Polsby cites Watergate's ills

By Howard Barnett

Nelson W. Polsby, a professor of political science at the University of California at Berkeley, delivered the second annual Keating Lecture in the symposium, President and Congress in the '70's, Monday night in the Student Center ballroom.

Polsby's speech was devoted to Watergate, and he began it by assuring his audience that Watergate "is here to stay, that there are observers, analysts, moralists, and historians will be working for years to come to trace the causes and effects of this extraordinary, bizarre injury to the American body politic for years to come."

HE POINTED OUT the similarity between the Watergate affair and the Dreyfus case in France, quoting a statement by Mark Twain: "To my mind, this is irregular. It is unEnglish." Then Polsby pointed out a French Polsby scandal said in England to have been unknown to America usually involved money, while those in France generally resulted from political ideology counteracting into lobbies, with ideology justifying political acts.

"But as the Watergate story unfolds before us, we may have Americans justify all manner of irregular and extraneous political activity in the name of political commitment. It is un-American."

of a trillion to one. "At Berkeley, he successfully reproduced drawings which were hidden from his sight and at Yale, he was able to fix broken watches without touching them," the source said.

In trying to explain his ability, Geller said, "I believe that my power is generated through me by an energy source that I cannot control. I believe in God but I do not believe this is coming from God."

"The parapsychologists want to hear that the power comes from my mind. I don't want to get into those heavier things. I want to keep what I have to myself."

"THE LECTURES BOARD will also have Daniel Elsborg speak."

"Of course Elsborg is famous for the Pentagon Papers," said Parrnell. "There has been renewed interest in him ever since it was discovered that his psychiatrist's offices were broken into by Nixon's plunbers."

Elsborg will speak on "Political trials and integrity in the U.S.

April 1.

Originally Parrnell planned to have a woman speak then."

DUE TO THE EXPENSE and the fact that there were only a few dates available for the theater, we decided to have just these two lectures this semester," said Parrnell. Parrnell is planning to attend the Red Cross dancing in Houston next month. "I planned to have a strong program next year. I feel that the conference will help give me a headstart, " he said.

Wolfpack's 'Voice' succumbs to cancer

In accordance with the new petroleum allocation and price regulation guidelines, the university should receive an adequate amount of fuel oil this year.

A.W. Allers, purchasing agent for colleges and hospitals, said Tuesday afternoon that State should receive "100 percent of our current requirement for the base period of the calendar year 1973 with a 10-degree Fahrenheit reduction or ambient fuel savings."

ALLERS SAID THIS put the university in "fairly good shape."

APO holds march

The Wake County chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (S.P.C.A) and Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will hold the second annual March to Save the Animals this Saturday beginning at 8:30 a.m.

The funds raised by the event are used to maintain the animal shelter on Highway 70 near Garner.

adding that the amount of number six, a heavy, residual oil, and number two, an American heating oil, would "be predicted on the availability of the products."

He also noted that although the university should receive an adequate supply of fuel oil, the price of the product has increased sharply.

"Effective Jan. 12, the price of six number six diesel cents per gallon, which Allers called a "high jump." "The price for number two jumped by five cents a gallon."

"FUEL SAVINGS in superintendence of engineering and utilities, said, "That the university was presently paying 18.58 cents per gallon for number six fuel oil."

"The price hasn't been told to restrict anything, except to cut back on the temperature," Edwards said.

"Edward added that the heat in the office buildings is shut off late in the afternoon, and heating in the dormitories is turned on only at night and not in the morning of occupation."

"The price of the fuel has been following the chancellor's memo pretty closely, " he said."

"ALLERs SAID THAT temperatures would not necessarily have to be reduced in order to meet consumption requirements. "The requirements call for a reduction of 10 percent, and there are other actions equivalent to that," he said. "There are other means of conservation."

In a report issued by the National Association of College and University Business Officers, an interpretation of the guidelines said that consumption targets could be covered by the six number six diesel cents per gallon equivalent required for residential space, and classroom and library space would fall under the 10 degree reduction or equivalent required for commercial space.

Volunteers who participate in the march accompanied by a band are asked to agree to contribute a specific amount to the university.

The march will be held from 8:30 to 10 p.m. Refreshments will be provided for the marchers.

State professor exhibits photos

Dr. Robert N. Elliot of the History Department is currently giving a one-man exhibition of photographs.

Located in the Gallery of the Student Center, the exhibition features scenic rural pictures taken in tranquil settings.

Elliot has been trained in the craft of photography by M.F. Dunbar, the owner of a commercial-portrait studio in Charlotte. During World War II Dr. Elliot served in the First Motion Picture Unit, United States Army Air Force, based in Hollywood, California, working with a number of the leading cameramen and photographers in the motion picture industry.

"My interest in photography was aroused by the work of Margaret Bourke-White appearing first in Fortune magazine and then in Life during the 1930's. Later I saw a book of photographs by Edward Weston. These two photographers have been my principal influence," he remarked.

"The approach to photography is emotional. The play of light upon an object, or the relation of one object to another, can stimulate a desire to make a picture. No doubt these events that I record are distinct and different simply because I am distinct and different as a human being. But I must admit, however, that more often than not my pictures surprise me; I don't know how or why they turn out the way they do," he said.

"AS FOR TECHNICAL information, all the photographs exhibited were made with either a Leica or a Rolleiflex. I don't remember exposures, but rely upon a Weston Master Exposure Meter."

Dr. Elliot's work will be on exhibit in the Gallery now through February.

March saves animals

Priscilla the Pig, Romeo the Cat, and Clevy the Dog are looking forward to Saturday, January 26th, 1974.

The reason? That's the day the Wake County Chapter of the S.P.C.A. (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) and Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity held the second annual "March to Save the Animals," sponsored by the MSCS campus.

If it hadn't been for the funds earned by NC State students and participants from other schools last year, the animal shelter on Highway 70 near Garner would now be closed and Clevy would have had neither the medicine nor tender loving care that saved him. The lives of countless other starving, injured, and homeless animals...

The March will be kicked off at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, January 26th, in the parking lot of Riddick Stadium by Mayor Clarence Lightner, and will be led by Miss Wolfpack 1973 Barbara Wells. There are two ways to participate in this effort to keep the shelter going. Be a marcher — ask friends to sponsor you for a specific amount of money for every mile you walk. Be a sponsor — agree to contribute money to someone who will walk the 6 mile course.

LAST YEAR, about $15,000 was earned. That enabled the S.P.C.A. to pay off a long overdue mortgage thereby keeping the building, buy needed food, medicine, equipment, and hire an adequate staff. And now, a year later, the only money keeping the shelter open is the money walked for or contributed during the March last January.

The S.P.C.A. hopes to see you sometime on the 26th of January — anytime between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. There will be free food and drinks to give the added energy to go that far! For additional information, contact Al Bark at 833-5641.

Priscilla and Romeo will be on display now through Feb.2 at the Student Center.
A review

Mimi Garrard troupe

The Mimi Garrard Dance Company is one of the most fantastic companies ever to perform in Stewart Theatre. The audience last night witnessed a mixing of electronic media and dance into one of the most exciting presentations on campus since the multimedia days of Thompson Theater.

GARRARD'S HUSBAND, James Seawright, is responsible for much of the lighting and media, while Garrard has choreographed the program. The first half of the program ends with eight dancers on stage each in a different color pool of light. By the use of a computer the lights pulsate and change intensity during the number. The lights and music for the number were designed by Bell Telephone Laboratories by means of the GROOVE program and Honeywell DDP 224 computer.

In the final number the audience is taken on a trip more fantastic than that of 2001. By the use of movable screens and a movie projector, dots, lines and moving lines patterns are projected upon the dancers making them appear to disappear and re-appear again. It is mind boggling.

USING MUSIC from Mozart to the most modern in electronic music, the company performs a program of seven dances. Garrard dances in Alla Marci's comic, yet poignant, statement on war. She also performs in three other numbers.

The second part of the program begins with a dance called "SEX, and 7. The seven dancers wear head-dresses which are actually digital display units. The units are capable of changing numbers as the dancers move about the stage.

The company will give another performance tonight at 8. Student tickets are $1 and the performance is well worth the price of admission.

Psychology program gives on-job training to students

By Howard Barnett Staff Writer

Recruiting for a "human resources development project" being offered by the psychology department will be going on until Jan. 28. Under the program, students with a psychology major will be able to work for one semester at a full-time job in a human-relations related field and get academic credit for it.

Students in the program take one semester of skill training and then go on the job. The skill-training semester is offered only in the fall, but the student is not obligated to take work semester directly after that. Dr. Virginia Cowgell, who teaches all the psychology courses in the skill semester, said, "Students can get in the semester or work at any time. They are given a semester's credit for 14.6 weeks of full-time work.

A full semester consists of 12 hours credit.

STUDENTS USUALLY FIND that they can fit in one academic course in addition, though," she said, "The idea behind the program is that students will be working in areas where they really want to work, gaining experience with people." Students have worked in a number of areas, including training schools, personnel management, Project Enlightenment for children, and jobs in the area of mental health and mental retardation.

"ALL THOSE who think they might be interested in the program should apply," said Dr. Cowgell. "Applying doesn't obligate them to take the courses. It just means that I will notify them of further steps in signing up for it, and give them a chance to talk to students who have been involved in it before, and learn more about it."

In order to apply, the only thing a student must do is pick up an information form in Dr. Cowgell's office, 754 Poe, or outside the Psychology Department office in 640-D Poe. This form is filled out and sent to Dr. Cowgell.

"We look for students who are strong in working independently," said Cowgell. "Grades aren't all we look at. If someone has made a D in a course or two, but has done a lot of independent study, we would look at that.

STUDENTS INVOLVED in the program turn in a project having to do with the work they did after the semester is over. It is a report on the work they did, what it was like, and what they learned.

Mimi Garrard performs in Alla Marci's one of the seven dances in her electronic media and dance show.

For student forum

Sub-units proposed

By Kathie Easter

The committee to consider changes in Student Government decided today on an open meeting Monday what form their proposal will take to study: Student Body President, T. C. Carroll, formed the committee to consider some alternative to the present form of student government. Carroll proposed a "forum system" which would be open to all students. A form of the forum system has been accepted.

"We have definitely decided to go to a sub-unit form of government," said Powell.

Ideas under consideration include dividing the student body by school counsel and living areas (residence halls, off-campus, fraternal, etc.) Another alternative is to have the student body divided into equal groups by computer," he said.

UNDER THE sub-unit system, the executive branch of Student Government will remain relatively unchanged, "The Student Body President and his appointments to University committees will remain much as it is now," said Powell.

Only three students attended Monday's meeting. Powell urged attendance for the Wednesday meeting. "We have yet to decide the fate of the Student Senate. Should it be abolished, kept as is or radically changed? How should the sub-units be formed? We really need student input," said Powell.

The next meeting will be held at 4 p.m. today, in room 2104 of the Student Center.

That’s not helping population headache

Tuesday, a group calling themselves the Wake County chapter of Right to Life protested against the liberalized abortion laws that the N.C. Supreme Court on January 22, 1973. On the first anniversary of the ruling which made abortion legal in the District of Columbia, the protesters gathered in front of the N.C. Legislative Building to demonstrate to law makers that there is still widespread opposition to the ruling. The legislators in this state and in others would do well to ignore this group, but they should be aware that abortions only be performed when some health hazard to the mother would be presented by allowing the child to be born, is ridiculous by any rational stretch of the imagination.

The advocacy of an anti-abortion amendment to the constitution, authored by that nemesys of liberalism Jesse Helms, by these people, is, of course, their right. But they are somewhat misguided in their beliefs and their espoused concerns.

As the name of the group implies, they believe in each individual’s right to live, demonstrate, on Tuesday, in , that the fetus, the unborn fetus if the mother’s life is endangered. Who is to say that the life of the mother is more important than that of the child? If others are setting themselves up as God by condoning abortion, as many anti-abortionists claim, then are not the anti-abortionists doing the same thing by seeming to prefer one life over another? The answer seems quite obvious. But the self-righteous stance of these people is far more damaging than that.

A decision must be made whether or not the earth can sustain the population explosion by any society which allows unwanted and often discarded beings to continue to be born because of ignorance of contraception or other assorted reasons. The population explosion is a very real and serious crisis that is upon the earth now, but even more so in the future. Unwanted and unsupported children place a heavy weight on an already strained environment — and besides that, in all humanity, very often they lead lives of futility, starvation when they can find a means by which to live.

The anti-abortion groups claim that a fetus is a human being the moment it is conceived. This seems like an arbitrary point at which to begin. Why can it not be claimed that the spermatozoon and the ovum are actually human beings, since they are somewhat important components of the entire human being? If so, then masturbation in the male is tantamount to murder. Kind of ridiculous.

The intentions of the Right to Life group are not as humanitarian as they may outwardly seem at first glance. When things are legal and abortions, they showed more morality and social conscience than do the members of this group. The Supreme Court was right. And Right to Life is wrong.

A story syndicated by College Press Service, Feb. 23, debuts the myth that liberalized marijuana laws lead to increases in criminality. Advocates of this liberalization are led by the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), has long argued that there was no substantial documentation for the charges that marijuana use caused an increase in crime. In fact, now the opposition seems to have been proven in Oregon, a state which for three months has used a reduced marijuana law. These results will hopefully have an effect on the rest of the United States.

The new laws do not legalize the possession of marijuana but they are quite an improvement over the antiquated laws that exist in most states. The maximum penalty for the possession of an ounce or less of the weed is a $100 fine by citation, no matter what the number of convictions. Also, there is no criminal record compiled on the offender. The program works more like an officer issuing a traffic ticket than those presently in effect, which work more like putting a dollar for dollar penalty for Oregon. There is a lesson to be learned from the experience. The forward looking legislators of the state, somewhat dubious about the new laws at first, have been pleasantly surprised by their results. If it can happen in Oregon, it can and should happen here.

A Sentinel News Bureau study reported yesterday that unless financial support is forthcoming and dissemination increased, the twice weekly publication may be reduced to a single issue per week. Certainly, this was a discouraging news blow to the students and the campus community. There is still a chance, however, that funds will be forthcoming from several requests for financial assistance that the State Sentinel Corporation board of directors have made.

Before the creation of the State Sentinel, there was a precipitous news void in the area of state and national affairs as far as the campus was concerned. The Technician, due to its thrice weekly publication and the great amounts of campus news to be condensed into three newspapers, was unable to adequately cover these news areas. City newspapers, although disseminated on campus, did not always reach all the students. The State Sentinel helps to fill this void.

This specialty of the newspaper has been in reporting goings-on and personalities of North Carolina state government, some of which the Technician has been unable to do with any great regularity. If the demise of the State Sentinel turns out to be unavoidable, students will no longer have this valuable insight available to them.

Another benefit of the State Sentinel is that it gives students a morning reading alternative to the local newspapers. With the combination of the Technician and the State Sentinel, students have available to them the equivalent of a daily paper, something a campus the size of State has long needed.

The State Sentinel staff has proven to be a courageous lot, dedicated to the highest principles of journalism. They have rarely backed down from an impending battle. They have been staid in standing by their opinions once they have been arrived at. As with most newspapers, the State Sentinel has sometimes been wrong, but they are to be applauded for their adherence to principled reporting.

Hopefully, all those who realize the importance of a free and unbridled press will come to the aid of the State Sentinel because they are in financial straits at this time. Not only does the newspaper provide a healthy competition for the local papers, but it provides them with different perspective on news and events.

A campus asset such as the State Sentinel cannot be taken for granted or an untimely death. Since its inception, it has been an asset to the university community. Financial resources can be built up by people who care. If enough of these band together, perhaps the State Sentinel can be saved as a twice weekly campus newspaper. The State Sentinel shows that a student newspaper can excel without the help of "involuntarily assessed student fees." It would indeed be a shame to see such a publication fold so quickly.
Gulf no 'rip off'

To the Editor:
Re: Letter of M. S. Phillips
Enclosed please find a check for $12.01 that Mr. Phillips claims he was overcharged. He was not.
My manager and I both were under the impression that we had Mr. Phillips' permission to do to the car whatever it took to restore the engine to its original tune-up condition. The back plug was a definite part of this tune-up. As far as we know the car performed properly as Mr. Phillips had no complaints at the time he picked up his car, nor has he contacted us at all I found out about his complaint by reading your paper.
I have been in this location in Cameron Village for 20 years and have never cheated or knowingly overcharged anybody. I have always settled any differences to the customer's satisfaction, but I cannot do this unless contacted and given a chance. It has always been my policy that nothing is done to the car without the customer's full permission and understanding. Obviously, in Mr. Phillips' opinion we did not have permission, although he did not inform us of that when he picked up his car. Thus the refund.
We are not a "Rip Off" Service Station, and the students nor anyone else need NOT be wary when they drive into Cameron Village Gulf.
C. Stuart Uphurich
[Editor's Note: The refund check is in the office of the University Student Center, Mr. Phillips may claim it by coming in and identifying himself.]

Inaccuracies

To the Editor:
I refer to the interview with Spurgeon Cameron about campus planning. I feel that you have discussed one of the better public journalism articles that Education has ever seen.

Even though the Technician has printed several factual articles on the Rocky Branch project, you chose to print the words of a man who has never attempted to contact the Facilities Planning office to gather the correct facts about the project, and therefore, Mr. Cameron's interview contained several inaccuracies.

By claiming that "there is an awful lot wrong with the planning of this campus" and then failing to counter the exact nature of his complaints, Mr. Cameron is failing in any efforts at constructive criticism. Even though I am 100% against the Rocky Branch project, to condemn the entire campus planning by one ill-conceived project which has already been halted for further study is unfair. Mr. Cameron could take his concerns to a critic of campus planning and if he were to enumerate those aspects he sees as wrong and then offer us some alternatives.

Bill Jackson, "the Voice of the Wolfpack" for the past 12 years, will be missed at State. The man who helped bring the excitement of State sports into the homes of many fans died early Monday morning at the age of 56.

JACKSON, ALONG WITH WALLY Ausley, started broadcasting State sporting events in 1961 on the Wolfpack Sports Network and radio station WPTF. This writer only met Jackson recently, but has always held a high respect for him. As a young follower of the Wolfpack, I would always tune in to the radio and without fail I would hear the voice so familiar to many.

For many basketball games, I would sit by the radio and listen to Jackson on the Wolfpack. There were times that even when the Pack was on television I would turn on the radio and without fail I would hear the voice so familiar to many.

Wolpack runners place in first meet of season

State wrestlers beat VPI, 30-10
