CAT working to serve campus customers

by Karen Gaston
Staff Writer
and Jonathan Daniels
Staff Writer

The Capital Area Transit, while it may not be an intra-campus shuttle service, is continually working for more student passengers.

The CAT buses have 17 routes, four of which serve the campus daily. Two superloops, clockwise and counterclockwise, travel both sides of Hillsboro Street and make stops at Crabtree Valley, North Hills, Five Points, Cameron Village, Ridgewood, and downtown. Routes for Lewis Farm and Method Road are also on Hillsboro Street. An Aventura Ferry route serves the other side of campus, with a bus on Aventura Ferry Road that loops behind the University Student Center. Many other areas of the city can be reached by changing buses downtown. The central location for all routes.

In Chapel Hill, buses run by the town service Carolina's campus and surrounding area. According to Carolyn Taylor, a supervisor in the Traffic Office at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the buses have proved very helpful in getting students to various places on and off campus.

"There are several different routes through the campus which are run almost continuously throughout the day," said Taylor, "but the University does not determine them, the town does."

Taylor said the parking situation is bad at Carolina, and buses have alleviated the need for on-campus parking.

"We have sold in excess of 10,000 parking stickers for all sections with at least 10 per cent oversell for each section. This includes the off-campus perimeter lots," commented Taylor. "The buses make it more practical for students to want to park in the perimeter lots, especially the off-campus students. Express routes are run in the morning every 10 minutes from the off-campus lot to the main campus."

Routes were designed by members of the City Council and the Capital Area Transit to serve Raleigh. Robert L. Deaton, general manager of the system, said there has been an increase in student passengers, but he hopes more students will ride.

Deaton, who has been in the transit

Authority, parking in downtown Raleigh can cost up to $300 a year, and based on U.S. Department of Transportation figures, an average Raleigh commuter could save $450 each year. Deaton felt the system relieves parking problems on campus as well as saving operating costs for a car. Most buses are scheduled 20 minutes apart, and many routes have peak hourly schedules.

In the past few months, the bus fares have lowered from 40 cents to 30 cents, and the cost of transfer, used for changing buses, has been eliminated. There is a special reduced fare for senior citizens and the handicapped of 15 cents. Deaton said while there was not a special rate for students he has plans to have six month passes sold in January. He feels the passes may make off-campus parking and commuting more attractive to students.

He said many students rode the buses Nov. 17 and 18 when the Authority was giving rides free, and most of them now ride the buses at the 30 cent fare. The cost of bus tickets has also been lowered from $2 for five tickets to the same number for $1.50.

According to information put out by the Director of Security Bill Williams said he does not see buses as the solution to the parking problem. Williams said, "The possibility of using buses has been looked into, but using the buses probably would not help. People cannot be forced to ride buses; plus so many students are waiting for an open space to park on-campus, as soon as a space opened up, it would immediately be filled. That would not decrease the number of cars on campus."

Approximately 9,000 stickers have been sold for parking on State's campus, according to Williams, including 1,870 R decals, 2,183 C decals, and 1,435 F decals.

Robbery

Thieves abduct Catholic chaplain at knifepoint

by Charles Lassiter
Staff Writer

A Catholic chaplain was abducted at knifepoint from State's campus at 11:30 p.m. Sunday, and later robbed by two young men before being released at 1:30 a.m. Monday.

Father Alan Dash said the men first took him to the Teller II at the University Wachovia and made him divulge the code numbers to his account. They then removed the contents, about $40, from the account. He said he only had three or four dollars on him at the time.

Dash said his abductors forced him to drive them to his home where they stole an undetermined number of items. Dash said he was preparing to leave the University in his car, when the two approached him and asked for a light. He said they both pulled knives and told him to get into his car.

"THEY WERE in their 20's, and I had never seen them before. From there we went to the Teller II, and they wanted the code number to the card, and I gave it to them. They took out what I had there, and then we went to my place. They didn't get much there because they were looking for things like money and jewelry," he explained.

Dash said his abductors were not wearing masks, but that he was too shocked to get a good description of them. "I don't remember their faces, all I remember is the knives."

He said they apparently knew what they were doing, because when they finished at his apartment, they used towels to wipe away any fingerprints, and they took the towels with them.

After they finished at the house, his abductors drove him out to the area of Dorthea Dix Hospital, where he was released. The abductors fled. But before they left, they told Dash to deposit $100 in his account the following day, or they would "come back to get me," he said.

WHEN HE returned to his house, Dash said he tried to use the phone. The abductors had ripped the cord out of the wall. He said it was Monday morning at 11:00 before he got in touch with a police officer.

Dash has been at State for two years now, and he says he has never had anything like this happen before. The Barre, Vermont, native was shaken up, by his own admission.

J.R. Evans was the reporting officer for the Raleigh Police Department. A detective has not yet been assigned to the case. Evans filed a report, but details from the report were not available.

Student Senate to consider $3,900 for funding of activity, groups

by Lynne Griffin
News Editor

The Student Senate in their last meeting for this semester, will consider tonight the possible allocation of $3,900 to State's Outing Club, the campus symposium fund, and State's Amateur Radio Club.

Student Body Treasurer Ann Coates is sponsoring a bill calling for the allocation of $3,000 in support of the first endeavor for a campus-wide symposium to be conducted February 21-25.

The University Student Center and the Department of Residence Life will be on the general theme of Human Survival.

"The Symposium will be a mechanism to bring together a broad faculty and student complement representative of a Land Grant Institution who will hear and discuss man's survival relating to ecology, food, energy, genetics, and sociological aspects, i.e., population, health, and social organization."

THE SYMPOSIUM will feature such speakers as author Alvin Toffler and Congressman Morris Udall and will include debates, panel discussions, displays and films which will focus on "the challenge facing a university community attempting to fulfill its role in facilitating human survival."

The principle of the bill is the Senate "should recognize the importance of this Symposium and should recognize the importance of providing funds for Alvin Toffler."

The funding request for the Outing Club will be introduced by Liberal Arts Senator Doug Corhill and will call for the allocation of up to $700 to the club for additional equipment.

"The NCSU Outing Club serves those in the campus community who find enjoyment in outdoor activities such as backpacking, canoeing, caving and rock climbing. The objectives of the club are accomplished through organization of trips throughout the Southeast and through instructional and educational sessions at which experienced club members train newcomers in the skills needed to make outdoor activities safe and ecologically acceptable," the bill explains.

ENGINEERING SENATOR Robert Hoy is sponsoring the bill for the Amateur Radio Club which requests the funding of $200 to enable the club to purchase a portable emergency generator.

The principle of the bill states "at the present the NCSU ARC does not own a portable generator, but from past experience in using borrowed generators it is safe to say that emergency communication must be assured emergency power in order to operate effectively."

One major part of this club is "staying in a state of preparedness in the event of a natural disaster" and the purchase of this generator, according to the bill, would help them in that purpose.

THE SOPHOMORE seat from the School of Forest has not been filled yet and any interested sophomores from this school should go by the Student Government office and talk with Student Senate President Rusty Elliott.

The Senate meeting will be held tonight at 7:30 in the Senate Chambers located on the third floor of the Student Center.

The Government Committee will also introduce a bill requesting the committee be called the "Government Operations Committee" so students will know what the responsibilities of the committee are and so the committee will have a more descriptive title.

Now we at the Technician realize we aren't a group to poke fun at other people's usage of the English language, with all the typos that appear in our pages, but we couldn't help wondering if the people at the College Inn will "bonify" people who go there to park.

Honor Code discussed

by Raymond Rawlinson
Staff Writer

The Government Committee of the Student Senate met Monday to discuss proposed changes in State's Honor Code and the penalties for academic misconduct. Attorney General Jerry Kirk and Assistant Dean of Student Development Diane Payne were present to answer any questions.

Discussion centered around the discrepancies in punishment dealt out by the Judicial Board and the mandatory signing of a revised Honor Code by all incoming freshmen as part of their application.

The proposal now in the hands of the Student Senate and Faculty Senate would give the Judicial Board the power to recommend that a grade of NC be given to a person convicted of "academic misconduct" in the courses involved.

UNDER THE present Student Body Statutes, students convicted of academic misconduct can be penalized by any of the following: admonition, oral reprimand, censure, a written reprimand, in-kind restitution, reimbursement for damaged property, restriction of privileges, disciplinary probation, suspension or expulsion.

Kirk explained the problem with having all of these as possible penalties. "I think it's not fair to the individual who is severely punished for some infractions while other students get off lightly. The Judicial Board had so much leeway on cases that sometimes it just boiled down to which student was the best at playingact."

Kirk went on to say that the Board can defer the NC penalty if they feel the infraction does not warrant such severe punishment. But the NC is an academic penalty for an academic crime, according to Kirk. He added that the present system amounts to nothing more than a slap on the wrist. "Sometimes we convict students two or three times for cheating."

There was also much discussion of a See "Committee," page two

Opinion varies on 15-minute class break proposal

by Karen Gaston
Staff Writer

If approved by Chancellor Job Thomas, a 15-minute class break will be implemented for next fall, as opposed to the 10-minute interval presently in effect. Students were asked for their opinion concerning the necessity for an extra five minutes between classes.

after the hour, unlike the 10-minute after the hour starting time most classes have now. When asked if he thought this would be confusing, Robinson replied, "Not really. Most people know what their schedule is going to be like after the first week or so," he replied. "It will be some

Eric Robinson

Eric Robinson, a junior felt that the extra time was unnecessary. "As far as I'm concerned, it is just stretches the day out another 50 minutes. It will be helpful to people who have classes in Biltmore. But it won't make much difference to me," said the High Point native.

The lengthened class break will also cause classes to begin at irregular times information that they should get," said the freshman.

Ross did not think that the irregular schedule caused by the 15-minute break would be confusing. She commented, "It won't be much harder to catch on to than the 10-minute after schedule - we have now."

The Sociology major felt that classes starting 20 minutes early would not be a problem. "People already have a hard time getting up for 8:10 classes. A little earlier isn't going to be any worse than it is now," said Ross.

FRESHMAN MARK Gress expressed a need for extra time between classes. "I don't have enough time right now to get to my classes. I go from one end of the campus to the other. It would be much less hassle with a little more time," said the Engineering major.

According to Gress, having non-uniform starting times for classes could be a problem at the beginning of the semester. The native of Cary said, "To start out with, the schedule will be confusing. After a month or so, people will get used to it. At first, it will be bad."

Starting earlier in the morning did not impress him. "It will be a mess having to get up earlier," Gress said.

James Morris, from Raleigh, saw a need for the 15-minute class break. "I think the extra time is necessary. I've had a lot of problems getting to classes on time, especially when my classes are on opposite sides of the campus. Usually, I'm late even if I run to classes. Five extra minutes would really do me good," said the sophomore.

MORRIS FELT that the disadvantages of an irregular class schedule will be offset by the advantages of extra time. "I really don't think that the new schedule will be confusing. It might have a little effect on some people, but the advantage of having five more minutes would outweigh any disadvantages of throwing the schedule off a little," said the Business major.

Carol Heake

Morris felt the same way about classes starting earlier. "Starting early is also a disadvantage, but I think it will pay off in the long run to have five extra minutes between classes."

Carol Heake did not feel a need for a longer class break. "It's not necessary for me, not with my schedule now," she said. "I have plenty of time to get to all of my classes."

The different starting times may be a problem to the freshman, according to Heake. "I'd just as soon leave it as it is," said the native of Durham.

The 7:50 a.m. starting time for classes did not appeal to Heake. "I would not like starting early too much," said the Business Administration major.

CHRIS HUFFMAN, a junior, felt that he would benefit from a longer break between classes. "To me, the extra time would be necessary since I have classes from the east section of campus to Patterson sometimes," said the Hickory native.

Huffman felt that the non-uniform times for the start of class could be confusing. Classes starting 20 minutes earlier in the morning will be a problem for the Materials Engineering major. "There's no way I can handle that," said Huffman.

Chris Huffman

An early morning fire did between $20,000 and $25,000 damage to the Studio One theatre last Wednesday morning. Raleigh Fire Department officials suspected a carelessly thrown cigarette caused the fire. Arson was not suspected and no one was injured in the blaze. Theatre officials said they expect the theatre to be closed from a week to ten days.

IFC completes food drive

by Raymond Rawlinson
Staff Writer
The Inter-Fraternity Council has successfully completed its annual food drive, which collects food for needy families in the Raleigh area and turns it over to the Wake County Social Services Board for distribution. Almost 8,000 pounds of food was collected in the eight days the drive was held. Dean

Harrell, co-chairman of the drive, expressed thanks to everybody involved. "The residents of Wake county did a good job and contributed as much as possible. My thanks to all fraternities for getting out and participating." Each fraternity was given an individual area from which to collect in the Raleigh community. All collecting was done on a door-to-door basis. Steve Cox, also co-chairman of the drive, explained no collecting was done on campus due to rules against soliciting on campus. WHEN ASKED about conflicts with other people collecting food for the needy during the holiday season, Cox explained there were indeed other people collecting food, notably the white Christmas drive in the grade schools. "Many people gave again, although they said they had already donated to some other drive," he added. Farmhouse Fraternity received the top prize for collecting the most food. Both co-chairmen expressed appreciation to all the people involved who had other activities to do.

Kunstler to talk at Stewart

by Robin Ludlow
Staff Writer
The Union Lectures Committee has announced that the nationally-recognized attorney William Kunstler will speak on "Law and Morality" in Stewart theatre tonight. Chairperson David Hinton explained the committee felt Kunstler is "one of the dynamic individuals who would appeal to the interests of the students." The Massachusetts lawyer served as special trial counselor to Martin Luther King, Jr., and has served as trial counselor in many nationally publicized cases, the Wounded Knee case, the Chicago conspiracy case, the Harlem Six murder trials, and the restriction of the government's claim of unrestricted wiretapping powers case. He also acted as negotiator during the Attica Prison rebellion and the Mohawk Indian land claim.

A Yale graduate, Kunstler served in the military during World War II, then went on to receive his law degree from Columbia University in 1948. Aside from practicing law, he has taught at several prominent universities, written nine books, including Beyond a Reasonable Doubt, and presently lectures across the country on the need for reform of the present judicial system.

His lecture tonight will be held at 8 p.m. in Stewart Theatre. Admission will be 50 cents for students.

Ad Hoc committee which drew up the proposal, explained, "Most people are bogged down with principle rather than reading and trying to understand what we are saying. The Honor Code simply states that a student recognizes the emphasis the University places on academic integrity."

Donna Jones, a member of the Judicial Board, further added that many students plead ignorance of the rules when faced with conviction for academic misconduct. The phrase, "I didn't know that cheating was against the rules," is frequently heard in hearings of students suspected of cheating.

THE UNIVERSITY would like to do away with the present system because the cards that students are asked to sign are not only ineffective but they are very cumbersome, according to Kirk. Many students sign false names or just don't bother to sign the cards at all. Placing an proposed Honor Code that all incoming freshmen would be required to sign.

THE CODE would read, "North Carolina State University is committed to upholding the standards of academic integrity as a vital part of the university community. Participation in any form of academic misconduct is in violation of student law and subject to prosecution under those laws. I support and pledge to uphold the standards of academic integrity at North Carolina State University."

Charles Kaiser, a student senator, objected to the code on the grounds of moral integrity. Kaiser said, "The signing of an honor code would be unacceptable to some students; it is a grave breach of their rights." He added that some other means of reducing cheating should be explored, such as teachers watching their classes more during testing.

Trio plays at Stewart

As its third concert this season, The Raleigh Chamber Music Guild presents an evening of music for viola, oboe, and piano by the Hillyer, Lucarelli, Hryniv Trio. Formed in 1973, the ensemble is composed of three solo musicians of extraordinary fame who are dedicated to the performance of chamber music, whether standard works for their instruments or little known but beautiful works such as the Two Rhapsodies for viola, oboe, and piano by Charles Loeffler which will be part of the concert here in Raleigh. The program also includes Trio in E Flat Major by Mozart, and a solo piece for each instrument: Britten's Six Metamorphoses after Ovid for oboe solo, Chopin's Fantasy in F Minor, op. 49, and J.S. Bach's Unaccompanied Suite in C Major, #3 for viola.

Performing these works will be three outstanding musicians: Raphael Hillyer, founding member of the Juillard String Quartet. He has performed throughout the world as soloist with major orchestras and in solo recital. Bert Lucarelli, oboe, is known to concert audiences for his many appearances with orchestras, chamber groups and in solo recitals in North America and Europe. Thomas Hryniv, piano, has won many awards for his performances.

The trio will be performing in Stewart Theatre in the NCSU Student Center on Sunday, December 5 at 8 p.m. Admission is by season membership. Tickets may also be purchased at the door: adults, $5, students $2. The audience is invited to meet the musicians at a reception following the concert. NCSU students free with current ID.

SHENANDOAH, a family musical, will be presented tomorrow night at Memorial Auditorium. A shuttle service will run from 6-8 p.m. from the Student Center. Price is $3.50.

Benson in Greensboro

George Benson, one of the nation's top jazz guitarists, will perform in the Greensboro Auditorium on Thursday, December 2nd, at 7:30 p.m. Appearing as special guest in the concert will be David Sanborn.

Benson began playing at age eight. His ukulele performance in a ghetto candy store drew raves at local parties and carnivals. He even landed a brief engagement at a neighborhood nightclub. Before he was in his teens, he'd cut his first single.

George Benson's achievements have won him the

Playboy All-Star Poll, a Grammy nomination and the long-standing support of a loyal following.

Tickets for the George Benson concert are priced at $6.70 and $7.50 with all seats reserved. They are on sale at the Greensboro Coliseum/Auditorium Box Office and the Record Bars in Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Durham, Raleigh and Chapel Hill.

Guitarist George Benson has been considered a premiere jazz artist for more than a decade. In that time he's recorded just as many well-

Joan Armatrading says:

'It would be real nice to make some money...'

Success means different things to different people. Sure Joan would like to make some money while in the music business, but that is not her prime motivation. She will consider herself a success if there are a lot of people who sing her songs.

Joan said, "It would be real nice to make some money, but that's not why I started or stay in the music business. I just hope people will sing my songs."

Nobody can say that she is not making a maximum effort either. Even though Joan calls this tour "very nice," they have been on the rock 'n' roll trail since early August and will continue into December. There is a lot of glamour that surrounds entertainers, but it is hard work.

While on tour, Joan is a single-minded person. She explains, "Once we begin a tour, I like to run through it with no breaks. I don't like having days off; I want to work."

Joan does not work solely on the road for she has cut three albums: Whatever's for Us, Back to the Night, and her newest release, Joan Armatrading.

Joan explains how she began her own music experience, "I was listening to Mary Ann Faithful on "Thank You Lucky Stars". After the show, I sat down and wrote one myself. It was not a matter of being able to do one or not, but just to do it. It was a silly little thing, and I'm not sure if I still have it. I guess I was 14 or 15 then."

Joan writes most of the material for her albums. Another example of her perseverance is that she taught herself to play guitar and piano.

Her albums sound almost completely different than her show at Dorton Arena. This is for two reasons: (1) The arena's acoustics are terrible, and (2) her producer is Glyn Johns. Johns has been working with the Rolling Stones for over a decade. Joan said, "Glyn got this band together, produces us, and he's the best!"

She had another big compliment, this time for A&M Records. "My first album was on Cube Records in England, and they leased to A&M. It took me 18 months to get away from Cube and to get into A & M. They're the best too."

Most musicians enjoy hearing their work on the radio, but Joan is a little different. She explained, "I don't like to listen to my music until I have done a new album. That way each effort is its own, and I can evaluate my progress, that protects my music from getting tired."

Joan is a quiet and private person. Normally, she does not talk unless she has something to say. Even in an interview, Joan does not say much unless asked a specific question. Actually she does not like interviews but understands they are necessary.

Her recreations include walking, driving, and working with clay. These pastimes are physical outlets for Joan's pensive personality. Of course, her greatest outlet is her song writing.

Joan enjoys being in clean and tranquil surroundings; consequently, it was no surprise when she labeled Denver and Boulder, Colorado as her favorite U.S. cities. They are quite a switch from her English home in the industrial center of Birmingham.

It certainly seems that Joan has all the necessary ingredients for being successful in America: talent as a musician and writer, a good band, an excellent producer, and a solid record company. Now, all these factors are working hard behind Joan, but only time will tell she will star here as she is in Europe.

State opens season

Women host Old Dominion

by Lu Angel
Staff Writer

If it's good to start out with the top competition, then the State women's basketball team has the perfect opening game.

Coach Kay Yow's squad meets Old Dominion, a team loaded with potential stars, at 7:30 tonight in Reynolds Coliseum. The Monarchs return six lettermen from last year's 15-11 squad in addition to nabbing some of the top high school players in the country. Debbie Richard and Yvette Baggett, both selected to the All-State tournament team last year, will not start tonight, due to the quality of the eight recruits.

LEADING THE MONARCHS will be Nancy Lieberman, the only high school player on the U.S. Olympic women's basketball team this summer. The 5-10 freshman was a high school All-America and will start at point guard for the Monarchs.

Coach Pam Parsons will display one of the tallest frontlines in the nation. Inge Nissen, a 6-5 forward and a member of the Danish National team last year, 6-1 transfer Heidi Doherty, 6-0 forward Jeanine Nelson, one of the squad's best shooters, and 6-0 forward Susan Richardson are all newcomers to the Old Dominion program.

Joining Lieberman in the backcourt will be 5-5 sophomore Trace Schneeweis, who sat out last season with a knee injury.

The first players off the bench are expected to be Richard, Baggett, Ruthann Burgun, Teri Abraham, and Angela Cotman.

STATE IS EXPECTED to field one of the best teams in the nation as well. The Wolfpack's bountiful recruiting year will enable Yow to feature a running, fast-break offense and a pressing, man-to-man defense.

Last season's second leading scorer, Cristy Earnhardt, a bona fide All-America candidate as a sophomore, returns to lead the Wolfpack. The 5-9 Rockwell native displays a high, arching shot against taller opponents around the basket, and relies on positioning to consistently out rebound the opposition.

Earnhardt will be joined at forward by either Peace transfer Kaye Young, a 5-11 junior from Bunn, or sophomore Lorraine Owen, a 5-10 Staley native. Young is one of the squad's best defensive players and an excellent passer inside. Both Kaye and her twin sister Faye are character-ed by an unlimited enthusiasm for the game, causing Yow to comment "they may go on forever."

Point guard Lulu Eure, a 5-1 senior from Eure, returns to direct the offense. She will be joined in the backcourt by another senior, 5-9 Sherri Pickard of Graham. Both players will lend experience and leadership to the Wolfpack.

SOLID PLAYERS abound in Yow's frontcourt, but none will be counted on more than two freshman recruits over six-feet tall, Genia Beasley (6-2) and June Doby (6-5). Yow expects their development to be the key to the success of State's fast-break. Their ability to deliver the quick outlet pass is essential to the Wolfpack's running game. "We're counting on the big girls," said Yow, "for defense and rebounding against the taller teams." Beasley will start tonight at the center position.

Sophomore Joy Ussery, a 5-10 forward from Albemarle, is a rugged rebounder and all-out hustler. Owen, possesses a good shot from the baseline in addition to her rebounding abilities.

Junior Stephanie Watson is the squad's best pure shooter, and senior Donna Andrews lends leadership and versatility to the squad.

Sophomore Pam Lejman, a 6-1 center, will provide depth at center.

Yow's other recruits include Leslie Cowart, a 5-4 point guard who will back up Eure, Kella Coffey, an excellent shooter and penetrator, defensive specialist Michelle Parker, and lefthander Mary Beth Quinn.

State has worked hard on defense since practice began, an area in which Yow feels the Wolfpack will have to excel to compete against the top teams. To defeat the Monarchs, the Wolfpack will have to initiate the fast break early and concentrate on defense throughout the game.

Joy Ussery (52) and Lorraine Owen (34) hope their Wolfpack women's team can defeat highly-regarded Old Dominion in the season-opener tonight at Reynolds Coliseum.

Sports

Wolfpack drops pair in typical Big Four

Hold it. Backup. You say Wake Forest won its third straight Big Four Tournament? And State, with all its young talent, finished fourth? Welcome to the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Though State's kiddie corps suffered a pair of heart-breaking defeats, Wolfpack coach Norm Sloan found the efforts in losses to North Carolina on Friday and Duke on Saturday encouraging.

In retrospect, even though the Demon Deacons doused the Olympic flame, the spirit of the Bicentennial will live on, albeit much more silently in Orange County.

The Tar Heels and Wolfpack, supposedly head and shoulders above the Deacs and Blue Devils, found their season-opening tournament frustrating. Neither played particularly well, something which didn't surprise followers of the toddling Pack but stunned those of the experienced, third-ranked Heels.

Sloan's encouraging words of Friday night were echoed after his team's loss to Duke Saturday. The shouts of "We're No. 1!" and the wild gyrations of the Carolina fans and players were absent on the second eve of the tournament, a get-together the Tar Heels have won only once in seven years.

Tar Heels use four corners

"We lost a basketball game, and we lost bragging rights for our alumni for about a month, but we lose nothing else," said Sloan Friday night, after his Wolfpack, with freshmen and sophomores carrying most of the load, had forced Carolina to resort to its four corner offense with 10 minutes remaining. Until that point, State had outplayed the Tar Heels. In the four corners, however, the Pack's youth began to take its toll, and the Tar Heels ended up winning by an unindicative 12 points.

"I have more respect for our team now than I did before tonight," Sloan said. "We went head-to-head with the No. 3 team in the country and did pretty well. I'm very impressed with our basketball team."

When the Heels went into their four-corner delay, Wolfpack guards Brian Walker and Clyde Austin, both freshmen, tried futilely to get State back into the game, but they simply couldn't handle the Carolina stall despite the fact that Phil Ford fouled out with almost five minutes remaining.

"It's one thing to practice against the four corners, but it's another thing to chase Phil Ford, John Kuester and Walter Davis around the court."

Then Sloan cited the difference in officiating which occurs when a team slows the tempo of the game.

"It seems the officiating changes when you start holding the ball," Sloan said honestly. "You can't breathe on somebody in a slowdown, but it was mayhem under the basket before. It's the same game and the same officials, but they start officiating defense. I told our players that. Any little contact is called in that situation. We learned that tonight. We didn't play it well tonight, but we will in the future."

When questioned as to the Wolfpack's ability to get back up emotionally for the third place game against Duke, Sloan predicted accurately. "I don't think we'll have any trouble getting up. Duke and North Carolina State are playing to see who goes home 0-2. I think the energy factor may be a key."

As it turned out, Sloan admitted after the loss to Duke that his team may have been fatigued. "I don't think there was a letdown," he said. "Probably we were tired."

Sloan is optimistic

Most observers felt Sloan would be chewing glass when he entered the post-game interview room. Instead, the coach was able to retain the optimistic tone of voice he had just 24 hours earlier.

"Again, I saw more to be encouraged about than to be discouraged about," he said. "I like the way we came back. Duke played well. They shot well and rebounded well."

Indeed, Duke was a bigger surprise than Wake Forest in the two-day affair. The Blue Devils were heavy favorites to finish dead last in the league and still are. However, they lost to Wake by just one point in the first round, then came back to beat the Wolfpack.

"I hope this is the start of a different year for us," said Duke's Bill Foster, whose team suffered so many close defeats a year ago. "State is so quick and has so many numbers that I thought they'd wear us down."

"When a team like that is 0-2, you don't look at their record. In two more games, they'll be .500," Foster quipped. Sloan came back, "That's the other guy looking at our schedule. It's always easy to say the other guy has it easy."

Foster continued to praise the Wolfpack. "They're a heckuva ball club. Kenny Carr's cramps helped us a lot I'm sure." Carr suffered cramps in his legs late in the game and was forced to sit out several crucial minutes down the stretch.

"Give State a lot of credit," Foster continued. "They're great. They're very quick. You don't know where to go when you're playing against them. We've always had a fear of State's jumping ability. The way

State's Hawkeye Whitney (43) and Tony Warren jockey for position under the basket with North Carolina's Tom LaGarde and Bruce Buckley during the Tar Heels' 78-66 victory Friday night.

Kenny and Hawkeye (Whitney) can take it to the hole, they're tough to stop."

On the previous night, the Wolfpack had drawn accolades from Carolina coach Dean Smith.

"State will be heard from a lot. They have excellent talent, and they had an excellent game plan by coach Sloan," Smith said. "I was very impressed with their quickness. I think they're a great team. I hope they are, or we're not."

So, what's next for the 0-2 Pack, off to a disappointing yet encouraging start?

"Our only problem now is not to get down on ourselves," said Sloan. "I'm not down on them. I still think this is going to be a fine team."

"There's nothing you can tell your players right now. They have to get together themselves and decide where to go from here. Maybe on Monday there might be something to say."

Guzzo hopes his Pack wrestling team can defend title

by Charles Laistler
Staff Writer

State's wrestling team is the defending Atlantic Coast Conference champ, and according to head wrestling coach Bob Guzzo, they want to stay that way.

After moving from last place in the conference to first in just two years, Guzzo said if the team continued to improve, they could soon be a national power. The Wolfpack's season opens tonight at Campbell. The first home match is Thursday at 7:30 against Virginia Commonwealth.

"WE WANT TO MAKE a bid here to get some national recognition," he said. "We've got this program going, and I think we have some top talent in the whole country."

Guzzo finished what he called a very good recruiting year, and he said the caliber of the new players was exceptional. "We had a real good recruiting year this year, we recruited four high school state champions and two of those were high school All-Americans; so we had as good a recruiting year as any major college in the country," he said.

Some of the top freshmen he was referring to were Rick Rodriguez, wrestling in the 160-pound class, and Jimmy Zenz. Both are from Pennsylvania, and both are high school state champions. Rodriguez is also a first team All-American. Two New York state champs were also recruited, Joe Lidowski, and Mike Koob. Lidowski is a high school All-American, and Koob won the National Junior Olympics.

STATE IS RETURNING a relatively young team, but Guzzo is not worried because the returning talent is still good. The Pack has returning ACC champions, Mike Zito at 118, Terry Reese at 158.

He said the conference looked to be very competitive this year with State, Maryland, Carolina and Virginia providing most of the competition. "It could be a relatively close situation, and it's bound to be very competitive," he added.

Guzzo said being defending ACC champs was nice but said he didn't think it would affect their play that much.

"I don't think it puts any pressure on us, but I think it gives us a lot of encouragement, and a lot of confidence. We are a relatively young team, and we won the conference last year in a really fine fashion," he said.

The whole conference is increasing in caliber," he continued. "We expect it to be very competitive. Also, our schedule has been upgraded somewhat by the addition of teams such as Lehigh, who was ranked fifth in the country."

THE CONFERENCE crown made recruiting easier, and it is the biggest sign the team is improving. Guzzo said. Everybody loves a winner, and according to the coach, a winning season never hurts recruiting.

The team has just finished competing in the North Carolina Invitational Tournament in Chapel Hill, and Guzzo said he was pleased with the results. "I was pleased with the performance of all our young kids, and we beat some people who had beat us in the past," he stated.

Looking forward to the first match with Campbell, he said "I don't think it's going to be one of our tougher matches, but it'll be a good opener for us. Virginia Commonwealth has had good recruiting, and we expect a real good meet with them."

According to Guzzo, wrestling hasn't really "caught on" in the south. He would like to see this change.

The team has done well in pre-season competition, with heavyweight Lynn Morris winning two tournaments. Terry Reese also won his class in the Carolina Invitational. Guzzo hopes the winning streak of last year and the pre-season will carry over into the regular season.

athlete of the week

Carr has solid Big Four

Despite suffering severe leg cramps and State losing both of its games in the Big Four Tournament, Wolfpack All-American Kenny Carr voted the center on the Big Four All-tournament team.

For his solid play in the two opening games, Kenny has been named the Technician's Athlete of the Week.

Carr was the Wolfpack's leading scorer and rebounder in both games, amassing a total of 45 points and 17 rebounds.

THE JUNIOR from Washington, D.C., also blocked three shots and collected four assists.

Kenny was obviously disappointed with the Pack's showing, but thinks things will get better.

"We are a young team and will make a lot of mistakes at first," he assessed. "But I think we are a good team."

"Right now we just have to concentrate on improving and playing well against Penn State in our home opener."

State hopes to record its first victory of the 1976-77 season when it hosts Penn State this Saturday night in Reynolds Coliseum.

"The Penn State game is important," said coach Norm Sloan. "I say the game is very important because each game from here on out is important."

"I've taken the attitude that the season starts January 9, when we play at Maryland in our ACC opener."

"We will strive to become a better overall team. And I continue to be impressed with the new players and our attitude."

Kenny Carr battles for rebound with Blue Devil Cameron Hall in the Wolfpack's 84-82 loss against Duke. Carr scored 25 points and grabbed eight rebounds against the Blue Devils.

Dixie Classic basketball concludes

The Dixie Classic Basketball Tournament and residence bowling playoffs dominate the news for last week's abbreviated schedule. The Orangepack and OYNX met last night to decide the DC, with the Orangepack in quest of their second consecutive title and OYNX bidding for their first. The Orangepack rolled to two relatively easy victories last week in the quarterfinals and semis while OYNX frolicked over Kappa Sigma, then pulled away from SAE to win their bracket.

In the quarterfinals, favored Swish, OYNX, and Orangepack all won handily while SAE downed the Sponse in a game rated a toss-up. The Orangepack toyed with the Mean Machine for 25 minutes, then put the game away with a hot streak down the stretch for a final 43-34 score. SAE reeled off 13 unanswered points at the outset of the second half, but never put Sponse away until the final buzzer. Trailing 25-23 at halftime, SAE shifted their fast break into high gear and held Sponse scoreless until eight minutes remained in the game. With the score 36-25, Sponse started the long road back. They finally pulled into a tie with just over one minute left, but SAE scored a bucket and tightened their defense to hold on. Swish moved into the early lead against the Black Spirits and was never seriously threatened, while posting a 46-32 triumph. The halftime score was 22-15 and Swish methodically built the margin from there. OYNX devastated Kappa Sig in the first half with their fast break and had the game well in hand before the midway point. The game was OYNX's fifth straight 70-plus point performance, a 71-42 decision, while Kappa Sig was eliminated in the late rounds for the second straight year.

The semifinal games produced two surprises. In the first game, Swish was a slight favorite. But the Orangepack burned the nets in the opening minutes and raced to a 32-21 halftime bulge. The second half was no different. The Orange steadily increased their lead as the game wore on and the waning minutes were an anti-climax. In the second game, OYNX dashed out to an early lead and threatened to destroy SAE. However, the underdogs rallied and cut the lead to four with less than five minutes left. But OYNX was equal to the challenge and they pulled away for a final 66-54 margin.

The residence bowling playoffs opened on Monday night. Quarterfinal matches paired Lee and Owen I, Becton and Sullivan I, Turlington and Bragaw South, and Owen II and Metcalf II. Residence basketball opened on Monday in both "A" and "B" leagues. The fraternities start the new campaign tonight with two new teams. One is Delta Upsilon and the other Alpha Sigma Phi. DU will debut against Delta Sig while Alpha Sig kicks off against Kappa Alpha.

Sigma Kappa rallied from the losers bracket to win the women's table tennis tournament over Lee. SK dumped ADP before upending Lee twice. Women's volleyball playoffs open on Thursday after a layoff for the Dixie Classic.

Farmhouse and Bagwell have emerged from the winners brackets in the residence and fraternity badminton tournaments. FH downed SPE and now waits for SPE to take on either Theta Chi or Delta Sig to decide the losers bracket. Bagwell handled Owen II last week and now will watch Tucker or Lee slam against Owen II for a final challenger. Both final matches are slated for 5 p.m. tomorrow night.

Finally comes news from the open tennis tournament. Rick Wies and Scott Bowen are the 1976 Doubles champions by virtue of a 6-1, 6-1 victory over George Blum and Bill Simpson. Wies has already reached the final round of the singles tourney, and he awaits either Glenn Kiger or Ross Hillman there.

Budweiser® presents "Beer Talk"

Salt in beer?

1. Did you ever see somebody put salt in his beer to bring the head back up?

2. Well, if you want to do it that way, it's okay with us.

3. But really... what salt does to a great beer is make it salty.

4. A perfect head of foam is easy. Just start with Budweiser. And pour it smack down the middle.

5. You can save the salt for the pop-corn, cause that Beechwood Aged Budweiser taste speaks for itself.

6. And you can take that without a grain of salt!

Technician Opinion

The wrong approach

The Faculty Senate passed a recommendation last week proposing the implementation of a 15-minute time period between classes instead of the current 10-minute interval.

This new policy is unnecessary, since 10 minutes is ample time for the majority of the student body to get to classes on time and would needlessly cause confusion and chaos due to the irregularity of the class starting times.

The only purpose of a policy of this nature would be extending the class day and there are not many students who wish to do that.

The basic argument in favor of this policy is that it would aid those students who have classes in Winston and Biltmore Halls.

Why should we change and confuse our present system involving 17,000 students for the mere 200 or 300 that it might help?

Under this proposal, classes would begin at 7:50 a.m. instead of 8:10. Students are already bypassing classes that start at 8:10, so if they were moved even earlier, more students would boycott them, and these classes would gradually begin to empty.

It was pointed out at the Faculty Senate meeting that a poll was taken of faculty members with the result that 52 per cent favored the change, while 40 per cent favored the present system.

Why weren't the students asked? This system is supposedly to help the students, not the faculty. But if the students don't want or don't feel they need an extra five minutes between classes, then there's no need whatsoever to change the system.

Mary Beth Spina, last year's Student Body President, went to the Student Senate last semester asking for its opinion on the extra five minutes. Senators voted on the matter and the result was in favor of the present policy of 10 minutes between classes.

The Student Senate is supposed to be the voice of the student body. With this in mind, the Faculty Senate should have realized that the vast majority of students did not want five more minutes. If they did not wish to go on the Student Senate's opinion, then a student poll should have been taken showing exactly what the students did want.

something new, something different, something that would not disrupt the schedules of 17,000 students—an intra-campus shuttle bus service.

A campus transit system has been under study for several years now with just a mention of an intra-campus shuttle service for the future. However, a transit system which would mainly assist commuters from Avent Ferry Road and King Village is no longer necessary thanks to the CAT bus system.

This system does not aid those students trying to get to class on time, whereas an intra-campus system definitely would help those students needing to get from Biltmore to Winston, in addition to the normal students looking for a quicker way to get to class.

Instead of disrupting the entire campus with a totally new schedule, why not aid the entire campus with this new attraction?

Letters

Exercise in futility

To Whom it may concern:

I realize that the act of writing a letter such as this one is merely an exercise in futility, but I will continue my futile effort for no other reason than to release the urge I have inside of me right now to smash a certain person's face.

I own a 1971 MGB. I am sure that other MG owners, who have had to buy parts for their MG's, know the implications of such a statement.

Other MG owners know that parts cost a fortune nowadays. In the past month some "bastard" has stolen a gas cap (cost approximately $10.00), a radiator cap ($4.00) and, most recently, a walnut gearshift knob ($6.00) off my car while it was parked. I guess the "bastard" who stole these parts off my car thinks my last name is Rockefeller. Or maybe he just needs the parts more than I do. Or maybe the person who stole these parts is just a sorry bastard who doesn't want to pay the price for the parts, so he just steals whatever he needs. Whatever his reason was, it's not good enough for me. The money that bought my car, and the money that replaces parts that have been stolen off my car, and the money that has put me through school, is money that was acquired through hard work. While I'm in school that money comes from my father, and he's the one that's working hard to get that money.

As I said in the beginning, this letter is an exercise in futility, because even if the bastard who stole those parts is reading this, he doesn't care anything about the trouble he causes other people. This letter is intended solely for the person who stole the parts off my car, and if you are the one who did it, I'd like to say something. You're a bastard and your mother runs rabbits!

Alive and well

To the Editor,

I would like to start off by saying your election coverage and events leading up to the election was very good. I'm the chairman of the College Republican, the coverage you gave us was great. I thought it was very fair.

Now that the election is over all people think that we (College Republican) are dead or everything will stop. That is not the case. We did take a rest after the election. But we are gearing up for the coming year. We have a State convention and College Republican convention coming up in the spring. We are planning a fundraising event also. All of this will be our major events. We will also have speakers at our meetings. So as I hope you can see we are not dead. We are alive and well. I would like to personally invite everybody to our next meeting on Nov. 30 at 8 p.m. in the Board room in the student center. Thank you again for everything you have done.

Not God

To the Editor:

First of all E. Sandy Blakely I have not appointed myself God and neither did I condemn you to hell. I'm really surprised at the reactions from some of the Christians that have replied. It seems to me some of you are the ones that need to find Christ. For instance Mr. Patterson's reactionary comment "confused and saddened" displays to me the type of Christian who has tried to save himself or one that tries to save other people by this Peace Brother, peace for the world business. "Blessed are the peacemakers." Sure, why not throw that line at me. There's a difference when God is in what you're doing and when you're trying to do something on your own. This brings up my point on why you are confused and saddened. Look man, sure it's saddening to see a lost soul; this displays your Christianity if you saddened; but this confused bit. Why are you confused? "Screaming and burning in hell" is just plain straight fact. What's so confusing about that? It's in the Bible along with many other occurrences that the sinner will encounter. Many of you seem to think I'm condemning Mr. or Ms. Blakely and Mr. Kain but your wrong. God will do the condemning, we just let the sinners know what's ahead and try to help them find Christ. For Charlotte Jasperson, I believe you're a Christian, and I believe Christ died for our sins. Those who accept him are the ones he forgives of their sins. Sure he died for everyone, but that doesn't mean everyone will be saved which brings up my point in the first place. The sinners are going to be screaming and burning in hell, and that's the way it is. Plain and straight (from the Bible). Mr. Patterson, don't feel that you should have to apologize for all Christians. I know several that feel the same way I do. P.S. Mr. Wilson, obviously you're statement in Mon. Technician was just thrown in for attention, of which you will receive a prayer.

Chris Guffey

Can't take the heat?

To the Editor

I would like to respond to Nyle Frank's letter (Nov. 22) concerning the announcement I placed in the "Crier" on Nov. 19. The announcement, which ended with the words "Bring naked women and wine" seemed to have caused Mr. Frank some displeasure. The remark was not intended to chastise Mr. Frank nor any of his past perversities, it was only used as a device to attract some attention to the Coffeehouse and possibly to get more people to attend. If the ad caused any group or person's undue embarrassment I would apologize, but since the turnout was extraordinarily good I do not regret my decision.

Kurt Hair

P.S. And remember Nyle, "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

What?
—Ed.

Be man

As co-author of the "Criticize Christians" column, I'm writing in response to Social Ignorance's "Man Enough" letter. To apologize is to express regret for a fault or offensive statement. The only regret I have is that I did not start my critical statements, concerning the greatest curse to befall mankind, at an earlier date. The only apology is to those of you who, in your attempt to rise above the quagmire of the anti-life anti-intellectual depravity of christianity, thought yourself in solitary struggle. YOU ARE NOT ALONE. I join you in your fight against the mass mediocracy, the mindless herd, the pathetic human-animal—christian. You love life, you love power, and you love man as much as I. I tears your heart to see the great potential energy of man sapped away by the parasitic cravings of the christian in his attempt to "save your soul" by cutting off your head. Stand strong in yourself. You have the knowledge, the wisdom, the desire to overcome the shadow of the cross. Know that in your strength others will call you evil. If the desire of knowledge, power, life, and light be evil then let us be the epitome of evil. Be proud, be bold, be instinctive, be powerful, be life-loving and light-gathering; but most of all BE MAN.

Demian Kzin

Letters to the Editor should be no longer than 300 words or they may be edited. They should be typed or written legibly and clearly, and students writing them should include an address or phone number where they can be reached. Letters which are undecipherable, or are too long, or which contain possibly libelous material may be edited or not run at all. The Technician will make every effort to run all the letters it gets, but doesn't promise anything.

The Political Fishbowl

Of rednecks, tenth grade talk, and PBR

by Kevin Fisher
Contributing Writer

Commenting on the election of Jimmy Carter, former Senator Sam Erwin said, "...the South has finally been fully readmitted to the Union."

But oh, how some people are wrestling with that reality. Acceptance of the fact that a native southerner—a rural Georgia backwoods red clay farmer no less—will shortly be living at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue is not coming painlessly to some of those aristocratic peoples living outside the sunbelt region. "High hats," Harry Truman called them.

In a New York Times News Service article which appeared Sunday in newspapers across the nation, a Mr. B. Drummond Ayres Jr.—wonder what his friends call him...Drummy, perhaps—asks the question, "(Now) must everyone plant a magnolia? Or learn to eat moon pies and drink Are-Ah-Cee Cola?"

Mr. Ayres, or Sir Drummond, or whatever, then proceeds to inform America that we in the South have not yet learned to correctly to speak the English language. He writes, "One of every three Georgians now lives in Atlanta (pronounced 'Lanter')..."

The no doubt urbane and sophisticated Mr. Ayres next examined the state of things in terms of law enforcement officers and the roads they patrol. His conclusion: "...big belled deputy sheriffs are still out there, chucking into their CBs as they cruise main highways that would be backroads north of the Mason-Dixon."

Finally, Ayres discusses the social life of the region: "There are still some high spirited old boys slouched in gasoline stations in little towns... What is needed to help those students who might actually need more time between classes is Jimmy Carter's brother, Billy, is one of them."

Ayres' conclusions are of course the worst sort of generalization and stereotype.

I was born in and have spent every year of my existence in the South. Never once have I said "Lanter" in my entire life. Moreover, I do not recall ever hearing anyone else say it, either. Just to check, today I asked some 20 people to tell me the name of Georgia's largest city. Nineteen said "Atlanta," and one particularly fond of the city said "Hot 'Lanta." None said "Lanter."

As for big belled deputy sheriffs, the only one I've ever seen is the one on the Dodge commercials. Funny thing about those highways that would be backroads north of the Mason-Dixon too...having driven to Atlanta many times and completely through South Carolina and Georgia en route to Miami I somehow was constantly on four or more lane highways. Just lucky I guess.

Oh, and thank you Mr. Ayres for your parenthetical expression explaining to the country what "PBR" means. Certainly no one but we poor rednecks has ever referred to that august beverage by its acronym.

And Billy Carter and his friends talk 10th grade, do they? Well certainly Mr. B. Drummond Ayres Jr. would know nothing of that for he no doubt skipped elementary and high school and started college at age six.

Other than the point made at the beginning of the column, all of this proves something. Namely, that professional position, as such, means nothing.

The New York Times, it can be strongly argued, is the finest newspaper in the world. Therefore, those on its payroll are similarly apt. Right? Wrong. Witness B. Drummond Ayres Jr. A closing thought...I hope that if he wants one, Billy Carter orders a "PBR" at an official White House state dinner.
