Chugger (?) Thomas is Chancellor

by Jim Pomeranz
Associate Editor

"Joab's capacity to drink faster than anyone else used to amaze us," stated University of Alabama biology professor Joseph C. O'Kelley. "He could open his throat, and then pour down a beer without pausing until it was finished. I've seen him challenge students to chugging contests, and not have them believe how fast he could do it. One student claimed he was champion, and that he could beat Joab. But it was no contest."

O'Kelley was referring to the man that was named State's Chancellor last Friday: Dr. Joab Langston Thomas, vice president of student affairs at Alabama. Thomas was unanimously named to the chancellorship in a special meeting of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors in Stewart Theatre.

But according to Thomas, the story about his drinking beer "was thrown all out of proportions."

"A newspaperman (from the Raleigh Times) was calling people all over here to find out some anecdotes, some funny stories, about me," Thomas told the Technician Sunday from his Tuscaloosa, Ala. home. "That's not what the professor meant at all, and he has been trying to get it corrected."

According to Dr. Thomas, O'Kelley had been referring to a departmental party that students and faculty attended. "We were at the party and someone suggested a contest. We were drinking beer from glasses and someone suggested we see who could drink it the fastest," said Thomas. "And I won."

"It's unfortunate that the story was printed that way," the new chancellor continued. "I'm not an accomplished beer drinker."

In the same article with the quote from O'Kelley, it was reported that "beer chugging goes back to Thomas' Harvard days, where he was a member of the legendary Harvard Chugalug Club."

"There was no such thing," Dr. Thomas said of the Chugalug Club. "In one of the residence halls in which I lived, the class of '55, my class, challenged the class of '54 to drink some beer. There were only about 10 or 12 of us. And all we had was a contest. It just happened that one time. We had no real team."

Thomas said that he was "heartened with the warm reception" he received during his brief visit to the campus Friday and Saturday.

"Everyone was so pleasant, warm and cordial," he stated. "All the students, faculty, staff and alumni that came out to say hello were very encouraging."

"You always approach something new with a degree of anxiety," he said, "But the greeting we received was very encouraging."

In his brief statement to the Board of Governors and the approximately 200 people at the special meeting, Dr. Thomas said he would assume the $47,500 a year job "not so much with pride and honor but as a challenge."

Thomas will assume the State Chancellorship Jan. 1.

A.M. Fountain, Technician editor, 1923, introduces Dr. Joab Thomas, new chancellor to State's student newspaper with a special edition Friday.

Fall enrollment may be sliced

by Howard Barnett
Assistant Editor

University officials are considering placing a freeze on enrollment at State next fall by limiting the number of freshmen and transfer students who enter.

The move, which was tried on a limited scale this year, is aimed at relieving the problem of overcrowding in dorm rooms which the dramatic increase in enrollment over the past three years has caused.

New Chancellor Joab Thomas said that work on the overcrowding situation would be given first priority when he takes office in January.

"I've heard a little bit about the overcrowding there," Thomas told the Technician Sunday from his home in Tuscaloosa, Ala. "But I haven't heard anything about limiting enrollment."

"I would hate to see that happen," he continued. "I would hate to limit students from North Carolina the educational opportunities offered at N.C. State."

THOMAS FEELS State has great offerings. "It's a comprehensive university that allows students to change their minds about what they are studying. I think it's helpful to allow students to explore what he or she wants to study while at one campus rather than to skip around from campus to campus, a semester at one school then a semester at another."

Acting Chancellor Jackson Rigney is scheduled to make a report on solutions to UNC President William Friday in October. Among the solutions being considered are moving up the application deadline for freshman applications, reducing the number of freshmen accepted, and not accepting transfer students before the junior year.

Last year, it was decided to try to limit the number of freshmen to last year's level in order to control the increase in students. The administration was successful in doing so, but the enrollment went up by nearly a thousand students in spite of the efforts.

A problem facing the University besides the flood of applications for admission is the fact that the General Assembly is having to reduce spending in the face of a loss of revenue. This means that there will be fewer personnel and less money to go around to the state supported institutions.

ALLOCATIONS BY the General Assembly are based on a Full Time Equivalency (FTE) number for enrollment. The FTE number is based on 12 See "Talley," page 2

Spartans thrash Wolfpack

by Jimmy Carroll
Sports Editor

EAST LANSING, Mich.—During a timeout Saturday, one of the State mangers ran onto the field to give assistance to the Wolfpack players. On his way off the field he dropped one of his towels.

It was that kind of day here as State fumbled the ball away on its first three possessions, opening the doors for Michigan State's hard-hitting Spartans to cruise to a 37-15 victory.

State's early miscues resulted in the Spartans scoring the first three times the Wolfpack had the ball as the bruisers for the Big Ten sputted to a 21-0 lead in the regionally televised contest.

"I DIDN'T THINK WE were tough enough or physical enough," said a disappointed and disbelieving Lou Holtz afterward. "I don't understand why we fumbled or why we didn't tackle real well."

The Wolfpack tied a school record for fumbles in a single game by giving up the football five times. State also had two passes intercepted.

"It just seemed that the whole pace of things were quicker than I could remember," Holtz offered. "Maybe it was the Astroturf. It's supposed to be a quick surface. It seemed like a whole lot of times we'd be about to hit someone and then he'd just zip right past us."

Doing most of the zipping was converted tailback Levi Jackson and Fayetteville quarterback Charlie Baggett. In all, the Spartans ran over the Pack for 429 yards in a whopping 77 carries.

A crowd of 59,111 saw the intersectional battle take an unexpected turn in 7:32 of the opening period as Michigan State showed some ferocious tackling Big Ten style, jarring the ball apart from Wolfpack ball carriers and turning an anticipated close game into a rout.

"I thought we'd play a good football game. I thought we were ready to play," said Holtz. "It was the worst tackling we've done since I've been here."

LEADING 27-7 AT halftime, many Spartan faithful felt the game was on ice, but the Pack knew all was not lost.

"I felt we had a chance if we didn't let them score in the second half," Goltz insisted.

"We don't have anybody to blame but ourselves," lamented fullback Johnny Evans. "I gave them 14 points myself." A fumble by running back Richard Carter on the second play of the game set up the first Spartan touchdown. Jackson carried three times for nine, six and eight yards for the six-pointers.

Pat Hovance, moved from flanker to tight end for the first time this season, got into the act next. Hovance hauled in a 15-yard pass from Dave Buckley and coughed up the ball when belted by safety Tom Hannon who recovered at the safe 40.

Again it took the Spartans just three plays to put six on the board. Jackson went the final 12 yards for the score.

On the second play following the MSU kickoff, Evans was hit by tackle Greg Schaub and lost the Pack's third fumble in four minutes of play.

STATE'S OFFENSE which has yet to display its effective punch displayed in the past three years, ran for just 131 yards in 34 rushes and passed for 190 yards, completing 11 of 24 attempts.

State's first score followed a 47-yard field goal by Michigan State's Hans Nielson.

Why is this man smiling? Perhaps it's because his team, the Michigan State Spartans, have just defeated State's Wolfpack, 37-15.

Marly Thomas: new first lady prepares for State

by Ginger Andrews
Assistant News Editor

State has a new Chancellor and a new first lady at his side to share the responsibilities that one has as head of a complex state university.

That, too, is how Marly Thomas, the petite, attractive mother of four and wife of Dr. Joab L. Thomas feels about the new position that her husband has elected to accept for himself and his family.

"I feel that the Chancellor and his wife represent the university," she said Friday prior to Dr. Thomas' approval as State's Chancellor by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors. "The Chancellor and his wife are a liaison between the alumni, the trustees, the faculty, the students, and the central system staff."

MRS. THOMAS ALSO finds that there are things as a wife that she can do at home that will help her husband and indirectly the school.

"It is her (Chancellor's wife) responsibility to free her husband so he can do his work. There are a number of things I can do in the home that will give him more free time."

The Chancellor did not reach the decision to come to North Carolina on his own. Even though it was initially his own, his wife and children had a word or two in the end.

"We felt, in fact the children felt that they had a voice in the decision," said Marly Thomas. "We discussed it with them and they are looking forward to coming here. The decision was made in co-operation with the whole family."

The "whole family" includes Catherine, 13; David, 12; Jennifer, 10; and Frances, 7.

THROUGH FOUR CHILDREN can keep a woman quite busy, Mrs. Thomas still finds time to take part in community activities back home in Tuscaloosa, Alabama. She was president of Junior Welfare (similar to Junior League) as well as a member of various volunteer and public organizations.

The first lady also enjoys music and reading. When she found the time she sang in a community chorus, but most of her time is devoted to her family.

"My main job for a little while is to raise my family. I want to do what I can while they're home."

Home will soon be 1903 Hillsborough Street. While here over the summer and past weekend, the Thomas' had a chance to look over the residence and the city.

"We like it (Raleigh) very much," said Mrs. Thomas. "It seems to be a pleasant place to live."

When asked if she would mind last minute guests for dinner, she replied, "I usually like a little more warning but I understand Hattie (the cook) is wonderful."

HOWEVER, THE GENTEEL little woman expressed a desire to get to know the students personally other than through school functions such as banquets.

"I like to have the students in our home. After we get settled in the spring I would like to know them better and more personally."

Although it has been expressed by many that it would be hard to find a couple as wonderful and warm as the Caldwell's, it would seem that the Search Committee, the Board of Trustees, the Board of Governors, and William Friday should be praised for their decision to appoint Joab and Marly Thomas as the representatives of State.

Student voters set drive

by Greg Rogers
Staff Writer

The Campaign for Student Voters, a coalition of bi-partisan state-wide student groups on both the college and high school level, announced at a Sept. 25 press conference, a state-wide, student-oriented voter registration drive.

The sole purpose of the voter registration drive is to educate student leaders about voter registration so that they can inform their fellow students and provide them the opportunity to register to vote. Gary Thomas, a junior at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the coordinator for the student registration drive, feels that students throughout North Carolina have a lot to contribute to the political process.

"THE STUDENT voice of North Carolina should be heard," Thomas said. "Students today are more involved with the issues and they're getting involved in their student government. We hope this will give students an opportunity to register."

It was cited that in the 1972 election less than 50% of those students eligible to register, registered to vote. While that was a very poor percentage, even fewer voted. Since 1972 thousands more have become eligible to vote. Most of those high school and college students have not registered and will probably not register before the 1976 elections. Thomas said that the Campaign for Student Voters wants to do everything possible to avoid a similar situation occurring again.

With the President, Governor and other local, state and federal officials being elected next year, Thomas feels that it is imperative for the student vote to be felt.

SG ponders towing for money

by Larry Ray
Staff Writer

Dennis Vick, Co-chairman of the Student Transit Committee is researching the possibility of having the Student Government handle the big business of towing cars from State campus.

According to Vick, towing illegally parked cars is an undertaking which nets neighboring service stations approximately $50,000 a year.

This large sum of money, the majority of which comes from students' pockets, could be used in many ways here on campus, if the Government controlled towing, explained Vick.

AT PRESENT, when a car is discovered illegally parked, the security division calls one of several service stations to have the car towed away. After the phone call, the matter is essentially out of State's hands, as the station impounds the automobile and collects fifteen dollars from some hapless individual for its return.

However, Vick feels that if the Student Government towed the cars, the person would not have to walk or hitch a ride to some distant service station to recover it, but could merely go to a special place on campus. He or she would still have to pay a fee probably set by Student Government but this money would be recirculated and spent by the Government for the benefit of the students.

Vick pointed out that the project would be a mammoth undertaking for the already-busy student representatives, and that many problems would need to be ironed out. He estimated the initial cost of starting the endeavor at approximately $20,000, which would include acquiring tow trucks, renting some land near campus on which to park the cars, fencing in this area, and building some sort of hut to serve as an office. THE TRUCKS could be driven by financial aid students as a means of making money for expenses, but this might also create problems, said Vick. Students might not like the idea of a fellow classmate towing their car and collecting money for the car's return. Although there are problems to be worked out, should the Student Government seriously consider this project, there are many benefits which Vick feels outweigh the complications. He stressed, however, that this endeavor is merely being researched at the time and that no plans have been made to bring it before the Student Government. Vick stated that any student input on this matter should be addressed to him or the Student Government office.

Talley says State was not allocated enough

State receives one teaching assignment for every 14.5 students. Talley said that moving the cutoff date for accepting new applications from freshmen from May to April 1 would eliminate about 100 freshmen, and refusing applications from freshmen and transfer students would take care of an additional 400 to 500. Talley acknowledged that there were too few rooms on campus, but said that building new facilities was not necessarily the answer.

"If we start a new residence building now, it would have to be financed by bonds. This would increase current rents, and students might move out, especially if the mood of the economy changes. Then we have empty rooms we would have to pay for," said Talley. Talley pointed out that there were 800 empty beds in 1970. There are presently 5,500 beds on campus, with a headcount enrollment of 17,089. Enrollment was about 10,000 in 1970.

Voter drive set

University, the Campaign for Student Voters began holding three conferences in different regions of the state to inform student leaders about voter registration. Approximately six hundred letters were sent out to all high schools, colleges and community colleges, as well as members of each respective organization across North Carolina.

The state-wide voter registration drive has already received the endorsement of the State Board of Elections, of Governor James Holshouser and Lt. Governor Jim Hunt.

Thomas said that an interest in political and social issues among youth today are the result of happenings in the early 1960's. "A rebirth of interest in social issues, came about in the 60's under Kennedy," he said. "Are we to think that students are not interested in present and future issues now?"

possibilities of the drive are enormous. He stated that there are approximately 80,000 high school seniors in North Carolina as well as tens of thousands of community college and college students. He has hopes that through cooperation with the State Board of Elections and the local boards of elections that registrars will be going to the schools to register students to vote.

The organizations that are participating in the voter registration drive are: The North Carolina Student Legislature, North Carolina State Youth Council, North Carolina Comprehensive Community College Student Government Association, North Carolina Association of Student Governments (Consolidated University), North Carolina Federation of College Democrats, North Carolina Federation of College Republicans, North Carolina Teenage Republicans and North Carolina Teenage Democrats.

THOMAS FEELS that the

"IF WE HAD BEEN given the allocation we asked for, we would have been able to take care of the increase. You are allowed four per cent either way. Schools which are under-enrolled are supposed to give money back, and schools over-enrolled (more than four per cent) have to absorb the excess. In theory, staff from the under-enrolled schools would be transferred to the over-enrolled schools, but it doesn't work out that way. My understanding is that many of the other schools are overenrolled this semester, too."

Wolfpack loses

nine plays with the drive culminating in a nine-yard pass to Hovance. In the march, Buckley completed seven of seven passes-three to twin brother Don and two to Hovance.

The other Wolfpack tally was engineered by freshman quarterback Kevin Scanlon who was impressive in his limited role. Scanlon moved State 49 yards in the fourth quarter with Carter scoring from one yard out.

Holtz was deeply dejected in the dressing room following the lopsided outcome.

"There should not be that much difference in our football program and their football program," Holtz said, shaking his head. "There just shouldn't be."

The calculations you face require no less.

Today, even so-called "non-technical" courses (psych, soc, bus ad, to name 3) require a variety of technical calculations—complicated calculations that become a whole lot easier when you have a powerful pocket calculator.

Not surprisingly, there are quite a few such calculators around, but ours stand apart, and ahead. We started it all when we introduced the world's first scientific pocket calculator back in 1972, and we've shown the way ever since.

The calculators you see here are our newest, the first of our second generation. Both offer you technology you probably won't find in competitive calculators for some time to come, if ever.

Our HP-21 performs all arithmetic, log and trig calculations, including rectangular/polar conversions and common antilog evaluations.

It's display is fully formatted, so you can choose between fixed decimal and scientific notation.

Our HP-25 does all that—and much, much more. It's programmable, which means it can solve automatically the countless repetitive problems every science and engineering student faces.

With an HP-25, you enter the keystrokes necessary to solve the problem only once. Thereafter, you just enter the variables and press the Run/Stop key for an almost instant answer accurate to 10 digits.

Before you invest in a lesser machine, by all means do two things: ask your instructors about the calculations their courses require; and see for yourself how effortlessly our calculators handle them.

Both the HP-21 and HP-25 are almost certainly on display at your bookstore. If not, call us, toll-free, at 800-538-7922 (in Calif. 800-662-9862) for the name of an HP dealer near you.

Spartans' Stolz praises 'physical' MSU forces

by David Carroll
Staff Writer

EAST LANSING, Mich.— On Saturday afternoon, the Michigan State Spartans were an awesome physical force, as they consistently racked an zapped State's pain-inflicted Wolfpack, playing their best game of the 1975 football season.

"We were very physical. We really, really hit. We made contact," praised victorious coach Denny Stolz. "We played very well. I've never seen a Michigan State team hit any harder."

"WE PLAYED OUR best game both offensively and defensively," Stolz assessed. "We were very physical on offense and moved the ball in well. And our defense was simply tremendous."

Stolz feels that the key to the Spartans' success on offense was the tremendous play of the offensive line, which plowed open holes big enough for a truck to drive through, and the ability of quarterback Charlie Baggett and running back Levi Jackson to run rampant against an outmanned Wolfpack defense.

"Our offensive line really did some popping," admired Stolz. "Baggett and Jackson also played one heck of a game."

Baggett was simply amazing, as he adeptly guided the fired up Spartans to paydirt with relative ease. The shtihery signal caller resembled a dashing magician, often breaking loose on long jaunts which broke the Wolfpack's back.

THE SENSATIONAL senior, who hails from Fayetteville, N. C., originally enrolled at the University of North Carolina, but transferred to Michigan State because of the excessive number of talented quarterbacks available on the Chapel Hill campus. Thus, the Spartan's victory over an Atlantic Coast Conference team meant a little extra to a young man who grew up in the Tar Heel State. "I had been looking forward to this game for a long time," Baggett stated. "I had been looking forward to this game ever since I left North Carolina. This victory really meant a lot to me."

Baggett was not surprised at Michigan State's high point total.

"We had hoped to score a lot," reflected Baggett. "We thought we could score this way. Obviously a 37 point total is very satisfying."

"The offensive line opened up a lot of holes," continued the flashy field general. Levi Jackson also played one hell of a game. JACKSON, WHO rambled and raced for yardage almost at will, was noticeably excited in the dressing room. "This has got to be the most satisfying win since our victory over Ohio State last year," enthused the jubilant Jackson. "I'm very happy. It was a big win for us. I e p& it all together today. We never doubted ourselves. It was just a matter of time before we put it together."

The rugged runner heaped much praise on the offensive line.

"I want to give a lot of credit to the offensive line. They did one hell of a job. They did everything they possibly could."

Stolz realized that the quick 21-0 margin and the 48 man traveling squad limit hurt the Wolfpack.

"Boy, when you're playing a couple of thousand miles away from home, it's really tough to overcome a 21-0 deficit," Stolz reflected. "I also know that then having only 48 players was a disadvantage."

"The timing of this victory is perfect," he smiled. "The timing couldn't be better. It gives you momentum to win a big game like this. We're looking forward to our games against Notre Dame and Michigan."

Loose footballs were a common sight at Spartan Stadium Saturday as State lost five fumbles, equalling a school record.

Taste of Big Ten football Long trip made longer

by John DeLong
Staff Writer

EAST LANSING, Mich.—One thing's for sure: it was a long ride to watch a football game, win, lose, or draw.

And no doubt, some of the estimated 700 Wolfpack fans who journeyed here from Raleigh probably wished they had stayed home, saved some money and watched the Wolfpack's 37-15 loss to Michigan State on television.

BUT FOR MANY OF THE STATE faithful, the mere Big 10 atmosphere—and Big Ten football atmosphere is much different than ACC atmosphere—by itself made the game the only regrettable part of the entire trip.

Kick-off was slated for 1:50 p.m., but long before that time the action had begun. The Wolfpack Marching Band, after a five-hour Saturday morning bus ride from Columbus, Ohio, performed in concert style shortly after noon on a green on the MSU campus.

From there, it was on to Spartan Stadium, a 76,000 seat structure that was as impressive as the home team would prove to be later in the day. Inside, much of the pre-game hubbub centered around the Wolfpack fans and cheerleaders, who were eager to make their presence known amidst the sea of Spartan fans dressed in green and white.

Meanwhile, cameramen from ABC-TV, which televised the game to over half the nation, scurried around the Astroturf for shots. In fact, cheerleaders Vicky Turner and David Betts spent the better part of an hour jumping, capping and cheering before the portable cameras.

THEN, MICHIGAN STATE'S BAND emerged from the tunnel for the pre-game show. Oddly, their set included The Captain and Tenille's "Love Will Keep Us Together," a song that State's band played as part of its theme at halftime.

So, the pre-game scenery and pageantry made the day, if not the game, exciting. But once the game got started, unfortunately for those 700 fans, there was little to cheer about.

NOTES, QUOTES AND COMMENTS...Fans who bought programs at the game were purchasing a publication that has been named the best football program in the nation by the College Sports Information Directors of America the past two years running. The citizens of Mars Bluff probably aren't planning anything special to commemorate the day their town almost became the Hiroshima of the Pee Dee River, but with the Official National Lampoon Bicentennial Calendar, you can help remember this and hundreds of other black days in American history. Painstakingly researched to insure historical accuracy, the Official National Lampoon Bicentennial Calendar contains over 600 massacres, explosions, defeats, assassinations, crashes, bombings (intentional and accidental), panics, executions, lynchings, betrayals, mishaps, riots, sinkings, mutinies, rigged elections, armed incursions, stonings, fish kills, mass murders, and miscarriages of justice.
While everyone else is running around making a big deal out of a boring battle the British somehow managed to lose, you can be celebrating the day 147 persons, most of them young women, perished in America's ghastliest industrial fire. Or the day Congressman Preston Brooks walked on to the Senate floor and beat Senator Charles Sumner unconscious with a gutta-percha cane. Or the day convicted "trunk murderer" Winnie Ruth Judd escaped from the Arizona State Insane Hospital for the sixth time.
And the Official National Lampoon Bicentennial Calendar makes a perfect gift that will continue to depress and annoy someone you love throughout the whole year. "Were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter."
—Thomas Jefferson

Best of luck

Chancellor Thomas. It doesn't have a familiar ring yet, but first indications are that that phrase will come to have not only familiarity but also endearment to friends of the University everywhere.

Upon his retirement, Chancellor John Caldwell left behind extremely large shoes to fill. "There will never be another one like him," many said of Caldwell.

Well, there may, in fact, never be another one like him. But if anyone can follow Caldwell's act, it would certainly seem that Joab Thomas is the man that can do it.

Thomas, of course, will have his own style, just as Caldwell had his. But already some similarities can be seen between the two men. Distinguished, dignified, articulate, handsome—all are adjectives that apply to both men.

Although all anyone can go on at this point is first impressions, it seems extremely likely that the University is in for continued dynamic, progressive, and quality leadership under Joab Thomas.

And with that in mind, everyone interested in the welfare of the University should be thankful for the excellent job Walter L. Smith and the Chancellor Search Committee did. Their task was an extremely difficult one, made so not only by its importance but also its scope.

While passing out accolades, another individual deserving of praise in this matter is Student Body President Mary Beth Spina. As the only student member of the Search Committee, it is evident from reports that are now surfacing about the committee's inner-workings that Spina was both an active and viable member of the group. She also kept her mouth shut about the Committee's work while it was in progress, something which many of its members probably doubted would be the case.

Speaking, we feel certain, for the entire University community, we applaud the selection of Joab Thomas as the new Chancellor of N.C. State, and look forward to his assuming his duties on January 1.

Dorm dilemma

It appears that, after trying unsuccessfully to limit the number of students by holding the number of new freshmen to last year's total, the University has decided it looks bad to have people waiting around for rooms (and everything else) and is going to do something about it.

What they're going to do consists of moving the cutoff date for freshman applications up a month and refusing to accept transfer students before their junior year. This is supposed to reduce the number of students by more than 800 over this year.

While we applaud the University's effort to correct the problem, no one knows whether the new scheme, if put into effect, will work, and it is doubtful whether we will know until next fall. Last year, we were assured that the University would limit freshmen to 2800, the number who enrolled last year. The attempt to do this was successful, but enrollment this year increased by nearly 1000.

While there seems to be little to do except hope that the administration knows what it is doing this time, it is at best a temporary solution. Limiting enrollment may keep down the overcrowding next fall, but it would be ridiculous to decide upon that as a permanent policy.

What university officials are avoiding in their search for something to do is the most obvious solution: more dorms and other physical facilities. Dean of Student Affairs Banks Talley is afraid that the building of new dorms would raise rents, causing students to look elsewhere, and leaving the University with empty rooms to pay for.

Talley points out that in 1970 there were 800 vacant beds. This is true. In 1970, however, there were only 10,000 students, and living off campus was cheaper. Now there are 70 percent more students, and zero percent more beds.

In addition, room rents have done nothing but increase over the past few years and it has done nothing toward scaring away students. The average room rent at Chapel Hill is somewhat more than at State now, and there is a waiting list there.

The long and short of it seems to be that long taking 600 students away from this year's headcount (if it works) may be a good way to ease problems in classrooms, is in no way an answer to the dorm crunch.

Unless State is to give up its goal to provide education to those who want it, the University administration has little choice but to accept growth as a fact of life and build someplace to put all the new people. Limiting the number of students is a good answer for next fall, but in the long run plans need to be made based on what is going to happen, not on what would be most convenient for administrators.

The great college catalog ripoff

by Neil Klotz

Hundreds of dollars. Thousands of dollars. A dark hand floats into sight and signs a tuition check or loan statement with too many zeros. It's a recurrent dream this time of year, perhaps just before you doze off over your first survey course in Principles in Economics.

Ever ask yourself why there's only one hand in your dream doing the signing? Or wonder what guarantee you have that, after you rip out the check, your school won't (1) eliminate your major program halfway through your college career, (2) cancel courses you need for graduation, (3) allow professors to completely change a course from the catalog description without notice or (4) allow faculty untrained in your field to teach courses you need for a future job or graduate school?

Right now your school could do all of these things and more. When you sign over your summer savings or next ten years of indebtedness, you've entered into a contract where one side calls the tune: major requirements, courses offered, selection of faculty, refund policy, student services, often food and housing—the works. Welcome to the hall of educational consumerism. Please stop at the door to have caveat emptor branded on your arm.

As an educational consumer you can shop for your school carefully or "vote with your feet," many faculty and administrators argue. But what if you're one of millions of students who can only afford the local public college? You can vote, but your ballot has only one choice of footprint. Then too, who's to say that even if you do shop carefully, you won't find the institution changing the ground rules under your feet?

In the last few months a number of students across the country have been upended by educational fault lines like changing degree requirements and course descriptions, but instead of remaining in a prone position, they have tried to gain standing in court. Claiming that their college catalogs or bulletins constitute a valid contract between student and university, they've sued their schools for breach of contract, action that has many colleges nervously watching the federal courts. Among the cases still pending:

—A University of Bridgeport (CT) student has sued her school for $470 because she says the school didn't provide the education course described in the college catalog and that what it did provide was "worthless." "Classroom time was substantially devoted to the instructor reading aloud pamphlets and other materials he had already distributed to the class," she charged.

—A George Washington University (Washington, D. C.) student found the "landscape architect's assistant" program she enrolled in "Pure junk" and the teachers incompetent in the field. "All we did was learn how to trace somebody else's blueprints," she said and has sued for the $800 tuition she paid.

—An American University (DC) graduate student has asked the courts to award him $150,000 in lost income and $500,000 in punitive damages after the university terminated him from its doctoral program. He charges that the school broke an educational contract by discharging him two years before the time limit the college catalog gave him to complete his PhD.

—Another graduate student at Syracuse University (NY) has sued for breach of the college catalog contract arguing that, among other things, the post-graduate philosophy program reoffers course that duplicate those in other departments and that "non-philosophy specialists" are teaching philosophy courses that differ drastically from the catalog description sent to prospective grad students. He has asked for damages of nearly $4000 for back tuition.

—A group of medical students at George Washington University recently found that their $3200 tuition of last year would be boosted to $5000 this year and possibly $12,500 next year. They claim that this raised the college catalog estimate of a $200 annual tuition increase. The catalog carries a disclaimer giving the university the right to raise tuition to any "reasonable" level, but the students charge that a 400 percent increase in two years is not reasonable.

If one of these suits succeeds, college consumers will have won at least a temporary victory against the now-you-see-them-now-you-don't nature of college courses, degree requirements and vocational programs.

Cheerleading

To the Editor:

I would like to begin by saying that I felt that the crowd at the State-Florida game did a super job of "Backing the Pack" and thanks so much for hanging in there till the time expired!!! I feel that we can't give up till the clock runs out. It's not right to expect the team to keep trying if we don't. The fans are the "12th" player and are very important to the team's success. But to be a vital asset to the team they must be vocal!!! The players don't necessarily hear the words of the chants, but it is the noise level that is generated that makes the difference. Once again I must refer to the State-Florida game as a perfect example of excellent crowd spirit. The Florida cheerleaders told us after the game that they were really impressed with our crowd's enthusiasm and support for the team. The game and crowd support must be ranked up as one of the best and compared to last year's State-Penn State game.

I would like to comment now on a letter to the Technician this past week pertaining to "poor sportsmanship" on my part. I agree wholeheartedly with Mr. Sadovy that it is poor sportsmanship to purposely try to drown out the opposing teams signal calling, but my intentions were not to do that. The quarterback gave no signs of having trouble with calling his signals, the refs did not give us (crowd and cheerleaders) a warning, and none of the Florida players were called for "man in motion." At one time they did have the ball right in front of the main student cheering section and I felt that we might be too loud, so I asked the crowd to lower the noise and they did. I would like to say that I appreciate your concern for my conduct on the mic and if ever again you or anyone else feels that my actions are uncalled for please contact me.

One last thing. Thank you Mr. Dickerson and Mr. Lester for your kind words about the cheerleaders in y'all's letter to the Technician. We all want to help the Pack in any way we can to a successful season. So, wear red and white, bring your shakers, and your lungs out at every game!!!! Wip'em Wolves!!!

Not for us

To the Editor:

After barely finishing the introduction to a quiet version of "Funeral for a friend" by Elton John on the grand piano on the second floor of the Student Center on Friday, September 26th I was instructed by a brown haired, middle-aged figure not to finish the song or to play the piano again. He told me the only reason it was unlocked and opened with the keys shining was for the governors conference in Stewart Theatre (on the same floor in the building). To me this was a welcome invitation to play it. Perhaps for the Governor's information someone should hang a sign on the open piano "DO NOT PLAY", for we would not want to mislead the governors into thinking that this piano is an opportunity for student enjoyment.

Campus crime

To the Editor:

Last Wednesday September 24, I was sitting in my car on the second level of the parking deck and from that point I could see the bottom floor underneath the parking deck. There, before my eyes, a towing truck operator, in the presence of a campus policeman, took a piece of wire and forcibly unlocked a red Vega wagon. He then proceeded to put the car in neutral and towed it away.

If anyone takes the time to read the parking and towing regulations one would find that there is no power given to either the campus police or the towing operator which gives them the right to break into your car.

To me, this is a total criminal act and should be treated as such. The Raleigh police should set watches on tow trucks and if this incident should be re-enacted, the tow truck operator should be arrested and punished to the full extent of the "law."
