North Hall petition results in destruction of dorm; student retaliation possible

by Fan C. Yancey
Resident Expert

Early morning demolition work Monday on newly-acquired North Hall startled residents and sent them running for their lives.

The wrecking ball struck promptly at 1 a.m. and continued amid students' frenzied attempts to retrieve their possessions.

Demolition of North Hall comes on the heels of an attempt by students to petition for a refund of their room rent. The students had cited numerous violations of their nine-month leases as justification for a refund.

Although University officials declined to comment Tuesday on either the demolition or the students' petition, several students speculated that administration hostility was the prime motive for the action.

"We were getting screwed royally by those honchos (Chancellor Joab Thomas and staff). We felt it and they knew it," said John Blutarski, a self-professed spokesman for hall residents and an organizer of the petition.

"One of Banks Talley's (vice chancellor for Student Affairs) secretaries told me that Talley was so distraught about the University's reputation getting damaged by the media that he refused to say anything to anybody," Blutarski exclaimed. "Can you believe that?"

With Talley's role in the action cleared, inquiries into the origin of the demolition order have centered on other individuals.

Workers hostile

Workers for the Sea Level Wrecking Company, who performed the work as specified in their contract, proved reluctant to get involved in campus affairs: "Can't you see I got work to do?" and "O.K. kid, I'll give you just five minutes to get out of my sight," were comments indicative of their attitude toward campus newspapers.

Quickly changing the subject to avoid fistcuffs, the reporter tried to talk shop with the none-too-friendly workmen. A comment about the remarkable elastic movement of the now-swaying balconies produced cold stares. "Kid, this building ain't nothing compared to the old condemned orphanage at Mission Valley we torn down for the Yorks. Your North Hall kinda reminds me of heavy-duty cardboard," a workman said.

No one at Sea Level Wrecking Company would say who signed the work order, except to say that it was for them to know and the Technishit to find out.

Questions posed within the office of the director of Residence Life, Charles Oglesby's office that is, finally broke the case wide open. "I did it, ha ha, I did it. Banks asked me to find a way to correct the North Hall mistake, and I found it, ha ha, ho ho, hee hee!" Oglesby said. Oglesby said he would appreciate comments and suggestions from students on how to further improve the North Hall situation.

While Raleigh police do not plan to release names of casualties until next of kin are notified, they expect the list to be fairly short. "Heck, it could have been Saturday night," said Raleigh Fire Chief I. Gothe Hots. "Everyone would have simply laughed, taken another swig, and sung a few choice lines from 'Shattered' by the Rolling Stones."

Former North Hall residents whose lives have been shattered are urged to attend the rally scheduled for Wednesday night at 7 in room 3120 of the Student Center. Organizers hope at least a couple of hundred of the homeless will attend. Bring a two-by-four and bash some heads, organizers suggest.

The wrecking ball takes a final swing into what remains of North Hall. One workman called the building's construction similar to cardboard. (Staff photo by I. Gothit)

Future CCR plans being formulated

by C.F. Hag
Staff Flasher

Plans for next year's Classroom Consumer Report are now being formulated, according to outgoing Student Body President J.D. "Windbag" Hagworth.

Hagworth said he hopes next year's CCR will equal the high standards set by this year's class evaluation report. "I was really tickled to death with the CCR. There is no way to express my deep gratitude to those who aided me with this project. I would name them now, but I just hate to run off at the mouth."

"Everyone knows I never say more than is necessary, and I am extremely concerned with not damaging my sparkling reputation."

"As you know, a TV personality cannot afford to be a controversial figure in any aspect of life," Hagworth said.

"You know, life is tough. I tried to be a jock and I screwed that up. I tried to be a student leader and I screwed that up. I'm trying to get John Anderson elected and I'll probably screw that up, too."

"Oh, have I told you about Anderson? Everyone says he's too liberal to be a Republican, but, damn it, if those shitheads would just listen to the old scumbag's policies they would agree with me."

"Oh damn it—there go those expletives again. They almost got me impeached. I wish to hell they wouldn't keep cropping up every time I open my mouth to answer one simple little question."

"But, then again, nothing in life is really simple. I just hope the new government officials can get this University straightened out. We lost our two most important faculty members this year, and I am really worried about this University's survival without them."

"I mean, breaking in a new football and basketball coach in the same year? It's just a terrible situation, and I am truly scared... I mean really terrified..."

At last!

At this point in the interview, Hagworth broke down and was too emotionally overcome to continue. For once, he shut the hell up!

Prostitution ring cracked in Carroll dorm

by Rick Lew
Staff Writer

Raleigh vice squad officers and State Public Safety officers staged a raid on Carroll Dormitory Monday night in an effort to crush an ever-widening prostitution ring.

"We have known about this for quite some time," officer Johnny "Jock" Jones of the Raleigh Police Department said. "But we needed evidence to obtain a search warrant."

In an attempt to gather evidence, 12 vice squad and Public Safety officers went under-the-cover for six months.

"We feel we have plenty of stuff to bring to court," Jones said as he produced some photographic evidence.

"Yo: can see in this picture, the girl accepting the money. And in this series of shots, you can see her undressing and getting into bed," Jones pointed out.

Public Safety Director James Cunningham said in an interview with the Technishit that he was really glad to have those coeds out of bed.

"Those girls should know better than to do something like this," Cunningham said. "They should have been smart enough not to accept more than $30 at a time."

According to Public Safety, officers first heard about the ring from students' mothers who were upset because their sons were spending so much money on their "dates" in Carroll.

Approximately $5,000 of student fees were used in the effort to gain the needed evidence.

One officer was overheard to say that he was glad the assignment was over. "It's about time, my back has been killing me," he said.

Cunningham big-headed

Cunningham said he was especially proud of the way his officers handled themselves on this piece of investigative work.

"They (the officers) really gave all of themselves on this one," Cunningham said. "Some of the officers were so dedicated that they even worked on the weekends. That's really having spirit."

Most of the 25 women arrested Monday night would offer no comment other than to say, "Don't worry, we'll be back."

Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, who was present at the raid, briefly spoke to the Technishit about the arrests.

"I knew it was coming," Helms said. "For years I've told them about this."

"In my opinion, Carroll Dormitory is the largest state-supported project of student affairs in North Carolina," Helms said.

"I hope these young ladies learn a lesson from this," Helms snorted. "Crime does not pay well."

Shortly after the women had been charged downtown, Willis Casey was observed fuming as he brought bail money for them. It seems 20 of the girls were representatives of State hired to guide prospective football players around campus.

"I've told these girls that the provision in their scholarship contracts specifically prohibits them from doing any free-lance work," Casey said. "If they do, they are required to turn over half their profits."

When asked about what action would be taken against the women, Casey said, "They will probably be fined and forced to work overtime for the future basketball players."

Linda Lovie, one of the women arrested Saturday night, said, "I don't know why people are so upset. The athletic department is sometimes late with our checks. We have to eat, you know."

University donation enables Technishit to publish daily

by Joe Rossi
News Editor

Following close on the heels of Phi Beta Kappa's second rejection of a chapter application from State in two years, administration officials announced Tuesday a $2 million donation to the Technishit.

With the "no-strings attached" money from the School of Humanities and Social Sciences, the Technishit will publish daily in an attempt to raise the academic standards of the University, Technishit editor N. Joy reported.

According to Humanities School Dean Robert O. Tilman, Phi Beta Kappa had been impressed by the student newspaper but disappointed that it only appeared three times a week.

"They (Phi Beta Kappa) said that if we had a daily newspaper, there would be a better chance for us to get a chapter," Tilman said.

"Although I hate to admit, we gave the Technishit the money," Tilman moaned. "God help us now."

In order for the Technishit to come out daily with its usual great stories, Joy said, only non-student professionals would be allowed to work on the newspaper.

"Students just don't have enough time," Joy said. "If we are going to get the administration, we have to have full-time staff members."

When asked about Pub Board policy forbidding non-students from working on the Technishit, Joy said, "Who needs them? They can keep their few thousand dollars."

Considered the most prestigious honor fraternity in the country, Phi Beta Kappa is a liberal arts-oriented organization. Schools are admitted or rejected on the basis of the fraternity's opinion of their liberal arts program.

According to Chancellor Joab Thomas, State was rejected this year for essentially the same reasons as last year.

"Our programs suck," Thomas said. "Most of our money is spent on useful schools like Engineering or Agriculture—not on Humanities."

"But if they insist we have a decent humanities program, we will give them one," Thomas said.

When asked for an opinion on the Technishit going daily, Thomas offered "no comment" while mumbling

Add-a-bead bandit apprehended in ambush

by Top Sider
Resident Greek

After weeks of terror on campus, Herbert "La Coste" Council, age 32, of Student Development, was arrested in an ambush planned by Public Safety and Raleigh police officers.

Council was arrested in connection with numerous reports in the North Hall area concerning sorority women being attacked from behind and dragged into the bushes. (Way to go Herb, you devil you!) a Public Safety officer said. Their abductor was consistently described as a "slight man, wearing khakis and an Oxford (I say, old chap) shirt."

The clue leading to the arrest was a distinctive laugh, which began as a snicker and continued voraciously through the entire attack, according to Public Safety Director James Cunningham.

Susie Jones, a coed victimized several times, was asked why she continued to use the same North Hall area route home. "I thought it was my duty to help," she said. "I wanted to gather clues for evidence."

Jones described the attacks for the Technishit. "It was always the same. He would stroke my beads and kiss my alligator, very tenderly," she said. "I wanted to find out what this guy's name was—he knew what he was doing." (That's what all the others said.)

Hard worker

Council could not be reached for comment; however, Larry Gracie, Council's boss, said, "I'm sure Herbie did this (the attacks) with the University in mind. He always worked overtime to help the clubs he advised. Herbie emphasized unity among the Greeks and worked to bring that feeling of oneness to a climax."

Concern expressed over growing perversion

ON THE BRICKYARD

N. Joy

Dr. John Freshest

by Jill Do
Staff Writer

Administrators have expressed a growing concern over the continual incidents of perversion at State. High officials, with extended memorandums, reprimanded students for various fetishes, including foot and finger, a preoccupation with the lewd and socially unacceptable (i.e. ping-pong beer bottle caps off the heads of passersby near Sullivan and a determination to degrade and denigrate the English language (i.e. using used ENG 112 themes in Carroll Dormitory "rest" rooms.

In an effort to feel out the students on this accusation of perversion, the Technishit questioned a couple of these perver...uh, State students on (literally) the brickyard and received some climactic reactions.

N. Joy had little sympathy for the old fogies. "I have only one thing to say," she said quickening her pace. "Who peed in their corn flakes?"

Dr. John Freshest, a humanitarian in the school of social diseases sees the perversion as simply "a trashy trend," so to speak.

Due to a stuttering problem, resulting from an affliction he termed as "just an infection," Freshest was forced to limit his comments.

Joe Rossi, an avid male, quipped, "What's the harm of a little fun and games. What do they want us to do, play Monopoly? I mean, really. We're more interested in playing Life."

Keepenbein Slack, who's always been somewhat of an athletic supporter, felt qualified to reply only from a jock's point of view. But he refused to comment as he felt, "The Technishit is no place for people to air their dirty underwear."

Theophilus Thistle, a joint punster and tongue twister tanzler turned on two toes and tiraded towards a total intensification of the trash. "But I wouldn't want to prematurely pronounce this a pot of perversion," he placated.

"I ain't denigrated nothin'." Seymour Butz said in response to the accusation that students were abusin' the english language. "I try to be as graphic as I can without usin' them thangs called words."

Jack N. Jill went up the hill and was thus unavailable for comment. It's been said, however, that when Jill came down, she had lost her crown.

"We've never had to go out looking for perverse entertainment," Flesh Flashers said. "We've got double trouble right here. They always say, 'Two heads are better than one.'"

Snapshot simply shuttered when confronted with the memorandum issued by high officials. "I just can't picture it. Students are like crop of corn," she snapped. "Most are high. But you've always got a few weeds."

Larry Lipshitz, a fresh man in retail management, regards this crisis as ridiculous. Lipshitz, whose specialty is sales, said, thinking aloud, "There must be some way to make a profit out of this."

"Let me give you a crisp piece of advice," ein knuspriges Madchen said with a wink.

The Great Technishit Dungeon Run

by Seymour Butz
Staff Dungeon Master

1a. You are caught in a murderous cross fire. There are two demented kampus kops firing .68 caliber semi-automatic Curmudgeons at you, and unless you make a smooth move fast, it'll be a "pine box with no back in your jacket" for you!

You see three doors that offer escape. One says "Fraternity" (go to 1b), another says Technishit (go to 1c), and the third says "Wolfpack Club" (go to 1d) or, stay where you are (go to 1e).

1b. You enter the world of the Frat Rats. You attend Frat parties until burned out. Your pickled brain winds up in a bell jar on display in Gardner Hall annex. Game over.

1c. Upon entering, you encounter a cute little seductress, all of about three feet tall. She attempts to lure you into a room full of gizmos and freaky folks wielding Exacto-knives. You enter gladly in anticipation of keen things to come (go to 2a) or you say "hell no!" and run for a door that leads into an office (go to 2b).

1d. There's no escape from this middle-class crap. You die of terminal bullshit. End of game.

1e. One of the kampus klutzes gets off a lucky shot and ruins your whole afternoon. Game's over for you.

2a. You wind up chained to a light table and you spend four years screwing up ads and layout. Your boredom is relieved by frequent, drunken, drug orgies and biannual steak dinners. Don't bitch. There are worse ways to end up. Game over in four years.

2b. You pass on the seductress and wind up in front of a desk marked News. You swallow the line offered forth by a guy behind the desk who looks for all the world like Joe Rossi, L.A. Tribune (go to 3a). The guy gives you the creeps, so you do your famous "exit: stage left" and escape into the dim recesses of the office (go to 3b).

3a. You enter upon a brilliant career of investigative reporting. Just short of winning a Pulitzer, you get carved up like bologna on a dark night by a freaked out Phi Beta Kappa Committee chairman who claims you libeled his character. Game over for you, but they erect a bronze statue in your honor and you spend eternity collecting pigeon shit.

3b. You run your little buns off and wind up in front of a desk that says Sports. A man with black hair says, "Come cover a game with me!" And off you go gleefully, note pad and pencil in hand (go to 4a), or you find that jock straps and atomic balm make you break out. You give your polite "no thank yews" and scratch off to another part of the office (go to 4b).

4a. Covering sports is real neat, but you get caught on the wrong side of the field while wearing a "Screw Carolina" T-shirt. Game over—there ain't enough of

4b. While tap-dancing through the dog turds on the floor, you wind up in front of a little gal wearing purple and yellow. She thrusts a camera in your face and tells tales of great photogs past. You think you've found your calling (go to 5a) or you totally screw up your first roll of film and get "canned" go to 5b).

5a. Your pictures wind up in Time. You get international recognition for your work with the National Geographic, unfortunately you are eaten alive by the subject of your latest "Cute Animal" shot for page one. A brilliant career ends up on the menu. Game over, but take heart. The animal that ate you gets the trots and squirts itself to death.

5b. Your pictures stink! You get sent to write reviews for an outfit called Entertainment. They think you stink too and push you toward another desk (go to 6a). Or your rock review gets printed. (Go to 6b).

6a. Features is the name of the game here. But you are an illiterate from Lizard Lick (go to 7a) or you do fine (go to 7b).

6b. Your rock group review stirs up a letter-writing campaign. A committee of nerds arrives one morning and you die horribly of an overdose of sophomore design-0s. Game over.

7a. Illiterates need loving too, so you're offered a home on the graphics staff. Your stuff gets printed (go to 8a) or it is decided during and editorial staff meeting that you have too many smarts to be of any use (go to 8b).

7b. You end up writing "Shake-n-bake" commercials and you pass away, old, rich and decadent of a heart attack while making love to someone 75 years your junior. Game over, but who cares, anyway?

8a. Your cartoons are a hit! You become the first person to retire from the Technishit with 30 years service! Game finally over!

8b. You get kicked off the Technishit staff (go to 9a) or fight it and stick around (go to 9b).

9a. Congratulations! You escape with your sanity! Ain't life grand? You win game!

9b. You spend hours getting grilled in a Pub Board meeting, but you get the "foot" during the annual spring impeachment ceremonies. You escape to the outside world just like in "9a" but without your sanity (go to 10a) or seek your future elsewhere (go to 10b).

10a. Go to 1a.

10b. Go to 11a.

11a. You're given a chance (go to 1a).

Fenced in Ever have that fenced in feeling? Student Senate President Robb Lee recently did when the Technishit staff locked him up to express their displeasure over certain Senate acts such as banning pot smoking, lewd sex acts, and pill pushing from the Student center building.

For those interested in feeding Lee, donations or food should be brought by the Technishit offices between 2 and 4 p.m. on March 31. After deducting handling fees and other trivia expenses, Lee will get the rest. (Staff photo by Sex Goddess)

White held hostage by SPCA

by Sweet Pea
Staff Writer

Art White, head of University Food (?) Services, continues to be held hostage for the 14th day by irate Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals workers.

SPCA workers claim construction of the new cafeteria on west campus will seriously endanger the health and well-being of the rat population currently living there.

The abduction occurred shortly after White publicly finalized plans for the cafeteria complex which will be opened in 1982. Also contributing to the kidnapping was White's refusal to remove "Super Wolf" and "Double Cub" sandwiches from the short-order line.

White referred to the increase in trichinosis on campus to justify his destruction of the protein content and structure of the pre-fabricated meat products sold through his auspices.

"At least we don't serve our meat raw like they do at Case," White said.

When questioned on this fact, head of Case Athletic Facility and Athletics Director Willis Casey said, "I'm glad they kidnapped that sucker. He'd send his people over to borrow milk or ice or napkins or something, and if you didn't watch 'em close the whole time, they'd make off with the shrimp cocktails or cornish hens."

Sex article prompts action

by Care Less
Staff Writer

A recent Technician article about the increasing number of unplanned pregnancies among State's women students spurred concerned university officials to form a commission to study the problem. After several open meetings, the commission made the following suggestions:

1. Automatic condom dispensers placed in men's dormitories.
2. Abortion facilities included in the new extension of the infirmary.
3. Chastity belts issued to all students to be worn for a two-week period, one month prior to the beginning of exams.
4. Three hours credit for a new course - BC 100 - Introduction to Birth Control: Practical Methods and Applications on a student budget.

Director of Counseling Services Lee Salter complained that pregnancy often disturbed a woman's regular study habits. For this reason, women carrying 15 or more hours may be required to undertake mandatory birth control procedures.

"Our hardest time is during exams," Salter said. "If women can be more careful in the month ending the semester, it'd be easier on all of us. I'm not sure what the problem is, but, well, women just don't wear curlers anymore."

Director of Health Services Carolyn Jessup expressed concern over the issue. "We have been running a clinic on birth control for some time," she said. "I am glad the men are beginning to take some responsibility. I have been sensitive to the concerns of the women for a time. There's just no stopping a horny man!"

Delphen Shields of the Counseling Center agreed. "Something about the warm weather gets the guys turned on. They can't blame it on the girls, because I've never known a sunburned girl who asked a guy to shove more problems on her."

J.D. turns from D.J. to CBS

by Susie Keutip
Features Writer

"60 Minutes" Producer Don Hewitt, who is also creator of the highly-rated CBS show, announced today that State student J.D. Hayworth will be joining his staff.

"We're really excited about Hayworth coming aboard the '60 Minutes' ship. Dan, Morley and Mike have been talking about it for weeks," the enthusiastic Hewitt said. "In fact, I'm getting vibes from the guys that they may be just a little intimidated," he said.

Hayworth, State student body president, sent shock waves through Raleigh television news recently with his startlingly fresh approach as a part-time sportscaster for WPTF-TV. Critics have called his segment of the otherwise slow-moving show "witty," "to the point," and "revolutionary."

Hewitt notes that the positive reviews caught his eye from the start. "When I first saw a resume tape from J.D., I was transfixed; he has this incredible knack of looking and sounding like a former jock who has no real idea of what he's doing behind a camera. That sly dog," the producer said.

According to CBS accounting officials, a contract is still in the working stages for Hayworth. CBS denied rumors that Hayworth would be used for light janitorial work on Sundays. As for Hayworth's precise "60 Minutes" duties, Hewitt outlined the plan for the investigative show's new format. Hayworth will be responsible for the show's recently retired "Point-Counterpoint" segment with a minor variation. Hayworth will take both sides of the issue; by use of a special camera effect, the husky go-getter will actually be able to disagree with himself on the air.

Flags will fly at half-staff at the Raleigh campus for several days. A farewell rally is in the works, and local politicians say both John Anderson supporters in the state will be sure to show. As for the future of all this fuss? J.D. Hayworth was unavailable for comment at press time.

Needless to say, Norm Sloan's gone away

by Keopenbein Slack
Sports man

SHORT SUBJECTS:

Who really cared when Norm Sloan went to Florida? Reporters in North Carolina were certainly tired of his oh-so predictable press conferences. Before Sloan would even come out to talk, everyone present would scribble "Needless to say," as those invariably were his first words.

Needless to say, Sloan had nothing to needfully say. Needless to say, the other team played well when State lost. Needless to say, Sloan was disappointed. Needless to say, when State won, Sloan's team played well. Needless to say, Sloan hated the press. Needless to say, the feeling was mutual.

When Sloan accepted the job at Florida, every single, solitary Gator player decided to quit.

"Creeping crocodiles," exclaimed one player, "we ain't got half'nuff talent to play for that man."

Slack on the Pack

"Goldam," screamed another, "the man's a fricken error. Shoot, I heard tell he ripped one of Al Green's eyes out in practice and that's why he transferred to Louisiana State."

A press release out of Gainesville says Sloan reportedly is going to hire Steve Walker as an assistant. It comes as a big surprise to most people who know anything at all about the situation, seeing that Walker transferred from State in order to escape Sloan's wrath.

"If he only knew why I'm taking that job," was the only comment Walker had, drawing a .45 from his underwear.

State basketball players are enthralled with their new coach Jim Valvano. Here's a sampling of the comments from the players.

Scott Parzych: "Party."

Craig Watts: "Wow, I can play with a beard."

Derek Whittenburg: "I guess this means we won't have to run around like a bunch of Indians anymore."

Art Jones: "Maybe I can get into the offense now."

Phil Weber: "Hot damn—I'm a native New Yorker."

Max Perry: "He lets white boys play, doesn't he?"

Kenny Matthews: "Does that mean I get to do more than just be in the starting lineup and then play for a minute and spend the rest of the game on the bench?"

Chuck Nevitt: "Who's Jim Valva, Valvi, Val—who is he?"

Sidney Lowe: "Does he like guards with big butts?"

Thurl Bailey: "We get to eat dinner at his house—get his rear down here—I'm tired of Case."

Emmett Lay: "Do they have walk-ons in New York?"

State football players, on the other hand, are extremely envious of the basketball team. While Monte Kiffin may bring the Wolfpack one of its most successful seasons ever, the gridders aren't really enjoying the vast social experiences they've had under Kiffin's reign.

"I guess we can get used to it," said offensive tackle Chris Koehne, slurping his glass of orange juice.

"It's just shit like that that sends me off," he added, pointing to Scott Parzych who was chugging yet another beer.

Valvano reportedly is thinking about hiring Clyde Austin as a graduate assistant coach.

"I think Clyde could do us a big favor if he would work with us," Jimmy V said. "He could teach all incoming freshmen how to latch onto a girl who will buy them a Cadillac. It sure seems like a feasible opportunity to me."

"Besides, it'll take a lot of pressure off me to find these guys cars."

Another memo out of Gainesville says Tiny Pinder has applied for an assistant coaching job.

"That's the kind of luck I get wherever I go," Sloan complained. "When they asked me to coach the British Olympic team Glen Sudhop wanted to try out, and now Pinder wants to help me coach."

"I don't know why they want more of me. I thought I got in their collective shits enough to keep them out of my life."

Pinder thinks he's qualified for the position, however.

"I am," he swore. "No comment."

Here it is. The pick of the week. This one can't be wrong.

What? Trio to replace Joan in singing(?) of the anthem

by Derek Whittenburg
Sports Writer

Ever since Norm Sloan took off for Florida, the biggest question concerning State basketball has been—"Who's going to sing the national anthem?"

"I could really care less," was the extreme amount of interest State Athletics Director Wilbur Caseless added to the situation.

Nevertheless, three Wolfpack basketball players have volunteered their services in order that the grandeur and tradition surrounding the national anthem within the confines of Reynolds Coliseum not be diminished. After all, that master of voice, that hummingbird of crows, that songstress of missed notes—Joan Sloan—will move on to Gainesville with her hubby to cringe the ears of cage nuts in the Sunshine State; thus rendering State with no one to butcher the song that stands for this glorious nation.

In Mrs. Hummingbird's stead next season, Wolfpack fans will get to see Thurl Bailey, Sidney Lowe and Kenny Matthews harmonizing the words. "Oh say can you see, by the dawn's early light, etc." before every basketball game.

"I think it's wonderful," new State head coach Jim Valvano said. "Besides, these three have been causing my bar in New York to be packed every night. They're known up north as The Demons of Dribble."

(Reporter's sidenote: Believe me, they dribble, indeed. Sid, my old high school buddy, has been dribbling everywhere imaginable since leaving D.C.)

"Some people might think this is a joke," Bailey said. "but they ought to hear the stuff we've been doing at V's place. Three recording companies have already approached us with offers, but none have been able to match the offer we got to sing the anthem."

Caseless would not comment on the offer, but Lowe spilled the beans.

"Shoot, after I got that big picture in Sports Illustrated I knew I could get just about any amount of money I wanted down here," Lowe boasted. "Heck, I got a $300,000 bonus just to come down here for my recruiting trip."

"Yeah, we get 20 grand apiece for each time we do this gig. It's gonna be a breeze," Lowe said.

Matthews agreed wholeheartedly.

"I knew they'd recognize our talents some time," Matthews said. "We can do more than shoot hoops. Hell, all we did last season was play a minute and then someone would come running in for you. I don't even call that shooting hoops."

The Demons of Dribble will sing the national anthem at next year's basketball games.

Bailey, always working his tail off, had just one complaint.

"I was a little hesitant to accept the offer," he said. "I was worried that it might hurt my performance because I'd have to miss a few minutes of warm-ups. But really, anyone would be a fool to turn down that kind of bread."

The rest of the team is a little upset about the deal, though, feeling they may have been slighted. "I can sing, too," Chuck Nevitt said, pointing to his four-foot vocal cords as he reached down inside his throat. "Old Mrs. Sloan's cords were only three feet long. That means I could hold a note a foot longer."

"I think they'll do a good job," Art Jones predicted, "but some of the rest of us would have liked to get in on the cash, though. But I think I can get Kenny to slide me a little on the side."

"Damn," added Craig Watts. "That's some money there. Maybe if I jump three cars with a motorcycle every halftime they'll give me some kind of deal like that."

Scott Parzych was dumbfounded.

"Somehow, I've got to catch me some of that action," he said, peering out of the corner of his eye. "Now, if they get a keg of beer and I set under it, never move my yap from the tap—now that's worth some money."

Bailey admitted that the trio has been rehearsing two nights a week in Reynolds Coliseum, but they've been having trouble getting used to the acoustics.

"It just doesn't seem like harmonizing works real well in the place," he said. "But our contract says they'll rebuild the roof if we can't get it right by July."

Never again will any opposing lacrosse player ever try to steal a State player's girlfriend.

Shaving, swimsuit competition added

by Tom Westberlin
Sports Writer

ACC swimming coaches voted Tuesday to abolish the one and three-meter diving events from men's dual-meet competition. Instead, the league coaches voted 7-1 to add a leg-shaving event and swimsuit preliminary fashion show.

Carolina coach Frank Comfortless made the motions yesterday at the ACC coaches meeting held at Ruby's Tobacco Barn Motel

(with bar and grill). Comfortless defended the motions, saying, "N.C. State has dominated the ACC long enough, it's time we coaches took some action. Sure, State has a fine swimming team, but it's their divers that win them meets—this leg-shaving event will even things out."

Shaving swimmers has been both a ritual and necessity for competitive swimmers. Since all swimmers have to shave anyway, the coaches felt it would make an excellent additional event. The committee voted to limit the shaving to just the legs. Five judges will rate the legs on a scale of one to 10, taking off points for nicks, cuts and missed hairs.

The committee also voted to have a swimsuit fashion exhibit prior to dual conference meets. The emphasis would not be on scoring but rather on drawing fans. Fans will judge the swimmers' suits on design, texture and amount of body area covered.

State coach Don (nicknamed the "Arkansas Country Boy") Eastberlin was the only ACC coach to vote against the two new motions. "Those people are out of their minds. I ain't gonna have none of my men shave their legs; hell, we'll still outscore those suckers, even without the leg shaving events."

State's women's basketball team will have the benefit of a set of Siamese twins such as these next season.

Women cagers net pair, er set, er twins, whatever

by Al Lies
Sports Writer

Although State's women's basketball team ended its season on a losing note, the lady cagers can look forward to a promising season next year, thanks to the recruiting efforts of assistant coach Nora Lynn Pinch. "I've found two girls, sisters, who I know will make valuable contributions to the team as freshmen," Pinch said. "Our team has lacked a certain togetherness in past years, and these young ladies, I'm sure, will help us overcome that."

The young girls coach Pinch is speaking of are Mary Jo Williams and her sister, Betty Sue. They are Siamese twins who have been joined at the hip since birth. The girls share no common organs and are joined by a six-inch muscle tissue about four inches in diameter. A simple operation could have separated the twins at birth, but their parents balked at the idea. "If a the Good Lord hadda wanted them a'separated he woulda done it hisself," said Sara Jane Williams, a born-again Christian and Jehovah's Witness.

Mary Jo and Betty Sue hail from Pleasant Garden, S.D. They graduated from Pottsdale High School and played basketball all three years. They were co-captains their junior and senior year; Mary Jo averaged 16.2 points a game while Betty Sue tossed in 14.5 points a game. The two pulled down 24.2 shared rebounds per game.

With the graduation of seniors Junebug Doby, Genia Beasty, Ronnie Laughlot, and Tequila Coffee the Wolfpack will be losing a great deal in the height department. Both incoming twins measure 6-5 apiece.

"Well, you know, I expect that we will use Mary Jo and Betty Sue at the twin low post on offense and then use them exclusively to double-team on defense," said head coach Kay Yaw.

The two sisters are reportedly very anxious to attend State. Mary Jo will be majoring in visual design. "I just love to draw pretty pictures," she exclaimed. Her sister opted for a philosophy major. "I think, you know, that life is, you know, a lot like kind playing basketball. Some days you score all day, and other days, you know, wow, you just sorta foul out early."

Mary Jo and Betty Sue will be living on campus, sharing a room with a special double bed. New uniforms are presently being designed to fit the girls. Mary Jo is receiving a full basketball scholarship, but Betty Sue will receive a softball scholarship, since there are not enough basketball scholarships to go around. It is understood, however, that she will play basketball.

The Siamese twins will be welcome additions to the team and it is hoped that they will be the key to clinching the elusive national AIAW championship. Assistant Sports Information Director Sarah Sue Gingham predicts, "Mary Jo and Betty Sue are certain to make All-America their freshman year because... what was I saying?... oh, yeah! They're gonna be All-Americas because they are real talented."

It's like a bizarre story from Rod Serling. It's more fantastic than Ripley's Believe It Or Not.

State's Ice Hockey Club, yes, it's true, totally unbelievable, but absolutely true, won a game last night. However, the squad never did figure out quite who it played.

"They were a bunch of green-looking fellows," said one State player who claimed the score was 3-0.

"No, they were big guys. They looked like the Olympic team, all dressed up in red, white and blue," said another.

Technishit Obsession

Anybody seen my teeth?

At long last, justice has been done. The University's most oppressed, maligned, trampled upon and utterly completely helpless minority will be given fair treatment and will have their basic human rights observed.

Chancellor Joab Thomas has announced that State is emerging from years—nay, eons of medieval-type backwardness and finally—finally is building a luxury residence hall for our varsity athletes.

Praise the Lord! Praise the ammunition! Why, oh, why did it take so long?

One need only open the annals of State's history (if there are any) to see how athletes have been unfairly singled out for undue attention for many years. Why, for a long time—if the fair reader can steel himself, herself or itself to believe it—athletes—God, we're almost ashamed to say it!—had to live in regular dorms with regular students!

Yes, we're afraid it is true. Oh, the heart-rending misery of it! At one time—truly during State's dark ages—such was the case. But don't despair! Our University fathers, dedicated as always to seeing to it that our school marches forward as an enlightened institution of higher standings in the AP and UPI polls, righted the wrong, and unscrewed the screwy!

Unfortunately, we are sufficiently humiliated and contrite to admit, but will for the sake of the honesty and integrity and objectivity we believe in so highly and strongly and steadfastly, that the purge of the great blot did not occur immediately.

First, the University fathers, prodded by that bulwark of enlightenment and progress, the Woolpack Club, purchased (for a very fancy price, we might boastfully add, for we know of no more worthy cause for which to spend our untold millions), the College Inn as a temporary refuge in which our gallant warriors laid their sweet heads! (And other things too, maybe.)

But, as fate and the Greek God Alumni would have it, the shortsighted and inadequately cosmetic so-called solution to the great blot did not last forever. And this year—this year, oh, blessed year—the problem's complete obliteration is at last in sight! Yes, fair reader, the athletes-only dorm will soon be a reality!

And what is even better—oh, the genius of it all—it will be built in a most desirable spot on our beautiful campus, one which presently which does nothing for nobody except eccentric joggers and nature-lover-freaks any good—but which with the construction of the dorm will be instantly transformed into one of the most desirable and pleasing sites on our grounds—the wooded area bordering Western Boulevard!

Can you believe it? How could anyone possibly be so unimaginably swift to come up with a dazzling plan like that? You can be sure, fair reader, that no student could have conceived such a remarkable idea. Students are too naive to formulate ideas, and when they do formulate ideas they are dumb ideas like maybe we should keep some obscure corner of campus wooded for beauty's sake. Have you ever heard anything so dumb? So silly? That's just like a naive student.

No, sir. This bit of utter complete brilliance was the brainchild of—and only could in a thousand million billion years be dreamed up by—THE ADMINISTRATION!

Oh, yes! Our new dorm for the poor, downtrodden athletes is but one example—and a prominent one—of the unimaginably, indubitably, incredibly, infinitesimal wisdom of our University fathers, to whom we humbly offer exceeding thanks. It must be nice to be so smart!

Down on your knees

It's time to hear the Word all ye sinners! I MEAN YOU, SINNER! Yes You. If you've got your mitts on this perverted lecherous piece of vileness, you are in need of the word.

There is no excuse for your sins. The printed word is reserved for THE WORD, so that we may live in the glorious light of the heavenly father in heaven for ever and ever amen! I mean, did the bible say that Christ used dirty words in his church newspaper? Hell, no. He didn't!

He wouldn't put up with such filth—when the money changers were caught cussin' in church, he took names! I mean, those cats had to put plenty of shekles into the coffers before he'd let those creeps back in.

Yes, chillin', they had to pay . . . or they'd fry for a year in the fiery depths of Satan's HECK in retribution for screwing up so badly. So what does that have to do with me, you say? All that stuff happened 2,000 years ago, right?

Well, it has meaning today for sure. Sinner!

is at an all-time high, and there's plenty of good places for you to square yourself. You can't petition with prayer . . . so the good book says . . . but you can buy your way out!

Send money to any church with over 2,000 members. Then all those Christians will enjoy the coffee and doughnuts before and during Sunday School. Never mind if inflation has eaten your savings and you can't pay the rent.

All those Christians out there in middle-class-land will suffer without their doughnuts on Sunday morning, and they will have to drive their Chryslers all the way to the restaurant to get something to eat after church.

That is expensive, and you know it'll make God doubly mad. You're not giving any money, and, as a result, making the ayatollah rich. Do you want to make God's enemies rich?

Hell no, we don't! So send those dirty old sinful dollars in today. We are righteous enough to handle wealth, and, besides, all you'd do is buy dope and likker with it, right?

for pete's sake

Confess your sins

In my four years here at State, I have watched, with disgust, the steady degradation of the Technishit. I feel that this situation has gotten so out of hand that I called PTL and asked the Right Rev. Bakker to offer up a special prayer in an attempt to save your miserable souls and the innocent souls of those you corrupt!

It isn't too late! Confess your sins and send your dollars to PTL in Charlotte. After all, folks, what's a couple of bucks if it'll buy your way out of Hell?

Dirt, slush, etc.

I am not a person who ordinarily writes letters to newspapers (or to my mother, either) and I really don't read any paper very often, but I have seen every column written this year by one Larry Bliss and the situation is so horribly disgusting I can no longer hold back.

I realize that the Technishit is a student paper and cannot be expected to exhibit the professionalism of, say, the Noise and Disturber, but the absolutely revolting content of Bliss' baloney simply is too horrible to escape under the umbrella of press freedom.

Imagine! Allowing one with such perverse and filthy thoughts as Bliss to impose his dirt and rot and slush on innocent readers week after week. How do you feel about the fact that administrators, alumni and parents (some of whom may even be preachers!) are privy to Bliss' unspeakable outrages? You should be absolutely ashamed!

What is the world coming to?

Get naked

I read your paper regularly and I enjoy most of it, but I must say I am somewhat disenchanted by your entertainment section.

You call that section entertaining? Look what kind of stuff is printed there: book and album reviews, stories on plays, concerts and entertainers. That's boring as hell!

You need nudes, man! Nudes! Print'em everyday! What could be more entertaining than nudes? Hot damn, ooh boy and look out! Nudes! NUDES! Whoopee!

Things are not going as planned here on Earth. I will try to tell you of what I have seen, but I am ready to return to Excelsior 3, if possible. I am not fitting in well as a "student" at this Earth University. Nevertheless, here is the report you wanted on social customs.

I went to a universal meeting place on Friday as you requested. It is called Crazy Zack's, and I tried to complete my assignment, but was distracted by dress habits. The humans that attend this place belong to some sort of force or army; similar dress and attitude point out this fact.

First, all wear code names on their uniforms. There are letters on wool warmth garments, shirts, and occasionally on female loose coverings. The codes are in a special form of undecipherable English writing.

At this place, force members hold small

Technishit Policy

The Technishit does not want your letters. As a matter of fact, if we don't like your letters, we won't print them. But if you think there is the slightest chance that your letter is worth the paper it's written on, you can bring it by the office and put it in the trash can closest to the door. We'll sift through it at the end of the day and see what kind of trash you've submitted. We're warning you, though. Be prepared to be misquoted, embarrassed and humiliated to the limit. Frankly, if you're gonna bug us with illegible, illiterate garbage, we're going to make you regret it. Thank you.

brown containers in their hands; they suck at the tops of the containers from time to time. In order to discover a container's merits, I followed suit. I was able to extract a golden, foamy liquid from the container. It has a bitter taste, and I was only able to guess that perhaps it is a mating substance.

I base this on observation. I noted seven instances where males purchased the containers for females. They repeated the process four or five times, then the female and the male left the premises together, nuzzling and performing lip acts, as I have reported to you previously. This is a prelude to the complicated and sometimes unfulfilled human mating ritual.

I also feel that this Crazy Zack's is used as a physical fitness center, set to popular music. As instructed before I left our planet, I studied the popular American music groups . . . but they are not heard at this center. Those present do special, spinning exercises to the rhythm of this music. All of the tunes follow patterns of human sacrifice and oceanic currents.

While I am still confused, I will resume testing the mating substance. It is not so bad.

Drug discontent

I've had it with the Student Supply Store. They're supposed to supply students, aren't they? I had my order in on time; they know I paid up.

What's the problem? Where's my stuff? They say:

- ... the heat's on.
- ... the boat got caught.
- ... the border patrol is getting tight.
- ... My supplier got caught!

And on top of that, my papers were wet! What is this bullshit? I'm ready to transfer.

Take out the trash

Litter on this campus is getting worse and worse due to the irresponsibility of the Physical Plant and the Janitorial Staff. I don't litter. I go to class and study like a good student should. Why can't they do their jobs?

Sometime Saturday a guy passed out in front of my door. I heaped him with the rest of the garbage, but the janitorial staff refuses to dispose of him properly. How long can this insolence be tolerated?

Screwed to the wall

Larry Bliss, there can be no more excuses for those Iranians. Here's the solution, no butts about it:

In entomology we learned about spraying chemicals on bugs to make them screw themselves to death. Drop a few pheromone bombs on those Iranians, and we can stroll in and take our hostages.

Big fat hiney

Then there's this business of student athletics. If everyone is so athletic, why is everyone complaining? What do people want to do anyhow—sit around and let their hineys grow big and fat and round?

That reminds me of a story my grandma used to tell. She would tell every night that if I didn't get any exercise my body would start looking like an elephant skin and no boys would ever kiss me or nothing.

Well, dammit—no boys still haven't kissed me and every morning when I get out of bed, and I still do this, I grab my barbells and do at least 50 reps of 125 pounds. And that's bench, curls, everything. My skin is sleek and firm to the touch. Please somebody kiss me.

I guess that's all.

Gimme girls

This is a totally uninspired letter, but we feel that what we have to say should be heard or read. We are concerned about the degenerating quality of the (NO BOLD IN THIS FONT, DUMMY!) Technishit, the ratio of men to women on campus and the lack of sufficient seating for sexually deprived males at the Derby Darling beauty contest.

First, the NO BOLD IN THIS FONT, DUMMY! Technishit. It sucks!

Second, where are the women? The dating potential here at State is, to put it mildly, virtually hopeless. Our suggestion is to bus girls from Meredith, St. Mary's and Peace over to central campus at regular intervals during the day. (Talk about your Central Campus Craze!) Seems reasonable!

Finally, as two males sorely in need of female companionship, we feel that the Derby Darling Contest should have been held in Reynolds Coliseum to facilitate a greater seating capacity. We believe that we are speaking on behalf of the entire male population at State.

Male students! The call has been issued. Arise! Unite! Stand up for your rights! Give us females or give us celibacy!

I'm tired, I'm tired, I'm tired, I'm tired. Are you convinced that I'm tired, yet? Well, I am. I'm tired of the unfair representation of fraternities here at Moo-U.

I've been here for 3 years now, and all I've heard are bad things about Frat Rats. For example, how many of the brothers are stuck up just because they drive nice cars and wear Lacoste uniforms at rush parties.

Why this is just a big fat myth! The other day I went over to Fraternity Court and visited one of the houses for myself. The second I walked into Kappa Krappa, one of the pledges (I knew it was a pledge, because he was wearing a turd-beanie) came up to me and offered to give me a tour of the upstairs.

I don't know how the rest of you girls feel, but I think boys like this are REAL nice to have on campus.
