist because he went around saying a lot of things like the U.S. can't be the world's policeman and that American Industry does not have a divine right to poison the environment and ought to be controlled.

These days we're told he's a communist because he says things like the Vietnam War is evil and civil rights are good, and if we don't start regulating industrial pollution right now we may not get another chance.

In Pete Seeger Now (Columbia CS-9717), with Bernice Reagan and the Reverend Fred Kirkpatrick, he sings of the frustrations, the hopes, the joys and common aspirations of us all as we enter the new decade. The material covers a wide range, from the angry "Backlash Blues" and "The Cities Are Burning" to the urgent, driving "Adam, The Inventor," to black humor in "Talking Ben Tre."

All of it has a message, and all of it is very good music, in about equal measure. As he says in "Letter to Eve," "If music could only bring peace, I'd only be a musician. Oh, pacem in terris, mir, shanti, salaam, hey wa!"

Raleigh 4 Found Guilty Of Littering

by Beki Clark

The self-styled "Raleigh Four"—Brick Miller, Al Evans, Amit Thacker, and Allen Coleman—were found guilty in the Wake District Court December 22 for littering during the Raleigh Christmas parade. They were distributing literature in the form of fake dollar bills which protested Christmas commercialization and the benefits that big businesses are enjoying from the Vietnam War.

Miller, Evans, and Thacker, all State students, were each ordered by Judge Ed Preston to pay $15 for court costs and $100 bond for appeal to Wake County Superior Court. Coleman, who is 16 pleaded guilty and paid $15 court cost.

The trial attracted many onlookers—deputies, policemen, and high school and college students.

Miller, Evans, and Thacker acted as their own defense. Said Miller, "We are innocent of any crime because it is our constitutional right to express our ideas. We were not arrested for littering but for challenging big businesses who thrive off of commercializing Christmas and the war."

The arresting officers denied that the defendants had been taken into custody for the content of the material, although stated one officer "Some citizens were asking what was going on and expressed a desire to have them (the defendants) stopped."

The point was made that it would have been all right to distribute the literature if the defendants had passed it out by hand rather than tossing it into the air. "We did not intend to break any laws, but to get our ideas to the crowd in the best way possible," said Evans.

The solicitor accused that "they did this to defy the law." The "Raleigh Four" expressed themselves in a press released, "Jesus threw the money-changers out of the temple. We did not go that far. All we did was to distribute some fake dollar bills at the Christmas parade.

"This was an attempt to promote Christmas spirit of goodwill towards mankind and peace on earth. But in the eyes of the authorities, this was the crime of littering."

Wedding Coming

Thompson Theatre is casting Garcia Lorca's Blood Wedding. The play will be presented for three weekends, March 6 through 22.

This poetic tragedy has a cast of 20. All ages and types are needed. Tryouts will be held at Thompson Theatre Thursday and Friday and also January 13-15 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Call Thompson Theatre (755-2405) for further information.

Blood Wedding is a stark, dramatically sensual statement of Lorca's concept of human fatality. From the field of very human passions and concrete beings he moves to an unreal world, one in which the appearances of mysterious and fantastic players is possible.

The characters are converted into anonymous beings who are opposed by a tragic personage—their fate—and who are led by this fate toward death. Garcia Lorca has come to be recognized as a poet of genius and possibly the foremost poetic dramatist of our time.

Blood WEDDING is the third major production of the University Players this season. Anyone interested in working with the Players in both acting and technical capacities should contact the theatre.

NOTICE

Aspiring writers, poets, artists and photographers are reminded that the time is growing short for entries in the Windhover's annual competition—February 1 is the deadline.

First place awards of $50 will be given for short-story and poetry, while awards of $25 will be offered for first place photos and graphics. Turn entries in either at the Windhover box in the English building or at the Agromeck-Windhover Office in the King Religious Building.

Doug Taylor
got his B.S. degree in Electronics Engineering in 1967.

Doug is already a senior associate engineer in Advanced Technology at IBM. His job: designing large-scale integrated circuits that will go into computers five to ten years from now.

The challenge of LSI

"Most of today's computers," Doug points out, "use hybrid integrated circuits. But large-scale integration (LSI) circuit technology is even more complicated. I have to design a great many more components and connections onto a tiny monolithic chip."

"I'm one of a five-man team. When we're assigned a project, we look at the overall problem first. Everyone contributes his ideas. Then each of us takes over his own part of the project and is responsible for designing circuitry that's compatible with the system."

Computer-aided design

Doug regards the computer as his most valuable tool. "It does all of the routine calculations that could otherwise take hours. I can test a design idea by putting all of the factors into a computer. And get an answer almost instantly. So I can devote most of my energies to creative thinking. It's an ideal setup."

Pack Adds Six To String, Climbs To No. 10

by Jack Cozort
State basketball fans have had lots to cheer about during the holiday season. The Wolf-pack has won six games since most of the State students have seen them perform.

The Pack's record is now 10-0, a showing good enough to earn them the no. 10 ranking in the country by the AP pollsters, and no. 12 by the UPI.

"We were very fortunate during the December schedule," commented Coach Norman Sloan. "We were able to win, and every team we played was a different type of team.

"We met big teams like Vanderbilt, fast teams with average size, great shooters, and good defense like Auburn. We met different types of defenses. This was all very good for us in preparing us for the conference schedule."

"Going into the Lafayette Classic," Sloan continued, "I felt we were making a lot of mistakes, but I thought were playing extremely well in portions of the game. We were just not playing up to our potential though."

State pulled out two tough wins over Southeastern Conference opposition leading up to the Lafayette Classic. The Pack trimmed Auburn 76-69 at home and Vanderbilt 76-70 on the road.

Sophomore Paul Coder provided the power in both games, tallying 31 points and 12 rebounds against Auburn, plus 27 points and 15 rebounds at Vanderbilt.

The Lafayette Classic was Vann Williford's show as the 6-6 senior returned to his home town for the second time this year.

State smashed Alabama in the opening round of the tourney, 75-51, as Williford scored 25 points and Coder grabbed 15 rebounds. The Pack played brilliant basketball in the first half against the Crimson Tide.

The Pack put together two fine halves against a good Northwestern team for a 98-75 drubbing in the championship game. Williford pumped in 31 more points and shared rebounding honors with Coder, as each star grabbed 11.

Williford's play earned him the Most Valuable Player Award for the tourney and the selection as the ACC Player of the Week. Coder and Sophomore Ed Leftwich joined Williford on the All-Tournament team.

"That was the first time all year we were able to put together two good halves against a good, sound ball club," Sloan added about Northwestern. "We just kept adding to our lead and playing strongly from start to finish."

State then took their 8-0 record to Greensboro for encounters with conference rivals Maryland and Virginia. The Pack turned on the power in the second half for a 91-57 romp over the Terps, and then came from behind on the very next night to beat Virginia, 71-60.

The Virginia game was one of the most important wins for the Pack. Trailing by eight points at the half, State outscored the Cavs by 19 points in the second half for the win.

Rick Anheuser continued to play his steady game of basketball. He tallied 21 points against Northwestern to raise his average to 9.4 per game.

Dan Wells kept coming off the bench to keep the Pack out of trouble. Al Heartley came off the bench to spark State past Va.

State's offense is the second best in the conference, as is their defense. The Pack ranks first in the league in rebounds with 55.3 per game. State also leads in field goal percentage with a remarkable .501 average.

It all adds up to a 10-0 record, a 2-0 conference showing, and a no. 10 national ranking. But now the going gets tough for the Pack, as conference play begins in full.

After Carolina Wednesday night comes Wake Forest on Saturday. With four ACC teams in the top 20 in the country, it will not be an easy season.

Metaphysical Maniac Predicts Pack Romp

by Justin Case

Ever since State beat William and Mary at the beginning of the season, I have been in a constant frenzy. You see, when it comes to basketball, I'm a maniac.

Rahhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhh!

I guess the only thing that has sustained me is the fact that for a change, I'm not alone. There are many others who are almost as crazy as I am.

Rah! Rah! Sis-boom-bah!

Seriously, our group has had 25% less sanity, especially now that we have reached the game with North Carolina, undefeated. But the cause of our extreme excitement, i.e., the Wolfpack's tremendous success, is understood by very few fans. There are only a chosen few who realize that State's winning way is rooted deep in spiritual and mystical cults which have been turned against all our opponents.

Let me be specific (but not too specific, for to disclose divine secrets would destroy our psychic powers.) Ever since the Virginia Tech game I have dutifully consulted I Ching (a most reputable source of ancient Chinese wisdom and divination) as to the outcome of our various encounters with other teams.

Thus far the results of my fortune telling have been 100% correct. I Ching correctly predicted the closeness of the Auburn game, the ease with which we beat VPI, and even went so far as to imply that the Alabama win (in the Lafayette Classic) was closely related to the next game, which indeed it was, for to win the championship we had first to beat the Crimson Tide.

But enough mysticism. I'm sure that you of little faith find it all boring. But just let me remind you that the religious experience I encountered through I Ching gave me sustenance to wait in line all night long Sunday to get my tickets for the Carolina game. Knowing that the outcome of the contest rests comfortably in the hands of sage Orientals gave me peace and repose.

Now of course I had to have physical preparation for the night-long vigil too, so the spirit of my ancestors urged a trip to cold and windy New York City to acclimatize myself for the frigid wait. This I faithfully undertook, inviting everyone at Times Square New Year's Eve to come to the game, if not actually, then spiritually. The combined thought waves of several hundred thousand sympathetic believers will be too much for the Tar Heels to fight, I'm betting.

The spirit of the Wolfpack we carried even to Greenwich Village where we found a quaint little shop selling buttons bearing Lobo's face and the word 'Wolf'!

Even all the way back to Raleigh, down the Garden State Parkway, the New Jersey Turnpike, we brought the message. Before long not a car ventured forth without proud red and white lights, those glorious Wolfpack colors which adorned every tower, every radio and TV station along the way.

But getting back to the real world (as if I could) there is good reason to believe that even with all this going for the Wolfpack, even with the spirits smiling on us so favorably, the team still needs loud, vocal support from the fans. That means a constant din, a deafening roar that will lift the Coliseum and move it over Western Boulevard. To this end I have resurrected some old and new cheers to be used especially for this game which I feel will overwhelm the unsuspecting Heels.

So clip this page and bring it to the game. Wave the banner on the back and learn the cheers. And pray for me. I might not make it through the game in one piece.

Yoo-Hoo

(This cheer utilizes handkerchief, preferably white, which is waved during the underlined words)

Knit one, purl two.

Carolina, Yoo hoo!

(alternate version)

Knit one, purl two

Charlie Scott Yoo hoo!

(any Tar Heel's name may be substituted).

RED AND WHITE

We're the Red and White from State
And we know we are the best.
With our hands behind our back
We can take on all the rest.
Come over the hill Caroline;
Devils and Deacs stand in line
The Red and White from N. C. State—

Go State!

Boom Boom

(This cheer is rendered in the spirit of A&M College)

Rah! Rah! Sis boom bah!

Chick-a-lacka, chick-a-lacka

Boom Boom Boom!

(But for the more avant garde contemporary culture freaks, this cheer may be substituted):

Ho- Ho- Ho Chi Minh

N. C. State is gonna win!
