Energy crisis

Physical Plant responding to Chancellor's directives

By Sheryl Lieb

Staff Writer

As a result of directives issued from the Chancellor's office, dating back as early as June 21, 1973, and a second dated October 2, the Physical Plant and the university deans, directors, and department heads have been instructed as to certain measures they should have been taking throughout the semester in a concerted effort to combat the energy crisis.

The June memorandum included measures aimed at reducing the heating level in buildings and in the temperature of water (from 140 degrees to 120 degrees), reducing the lighting levels by removing tubes from fixtures that may be taken out of service, and correcting building openings that allow air leakage.

CERTAIN OTHER directives were more specific in the steps to be taken, and were, in particular, addressed to the deans, directors, and department heads, telling them what actions they could take directly as their responsibility. These touched on possible changes in laboratory scheduling, the reduced use of lights, rooms, facilities, and equipment not actually needed, and a general emphasis on efforts to conserve energy on the part of all wherever possible.

The October memorandum from the chancellor basically reaffirmed and strengthened the positions stated in the first memorandum. It emphasized the maintenance of the conservation policies regarding the setting of thermostats "by one designated person to maintain 70 to 72 degrees" and those concerning heating, ventilating, air conditioning, and gasoline and oil conservation.

In fulfilling its responsibilities, the Physical Plant has also compiled a report, based on its actions as a result of the directives, and bearing the date of September 26. A second report, reflecting what has happened since the chancellor's October memorandum, will come out at the end of December and will go to the State Department of Administration.

J. MCCREE SMITH director of the Physical Plant, said, "The Physical Plant has done whatever things it could in keeping with these directives," and, with regard to the measures not directly the responsibility of the Physical Plant, "it's (the memorandum) from the chancellor, and it's addressed to all deans, directors, and department heads, whether or not they have done the things that they should do, I don't know."

Smith continued, "We've cut down on the temperature on hot water, we have cut down the pressure on the heating system and are saving fuel. The unnatural, warm weather that we've had through November has helped."

In the area of lighting reduction, the Physical Plant has acted upon a

June memorandum directive stating that "Physical Plant teams will visit each building and wherever possible reduce lighting loads..."

Smith stated, "We have done whatever we could do, and it amounted to this much - (reducing the lighting by 546.3 KW connected electrical load) - not that amounts to approximately one sixtieth of the connected load."

Hobby urges Nixon's ouster

By Jeff Watkins

Associate Editor

Wilbur Hobby, speaking at the North Carolina Town Meeting for Impeachment in Memorial Auditorium Saturday, called for President Nixon's impeachment.

"Our country is in a great crisis today," Hobby said. "We must have a president who can command the respect of the people and of the Congress. Richard Nixon does not now, nor do I believe he can ever regain this confidence."

HOBBY EMPHASIZED, however, that impeachment did not necessarily mean Nixon's ouster, but was merely a trial.

"Only an impeachment trail in the Senate, where we can let it all hang out, will restore the people's faith in the Constitution and the presidency," he said.

Hobby criticized the President's recent conferences with Republican congressmen to explain his side in the Watergate scandals.

"THESE UNITED STATES senators are the same jurors that are going to hear the impeachment trial if the impeachment proceedings are made. Now if that's not obstruction of justice, then I don't know what obstruction of justice could mean," he added.

Other speakers present at the rally were Michael Curtis, a Greensboro lawyer and member of the American Civil Liberties Union; Ford Runge, student body president at UNC-CH; Larry Little, head of the state Black Panther party; and Sally Avery, a member of the New American movement.

Curtis, the initial speaker, gave an explanation of the impeachment process and some background of its conception. He explained how an impeachment was just a trial by the Senate, adding that Nixon "will have an opportunity to present evidence in his defense."

CURTIS FURTHER explained that the only punishment Nixon would receive would be removal from office and disqualification from holding other federal positions.

Curtis added that Nixon had done

Beverage policy includes Coliseum

By Howard Barnett

Staff Writer

The new alcoholic beverage policy which has been talked about for months now is a reality. From now on, there will be no alcoholic beverages allowed in Reynolds Coliseum unless the Chancellor specifically approves.

For years, this has been the policy in Carter Stadium, but it has been enlarged to include the Coliseum as well. In the past, there was a great deal of trouble with bottles and cans littering the Coliseum. In addition, State law forbids the consumption of alcoholic beverages at athletic events.

These points were brought out in a Senate meeting some time ago when the policy was passed.

THE CHANGE has been written into the student judicial statutes. It doesn't entail a complete revamping of the statutes. Dean John Poole of Student Affairs said, "There wasn't any reason to have it run off as a policy, because it wasn't that big a change. We've just got it penciled in."

The beverage policy remains the same overall, permitting the possession and consumption of beverages of less than 14% alcohol by those of sufficient legal age anywhere on campus except in any room being used for instructional purposes. It also permits the possession and consumption of beverages of more than 14% alcohol in the rooms of those of legal age and in other rooms, if the chancellor shall so designate.

To both of these requirements has been added the provision that it shall not be allowed in Carter Stadium or Reynolds Coliseum, except on such occasions as the chancellor or his representative shall designate.

Asked when the policy will go into effect, Head of Security Bill Williams said, "Well, it's ready to go now. As far as I'm concerned, it's in effect now. We've been needing it for a long time."

Bikes & cars

Parking changes suggested

By Richard Massey

Staff Writer

Several changes concerning parking of cars and bicycles will go into effect soon to help relieve some of the problems of our motorists and bikers.

Recommendations and proposals presented at the last Parking and Traffic Committee were voted on and passed unanimously. The changes for car parking will go into effect after the completion of the new parking deck. Bicycle parking will be improved with the incoming shipment of new bike racks for use around the campus. These recommendations have been made by the Subcommittee on Parking Deck Utilization and the Bicycle Subcommittee.

Bill Williams, Director of Security and Safety, said the changes pertaining to the new parking deck consist of reallocation of the existing parking spaces. With an additional 1,379 spaces given by the new deck more parking will be given to the commuting students. 317 spaces will be allocated on the lower level of the deck for "S" (staff) decals with the remaining spaces, including the elevated levels, will be used for "C" (commuter) decals.

Harris Parking Lot will be divided into three different areas. "C" decals in this lot will be reduced to 75 spaces; 211 spaces will be added to the "R"

(resident) decals; the "S" decal parking will remain at 120 spaces. These figures are only approximate, depending on the lot's possible arrangement. Also the South Side of Cates Avenue from the East side of Floyd Drive to Base Drive will be allotted to "R" decals (approximately 30 spaces.)

Both Williams and John Dilday, student chairman of the Parking and Traffic Committee, agree that these arrangements will best serve the students, faculty, and administrators involved. Williams also noted the multiple purpose of the new parking deck by saying that "it can be used for several nighttime activities such as basketball games, concerts, and other extracurricular activities."

The lack of bicycle racks has also come to the attention of the committee, and as a result, the traffic committee has purchased 40 new racks.

The racks contain 31 spaces each. Williams said that several sites have been selected for the placement of the racks, his main emphasis on their placement being one of security and accessibility.

The racks will be placed in observable areas for protection against theft or vandalism, and convenient areas for the students' use. Williams hopes that the addition of these new bike racks will decrease the use of chaining bikes to handrails and stairways.

Fraternity food drive aids yule spirit

By Anne Castrodale

Asst. Features Editor
 "Give a can, and show you care" is a catchy motto for the Inter-Fraternity Council food drive which will provide Christmas dinner for approximately 600 Wake County families receiving aid. The drive ended Saturday morning December 1.

THE IFC SET a goal of collecting over 11,000 pounds of non-perishable food, the figure reached in last year's drive. The 17 fraternities, 2 sororities and organizations from Meredith, Peace and St. Mary's worked in conjunction with the Wake County Social Services Board in the collection and distribution of the food.

"We had the Raleigh city limits divided up into 17 districts," said Al Cochran, from Alpha Gamma Rho, co-chairman of the drive with John Snyder from Kappa Sigma. "Each fraternity was assigned a district and went door to door collecting the food. The girls helped with the collection boxes in the stores."

cause several of the fraternities and the girls' organizations have not yet turned in the food. "For the 15 fraternities who have brought the food in, we got 8,232 pounds," said Cochran.

"PEOPLE DIDN'T give as much this year as they did last year," Cochran commented. "I guess we did fairly well, but I don't think we made our goal. We got 9,000 pounds, maybe more." "We had a contest within the fraternities. Farm House was first with 4,014 pounds," he said. "AGR came in second with 1,384 pounds."

There are approximately 2,300 families in Wake County who are receiving aid and who will be eligible for the food. The distribution will be done by the Social Services Board.

Design School sponsors unusual art exhibition

The School of Design is presenting an art exhibition, "At Times the World Looks Different," of the work of the Forensic Unit of Dorothea Dix Hospital at the North Carolina Museum of Art lasting through December 30.

LEARNING TO PAINT, the men in the Forensic Unit are hospitalized for psychiatric observation because of criminal offenses. Since March six men have attended weekly two and one half hour sessions where self expression is stressed rather than structured technique.

The program exists so the patients may tap their inner feelings especially those who lack positive outlets of self expression.

FUNDS FROM the Forensic Unit are now gone and in order to continue this program in art therapy monetary or material support must be obtained. If anyone would like to contribute funds and or materials, please contact Ardath Goldstein, 209 Glasgow Road, Cary, 467-6836 or Dwain Pope, Sprull Annex, Dorothea Dix Hospital, 829-5430.

"ALL WE DO IS collect the food and get it down town," explained Cochran. "It will probably be distributed for Christmas so the families can have a good Christmas dinner."

The total number of pounds of food collected hasn't been determined be-tures and said, "could you do without one? Or if you've got three or four, how many can we cut off?" And that's the one we've cut out, and that's added into this 546.3 KW. We've cut out one sixtieth of the potential for burning," he continued. "Connected load is not the demand load. Demand load is what's actually on."

Outside campus lighting has not been included in the lighting reduction measures, and Smith revealed that there is a contract to add about $50,000 for campus lighting, which will increase the outside lighting load.

Smith talked about the fact of the Christmas vacation aiding in energy conservation and a Physical Plant proposal to lengthen the period during which the university will be closed down.

He explained, "We've made a proposal to the administration to make the Christmas holiday for campus activities span the two scheduled days of work, Dec. 27 and 28 (Thursday and Friday) so that effectively the campus would be shut down at 5 on Friday, Dec. 21, and would not open up again until the morning of Wednesday, Jan. 2.

"IT WOULD BE a total of eleven days, and we've estimated that we could save 72,600 gallons of oil in that period," continued Smith. "That's roughly a thirtieth of the oil that we will normally burn for the heating season. In money this is worth about $13,000."

Whether or not such a proposal is approved, the university stands to save about 40,000 gallons or 60 percent of what the Physical Plant is proposing for the time that the campus is shut down the three days for Christmas and two days for the New Year's holiday.

According to Smith, a major obstacle in combatting the heating problem lies in the construction of the older buildings on campus, wherein such buildings do not have their own heating controls.

SMITH ALSO CITED a problem found in the construction of some of the relatively newer campus buildings which include a greater amount of glass in their design, explaining that the window is the greatest source of heat loss in the winter and heat gain in the summer.

He continued, "This energy thing isn't something that happened overnight - it's been coming, and it isn't going to be solved overnight. The only way we're going to correct it - we need to go back and spend money now."

Runge looks for Democratic win

more than any other president in history to "subvert the Constitution and the guarantees of the Bill of Rights."

Runge, the next speaker, said that impeachment "is not our only goal. I'm dedicated to nothing short of total victory for the Democratic Party in 1976."

IN RECOUNTING the turn of events in the overall investigations of the Nixon administration, Runge compared the present presidential crisis to the events leading up to the American Revolution.

Little urged organization and education of the American people so "they can no longer vote for and support fascists like Richard Nixon."

"BLACK PEOPLE did not put Richard Nixon in office," Little said. "Those of us who realize who did put him in office realize we've got a lot of work to do, a lot of organizing to do, a lot of educating to do to change the minds of the American people."

Avery said the break-in of Democratic National Headquarters was "the result of a situation where Nixon had to get elected in 1972 in spite of the fact that he was pursuing policies that were against the majority."

She added that Nixon's impeachment could be "the first step in building a truly democratic society."

Integon preparing response

By Kathie Easter

Assistant News Editor

An extensive debate has arisen over which insurance companies and banks in North Carolina are opposing the Merit Insurance Proposal of Commissioner John Ingram.

Ingram's proposal has received support from the State Student Government due to the fact that it would specifically aid male drivers below the age of 25.

Throughout the last few weeks, Ingram has specifically indicated Integon Insurance Company and Wachovia Bank and Trust as opposing his plan.

COMMISSIONER INGRAM, in a recent letter to Integon, calls upon the company to "please explain to these young people why you think that a young person under 25 with a perfect driving record should pay more for his liability insurance than a person over 25 convicted of drunk driving in the pleasure use category."

He also said, "I believe it is clear that Integon opposed the merit rating classification plan in the courts."

Henry C. Allen, executive vice-president of Integon, hesitated to respond to these allegations, but said, "We are now in the process of preparing a response to Commissioner Ingram's letter. This is a situation which is extremely complicated. A simple response to the Commissioner's questions would be misleading."

ALLEN DID, however, comment on being mentioned as a litigant in the court appeal which prevented the Merit Insurance Program from being implemented.

"The N.C. Automobile Rate Administrative Office is an organization created by the N.C. State Legislature," he said. "Every automobile insurance company which sells liability insurance in the state must be a member of this organization."

According to Allen, when Commissioner Ingram (who is ex-officio chairman of the board for this office) tried to put his plan into effect, it was the Auto Rate Office which took the case to court in order to delay the program.

"THE N.C. AUTOMOBILE Rate Administrative Office wanted to delay the proposal due to imperfections in the plan," said Allen. "However, this is a non-profit organization and could not sue on its own accord."

Allen pointed out that the member companies were listed in the appeal as a legal technicality.

The Merit Proposal has yet to come before the N.C. General Assembly. Therefore, no lobbying has been made for or against the bill.

In response to the statement by Allen, Ingram said, "Integon did not have to put their name on the appeal if they approved of the Merit Proposal. Whether or not the individual member companies signed the appeal was determined by their individual economic interests."

He added that he expected Integon to answer the questions included in the letter State's Student Government is sending to the North Carolina banks and to Integon.

WDBS preparing car pools to cut back holiday traffic

Have you ever wondered who all those people are who regularly drive passenger-less cars to the same place you go every day? Here's your chance to find out.

In an effort to match passenger space, time and destinations with people, WDBS, 107.1 FM in Durham, has been coordinating the formation of car pools.

The program is run as a part of WDBS's People's Free Classifieds, aired Monday through Saturday at 8:30 p.m. Anyone interested in forming a car pool, offering rides, or obtaining rides should mail a postcard to 'Car Pool, WDBS, Box WDBS, Duke Station, Durham, N.C. 27706.'

The announcements will be read over the air and interested listeners will be put in touch with those making the offer through the station.

"WE STARTED the program about a month ago," says WDBS Community Affairs Director Bob Conroy, "and the response is building. Naturally the more people who participate, the more successful the idea will be. Car pools save energy, gas, and money while cutting down on traffic and pollution. It just doesn't make sense for five or six people to drive five or six cars to and from the same place at the same time every day."

The station broadcasts throughout the Triangle Area, so interested parties from as far away as Raleigh, and beyond, can utilize the service.

Also, WDBS will be broadcasting its Third Annual Holiday Ride Show on Sunday, December 9th. Arranged around a format of travelling music, the program puts passengers and drivers together who are headed home, or elsewhere, for the holidays.

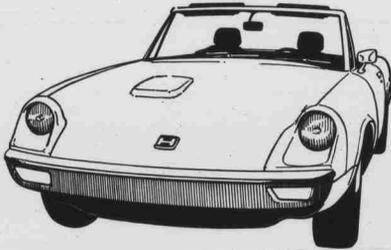

ORIGINALLY DESIGNED as primarily a student service, the Holiday Ride Show is expected to take on broader, community wide response this year in view of the energy crisis.

Again, anyone interested in offering or getting a ride for holiday travel should send a postcard with name, phone number, and destination to WDBS.

Irrational rhetoric not helping cause

Saturday's North Carolina Town Meeting for the Impeachment of the President turned out to be more of a circus than a meeting of rational minds devoted to reasonably presenting their grievances against the President. Such activities only serve to detract from the movement to impeach Richard Nixon. A united front of the American people is needed in order to bring about Nixon's impeachment, an action that must be taken; but the Town Meeting was an event that could have made even those for the impeachment of the president have grave misgivings about the group they had become involved with.

The whole affair resembled a carnival more than an orderly and well-run argument against the abuses of the Nixon administration, which it should have been if it was to have any beneficial effect.

Unfortunately, attempts were made to make the meeting appear "in." There are certain ground rules that are customarily observed at rallies for social action of this nature that have become somewhat trite and worn from overuse. It seems that all protest rallies must have skits and folksongs in order to qualify for the name. However, such things rapidly become purely superficial, as they were at the Town Meeting.

Several of the speakers, notably UNC Student Body President Ford Runge and American Civil Liberties Union lawyer Michael Curtis, did make impressive speeches, illustrating the power of well thought out and reasonable speeches. Most of the other featured speakers were less impressive, however, because their talks were guided more by passion than reason, more rhetoric than logic.

The issue of impeachment is one of the most serious considerations that has faced this country in its history. It is not something to be treated frivolously. There is a definite need to inform the people as to the extent of President Nixon's shortcomings in office. Nixon has been bad for the country. But as long as there are people who insist on treating these conditions in a trivial manner, the cause is going to be hurt more than it will be helped.

The N.C. Town Meeting for the Impeachment of the President was a good idea. Unfortunately, it rapidly became a bad idea once it got underway. In the future, it must be of utmost importance that such meetings be well regulated and suitably presented. The country has had too much generalizing rhetoric. What it needs now is educated speakers who can reason and influence, who can provide the reasons why the President should be impeached — not passionate and unrestrained voices damaging the cause through their ignorance.

Manageable?

An article in Sunday's News and Observer reported that "President Nixon believes the energy shortage still represents a 'manageable crisis' and may not decide until the end of December whether to order oil and gasoline rationing." Although it is debatable whether or not the fuel shortage is a "manageable crisis" — which has yet to be proven, it is good to know that Nixon is considering action to alleviate the problem. For a long time, he has refused to even consider rationing as one of these measures. But, all things considered, rationing seems to be one of the only fair ways to ensure that everyone is given his or her fair share of the fuel pie.

Other proposals to relieve the problem have been suggested, including imposing a higher federal tax on gasoline per gallon. This, however, would discriminate against those with fixed incomes or those whose income is low. Blue collar workers would be greatly affected by such a move, and there is the possibility that much of the nation's work force could be crippled because of their inability to secure the fuel needed to heat their homes or run their cars.

For these reasons, rationing seems the fairest system for fuel distribution. If the fuel shortage does reach such a level where more severe steps must be taken to conserve fuel, and it appears that it will, then rationing must be instituted over such methods as higher taxation on fuel.

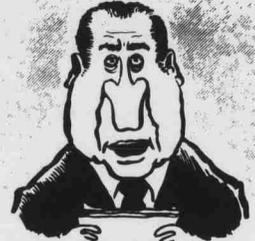

The powers that be must not only take into consideration the business and financial barons of the country and how they will be hurt, but also how the shortage will affect the less fortunate, who are just as entitled to be able to administer to their needs.

Injustices presently perpetrated against those "second class citizens" would only be compounded if rationing were overruled in favor of other, more discriminatory measures.

Whenever Nixon becomes aware that this is more than a "manageable crisis," he should remember all the citizens, not just some of them. No one is entitled to benefit while others cannot.

Middle East solution long overdue

Due to the United States support of Israel in the recent Arab-Israeli war, the country has found itself in a dilemma that is rapidly becoming a moral issue. The direct military and financial aid given the Israelis has turned out to be more of a liability than was ever previously anticipated. It stands at the very root of the present and rapidly deepening fuel crisis. It also threatens the relations between the United States and many of its traditional European allies. There seems to be no easy solution to the problem, and if Richard Nixon can resolve it, he will have gained himself another feather for this foreign policy hat.

The U.S. has traditionally supported the Israeli state since its creation in 1948. The reasons for this support stem from what might be termed a passion of the U.S. to back the underdog; for at its inception, Israel was certainly not guaranteed to survive as a nation. In fact, it had a lot of things going against it.

Another factor that has undoubtedly influenced the present relationship between the two countries is the large Jewish population in this country. And finally, the similarity between the governmental systems and the westernized culture have provided another common bond. Now, however, another consideration besides these must be taken into account. With the energy crisis approaching a critical point, can the U.S. continue to support the Israeli state, knowing that it is this support which could possibly render the U.S. disastrous results in terms of fuel supply?

The conflict is between morality and expediency. Should the U. S. betray its ally in order to help itself? It is indeed a troubling question and one to which the answer must inevitably be difficult.

Of course, it is undeniable that the U.S. backed itself into a corner by failing to establish alternative fuel supplies to Arab Oil long ago. With proper planning, much of the U.S. dependence on this oil could have been averted. But the country is, at least partially, dependent on Arab oil to maintain its present standard of living, and alternative sources will take years to develop.

A reduction of this standard of living is not out of the question, however, since other countries service adequately on much lower levels of consumption than ours. But the extent of the relief brought about by such action would be only temporary at most.

Abandonment of the Israelis seems morally reprehensible, but many European states seem to be leaning in this direction; so it is not out of the question. However, this does not mean that the U.S. should necessarily follow suit.

The only proper way to alleviate the conflict seems to be to push for an agreement in the Middle East which is equitable to both sides. This is easily said, but not so easily done. The U.S. can help to tone down Israeli demands without sacrificing the alliance, thus making the Arab states more willing to resume oil shipments to the U.S. Of course, this depends on the U.S. being able to convince the Israelis that this is in their interests as well. Any agreement must be seen as equitable among all the parties involved.

The moral versus expedient aspects of this situation can only be resolved in this way. Now is the time for equanimity rather than selfishness on all sides, including our own for once. Otherwise, the future is certainly bleak.

Carroll's proposed Senate changes

Editor's note: Following are excerpts from a speech delivered to the Student Senate by Terry Carroll, Student Body President, last Wednesday night. In the speech he calls for the consideration of a new form of Senate government.

I speak of the changing of the Senate from the present elective form to the forum structure. The forum structure reverts back to the Greek idea of the forum. It would mean those people who are interested in the Student Government would come to the Student Forum meetings instead of elected Senators. Possibly the agenda and legislation would have to be posted two days ahead of the meeting. It would enhance students being able to represent themselves and also it would cause more interest to be generated. Those people who are interested in the Government would rule and those people who are not will by virtue of their disinterest, not have a voice in it. Every person who is interested and has something to say would be able to voice this. I would like to pose this and a challenge for the Government Committee to work with the Executive branch and possibly bring this proposal before the student body for a campus-wide constitutional amendment in January. Hopefully, this would be on a year's trial basis to be reinstated on a permanent basis next January. It would be the charge of the Student Body President to take this on as a task for himself or herself. A question may be raised about the time frame that we would want to work in. I think that it would be most desirable to institute this in late January to early February.

The whole idea of the Student Forum is to strengthen the student and the Student Government in being able to deal with the Administration, with State wide politics and with city politics. The idea here is to keep those who are actually interested and to eliminate the detriment of having to go through an election process. This would allow us to better inform people as to what is going on and to help the students become more autonomous and realize what they can do. This would also cause us to become a more mature and responsive Student Government. In the past Student Senates have been known to become clichish.

There are mechanical problems that will have to be worked out about this and one suggestion is possibly limiting debate to 10 positive and 10 negative arguments on a particular topic. Each argument should not last more than a minute and a half. These are just examples of what we can do. Also, this Forum structure of government would cause the Executive branch of the Student Government; the Student Body President, the Student Body Treasurer, and any other offices that might be instituted, to be more responsive to the Student Forum. It would also cause the power of the Student Body President and the members of the Executive Branch to be more responsive to the student needs. The Forum would eliminate what can frequently become a stumbling block in the Student Senate between the actual student needs and what the Student Body President, as the spokesman for the student body, is aware of. This would cause each one to come closer to the problems. It would enhance a strong Student Body President's power in that having the students' support, he will keep the best interest of the students in mind and the students would be aware of this and support him in his efforts. I think this whole idea will cause a more responsible and responsive Student Government.

To the best of my knowledge this form of Student Government is not in existence in any University in the country. The system that we have now more or less propagates the kind of evils that we speak of in our State and National Legislature where lobbying factions and this sort of thing are involved. By avoiding these problems, we will revert back to the more pure democracy of the ancient Greek city state. I think that this would strengthen everything that we have been talking about as far as benefitting the students and coming closer to the student's problems, which is after all, the function of the Student Government. It would also serve as an example in North Carolina to inform students how Student Government can strengthen the power of students across the state. If other schools go in this direction, which I feel they will, it would enhance students rights across North Carolina. Since 18 year olds have the right to vote, to be aware of what is going on in our state and city governments and help to formulate policy in the state, being an informed population is in itself much power and is very desirable for better government not only on the school level but in the city, in the state, and very possible in the nation.

I charge the Government Committee to work on this with the Executive branch and present a bill at the next senate meeting.

LETTERS

Not unreasonable

To the Editor:

A letter appearing in the Friday, November 30 edition of the Technician discussed the appointment of Mike Sloan (Norm Sloan's son) as head manager of the Wolfpack basketball team and the decision by the coaches to dismiss Dave Gardner. Gardner managed last year. Sloan did not. Gardner apparently feels he should have gotten the head managing position because of that fact.

As a former manager of the team myself, I will not try to justify Coach Sloan's decision. I do not think the coach needs to justify his decisions on any matters concerning the team. I must, however, clarify one thing. The only information the managers of last year's team were given concerning the selection of a new head manager was that Coach Sloan would make the decision. Coach Sloan did exactly that, so I fail to see where Mr. Gardner, myself or anyone else was wronged.

As far as the qualifications of Mike Sloan are concerned, just drop by Reynolds Coliseum for practice any day and you'll see that he and his assistant Biff Nichols are doing a good job. If you don't believe your eyes, ask the ballplayers or the men who work in the cage downstairs.

I think it unfortunate that a person could do as good a job as Mike does and still be the target of such unfeeling and unknowing critics as those who complained to the Technician.

In summary: the coach may not always be right but the coach is always the coach. Norm Sloan is THE COACH, a good one. Mike Sloan is THE MANAGER, a good one.

Neil Edwards

Only a service

To the Editor:

This is in response to the letter in Wednesday's paper by Teri Taylor. As staff members, we would like to inform Miss Taylor that the policy regarding packages in Carroll and Metcalf is a service to the residents of these dorms. The majority of the residence hall students do not have their packages delivered to their dorm. They are required to make a trip to the Post Office to receive their packages.

Each dorm has their own policy concerning office visitors. Although there may be several persons in the office, most are staff members. The staff does not make a habit of letting just anyone into the office, and surely would not let a potential thief visit. The so-called "unauthorized persons" are friends of the staff members who have been invited into the office.

We regret the loss of Miss Taylor's package, but we wish to impress upon her that package delivery is a service to these few students.

Pack tankers outrace Salukis

By Ray Deltz

Staff Writer

"We just didn't have the horsepower to keep up with the Wolfpack," said Southern Illinois swimming coach Bob Steele Saturday afternoon, minutes after his team fell to the talented State squad, 84-29.

"There were a lot of close races but State's experienced squad proved to be too much," he continued. "I feel they are comparable to Michigan in the Big Ten." Michigan finished seventh in the nation last season, which was one notch ahead of the eighth-ranked Wolfpack.

ALTHOUGH THE final score appears somewhat lopsided, the Wolfpack tankers almost seemed to have to rely upon magic to win several events.

"It was a close meet but we won all the close races," smiled State coach Don Easterling. So many of those races could have gone either way. "Winning the close ones is the mark of a quality team."

State All-American Rusty Lurwick brought the partisan State crowd awake by barely edging out Southern Illinois freshman Rob McGinley in the 200 yard freestyle. Lurwick tumbled in a time of 1:47.4, while McGinley made Lurwick sweat it out a bit by swimming the event in 1:47.63.

The 200 yard individual medley, another event that the Wolfpack usually dominates with considerable ease, proved to be anybody's race right to the finish. All-American Ed Foulke took first place with a 2:02.79 time while Southern Illinois' Dave Boyd really made Foulke work for his victory by finishing with a time of 2:03.2.

HOWEVER, THE top performer of the afternoon was no doubt super freshman Steve Gregg. Gregg, who won the outdoor AAU 200 yard butterfly last season while being coached by former Pack national champion Bob Mattson, set the new school, pool and ACC records in the 200 butterfly against the Salukis. Gregg's record time of 1:53.28 broke teammate Jim Schliestett's school record, and put to rest the old ACC record set in March 1973 by Carolina's Jim Osborn. According to Easterling, "Gregg is just a super athlete." Gregg's mark qualified him for the NCAA championships next March.

State's 400 yard medley relay team also qualified for the NCAA championships to be held in Long Beach, California. Two sophomores, Richard Carter and Chuck Raburn, junior Chris Mapes and Gregg accounted for a time of 3:34.91.

State's All-American diver Mike deGruy, who was runner-up in the NCAA three meter springboard competition and fifth on the one meter board last year, took his customary first place finish on both boards against the Salukis. DeGruy qualified for the NCAA finals on both boards.

IN THE FINAL outcome,

State won 12 of 13 events. Ralph Baric, State's top distance performer, held off two Southern Illinois freshmen in winning the 1000 yard freestyle. Another State All-American, Mark Elliott, who won a gold medal in the 400 meter freestyle relay for the United States in the World University games in Moscow last summer, took the top spot in the 50 freestyle.

Lurwick and Elliott paced the Pack in the 100 yard freestyle with strong performances. Freshman Kris Kiblik and veteran Jim Schliestett finished one-two in the 200 yard backstroke while Mapes captured the 200 yard breaststroke for the Pack. The afternoon's last event, the 400 yard freestyle relay was won by the team of Raburn, Elliott, Lurwick and Tony Corliss.

Next Saturday, the Pack will bring their talents to Charlotte to swim against Florida State and South Carolina in the first annual North-South Swim Meet.

Freshman Steve Gregg set new school and conference records in the 200 meter butterfly with a time of 1:53.28 against the Illinois Salukis Saturday afternoon. Last summer the Wilmington, Del. native was the national AAU 200 butterfly champion.

Athletes 'inspire' State

By Jim Pomeranz

Assistant Sports Editor

For approximately the first 12 minutes of play Saturday night before 11,300 avid Wolfpack fans in Reynolds Coliseum, State's basketball team looked as if it were going to help the Athletes in Action win their second game of the season.

Bad passes by Wolfpack players along with sharp shooting by the AIA kept the game close throughout the entire first half with 13 points being the largest margin State could ever muster. Midway through the initial period the Athletes even held a two point lead over the Wolfpack.

WITH NORM Sloan's troops nursing only a 10 point lead at the halftime break, the AIA players, who are workers for the Campus Crusade for Christ, expounded on their relationship with Christ before the crowd. It's not known for sure if the Wolfpack players were inspired by the proceedings, but they came out in the second half and outscored the Athletes three times over in the first nine minutes to take a commanding 90-55 lead.

After that it was all down hill as the Pack hit 65 percent of its shots in the second half as compared with 45 percent in the first period to win the game, 119-82.

State has scheduled AIA for the last three years and this year was a little different than the other two. "Athletes in Action played real well," said Sloan after the game. "They're a much improved ball club over last year's team. I'm real glad we scheduled them."

SLOAN SAID he thought the game was a good experience for State at this time in the season. "It helped us a lot," he said, "We had the opening game jitters, even though it was not officially our opener, and it let us learn some of the things we need to work on."

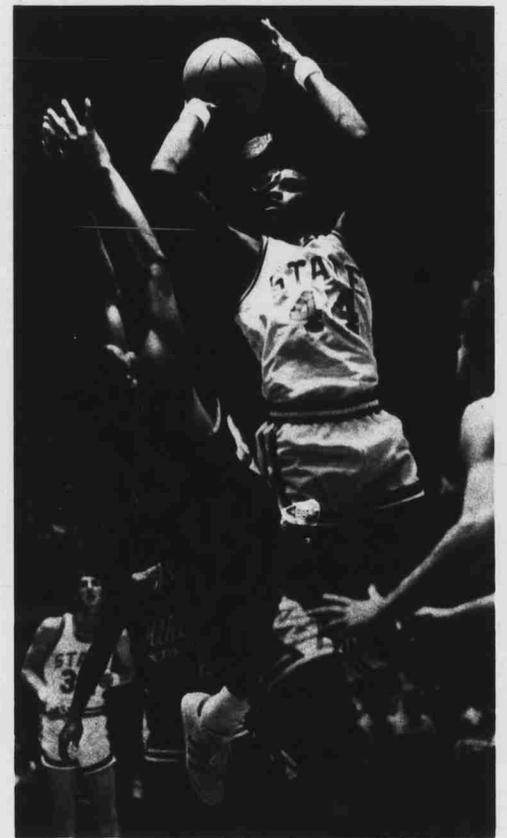

Leading the way for the Pack was all-American David Thompson with 34 points and eight rebounds and Tom Burleson with 32 points and 17 rebounds. "Tommy played very well," commented Sloan, "and David played well, as expected."

After removing the top Wolfpack players and replacing them with reserves Sloan said he was "very impressed" with the play of freshman guard Bruce Dayhuff. "He did things for us," said the head mentor in his eighth year at State. "He did a fine job. He was loose and relaxed and had his head up."

THE PROBLEMS in the first half, Sloan said, were also due to State's defensive play. "We were a little ragged there," he explained. "But we show promise of being a good defensive ball club."

Little Monte Towe, who scored 10 points and escaped with 13 big rebounds, adia a combination of things kept the game close in the first half. "When things began to open for us," he said, "they would start hitting and pull up. There were many things together. We weren't hitting the boards."

Burleson, who played as if he were the only player on the court, controlling the boards and blocking shots, gave credit to the slow start to the opening game of the season. "We were experimenting and putting things together," Burleson said. "They were good, and we were not playing well."

State's all-American David Thompson led the Pack in scoring with 34 points Saturday night against the Athletes in Action as State won its unofficial opener, 119-82.

Box Office takes ACC ticket orders

Although State's 1973-74 basketball season is only one game old, State students who want to see the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament in March better make plans now.

Student ticket orders for the 1974 tournament, to be held March 7, 8, and 9 in Greensboro, will be taken this week, Wednesday through Friday, at the Box Office inside Reynolds Coliseum between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

A TOTAL OF 200 tickets, out of the school's allotment of over 2,000 will be made available to students. A drawing will be held on Monday, December 10, in order to determine which students who place orders will get the tickets.

A check for $25 must accompany each order. A student must present his or her registration and ID and is limited to one ticket. Tickets will be mailed at a later date.

Last year, when only 182 students ordered tickets, State was one of three schools in the conference that made tickets available to students. The other two were Duke and Virginia.

Assistant Athletics Director Frank Weedon said the orders have to be taken in so "we can get it done early and know how many tickets will be taken." The tickets not bought by students will be taken by the Wolfpack Club.

Intramural Scene

-Ray Deltz

With one week remaining in the current semester, reports from the Intramural Department claim that this was the best semester participation-wise in the history of the school. "Participation in football and basketball was the greatest we've ever seen," said Rom Catlett enthusiastically. "This University has really become sports-oriented."

With most Fall sports completed, team scores in the Fraternity and Residence division have been pretty much finalized through the semester. In the Fraternity standings Delta Sig holds a fairly strong 100 point lead over second place SPE, while Sigma Chi holds down the number three spot. In the dormitory division, Owen II is situated nearly 100 points higher than the first two floors of Owen dorm, otherwise known as Owen I. Turlington stands at a close third.

WHILE WEDNESDAY NIGHT'S State-ECU hoop action in the Coliseum is not expected to be a real barnburner, its preliminary game, which will be for the Dixie Classic championship, might be the most exciting game of the evening. Delta Sig and Dink's Boys will tip-off at 6:15 Wednesday evening in Reynolds Coliseum.

Evidence of campus enthusiasm for Intramural basketball lies in the fact that the Intramural Department received over 120 entries to fill 72 slots for teams in both the Independent and Wildcard leagues.

Bragaw North I and Turlington loom as strong favorites in the Residence basketball league. PKP, the defending Fraternity champion, and Delta Sig, a perennial power, are viewed as the two strongest teams in the Fraternity ranks.

The Wildcard Basketball League will get underway this Tuesday evening, while the Independent League will tip-off the season on Thursday night.

One-on-One basketball looms as a possible addition to the Intramural program next semester. Discussions are underway but nothing final has been decided upon.

In the Co-Rec volleyball program, where a team is composed equally of men and women, Baker's Dozen became the first champions, beating Gini's Volleys, 15-11 and 15-8.

Strong ECU whips foes

East Carolina, a perennial wrestling power in the state, won every match in completely dominating the North Carolina Collegiate Wrestling Tournament Saturday afternoon in Chapel Hill.

State's wrestlers, looking for their best season in quite a while, placed two men in the finals but could not make it past the powerful Pirates for an individual championship.

Senior John Starkey made it to the finals in the 126 pound class but was pinned by ECU's Ketchan. Charlie Williams, another senior wrestling in the 158 pound class, lost a close 9-7 decision to Hall.

The Wolfpack's next competition will come this Friday afternoon when they travel to Boone to take on another of the state's top wrestling teams, Appalachian State.
