State hiring freeze leaves Stewart post temporarily unfilled

by Earl Needham
Staff Writer

Due to the recent freeze on state hiring imposed by the division of State Budget in the Department of Administration, the Stewart Theatre Director's job is still open.

Since the death of George Pantone earlier this year, the Stewart Theatre has been without a manager. The New State Budget Guidelines have prevented the job from being filled.

As stated in the Division of the Budget's Spending Limitations Guidelines of March 1, 1976, the policy on hiring is "No positions vacant after February 28, except those for which an offer has been made, will be filled for the remainder of the current fiscal year without the written approval of the Division of State Budget in the Department of Administration. The Division of State Budget will make exceptions only for the most adverse circumstances, to meet emergencies for critical law enforcement and public safety positions and for positions essential in the custody and care of persons for whom the state is responsible."

The policy statement then goes on to say that while it does not limit recruitment efforts aimed at filling positions effective July 1, 1976, commitments should be made "only with an understanding that funds may not be available depending on actions taken by the General Assembly in May."

WHAT THIS POLICY entails was expressed by Henry Bowers, the Director of the University Student Center, when he said "If something happened to Food Services, like if the Director resigned or the Chef quit, it would just be too bad. We are managing to keep the (Stewart Theatre) program going, but it's a real strain." "Since George Pantone died, the duties of the director have been handled by several members of the Student Center staff. According to Bowers, "I don't want to give the impression that the work isn't getting done but it may not be getting all the attention that it needs since we all have other jobs to do."

When asked if the Stewart Theatre programming was affected, Bowers said that "all the bookings were done last year and reservations were made in the Fall, so there hasn't been much change in that sense."

The Director's duties are distributed between Ed Thomas, Larry Campbell, Lee McDonald and Bowers, who stated that "we really need someone to coordinate the tasks around here."

Even though the job cannot be filled until July 1, an offer should be made soon so that on July 1, which is the ending date of the freeze, a "commitment will have been made, so the state will allow us to hire someone, even if the freeze is extended again." Providing as was emphasized by the Budget Policy Statement, the money is available.

Human Relations Council makes recommendations

by Jan Jackson
Staff Writer

The University Human Relations Council recently completed its recommendations for improved minority representation on the State campus.

The recommendations are the result of meetings held last spring with the deans and directors of instruction in seven of State's schools.

Richard A. King, chairman of the committee, explained, "It was written to improve communication between the schools. We want to let them know about programs for minorities that are going well. Some schools are doing very exciting things. We want to challenge the schools to learn and experiment."

KING SAID undergraduate engineering has a "very successful" summer work shop for high school students. King also mentioned that the Textile school had done very well using minority recruiters.

Another plus for the University is Larry Gues in the Admissions Office who organized a telephone system to follow up contacts with promising students.

"We didn't get Kenny Carr and Darnell Adell doing nothing and to get able black scholars we must do the same," emphasized King.

Another concern of the Council is black graduate students and faculty recruitment. The Council is suggesting closer relationships among the Cooperative Raleigh Colleges and University system.

IN THE PAST, blacks have been hindered by strict job requirements. The HRC is advocating loosening of job requirements.

"There could be less restrictions for certain positions. Minority candidates could receive on the job training. Some requirements are so strict, minorities could never fulfill them," King related.

State's greatest problem in minority graduate student recruitment is financial problems. The Council recommends the establishment of fellowships, assistantships and guarantees of summer employment. "Carolina has put a lot of money into their program and they're far ahead of State," explained King. "The HRC is very proud of student participation in the Council. Student interest is very exciting. We changed the time of the

SS president, treasurer candidates talk

by Lynne Griffin
Staff Writer

Student Government elections will be held March 24 and 25, with the student body president, student senate president and student body treasurer being elected. Having already focused on the candidates for student body president, Technician staff writer Lynne Griffin examines the positions of the candidates running for the office of senate president and treasurer. —Ed.

Candidates for the offices of student senate president and student body treasurer have begun their campaigns and have very definite ideas about what they hope to accomplish if elected to the offices. Paul "Rusty" Elliott, Roy Lucas, Jim Sutton, and Becky Wagner are running for student senate president.

Elliott says he is running because he wants to provide the necessary leadership and direction an organization like the Student Senate needs to run effectively.

"I feel that this year the Senate has lacked strong, effective leadership and this is why I want to run for the office," he stated. "I feel I'm more than capable of giving the necessary leadership since I've had experience with administration and have had a course in parliamentary procedure."

ELLIOTT DOES NOT INTEND to let the Senate get out of hand the way he thinks it has this year. "It will not be a stumbling block and I don't intend to let the Senate get out of hand as I feel that it has this year due to the manipulation of Robert's Rules," Elliott explained.

An air of professionalism is also lacking from the Senate, according to Elliott, and he would like to restore that professionalism as well as try to see that minority groups, such as married students and off-campus students, are better represented in the Senate. He is also in favor of seeing more the students' money allocated, in order to benefit as many students as possible.

Lucas, a sophomore in chemical engineering, has many plans he would like to work on as student senate president. He is interested in getting more students involved and intends to have the Senate Communications and Information Committee work harder toward informing the students as to what is going on and how they can get involved.

"I also think students' rights and privileges should be better represented and I plan to appoint people to serve on committees who would look out more for the students' interests," he commented.

LUCAS ALSO PLANS to encourage groups who come to the Senate requesting funds to also consider going to other groups on campus, such as school councils, to try and get money instead of asking the Senate first.

"I would like to see more cooperation between Student Government and the Union Activities Board. The two should work together. I know how both work since I have been involved with both and I think they could both operate better cooperatively," Lucas remarked.

He feels he is qualified for the position since he has been a senator and served as president pro-tem of the Senate this year.

Sutton, a junior, said he mainly wants to work on improving the committees and their work.

"The primary thing I want to do is to bring some sense to the Student Senate. I want to improve our committee system by improving the committee reports and attendance at their meetings. I definitely intend to enforce the attendance requirement at committee meetings as well as regular meetings," he explained.

THE CONSERVATION MAJOR has some definite ideas about the role of the student senate president. "The president should not dominate the Senate but should provide leadership, not passive leadership. I would like to see it become a much stronger position than what it is now," Sutton commented.

Working strongly with the student body treasurer and the Finance Committee is another of Sutton's goals. He plans to have a standard form which groups requesting funding from the Senate could fill out explaining what the group is, how much money it has and needs, any previous funding it has received and other general information questions to prevent wasted time in the meetings asking these questions.

"Basically, I want to clean up the housekeeping end of the deal," Sutton stated.

Ann Coates

Blanche Creech

Wagner, a junior in chemistry and textile chemistry, feels she is qualified for the position of senate president through her experience with the North Carolina Student Legislature and her knowledge of parliamentary procedure.

"I think I could do a good job moderating the Senate. I know enough about parliamentary procedure to guide the Senate properly," she stated.

WAGNER WOULD LIKE to see more cooperation between the Senate and other organizations on campus which fund other organizations since she feels the Student Senate should be more than just a funding body.

She commented, "I'd like the Senate to get back to being a

Students comment on Democrats in N.C. primary

by Greg Rogers
News Editor

This is the second article in a two-part series on candidates running in the March 23 presidential preference primary. In the Friday, March 19 edition of the Technician State students gave their opinions on the Republican candidates for president, Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan. Today's article will feature student opinion on Democratic candidates running in Tuesday's primary election.

—Ed.

If State students are any indication of the results of North Carolina's presidential preference primary, former Georgia Governor Jimmy Carter should have no trouble in obtaining his share of the spoils in this Tuesday's primary. Although Alabama Governor George Wallace, Washington Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson and Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona have provided stiff challenges, Carter still has won several important primaries and rates presently as the man to beat in North Carolina. "On The Brickyard," in interviewing State students found that they favored the former Georgia governor to win the primary.

Freshman Ed Dalrymple said he favored Carter for the Democratic nomination because of his disassociation with Washington politics and his appealing personality.

"I think Carter is a people's candidate," stated the native of Lumberton. "He's not part of that Washington bunch and he doesn't act like all the other politicians. He also has a personality that is appealing to me."

DALRYMPLE RATES Gov. Wallace as Major contender in the North Carolina primary but gives Carter the edge.

"Wallace has been running a long time," said the liberal arts major, "but I just don't think he will win it." Dalrymple said that because of Carter's background in farming, he would have appeal to North Carolina farmers.

Sally Major

However, he thinks Carter will not be the Democratic nominee but rather Minnesota Senator and 1968 Democratic nominee Hubert Humphrey will be nominated. "Carter is from the South and that still has a bad connotation," Dalrymple remarked. "Humphrey will get it."

Sally Major, a junior from Columbia, South Carolina, said she liked both Carter and Arizona Rep. Morris Udall, but because of Carter's support, was going to support him.

"I'M BETWEEN Carter and Udall but I am leaning more to Carter because of his wider base of support," Major said. "I just don't think Udall has a chance."

Major picked Carter to win Tuesday's election over Wallace and Jackson.

"Wallace is just too conservative now and it seems Jackson doesn't have that much support," remarked the politics major. "I think Carter will win the primary but I believe Wallace will give him a close race."

Major said she favored Carter because of his past record as the governor of Georgia in the areas of integration, mental health and prison reform.

DEBBIE SCOTT said she supported the former Georgia governor because of his "policies" and believes Carter will be victorious in Tuesday's primary.

"I think it will be a close race Tuesday," stated the junior zoology major. "I think Carter will win it but Wallace will give him a race and be his closest contender. I think it will be a lot like it was in Florida but Wallace's support isn't as great here anymore."

The Asheville native said she believes Carter will win the Democratic nomination but that Wallace and Jackson could provide some challenges in later primaries.

"I'm not sure about some of the other primaries," Scott said. "I think Jackson will win the ones up North."

MECHANICAL ENGINEERING major Johnny Foster said Carter would win the primary Tuesday but Wallace could provide some competition.

"I believe he'll win the primary here," Foster said. "He has a lot of support in North Carolina but Wallace has a large following in this state also. Wallace has always been associated with racial issues and I don't think he will go very far."

The sophomore said he liked Carter because of his stance against "big government" and his idea of returning the decision making process from the federal level back to the local level. He also thinks Carter can be the one to bind the Democrats together for the 1976 election.

"I think Carter is the type of person who is fairly popular in the party," said the native of Kannapolis. "The liberals in the party such as Udall and Harris (Fred of Oklahoma) don't really have enough support so I think Carter can represent the party well."

ALTHOUGH CARTER is considered by many as the frontrunner in the Democratic race, Foster said he thought that Humphrey might get the nomination.

"There seems to be a large feeling in the party for Humphrey," noted Foster. "I imagine he could get the party machinery behind him but unless he decides to seize the nomination, I think Carter will get it."

lobbying body and not just a financing body. I think that if the school councils, the Senate and the Technician work together on this, a lot can be accomplished. Right now everyone is just split up."

Wagner feels the basic purpose of the senate president is to moderate the meetings and provide leadership and she feels she could do a good job with the position.

John Bryant, Ann Coates, and Blanche Creech are running for student body treasurer.

Bryant, a junior in political science, is mainly concerned with the idea of distributing the students' funds more equally in his campaign.

"I'm running on the platform of equalizing the funds for the students and trying to implement programs through legislation which would disperse the funds to the students more equally. If elected, I would try to use better judgement in giving excessive amounts to small groups which only represent a small percentage of the student body," he explained.

BRYANT IS ALSO IN FAVOR of a student-run towing system which would benefit the students financially and would be quite willing to work on this proposal.

Bryant intends to let the student body know what funds are available and for what purpose they can and will be used. "I feel Student Government as a whole has been operated in such a way that the students on campus don't realize what funds are available. I want to get out and let them know what funds are available if they wish to apply for them," he stated.

Coates, a civil engineering major, feels that she is qualified to hold the office and thinks she could do a good job with the position.

"I've got an idea about what it entails. I've worked with budgets a lot before and I have a basic knowledge of parliamentary procedure which I feel will help me in working with the Senate," the junior stated.

COATES FEELS THE JOB IS straightforward and can be run the way the treasurer wants to run it. She intends to do the best job possible with the position.

"The position of treasurer is pretty straightforward as to what you have to do. It's pretty much up to the personality as to how the job is run. I hope to make the best of it. I definitely think, however, it needs someone who is not afraid to speak up and I have a desire to work with the position," Coates remarked.

Creech, a junior, intends to make the most of the office if elected, and plans to strive for student unity.

"The office of treasurer can be treated as a low key or a high key office. Most people underestimate the office. With that in mind, I would like to treat it as a high key position. I will take a legislative and executive side and use my power with legislation to implement various ways for students to become aware of things," she commented.

THE PSYCHOLOGY MAJOR wants to do more for the student body than just promise them things she cannot be sure of being able to keep.

"I think it's all too easy for a candidate to promise extra parking spaces and other things. What is really needed is to tap the resources of the student body," she explained.

Creech encourages students to get out and vote in these elections because she feels that is one of the most important things an interested student can do.

"Awareness is the responsibility of the student body and voting is a power they have so they should vote even though they don't see an immediate change in the future. There will be a definite consequence later," she stated.

She also wants to make sure the students know at all times just exactly where their money is going and for what reason. Any decisions on how to spend money would not be a one-person job if she were elected treasurer, according to Creech.

NCSL sponsors candidate forum

by Lyane Griffin
Staff Writer

A candidate forum involving the student body presidential candidates will be conducted tonight by the North Carolina Student Legislature in the Westport Room of the Student Center at 9:00 p.m. The forum is open to all interested students and will also be carried by the campus radio station, WKNC-FM.

Each candidate will be allotted a maximum of ten minutes to speak and answer questions from a panel and any interested students. A maximum of three minutes can be devoted to the candidate's speech, a maximum of five minutes will consist of questions from a panel composed of the remainder of the ten minutes can be used for any questions from interested students in the audience.

PAUL LAWLER, chairman of NCSL, stated, "The purpose of the candidate forum is to generate more interest among the student body in the Student Government elections. Another goal of the forum is to get better ideas and solutions to student's problems through a discussion of them among the candidates. This will give student an opportunity to ask the candidates questions they are interested in.

According to Lawler, this idea evolved through a NCSL effort to find a project which would serve the student body and help them in some manner. "Partly this was for NCSL to show a bigger role on campus. We were looking for something we could do for the students. We realized there was very little discussion last year among the candidates about the current issues and this will give the students the opportunity to find out exactly where the candidates stand on important issues," he remarked.

Prof to lecture

Professor Oswaldo Chateaubriand of Cornell University will deliver the third in a series of public lectures sponsored by the Department of Philosophy and Religion on Tuesday, March 23, in the South Gallery of the University Student Center. The lecture, entitled "Truth and Knowledge in Mathematics," will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Professor Chateaubriand received his doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley where he studied with the eminent logicians and mathematicians Alfred Tarski and Leon Henkin. While much of his work has dealt with topics in logic and foundations of mathematics, he has worked extensively on problems in the philosophy of language as well. He has been on symposia sponsored by professional societies in both areas and is currently on the editorial board of the Philosophical Review. Dr. Chateaubriand has taught at the University of Sao Paulo in Brazil and at the University of Washington. In 1972 he held a visiting appointment in the Department of Philosophy at Harvard University. Since that time he has been on the faculty of the Sage School of Philosophy at Cornell University.

Two Met stars appear in Raleigh

The North Carolina Symphony presents "Two Nights at the Opera" on March 23 and 24 when Sandra Warfield and James McCracken appear as guest soloists.

These two stars from the Metropolitan Opera will appear in Raleigh when Maestro Gosling conducts in Memorial Auditorium at 8:15 p.m. Admission is by season membership, purchased anywhere in the state, or by tickets available at the door.

GOSLING AND THE SYMPHONY will perform works from great operas, including the Overture to La Forza del Destino by Verdi, Meditation and Dance of Vengeance from Medea by Samuel Barber, the Overture to Don Giovanni by Mozart, Rhine Journey from Die Gotterdammerung and Ride of the Valkyries both by Wagner.

Mezzo-soprano Warfield and her tenor husband McCracken will be featured in operatic arias, beginning with Nessus Dorma from Turandot which McCracken sings. After performing Vio lo sapete from Cavalleria Rusticana by Mascagni, Miss Warfield and McCracken sing the duet from Saint-Saens's Sampson and Delilah and selections from Carmen by Bizet.

McCracken, perhaps the world's best known Otello, also will sing the famous Nim mi terno from the Verdi opera. The Metropolitan Opera has mounted two new productions of the work expressly for him.

THIS COUPLE known as the Lunt and Fontanne of the opera and concert world, has won international acclaim since first meeting in Norfolk where, as two unknowns, they sang the title roles in Samson and Delilah.

Both made early debuts with the Metropolitan Opera and both left it to go to Europe and seek wider experience. Each has starred separately at such places as the Met, the Vienna Staatsoper, the Zurich Opera and the San Francisco Opera. Together, they have performed at virtually every important opera house in the world.

Praised as the greatest dramatic tenor of our time, McCracken has provided the definitive interpretation for the gigantic roles of Otello, Samson and Pagliacci.

Mezzo-soprano Sandra Warfield

Representatives of the American-born and trained musician, they were the only artists to perform at this internationally important function.

In addition, the couple has authored a biographical book, A Star in the Family, which depicts the behind-the-scenes view of the opera, concert and recording worlds.

Preservation Jazz Co. and Adele Foster

Good times at Cafe Deja Vu

by Danny Jacobs
Staff Writer

Cafe Deja Vu continued its band festival month last Wednesday night with the Preservation Jazz Co., a trio emanating from the Raleigh area.

The band consists of Peter Ingram, Freeman Ledbetter and Elmer Gibson, and plans to add guest musicians at different times. The audience proved very receptive to the fine show they gave.

The group utilizes a strong sense of rhythm which serves as the basis for their solo and improvisational work. Although they have only been playing together for a short while, they have a very tight sound and complement each other well.

LEDBETTER on bass and drummer Ingram provide a constant and very supportive rhythm for pianist Elmer Gibson. Gibson's experience on the piano shines through as he takes the listener on a pleasant ride. He has a very nice touch and draws from many influences in his music.

Gibson has been playing professionally for over sixteen years and has played with such well-known musicians as Cat Anderson, Sonny Sitt, Gene Ammons, Stan Clark, Ron Carter, Grover Washington and Hubert Laws, just to name a few of the more well-known figures in the jazz field. Major influences on his piano playing have been Dave Brubeck, Oscar Peterson and, most significantly, Herbie Hancock.

During the show they played tunes popularized by such people as Bill Evans, Freddie Hubbard and Howard Silver.

Their music encompasses many different areas of the jazz world, and they offer a fine sample for anyone interested in exposing themselves to some good jazz. Most of their music centers around songs made popular in the mid-Fifties and Sixties by various people.

It is particularly difficult to express in concrete terms exactly what they play, as jazz is so varied and expansive. Suffice it to say that they offer a nice change of pace from the regular stream of music in this area. The music is very melodic and simultaneously incorporates moving solos by each musician.

GIBSON EXPRESSED the hope that the Company will develop into a non-profit organization to give seminars and workshops promoting jazz in all its forms.

"We will do some work from quartet to quintet formats, adding at different times horns, vibes and congas. Incidentally we will have Dave Mauney, a former N.C. State musician-in-residence, playing vibes for us."

"We hope to alter the image that most people have of jazz. Most people think it's very abstract and that just isn't so. It is jazz that was the basis for many of the popular tunes that are now enjoying such success."

"We'll be trying to explain why and how the music evolved and what is it for the people themselves through our seminars."

The idea behind this concept is a good one and will hopefully receive the support it needs in order to make it work. Led by the very talented Gibson on piano the group has a good base from which to work. They were warmly received at the Cafe Deja Vu and showed signs of good things to come in the future.

Adele Foster capped off a three-night engagement at the Deja Vu Saturday night in grand fashion.

It was a standing room only crowd throughout most of the night as most people got there early and stayed late. Her group, Rollo's Polo, started each set with a few numbers before Foster joined them. All three members have been playing together for over three years and are very tight.

DAVE YOUNGMAN does it all, playing at different times flute, sax, guitar, electric bass and piano. Mark Grandenburg plays lead guitar, electric bass and piano. Paul Swenson handles the percussion, drums and congas.

As was Foster, all were formerly part of Horizon, which broke up last summer. Different directions was cited as the reason for the disbanding.

In part due to this long experience together, the group has a very cohesive sound and the members complement each other well. Their music covers a broad scope and, as such, is hard to fit into any given category.

INFLUENCES of jazz, rock, pop and blues are felt by listeners. Songs ranged from Herbie Hancock or Chick Corea material, to more popular numbers, such as "The Way We Were" or "Fool On the Hill." Included along blues lines were Roberta Flack's "Feel Like Making Love" and "Don't Advertise Your Man," an easy rocking number.

Aside from her musical talents, Foster displays a charm which she uses successfully on the crowd. She combines a satirical humor with a feeling of sincerity and significance. She identified with the crowd and they to her.

Rollo's Polo started the final set with a Hancock tune. It had a funky beat and there was some excellent lead work done on both the guitar and saxophone. Both drummer and bassist lent strong support and carried the beat evenly throughout the night.

After a few more jazz-flavored songs to which people responded well, Foster came back for the last set.

She sang "You Are So Beautiful" and Janis Ian's "At Seventeen" by request. For the last song of the night, she belted out "Heat Wave." This saw everyone let it all out in a hard-driving number, while all eyes and ears were focused on the stage.

WHEN CALLED back for an encore, Foster returned and said, "Raleigh has got to have some of the best audiences I have played for. We really love playing at Cafe Deja Vu and we'll be back."

Currently living in Columbia, S.C., Foster and company are thinking of moving to Raleigh. They are a very dynamic act and there is a lot of vitality and energy in their music.

Benefit being staged for N. C. Symphony Women

"The Sounds and Scenes of Spring," a fashion show extravaganza, will be held March 24 at North Ridge Country Club in Raleigh to benefit the North Carolina Symphony.

The noontime event, a fashion salute by Thalhimers, will kick off the formation of the North Carolina Symphony Women, a statewide organization open to any woman interested in promoting the activities of the orchestra.

The show is being staged as a fund-raising benefit for the Symphony. Tickets are a minimum of $10, with every contribution over $5 being tax deductible. Reservations may be made by contacting the North Carolina Symphony, P.O. Box 28028, Raleigh 27611 before the March 19 deadline.

OVER 1100 invitations to the fashion show have been mailed to Symphony supporters. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Mrs. Robert Gunn of Raleigh serves as chairman for "The Sounds and Scenes of Spring." Her co-chairman is Mrs. Waverly Akins of Fuquay-Varina.

Officers of the newly-formed women's organization include board chairman Mrs. Norris L. Hodgkins, Jr., of Southern Pines and president Mrs. F.B. Breece of Greensboro.

"The Sounds and Scenes of Spring" will feature the latest in fashions, as well as a look into the history of the North Carolina Symphony. Audrey Hartzell, Thalhimers Fashion Coordinator for North Carolina, is producing the show which she says will reflect the personality of the Symphony.

"All department stores receive innumerable requests for fashions shows. Thalhimers has decided to salute arts groups. During this Bicentennial season, we have selected the North Carolina Symphony as the quality, statewide institution to which we wish to pay tribute," says Mrs. Hartzell.

According to Mrs. Gunn, the show boasts the musical talents of the North Carolina Symphony String Quartet. This prestigious ensemble is comprised of concert-master Paul Gorski, violinist Ruthabeth Marsh, violist Robert Glazer and cellist Michael Stoughton, each of whom is a principal player in the Symphony.

MELINDA Lintermann, a senior at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro who won the North Carolina Symphony's 1976 Young Artist

Competition and Bryan Awards, will sing popular tunes in the show.

"Also we are quite pleased to have as our special guest Sandra Warfield, the Metropolitan Opera star who, along with her husband James McCracken, will be performing with the North Carolina Symphony on March 23 and 24 in Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium. We also expect a number of governmental officials to attend," reports Mrs. Gunn.

The fashion event begins at noon on March 24 with a sherry mixer in the lobby of North Ridge Country Club, followed by a springtime luncheon. Thalhimers is providing decorations for the site, as well as specially designed sets for the fashion show.

The clothes which will be shown represent the latest in fashion trends. "Bright Ideas," ceramic colors set off with stark white accompaniment, and silhouettes will be accentuated in the first segment. Professional models, as well as guest representatives from the Symphony, will show off assorted sportswear and clothes that work, including jumpsuits, coveralls, shirts, dresses and skirts. A light-hearted segment will be highlighted by ethnic clothes, the popular trend towards African and South American origins as well as European cultures. Another segment of the show previews the latest in glamour fashions, long gowns and classic designs.

"CLOTHES, AS well as music, reflect harmony, mood and ensemble. They both represent a form of individual expression, be it classical, romantic or contemporary," says Mrs. Hartzell. "In this show, we plan to demonstrate the relationship between what we see and wear and what we hear. Both music and fashion make statements about our lifestyles."

As an added attraction to the show, the Symphony Women will be awarding a door prize consisting of a designer outfit donated by Thalhimers. Eligibility is based on $1 contributions to the Symphony per entry.

"We are very flattered to be saluted by Thalhimers and appreciate their contribution to the success of the new women's organization," concludes Mrs. Akins, who also serves on the Board of Trustees for the North Carolina Symphony Society. She predicts that the formation of the statewide women's group will give invaluable support to the Symphony, especially as it becomes the nation's newest major orchestra.

Finishes 21-9 State cops third with 74-69 win

by David Carroll
Assistant Sports Editor

NEW YORK — Before the season started, people wondered if State's basketball team could have a successful season, considering the fact that the school's all-time greatest player, David Thompson, and three other solid veterans, Monte Towe, Moe Rivers and Tim Stoddard, had graduated and left a group of young, untested athletes.

Guard Darnell Adell, playing his last game for State, came through in the clutch. See story this page.

achievement. To finish tied for second in the Atlantic Coast Conference is no embarrassment, especially when one glances at the Wolfpack's roster. Six of the top eight men were undergraduates.

STATE'S unpredictable season ended here in the consolation game for third place of the National Invitational Tournament in Madison Square Garden on a positive note by downing a tough Providence College squad 74-69. State's victory over the Friars gives it a 21-9 mark for the season.

The Pack held the lead for the major portion of the game, with the margin fluctuating from four points in Providence's favor to a 12-point State bulge with 19:12 left in the second half. After State had surged to the 12-point lead by scoring the first two buckets after intermission, Providence went to work, slicing away at the margin slowly but surely. The Friars finally took the lead with 9:25 left in the contest. In gaining a 49-46 edge, Providence outscored the sluggish Wolfpack 18-5.

From that point on, the lead changed hands four times before State took it for good when senior Phil Spence hit a 10-foot jumper to give the Pack a 54-53 lead at the 8:13 mark.

DOWN THE stretch, senior guard Darnell Adell was tough, scoring seven key points and icing it by sinking several clutch free throws and a layup.

Others besides Adell, who finished with 12, performed admirably. All-America Kenny Carr, though scoring only 15, played an excellent all-around game, hauling down 12 rebounds and playing tenacious defense. Spence concluded his career at State by scoring 14 points and grabbing nine rebounds. Jumping guard Al Green collected 11, while center Glenn Sudhop had nine and Dirk Ewing seven to round out a balanced State attack.

Wolfpack coach Norm Sloan was happy with the way his squad bounced back in wake of its one-point loss to UNC-Charlotte in Thursday's semifinals.

"We played well at times," Sloan said. "Darnell certainly did a fine job. Kenny played a fine all-around game, and Glenn is coming along fine. We made a few changes for this game. We went to a man-to-man for most of the game, and winning is always important. There aren't many teams that end the season on a winning note."

"THESE consolation games are difficult to play in. Under the circumstances, both our team and Providence played well."

"We were playing this basketball game to win," the veteran coach continued. "We came in here and won two of three, losing to Charlotte by one. It was much better to finish the season that way than with the way we played against Virginia at Landover (in the ACC tournament), and we have a good nucleus for next year. If we have a good recruiting year, we should finish in strong fashion next year."

Six-five junior guard Joe Hassett and 6-9 forward Bruce Campbell led the Friars with 16 and 20 points, respectively. Providence finished its season with a solid record of 21-11.

Senior Phil Spence was instrumental in the Wolfpack's 74-69 win over Providence in Sunday's NIT consolation game.

Adell survives test

by Jim Pomeroy
Contributing Writer

NEW YORK — Darnell Adell "just wanted to win."

When the Wolfpack's senior guard went to the free throw line three times in the final 1:28 of State's 74-69 win over Providence College, he wanted as many of those one-and-one shots as possible to hit the bottom of the net.

Adell's 5-for-6 foul shooting during that time, plus a driving layup from the right side with nine seconds left in the game, led the Wolfpack's consolation NIT victory here at Madison Square Garden Sunday.

"THOSE ARE the kinds you've got to hit to win," smiled Adell in the lockerroom after the game. "I haven't been in the games in that situation in so long it was hard to get the feel, but I soon got the hang of it."

"All I could think about was making them," he continued. "It was my last college game. I've been ready to play all season, but I haven't. So I just wanted to win."

Of Adell's small amount of playing time prior to his 25-minute, 12-point performance Sunday, Wolfpack coach

Norm Sloan said: "At this point, I don't know whether it's Darnell or me. Maybe he should have played more."

"He has played good for us in the last few ball games," praised Sloan. "He certainly has done a fine job for us."

ADELL PLAYED just half of the first period but found himself in the second-half starting lineup in place of regular point man Craig Davis.

"Coach said he started me in the second half on my first half play," said the East Chicago, Ind., native, who transferred to State two years ago from Murry State to play where high school teammates Tim Stoddard and Bobo Jackson were performing.

With the season over, Adell is looking forward to joining the professional ranks, but it will not be basketball for the vocational industrial education major.

"The Dallas Cowboys sent me a questionnaire, and I've sent it back," he revealed. "Now I'm just waiting."

Football will be nothing new to Adell. He played halfback in high school through his sophomore year. Later that same year, Adell played basketball with Stoddard, former Louisville star Junior Bridgeman and ex-UCLA standout Pete Trgovich. The team went 29-0 and won the Indiana state championship.

"THE COACHES told me not to play football anymore after that, Adell explained.

If Dallas responds, Adell will probably play defensive back or halfback. "Percy Howard, he plays for Dallas, caught a pass in the Super Bowl last year, he called me," said Adell. "He's the one that told Dallas to contact me."

Adell said he may run track at State this spring. He likes the 100-yard dash, the 220, and the relays. In the 100, he has been clocked at 9.7.

But he likes football best. "I'm quick," he said flatly. "In football, you run and hit. I like that. In basketball you just run. It's hard for me to stop."

So Adell, whose claim to fame while with the Wolfpack may be five clutch free throws and a game-clinching layup, looks to the future and football.

"Dallas said they were definitely interested in me," he said. "I sure hope it pulls through." If the offer is like Adell in the clutch, it will.

Wildcats awaken UNCC

by David Carroll
Assistant Sports Editor

NEW YORK—They sat there in a trance, the dumbfounded looks of disbelief spread across their faces.

The unexpected had come so expected that they took it for granted that their UNC-Charlotte basketball team would win over Kentucky in the finals of the National Invitation Tournament here Sunday. The 49ers fans were so hypnotized by their "Cinderellaism" which was synonymous with their crusading team, that even when Wildcat guard Larry Johnson was at the foul line with nine seconds left and the 49ers trailing by one, they still thought the pride of the Queen City could, and would, do it.

Johnson missed the free throw attempt and UNCC had a chance.

BUT THE CRUCIAL rebound was grabbed by 6-10 Wildcat center Mike Phillips, who promptly put the ball back up against the glass and through the hoop, and Phillips was fouled by 49er forward Kevin King. Phillips then removed all doubt of the final verdict as he sank his charity toss, thereby completing a three-point play that was, perhaps, the most important play of the entire tournament.

Phillips' conversion of the free throw made the final score 71-67.

Kentucky held the lead at the outset, sporting a 17-10 margin with 12:53 left before intermis-son. UNCC fought back however, mostly behind NIT most valuable player Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, who netted 17 in the first 20 minutes, as they spurred to a 37-34 halftime advantage.

In the second half the 49ers maintained a lead that varied from one to seven points until the Wildcats took the lead at 64-63 with 1:06 remaining.

UNCC COACH Lee Rose, a native of Kentucky, was obviously upset that his emotional and fired-up 49ers "didn't capture the NIT crown."

"I'm just disheartened that we didn't come from here with the first-place trophy," he sighed. "I'm awfully proud of our team."

"We knew it would be a close ball game," the first-year coach continued. "We knew it might go down to the wire, but we had a couple of good opportunities that didn't work. The basket by Phillips really hurt us. If he misses that it's down to one shot."

"We're very thankful we had the opportunity to come here. New York City is a great place. We did everything that we could. Cedric especially played outstanding. Kentucky is really a fine team."

MAXWELL, a Kingston product, finished the NIT with extremely impressive statistics. He ended up with 109 points, 46 rebounds, and converted 47 of 63 free throws, breaking the old tourney free throw record of 37. Not bad for a kid who was offered only one half of a scholarship by East Carolina three years ago. The other star of the 49er duo, Lew Massey, who can burn the net from long range, collected 16 against the Wildcats.

Pacing Kentucky was Phillips, Johnson and Rick Wardford, who collected 16, 16 and 14 points, respectively.

Wildcat coach Joe Hall, who has constantly lived under the gigantic shadow of Adolph Rupp, was relieved to win this season Hall guided Kentucky to the NCAA finals where the Wildcats were knocked off by UCLA.

"This is great," he said enthusiastically. "Maybe this will make some people forget about us losing out in the SEC."

Wolfpack sixth in rough NWIT

by Jimmy Carroll
Sports Editor

AMARILLO, Tex.—The experience could be equated with having your favorite dessert snatched from under your nose.

A chance to play in the National Women's Invitational Tournament here this past weekend was the topping on a highly successful season for State. It was the reward for an 18-5 season and a state championship.

A 29-POINT DEMOLISHING at the hands of powerful Wayland Baptist and a heart-breaking three-point setback to Nebraska took the fun out of the Wolfpack's journey, most of the fun at least. After the opening-round loss to top-seeded eighth-seeded Wolfpack bounced back to edge Indiana State 59-58 but then lost the consolation championship to Nebraska 72-69, coming home with a sixth-place finish.

"I think the thing that hurt us most was our inability to adjust to the physical style of play here," State coach Kay Yow, who took the Wolfpack to a 19-7 final won-loss record. "The officiating here is not nearly as strict as in North Carolina. The other teams just killed us on the boards and we didn't fight back hard enough. If we could have made the adjustment, I think we could have done much better."

The Wolfpack, which had been outbreasted only once coming into the NWIT, was beaten 36-24 on the boards against Wayland and 45-39 against Indiana State. State outbreasted Nebraska 35-34.

After absorbing the whipping from Wayland, State set its eyes on the fifth-place trophy, knowing that a pair of victories in the consolation round would have it shipped to Raleigh and would also mean a 20-victory season. However, Nebraska had the same notions as the Wolfpack.

THE CORNHUSKERS hadn't shot over 35 per cent in their first two tournament games, but they shot 43.9 against the Pack. Forward Darcy Williamson, allowed to shoot at will from 20 feet in the first half, had 20 points at intermission which helped Nebraska to a 37-32 lead.

State rallied to take the lead 46-45 with 11:59 remaining, but Nebraska quickly regained a seven-point bulge 53-46. The Pack fought back once more and trailed by two, 69-67, with 1:11 left. However, Jan Crouch's 18-footer gave Nebraska a four-point lead with 44 seconds left to play, and Kathy Hawkins' free throw with 14 seconds left wrapped it up.

A victory over the Cornhuskers, while fifth place isn't a monumental achievement, would have made the Wolfpack happy with its showing in the tournament. Fifth place in a tournament of nationally-prominent teams is nothing to be ashamed of, and a 20-win season would have been something to brag about.

However, State had one thing to brag about, namely Susan Yow. The slender Gibsonville senior was selected to the 10-man NWIT All-America team. The NWIT team consists of players from the teams in the tournament, but selection is based on the players' seasonal performance, not on tournament play.

YOW ALSO WAS CHOSEN the tournament's Rookie of the Year. That award signifies the best player who is in the tournament for the first time. It is also based on the entire season.

While she came away with a pair of awards, Yow was not her usually impressive self in the NWIT. Her shooting was the same, accurate and seldom, but her rebounding was off drastically. In the three-game affair, Yow had only 11 rebounds. She was averaging 13 per game coming into the tournament. The physical style of play seemed to be the major factor in Yow's poor rebounding performances. While other teams pushed and shoved, the Wolfpack was not used to the contact and was often simply thumped out of position.

Yow did finish the tournament with 52 points and 19 assists. State's leading scorer and rebounder however was freshman Cristy Earnhardt who finished with 57 points and 23 rebounds.

Against Wayland, the Wolfpack started off at an emotional peak and hung with the Flying Queens at 31-31 with four minutes to play in the first half. After that, the Pack received a Texas-size lesson in basketball. Wayland soared to a 45-33 halftime lead and pushed it to 64-39 with 13 minutes to play—a 33-8 surge for the Queens. Wayland went on to capture its eighth consecutive NWIT crown, defeating Nevada-Las Vegas and UCLA.

One of the most exciting games of the tournament was the Wolfpack's struggle with Indiana State on Friday. State came back from three points down with 1:26 to play and took the lead on Yow's eight-footer with 24 seconds on the clock, 57-56. Indiana State countered with Denise Sharps' 17-footer with 15 seconds left. Yow then swished another eight-footer with seven seconds left on the clock and watched as Sharps' missed a 20-footer at the buzzer, allowing the Pack to escape with a 59-57 win.

Stickmen fall short

by Denny Jacobs
Staff Writer

Under almost perfect weather conditions, the University of Baltimore narrowly defeated State in lacrosse by an 11-10. State scored what appeared to be their tying goal with less than 30 seconds to go in the game.

But the referees ruled that State's Ted Manos had interfered with the goalie in the process. It was a hard-fought battle all afternoon and State could just have easily won the contest.

Baltimore started the scoring early with two goals in the first two minutes of the game. State got the next tally slicing the margin to one, and the quarter ended with Baltimore out in front 3-1. State's play was a little ragged to start the game but they got their act together before long. After that the Pack played Baltimore stride for stride throughout the game.

STATE SCORED the first goal of the second period before Baltimore took a 5-2 lead. At the nine minute mark Dean Norman scored an unassisted goal, cutting the margin to two. Jim Castilano won the ensuing faceoff and Marc Resnick turned it into another unassisted tally at the 9:11, making the score 5-4. Each team added another goal before the half ended with State trailing 6-5. State played more aggressively in the second quarter and displayed more hustle and hitting.

Baltimore came into the game as the preseason pick to finish first among the small colleges. Almost every player is from the Baltimore area — a hotbed for lacrosse players. By halftime though they knew they were in a game with the gritty players from State, who are in only their fourth year of competition.

The Pack started the second half with a bang, scoring the tying goal at the 30 second mark on a goal by Oren Moeller assisted by Kirk Peters. Baltimore took the lead at 8-7 on unassisted goals by Peters and Resnick. Both goals were the result of State's ability to capitalize on man advantage situations with penalties to Baltimore. The quarter ended with the score 8-7 and things looked good for the Pack.

AS THE FINAL quarter began people began coming over from the baseball game and they saw a fine stanza of lacrosse from both teams. Baltimore started quickly getting two goals in the opening two minutes for the second time in the game. They added another at the nine minute mark with the man advantage and it appeared they were about to put the game away. State tied the score for the last time in the game, scoring two goals within 41 seconds at about the 12 minute mark.

Baltimore's Steven Boyd scored what proved to be the winning goal at 13:52, assisted by Bob Lacy. Throughout the entire fourth period both teams' goalies, Nick Whiteside for State and Baltimore's Tony Kikola, made several outstanding saves as they had most of the game.

The loss dropped State's mark to 1-4 while Baltimore remains undefeated at 3-0. State will have a chance to get back in the win column on Wednesday against Gettysburg at 4 p.m. at Doak Field.
