

Pack edges out Terps: Amen, amen

by Jim Pomeranz

GREENSBORO —The biggest game of the season was to get underway at 8:40 p.m.

The time was 7:45.

Maryland band players were tuning their instruments to "North Carolina," the state's theme song.

The time was 8:00.

"MARYLAND, My Maryland" could be heard loud and clear throughout the Greensboro Coliseum. Played by the Terrapin band, of course.

The time was 8:03.

Retailation time. State's pep band struck up the NCSU Fight Song with caissons and all.

The time was 8:10.

State's band had played two rounds of the Wolfpack fight song, and now it was Maryland's turn again. Not a fight song, but it was loud. Loud enough so everyone would see who was playing.

The time was 8:18.
STATE RETURNED the favor with another song. Applause filled the arena. The crowd was with the Wolfpack band.

The time was 8:25.
Maryland's basketball team was on the court practicing. State's was in the dressing room.

The time was 8:30.
Here's the Wolfpack. The band struck up five rounds of the caissons again, and the crowd went wild.

The time was 8:39:38.

STATE'S BAND had played the national anthem, and it was time for one more caisson before the game started. The crowd went wild.

Maryland's band tried to get a few songs into the act, but the yelling for the Wolfpack prevented many people from hearing them.

The time was 8:40.
The ball went up in the air and State controlled the tap. Maryland though burst into the lead and held it the majority of the game. State fans had been subdued except for a few bright moments when the Pack rallied.

THE GAME WENT on in the second half tooth and nail. State built a five point lead, and Maryland wiped it out. Maryland's band and fans tried to show up the combined efforts of the State, Carolina, Duke, Wake Forest, Clemson, and Virginia cheering sections. "Go Terps Go" could faintly be heard.

The Pack was not to be denied. Tied 97-97 with no time on the clock overtime began. The crowd began yelling louder and louder. Both bands wanted to play all the time, and they did.

The lead changed hands four times in the extra period. Each time the fans got off their feet to cheer their favorite team.

There were six seconds remaining on the clock in the best basketball game ever.

MONTE TOWE stepped to the line and sank two clutch free throws. The scoreboard showed State in the lead, 103-100.

Maryland could not score. State had won the 1974 ACC basketball tournament.

The crowd stood and began to cheer:
"Amen, amen, amen."

Winstead replaces Kelly as provost

Dr. Nash Winstead was approved Friday by the University Board of Governors to replace Dr. Harry Kelly as provost and vice chancellor for State.

The office is second to that of chancellor, and has been held by Kelly for the past 12 years. Kelly is retiring from the post June 30.

Winstead, who has been associate provost for seven years, was chosen from a group of over 100 applicants from across the nation. A "provost search committee" processed the applications and recommended Winstead over all of them, feeling he had the best qualifications for the job.

COMMENTING ON HIS appointment, Winstead said, "I've been working with Provost Kelly for many years now, and I consider it a pleasure to have been associated with him."

He said that "one of the most important challenges" he would face in his new position would be to "help the university to move in new directions with a limitation in resources."

"We have reached the stage at State where resources come harder," said Winstead. "I think that the times of rapid growth as far as enrollment goes is over, and we are going to have to concentrate on other things, and make adjustments."

With reference to the HEW ruling and the "affirmative action" program, Winstead said he hoped that State could not only meet its goals, but exceed them. "I think the goals approved by the Board of Governors are very realistic," he said. "That's another area which is very challenging, and I would hope we can meet that challenge."

HE CONCLUDED that he was "very honored" to be selected, and added, "I'm really looking forward to working with the faculty and students, and I hope we can work together and make this university a better one by the time I leave than it was when I got here, and I think it's a very good one already."

Chancellor Caldwell described Winstead as "wonderfully well-acquainted and well-prepared for the position," and said that the university was "fortunate to have him."

"The committee recommended him very strongly to me," said Caldwell. "They responded to the fact that he is a hard-working individual and to his strong sense of integrity and fairness."

CALDWELL ADDED that the transition from Kelly to Winstead should be a "smooth one," because of Winstead's close relation with Kelly and intimate knowledge of the workings of the administration.

Carroll announces plans for activities

by Jean Jackson

In a press conference Sunday afternoon, Student Body President T. C. Carroll and aide Eric Weber outlined a schedule of events to take place this week. The schedule includes a campout, a brickyard rally, and a party, all to be held as a follow-up to a set of requests made by Carroll to Chancellor Caldwell Feb. 21.

The requests were made during a meeting with Caldwell. They included a price decrease in parking decals, access to the first floor of the Print Shop for black students, a 10% price decrease in Students Supply Stores prices for textbooks and other course-related materials, and action by the administration to insure privacy for dorm residents. At this time, Carroll also called on the student body to wear red armbands if they agreed with one or all of these requests.

CARROLL PROPOSED a deadline of March 11, by which time he requested some action be taken. In a letter to Carroll, Caldwell stated that the deadline had "no relevance" to any of Carroll's requests.

The campout will be held Tuesday night at the Bell Tower and is aimed, according to Weber, at demonstrating to the administration that there is "as much privacy on the grass as in their (the students') own rooms."

Wednesday's noon brickyard rally will be highlighted by speeches on each of Carroll's four requests. Carroll will outline the history of the requests and then the audience will be invited to speak on the topics presented. Carroll requested that those wishing to speak at Wednesday's rally notify him before then.

IN ADDITION, a party will be held

Thursday night in the parking lot of the Print Shop. Carroll urged the student body to attend and show their support of his proposals.

Carroll stressed that the red armband "is not anti-anything. It says a student feels rather strongly about one or all of the proposals."

"This is not a radical movement," Carroll further stated.

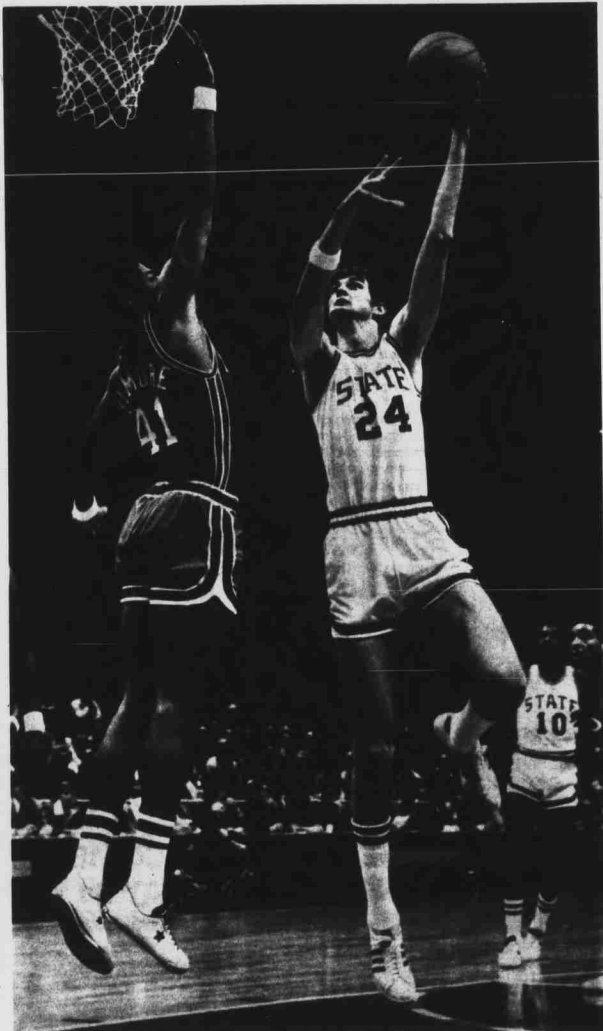

CARROLL STATED that he had "gone through the proper channels" in attempting to have his requests met, as advised by the chancellor, but had not made any progress.

When contacted for comment, the chancellor stated that he had "no objection" to Carroll's proposed activities, but added, "I don't think these kinds of activities will speed up any decisions."

"I never understood the reason behind the March 11 deadline," he added, "and I told him (Carroll) that in a letter. I guess that's still the way it is."

Tommy Burleson showed ACC fans why he should have been chosen on the All-Conference first team against Maryland. The 7-4 State center scored 38 points, pulled down 15 rebounds, and captured the Everett Case MVP Award.

Burleson Pivotman gives first team performance

by Jim Pomeranz

Tommy Burleson had been quite a few sports writers' pick for second team all-ACC this season. But funny enough, he was considered good enough to make second team all-American.

Many people began to wonder if the pick for the second ACC team would make the 7-4 center angry sometime in the future. Specifically, would Burleson show the conference writers exactly what he could do with the roundball in the ACC tournament.

THE WHOLE STORY can be summed up with 38 points, 13 rebounds, a few blocked shots, and intimidation.

That's how Tommy Burleson performed against Maryland in State's championship win over the Terrapins, 103-100.

Tommy had been left off the first team all-conference, and the coaches in the conference were hoping Burleson would not be created into a super player because of it.

VIRGINIA COACH Bill Gibson was looking forward to playing State in the semi-finals, but he dreaded having to play against Burleson.

"Tommy is upset about not making first team all-ACC, and he will be out to prove something," Gibson declared after his Cavaliers had defeated Clemson, 68-63, Thursday night. "I hope he doesn't."

The next night, as State beat Virginia, 87-66, even though Burleson was not considered the star for the Wolfpack, the big man scored 15 points and pulled down 11 rebounds.

Burleson was devastating against Maryland. One advantage he has over opposing centers is his hook shot. When Tommy spins around and flings the ball toward the rim, it is already on its downward path, and any hand touching the ball is called for goal tending.

TOMMY HOOKED many shots, and was always putting in layups, but what he did with a high degree of greatness was shoot from the outside. Burleson banked shots in from eight and ten feet, continuously.

"I'm happy Tom Burleson had a super game," State head coach Norm Sloan commented after the game.

"Burleson had a fabulous, fabulous night," complemented Maryland head coach Lefty Driesell after the game. "We tried fronting him, we tried siding him. Nothing worked. He was super fired up, and leaving him off the first team got him super fired up."

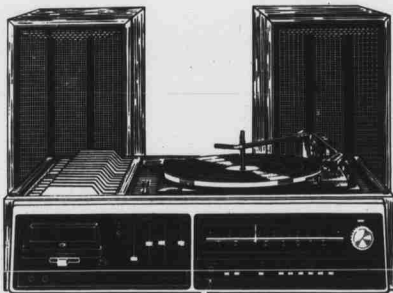

DAVID THOMPSON, who added 29 points for State against Maryland, got into the Burleson comment column. "Tommy played the greatest game of his career," stated the State all-American. "He was the man tonight."

In the dressing room Driesell walked up to Burleson, shook his hand and said, "That was the greatest game I've ever seen a big man play. Good luck in the NCAA."

Before the game was over Burleson had jumped higher than he had in his career, and had gone to the basket more than he had in any previous contest. He played a super ball game. He is a super player.

And appropriately he was awarded the Everett Case Award for being the Most Valuable Player of the tournament. It was the second year in a row he has collected the cherished trophy, and it was much deserved.

This is a recipe for an especially good date bar. They keep up to three weeks (but they will probably be all gone long before that) and are good for packing in lunches.

Date Bars

3 eggs
1 c sugar
1 c minus 1 T flour
1 t baking powder

1/2 lb. pitted dates
1 c walnuts
1 t vanilla
1/4 t salt

Separate the eggs and beat the egg yolks until they are lemon colored. Chop the nuts and cut the dates into small pieces. Add the sugar, dates, nuts, and vanilla to the egg yolks. Add the sifted dry ingredients. (The mixture will seem quite dry.) Beat the egg whites until they form peaks and fold into the first mixture. (This will be a bit difficult but you will gradually get a thick batter.) Spread into a 9x13 inch pan and bake at 350° for 20-25 minutes. Cut into bars while slightly warm, and sprinkle with powdered sugar. This recipe makes about 5 dozen cookies.

HOWEVER, Dr. Raymond F. Saxe, a professor in the Nuclear Engineering Department at State, disagrees with Another complaint that environmentalists have is that nuclear power stations could "go wrong" and cause a nuclear holocaust. However, according to Dr. Saxe, this is impossible. He contends that because of the construction of reactors, the worse that could happen would be for the entire contents of the reactor to be spilled out onto the ground in a non-violent sort of explosion (a reactor cannot

In order to keep the reactor from getting out of hand at all, there is an extremely complex control system. This system consists of 4 "redundant" controls which are arranged so that the reactor is still in rein even if 2 of the controls fail. In SAXE ADMITS that the biggest question mark with a nuclear station is the so-called Loss of Coolant Accident (LOCA). The core of every reactor is contained in a large vessel of water which keeps the core from melting. If the core of a reactor were to melt, the reactor would "fizzle" releasing its radioactivity.

"That accident is highly unlikely. We've done our best to make the probability zero," Saxe continued. If the LOCA were to occur, hopefully the Emergency Core Cooling System (ECCS) would work. But, he said, there has never been a full scale test "for obvious reasons". Therefore no scientist can honestly guarantee that such an accident will never Saxe also contends that the problem of thermal pollution has been overcome by cooling towers. Furthermore, he says that the radioactive pollution caused by nuclear power stations is not of the terrifying proportions which the public is led to believe.

MVP Tommy Burleson scores two of his 38 points against Maryland.

Some appear to be afraid of streakers

Our neighbor to the south, the Palmetto State, could lead the way in a new wave of law and order. The South Carolina Legislature is considering a bill that would ban streaking on its campuses. Such a bold and daring move would pave the way for the extermination of the nation's latest criminal type — the dangerous streaker.

In the past few weeks, the newest collegiate craze of dashing through public areas in the buff has spread to college campuses across the nation. The streaking fad has certainly been felt in this area, with streaks occurring at Carolina, Duke, and here as well.

Technician

A paper that is entirely the product of the student body becomes at once the official organ through which the thoughts, the activity, and in fact the very life of the campus, is registered. It is the mouthpiece through which the students themselves talk. College life without its journal is blank.

—the Technician, vol. 1, no. 1, February 1, 1920

The waiting is over

Pick a hero, any hero in State's overtime victory over Maryland Saturday night in the championship game of the ACC Tournament. The thrilling 103-100 Wolfpack win will surely go down in the record books as one of the greatest games ever played throughout the history of the conference.

Monte Towe, Moe Rivers, Phil Spence, Tim Stoddard, and yes, the great David Thompson each carried the Pack's banner at crucial times in the hotly contested triumph. But none carried the banner quite so high (that's right) as 7-4 Tommy Burleson, State's "second string" all-conference center. His performance that night, which incidentally won him the tourney's MVP award for the second consecutive year, will be talked about long after he hangs up his red-and-white jersey for the last time.

However, take nothing away from the Terrapins. Their performance during the ACC Tournament set new marks in the record book. Indeed, for their first 90 minutes of playing time in the tournament, the Terps threatened to transform this year's tourney into a showcase of their own talents, blitzing past Duke, Carolina, and for a while, the Wolfpack. Maryland's domination of the Tar Heels in the semi-final round was certainly unexpected, and definitely awesome.

The Maryland team that the Pack met and defeated on two earlier occasions this season was certainly a much improved team in the tournament. Certainly much credit should go to Coach Lefty Driesell and his team for their overall showing in the tournament. The Terps were a different team following their loss to the Wolfpack in Cole Field House last month. Should State go on to win the NCAA championship, it is entirely logical to assume that Saturday night's contest was the one which decided the national championship. Even the most devout Pack followers must admit that it is a shame that both teams could not represent the ACC in the NCAA tournament. As this goes to press, neither Maryland nor Carolina have been invited to the NIT, but both are deserving of a bid, and we hope both do go.

As for the Wolfpack, it is certainly poetic justice that it now gets the chance to test its mettle in the NCAA's following its second perfect conference showing on top of last year's 27-0 season. All those theories on what might have been can now be tested for their validity. Thousands of self-appointed "coaches" in this area can now see how their game strategy would work.

All Wolfpack followers have waited eagerly for this moment ever since State capped its perfect season last year with the tournament crown. Now the Pack has the chance, and win or lose, it will certainly be a monumental year for Wolfpack basketball.

Though streaking has been attracting only a small number of actual participants, streaks at some major universities have drawn crowds of thousands. And while at times these things have gotten out of hand, it is nothing to really be concerned about. There are certainly more concerns of a higher priority to be dealt with than streaking.

This is just another example of bureaucratic bumbling. The nation, including South Carolina, is presently faced with shortages in fuel, high prices in just about everything, high unemployment, and rampant inflation that has put us in the first stages of a recession. With all these mounting problems surrounding us, it is just incredible that legislators would concentrate their efforts on a harmless college fad. Well, after what we've been through lately, it's not really that surprising after all.

Streaking is just another in a long line of campus fads, which includes goldfish swallowing, stuffing telephone booths, and the like. While these earlier fads probably offended somebody, there were no laws passed against them. This present craze will eventually die out too, unless prudish legislators are determined to make such an issue out of it. With the advent of springlike temperatures, plus all the hassles in day-to-day living, a little streaking does a lot to divert attention from these problems. It's harmful, it's fun for those involved, and after it's over no one has been hurt and no property damaged. So what is the big problem that these legislators see?

If the South Carolina legislature does pass an anti-streaking measure, it will mean that those elected officials want to set back the state's system of higher education a good century or two, locking up students in their rooms at dusk and not letting them out again until morning classes. That apparently is the setup these legislators desire. Perhaps it would be better yet to vote these people out of office in the next election. And just to get your point across, why don't you streak to the polls?

Vietnam amnesty

Let them back into their homeland

Eight Congressional bills calling for amnesty for deserters and draft dodgers went before a House judiciary committee Friday. Hopefully, out of all these resolutions, a final edition will be approved that would grant amnesty to those who have been driven into hiding or have been sentenced to prison for their beliefs.

The Vietnam conflict, besides being the longest in our history, has clearly been the most controversial as well. Hundreds of young men have sought refuge in Canada and other countries in order to avoid the draft. These people have made a decision that could affect their whole way of life — it's a decision that they should never have had to face.

America's involvement in the Indo-China War, which began during the Eisenhower administration and reached its peak during LBJ's term, has been rife with dissension, war crimes, and political manipulation. The Vietnam war was the downfall of one president, Johnson, and in history's final verdict, could also leave a blot on Richard Nixon's record as well.

It is not surprising then that many of this country's youth would refuse to serve in such a conflict under these conditions. This undeclared war tore asunder the soul of America, putting the country in turmoil for an entire decade. The Vietnam conflict was a prime factor in the public's loss of confidence in its government's functions.

This is not to discredit those who did fight in Vietnam, and who served with honor. They too had a decision to make, and they chose to go. The young men who chose the alternative solution, to resist the draft, did so in the face of adversity, knowing quite well the consequences. These men chose to abide by their conscience instead of society's rule. In doing this, they displayed a rare form of courage.

Opponents of amnesty argue that such a bill would jeopardize the operation of the selective service should it be reactivated in the future. This could prove to be true, should a future war follow the pattern of Vietnam. But in a legitimate war, if such a thing is possible, America would certainly be able to count on its manpower to fill the ranks, provided that her involvement in the conflict was justified.

As the nation approaches its 200th anniversary, it would be only fitting to welcome these men and their families back to their homeland. America, despite her faults, is still a land of great accomplishments and a proud people. Amnesty would serve to mark America as a land of the free in the eyes of the world, and would continue to bring hope to these troubled times.

Participants cracking up during sex doctor's bag

I am presently not eating meat and have been assured by several books and people that quality protein is more easily assimilated by eating cheese, milk, nuts, etc.

Recently, I have also read that dairy products may be bad to eat too. Do you think it's safe to eat only fruits and vegetables and drink their juices and, of course, drink water? A higher mental plane is said to be achieved, along with the disappearance of earthly or physical ailments. The protein requirement is satisfied by consuming the various amino acids present in fruits and vegetables.

An adequate diet is entirely possible to achieve without eating any meat, since ample amount of necessary proteins can be obtained from milk, eggs, soy beans and other foods. However, once one abandons milk, cheese and eggs and moves to a more completely vegetarian diet, it becomes more and more difficult to maintain adequate nutrition and vitamin intake.

Eating only fruits and vegetables is bound to result in malnutrition sooner or later unless you are living in a metabolic research unit where they can carefully measure what they are putting into you and supplement your diet with various concentrated forms of certain foods.

I suspect that the higher mental plane achieved with such diets is hard to differentiate from the giddiness some people experience when they are delirious. I would discourage you strongly from trying any of the diets that eliminate dairy products.

I have a sensitive penis. After intercourse, I develop small cracks on my penis which can cause pain and soreness, especially during erection. I have been told this is due to a common vaginal acid. One time the acid caused such pain that continued erection was impossible. I understand I can use a condom to counteract this, but problems can arise, especially if the girl feels I do not trust her claim that she uses birth control. A discussion of the problem is also very mood breaking. Is there any other way to solve my problem?

Penises are extraordinary sensitive devices. The end of the penis, or glans, is especially sensitive being the area where the greatest number of nerve endings are concentrated. Many men have such sensitive penises that they experience great pain on stimulation of the glans following orgasm, but you seem to be describing something else.

The slight amount of acidity that might exist in the vagina is certainly not enough to cause disintegration of your penis. The most likely explanation is that you have a condition known as balanitis, an inflammation of the head of the penis, in which small cracks can open and just about anything will cause pain. The condition almost always occurs in the uncircumcised.

Curing it requires exposing the glans to air for substantial periods of time with the foreskin pulled back. Since it is illegal in most jurisdictions to stroll around with one's penis waving in the breeze, you can resort to small interludes of nudity in your domicile. This often is not enough. Therefore, if it is balanitis that you suffer from and you are not circumcised, circumcision is recommended. A visit to a urologist can help define your situation more accurately.

I have this friend who laughs every time he has an orgasm. Is this normal? He is usually pretty stoned by the time he climaxes so does this have anything to do with his laughing?

Sex is supposed to be enjoyable so, as long as the laughing is not distracting you, I wouldn't worry about it. Being stoned certainly may have something to do with it but this would be dependent upon his preexisting mood.

First Wolfpack streak peters out

Sanford native Jim Pomeranz, organizer of State's first big streak, seems to be predicting State's ACC tournament victory over the Maryland Terrapins.

The "In Case You Missed It" for the week of February 25-March 1 was without a doubt the State Streak. My sympathies go to those of you who had already left the campus for break. You may never see anything like it again, unless, of course, Jim Pomeranz organizes another one.

EMERALD ISLE—All right Fraternities, take note: If you're planning a get-away weekend in April, I've found just the place for you...The Islander Motor Inn. It's a very nice motel, on quiet Emerald Isle, just down the road from Atlantic Beach (and they welcome fraternities).

And let's face it, you'll just be going to the beach for some sun and serious drinking, so you don't need the party atmosphere of Myrtle Beach's Spanish Galleon.

Anyway, The Islander offers you its Red Room...complete with music and dance floor (and the first drink is free to the motel's guests.) As their pamphlet says, the Red Room "provides a very friendly atmosphere." (And they're not kidding.)

This State student took off for Emerald Isle over Spring Break for a little rest, relaxation and reading (catching up on some reading, that is.) But, due to the "friendly atmosphere" I can't say that I did a great deal of resting or reading. But, believe me, it was a relaxing week.

So, for "that" weekend, Fraternities, check out The Islander. Just tell Russ and Lisa I sent you...and just maybe they'll think about advertising with the Technician.

This week's "Student of the Week" is Richard Zuendt. If you didn't pick up a Technician on the Friday before Spring Break then you don't know what this is all about. Happy guessing!

Welcome Back...Hope you had a good vacation!

Will streakers, spectators really get bored with it all?

[Reprinted from the Sanford Herald.]

In spring, a young man's fancy turns lightly to thoughts of...well, sometimes the strangest things, especially if he's enrolled in an institution of higher learning.

Latest fad among some of the students at North Carolina colleges and universities is streaking, sometimes defined as the art of running about the countryside in your birthday suit.

The University of North Carolina, which has had some trouble with North Carolina State's basketball teams of late, at least appears to have fielded a superior streaking team this season.

The Tar Heel streakers apparently have set a new intercollegiate record.

Some people appear to be a bit upset at the streaking fad which has hit several campuses. But it appears to us to be certainly more healthful than such former manifestations of spring fever as goldfish-swallowing and phone booth-stuffing.

And it certainly beats taking over the Dean's office or setting fire to the library.

Streaking is not exactly a brand new phenomenon. It has occurred in past springs on other campuses across the country, but this appears to be the first time it has made much of a ripple among North Carolina schools.

It, like all the other fads, will soon become boring to the participants and onlookers, and the students will go on to something else.

Let's hope that the next fad will be equally as harmless as this one has appeared to be.

Wolfpack swimmers take ACC crown

by Ken Lloyd

There doesn't seem to be a whole lot more for State's power-packed swimming team to accomplish in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

After winning its record fourth straight conference title March 2 in Durham, it is difficult to conceive what the Wolfpack can do for an encore. Coach Don Easterling's crew totaled 689 1/2 points over the three day affair, which was more than the combined total of Carolina and Maryland, the next two finishers.

TWO YEARS ago, State went to the ACC championships with the goal of amassing more points than had ever been done in history. They did just that with little effort.

Then last season up at Virginia, the Wolfpack set out to win every event on the card. Once again they succeeded, winning all 18 events.

Thus, there wasn't much left to accomplish this year. But state wanted to win 68 places among the top twelve finishers and place 51 in the top six. The Pack fell four short of the first goal and five shy of the latter.

STATE ALSO managed to win "only" 13 first and tied for another. That's not bad though for a team that chose not to shave when everyone else did.

"When you get 18 of 18 (firsts) one year, what do you do the next?" asked Easterling, who has built a bonafide powerhouse at State. "It was hard to get the kids up."

"We could have won them all if we had wanted to," continued the coach, "but we didn't want to shave."

WITH THE exception of the meet with the strong University of Miami squad in early January, the Pack has had little competition all season. Easterling sees he will have to get more quality competition in the future in order to better prepare for the nationals.

"We are going to have to fatten our schedule some," he noted. "We are going to have to get Tennessee, SMU, and maybe some Big 10 schools. And we are going to have to start going to the Easterns (Intercollegiate Championships) every year."

As far as the ACC championships were concerned, Easterling said he "was pleased in places." State swimmers and divers broke or tied four school marks and three conference records.

DIVER MIKE DEGRUY, runner-up in the NCAA last year on the three-meter board, started things off Thursday by assaulting his own ACC mark. His score of 514.74 broke his record set earlier in the season by 10 points. He led a Wolfpack sweep of the first three places as he was followed by Rick Moss and freshman Keith Kenner.

DeGruy also captured the competition on the three meter board. Wolfpack divers David Pope, Moss, Thad Szostak, and Kenner grabbed the next four places.

Kris Kubik, one of State's freshmen, was a record setter in both backstroke events even though he was not shaved. He tied the conference mark at 100 yards with a time of 53.23 in the prelims and set the ACC record at 200 yards with a clocking of 1:57.07 in the finals. He also swam on State's winning 400 medley relay team.

ANOTHER FRESHMAN, Ted Morlok, eclipsed the other record in the 100 butterfly. His time of 51.00 was good enough to edge teammate Steve Gregg for a school mark.

Gregg, meanwhile, was State's only other individual double winner. The sensational freshman captured the 500 free and the 200 butterfly. He was also on the Pack's winning 800 free relay squad.

In the 50 freestyle, sophomore Chuck Raburn went the distance in the prelims in 21.09, the fifth fastest time in the country this season. But he was beaten in the finals by teammate Tony Corliss, who was just beaten out by Maryland's Tom Cullinane for first in the 100 free.

OTHER INDIVIDUAL winners for State were Mark Elliott in the 200 free, Ral Baric in the 400 individual medley, and Chris Mapes, who tied for first, in the 200 breaststroke.

State's other three losses came in 1650 free, where Baric was the Pack's highest finisher in fifth place; in the 200 IM, where Ed Foulke was the top State finisher in fifth; and in the 100 breaststroke where a pair of Virginia swimmers nipped Mapes in the showdown.

State's 400 free relay team of Jim Schliestett, Raburn, Elliott, Corliss recorded the nation's fifth best time in the event even though they were all unshaved.

EASTERLING also had praise for a couple of his walk-on swimmers. Bill Campbell finished sixth in both the 50 and 100 freestyles while Rich Peot finished sixth in the 1650 free with a time of 17:09.96. "That was like a world record for him," said Easterling of the latter's performance.

State is now preparing to send nine swimmers and two divers to the NCAA championships at Long Beach, Calif. later this month. The total is the most a State team has ever qualified for the national finals.

"We are going to start tapering down now," noted Easterling, who led State to a seventh place finish in the nation last year. "We are going to work on our relay exchanges, starts and turns."

ACC TOURNAMENT notes: Present on Friday night was North Carolina Governor Jim Holshouser. The head of state government made sure that he made no enemies while at the tournament.

While State was playing against Virginia in the first game the governor was sporting a red jacket with N.C. State monogrammed on it. After that game Holshouser exited and returned a few minutes later wearing a light blue sports coat in support of Carolina of course against Maryland.

better now than I did this time a year ago."

The Deacons defeated Carolina, 54-52, in the opening round last year in an overtime game that went into the additional period on a successful shot with one second on the clock, and was won on a last second shot in the extra period.

IT WAS GENERALLY felt by sportswriters that Duke coach Neal McGeachy would be released from his job in the next couple of weeks. Two names that were circulating as his replacement were Southern Cal's Bob Boyd and Maryland's Lefty Driesell.

Lefty was drilled by a reporter as to where he would be coaching next year, and his reply was, "Well, I guess Maryland."

"I haven't been offered another job, but Mr. Kehoe (the Maryland Athletic Director) and I haven't talked yet," he said. Driesell also commented that if he was offered a better job he might take it.

"What about being a sportswriter?" jokingly came a question.

"Naw, I don't think so," replied Lefty as he scratched his head. "My English ain't too good, anyway."

AFTER CAROLINA had defeated Wake Forest, 76-62, in the first round on Thursday, Tar Heel coach Dean Smith approached the microphone in the interview room and announced, "I sure feel a lot
