Memo alleges vandalism caused shutdown of North Hall elevators

by Margaret Britt
Assistant News Editor

North Hall elevators were shut down by state elevator inspectors on Thursday, April 10, when an inspection revealed "hazardous conditions and potential danger to riders," according to a memorandum from the department of residence facilities to all campus dormitory residents.

The memorandum said the poor condition of the elevators was due to vandalism.

"Our rent has gone up $50 each just due to elevator vandalism," Mark Alexander, a North Hall resident, said. The North Hall rent will increase a total of $50 next year, according to Mason Dunlap, president of the North Hall council.

The memorandum does not mention the rent increase.

"All of the elevator problem is not due to vandalism. Vandalism is not the sole reason the elevators aren't running," Dunlap said Sunday.

Poor elevator conditions outlined in the residence facilities memorandum were "exposed wires due to vandalized position indicators (floor lights), missing or broken lights, lack of protection from overhead lights and damage to elevator doors and locking mechanisms."

Could affect other dorms

According to the memorandum, the department of residence facilities addressed the elevator information to all campus residents "because it is very possible that the same thing (closing down elevator service) could occur in the remaining residence halls with elevator service, i.e., Lee, Sullivan, Bowen, Metcalf and Carroll.

Director of Residence Facilities Eli Panee could not be reached for comment by late Sunday afternoon.

Longer shutdown possible

More vandalism may result in a longer elevator shutdown at North Hall, possibly extending into the semester-end period when students will be moving out, the memorandum said.

Elevators at State will be inspected beginning today, the memorandum said.

"About 35 percent of the elevator problems here (North Hall) are with vandalism," Alexander said.

Alexander, who talked with elevator repair personnel, said most of the elevator problems and related repair work were due to equipment malfunction problems in the hydraulics system and settings for the limit switches.

Alexander said the North Hall elevators had to be repaired almost every day. Most of the vandalism was writing on the walls and broken lights in the elevators, he said.

"Every now and then they hit a wire that causes the elevator to go out," he said.

Non-residents blamed

North Hall's hall council blamed non-residents for the vandalism, said Alexander, who served on the hall council for North Hall last semester.

"It's a little of both, students and outside people," he said.

Schindler-Haughton Elevator Company is responsible for repairing the elevators so they will pass state inspection, the memorandum said.

Resolution recognizes Lee's work

A resolution commending 1979-1980 Student Senate President Robert Lee for outstanding service to Student Government was passed by acclamation at an April 16 Student Senate meeting.

According to 1980-1981 Student Senate President Ron Spivey, a resolution of this nature is not automatic for all outgoing Student Government officers.

"Some of the new senators thought you did it for every outgoing officer," Spivey said, "but we don't. We felt Robb was outstanding—he had been in so long and done so much."

The above diagram is the April 10 plans submitted by the architects Clark, Tribble, Harris, & Li for the new athletic dorm. Building A will have 125 rooms and building B will also have 125 rooms. A four-car parking lot will be built west of the dorm instead of the 100 car lot which has been proposed to be built across Morrill Drive.

New parking lot suggested for athletic dormitory

by Steve Watson
Staff Writer

Construction of a new parking lot west of Morrill Drive and north of Western Boulevard has been proposed by University planning officials, Director of Campus Planning and Construction Edwin Harris said Saturday.

The new lot, consisting of 100-118 spaces, will serve the proposed new dormitory to be built across the street in the wooded area east of Morrill Drive and north of Western Boulevard, Harris said.

The new 500-bed dormitory, the first to be built on State campus since Carroll, Owen and Metcalf were completed in 1968, will primarily house student athletes.

Transportation Director Molly Pipes said Friday that her division had been consulted on the new lot, and recommended that it serve 118 cars. Plans for the lot are still tentative, and no final designation has been decided upon yet.

Plans last fall had called for a similarly sized parking lot to be constructed adjacent to the dormitory but those plans have now been scrapped. The architectural firm of Clarke, Tribble and Li submitted plans April 10 which show only a four-car lot to be built next to the dorm.

The University was involved in a conflict of plans with the city of Raleigh last fall over the large parking lot that had been planned adjacent to the new dorm.

According to Raleigh Transportation Director Donald Blackburn, long-range city plans call for a traffic loop to be built at the intersection of Western Boulevard and Avenet Ferry Road-Morrill Drive. According to earlier plans, this loop would have cut directly through the proposed parking lot. Under the latest plans the loop will not impinge on any University structure, and Harris considers the conflict over land use resolved.

The proposed 100 to 118 space parking lot will serve the new athletic dormitory, campus officials say.

"We recognize their plans, and shifted the dorm site to the east a little to accommodate the city," Harris said. "I'm not saying there won't be any problem with the loop, though. We are concerned about the possibility of having a major interchange on University land up there."

Avenet Ferry Road will pass underneath Western Boulevard, according to the city's plans, Harris said.

Construction of the traffic loop will involve considerable grading work in the area, and this may cause some problems with land disruption, Harris said.

Alternatives to the proposed new parking lot are being considered by planning officials. Residents of the new dorm may be assigned spaces along Morrill Drive instead, according to Harris.

Agromeck distribution schedule announced

by Eleanor Williams
Staff Writer

The 1980 Agromeck will be distributed on the first floor of the University Student Center today through Friday, according to 1980 Agromeck Editor Mark Brooks. The books arrived Saturday.

Thirty-two hundred books were ordered, according to Brooks. Brooks is unsure at this time whether any extra books will be available for sale.

"I have to check the computer lists against the receipt books," Brooks said. "I should know by Wednesday if there will be extra books."

"No books will be held past Friday. We don't have any storage space, so if you ordered a book, you'd better pick it up by Friday." Any books remaining will probably be sold for $8, Brooks said.

Brooks said he was very pleased with the way the books turned out. "We pulled at least 25 all-nighters to get this book off the ground," he said.

"I was at the publishing company checking pages, when several vice presidents came by and said they were planning to enter the book in competition," Brooks said. Hunter Publishing Company executives enter several books they print in the Printing Industry of America contests for excellence in graphic arts. "We have a good chance of winning this year," Brooks said.

Zoo Day

Do I like to party? Is the sky blue and the sun yellow? For approximately 5,000 people Saturday the answer was definitely yes as the crowd listened to Le Roux, Brice Street and Super-Grit Cowboy Band. For related pictures, see page seven.

The news in brief

Library nears million volume level

Friends of the Library, a private organization which aids D.H. Hill Library, contributed approximately $92,000 in money and books during the past year as a part of the University's campaign to raise library holdings to a million volumes.

Dr. I.T. Littleton, director of libraries at State, said at the April 15 annual meeting of the Friends of the Library that the number of volumes now stands at 950,000, some 80,000 above a year ago.

Littleton reported that "contributions have been received this year from over 600 individuals and industries, more than double the number of donations during the previous year."

The contributions included $27,000 in cash and an estimated $65,000 earmarked for 13,169 books and journals.

Littleton said the Friends of the Library is working with State's Office of Foundations and Development and the Alumni Association in seeking the goal of a million volumes established by Chancellor Josh L. Thomas.

He said the Agricultural Extension Service, the North Carolina Extension Homemakers Clubs, and other public and private groups are aiding in the campaign.

Dance theatre

The North Carolina Dance theatre will appear tonight at 8 in Stewart Theatre as part of National Dance Week and the Raleigh Art-sposure.

Tickets for tonight's show are on sale now at Stewart Theatre box office. Admission is $4 for the general public and $3 for students, children and senior citizens.

Engineering allocation

The North Carolina Engineering Foundation has allocated $704,074 for teaching, research and public service programs in the School of Engineering and the School of Physical and Mathematical Sciences at State.

The total sets a record high in the 36-year history of the foundation and is $129,000 above last year's allocation.

No major Zoo Day problems encountered, officials say

by Margaret Britt
Assistant News Editor

The 1980 Zoo Day was very successful, Student Center officials said Sunday. An estimated 5,000 people were in attendance, officials said.

"I don't know of any major problems we had," Lee McDonald, Student Center program director, said Sunday. "We certainly had more people than anticipated," he said.

"Things went as scheduled," Ron Luciani, 1979-1980 Student Center president, said Sunday.

"Brice Street did an excellent job. They were received well. The weather was great. We couldn't have been more thankful for a better day," he said.

McDonald said several people in the crowd were treated for sunburns and lacerations from broken glass.

"All in all, I think the crowd was well-behaved," McDonald said.

There were no arrests, Public Safety said.

"All the people who helped really made it an excellent day," Luciani said.

"There will have to be some changes made for next year, maybe the site, because of the number of people there," Luciani said.

Officials at Clark Infirmary said quite a number of Zoo Day-related cases were brought in Saturday, but all injuries were minor.

Students express opinions of census

by Margaret Britt
Assistant News Editor

What do you think of the 1980 census? Here are some students' comments in the Technician heard.

Jeff Tubaugh, freshman: I think it's a good idea. It gets people motivated to decide what they really want. It gets people thinking.

Robert Kerr, freshman: I don't know. I haven't gotten one yet.

Glenn Jordan, graduate student: It was simple to fill out. I'd hate to be one of the people who have to unfold them all. It's a good idea to get fair congressional representation. Also, I heard there is a $100 fine if you don't send it in.

Victor Rivera, junior: It's very important because it will give the government an indication of how many people there are in this country, including those who are here legally and illegally, and current trends in population growth.

Jerry Blackwell, freshman: It's needed, for two reasons. One is good (national) defense and military strength, and the second is economics.

Durwood Brothers, senior: I think it's a good idea. I don't know if they can count everybody, but they ought to try.

Susan Barakat, junior: I think it's something good. It might help some people.

Suzanne Dupree, junior: I've gotten mine, but I haven't filled it out. It looked simple. When you have to allocate government funds on the basis of population, the census has a direct advantage. It's a good idea to have information like the size of the house to get an idea of the standard of living.

Laura Sawyer, freshman: I think it's a good idea to know about the population. It's a good idea to know what people can be put to use.

Barbara Hodnett, sophomore: I think it's a good idea for the country to find out different aspects of the American way of life, like the jobs people have. It's something they ought to do more often to get an idea of the changing lifestyles.

Jumping for joy from the top of the world—literally

by Eric Miller
Contributing Writer

On April 29, James A. Crook of Cary House hopes to be on top of the world—literally. On that day, barring snowstorms or high winds, the 25-year-old State student will make history and earn a spot in the Guinness Book of World Records as one of the first five persons every to sky-dive at the geographic North Pole.

Crook, a junior in political science, has joined a North Pole tour offered by Wheeler Adventures, a Las Vegas firm specializing in commercial expeditions. An avid sky diver, Crook said he signed up on the expedition for the pure thrill involved.

"A friend of mine in Charlotte who is going to tell me about it a month ago," Crook said. "I called Jack Wheeler (owner of Wheeler Adventures) and he said he had one spot left open for a jumper, so I told him to put my name on that list."

Crook has over 600 jumps under his belt and holds the U.S. Parachute Association's highest skills rating.

"The idea excited me," he said. "It's the first time that I've ever been involved in a real true-life adventure."

Wheeler, 37, is an expedition leader for the American Geographic Society and has led several commercial tours to the North Pole, but never with sky divers. He said in a phone interview that jumpers from Texas, Nevada and Washington would be on the trip, as well as Crook and John Ainsworth of Charlotte.

Crook will leave Raleigh on April 25 to join others with the expedition in Lake Hazen, Canada. On April 28 they'll land on the pole in a ski-equipped airplane and set up a base camp.

Weather permitting, the sky divers will make as many as eight jumps from a height of 5,000 feet, on April 29 and 30. After 20 seconds of free fall, they'll open their highly-maneuverable square parachutes and look for a safe place to land on the 15-foot-thick ice covering the waters at the pole.

The men will break camp on May 1. Crook expects to be back in Raleigh by May 4.

Wheeler said the group hopes to set several other records at the pole, where at this time of year the sun stays continuously about 35 degrees above the horizon.

"The Guinness Book of World Records lists the longest stay at the pole as 28 hours, and we hope to break that substantially by staying four days," Wheeler said.

"Also, there will be three ham-radio stations broadcasting live from the pole, and that's never been done before, either."

Crook and WPTF-AM 68 are working together to set up a live radio interview from the North Pole camp.

If bad weather moves in, the group is prepared to wait for as long as five days for a chance to jump.

"The planners give us a 98 percent chance of good weather," Crook said. "That means blue skies, low winds and temperatures around 30 below."

A medical crew will go along to handle any injuries.

"It all sounds exciting and dangerous," Crook said. "It is exciting, but it's not dangerous. The biggest danger will be living up there for four days in the cold."

Crook said his biggest worry about the trip is paying for it. "The money is the most terrifying part of the whole thing," he said. "I'm somewhat concerned, and somewhat in debt."

The trip will cost him nearly $7,500. He has taken out a $3,000 bank loan to help finance the equipment and expenses and has started a letter-writing campaign to raise money.

"If the city would sponsor me, I'll be willing to plant a city-of-Raleigh banner on the North Pole," he joked.

Crook also had a problem convincing professors that his excuse for missing final exams was legitimate.

"One English professor just refused to believe me until I showed her all the information on the trip," he said. "The others just kind of looked at me in shock."

Crook's fiancée, Kim Karkker, 22, of Raleigh, was also a little shocked initially.

"I really didn't have too much to say about it at first, but I got used to the idea," she said. "He tells me he's coming back and that's what matters."

James A. Crook, an avid sky diver, breaks from classes early to join a record-breaking expedition at the North Pole.

This is for ham-radio buffs. The North Pole station will be call sign 1-NP, and will broadcast between 2 and 4 p.m. EST, April 28 through May 1, on 20-meter sidebands, or alternately, 15-meter sidebands, five kilocycles up from the bottom of each general class band segment.

Shadows of a war in print

by Dave C. Harper
Features Writer

Once in a while, someone trudges across the brickyard wearing the drab olive stuffiness of an Army-issue field jacket. High upon the sleeves may appear vicious studies of horseheads, lightning bolts and flaming swords called unit patches. The big red No. 1 of the First Infantry, the black horse of the First Air Cavalry, the stars and blue of the Americal Division... logos of units that, just a few years ago, battled at the end of the earth.

Vietnam, of course, is behind us. The far-flung exotic conflict with the surreptitiously cunning Viet Cong has faded into whispered reports that war still rages over there. America's war with the shadows is past. Movies and books have now appeared. The nation is shaking off its widow's weeds to tell the rest of the story that never made the 18 by 24 inch TV flashes or the pastel glossies of the newsmagazines.

Dispatches, by Michael Herr, is not a book about Vietnam. It is Vietnam in 260 pages or less. Herr was a combat correspondent for Esquire. He went on night patrols where he said, "the Elephant would be kneeling on my chest, sending me down in my boots for a breath" at the snap of a twig.

He dug in at Khe Sanh, the long-besieged home of the 26th Marines, where he said the Marines popped diarrhea-aid pills to minimize trips to the latrines that were exposed to perpetual sniping.

It was a place where "dawn seems to last until late morning, dusk falls at four," and everything "is blown through with smoke, everything is on fire everywhere."

Herr ran, crawled, shuddered, laughed, cried and prayed with the "grunts"—those fuzzy-bearded youngsters who came from Miles City, Montana, to downtown Chicago. There was Daytripper, a bro' from Detroit who palled around with a zany Marine who sang over and over again, "I wish I were an Oscar Meyer Weiner."

Little escaped Herr's net-like perception during his months at war. He even profiled some of his fellow journalists, men who, by merely showing up, led the soldiers to believe the worst was coming. These men "were as exotic and as fearsome as black magic, coming up with cameras and questions."

Herr writes about the time he saw a soldier standing alone in a jungle clearing. Wandering nonchalantly up to the soldier, Herr attempted to start up a conversation and learned that the soldier was trying to draw enemy fire for his buddies hidden in the bushes. Herr said, "I backed out of there fast, I didn't want to bother him while he was working."

The helicopters, flares, rice paddies, heartbreaks and heroics are all there in Herr's book. Vietnam was a war where Herr "didn't want to look, but wanted to look, too." Dispatches is that war in words.

Swedish Ivy, Plectranthus australis, is a leathery-leaved trailing plant from Australia that is ideal for hanging baskets. It is not a true ivy but is related to the coleus. Its leaves are rounded with saw-toothed edges, and have a waxy, shiny look. White blooms will appear during summer months. Some species of this plant are trailers and others are upright.

The plant should be grown in an average potting medium that has been lightened with either vermiculite or perlite. Keep the soil moist to the touch, and grow the plant in good light, but not direct sunlight, especially in the summer months.

Easily propagated from cuttings, this plant is relatively easy to grow. Since it is suitable to pruning, you can keep it shapely. Probably the best and most common species is Plectranthus australis, which looks really great in hanging baskets. A variegated form has white patches and is excellent for hanging baskets also.

Tigers upend Terps, Wolfpack grabs 3rd

by Bryan Black Sports Editor

Finishing third might not seem like such a hot feat in many sporting events...

Consider the team that won the affair, the Clemson Tigers. All Clemson did was out a team that had carted off the crown 24 years in a row...

With the Tigers seizing the title from the Terps, outscoring them 150-138...

Wolfpack coach Tom Jones said, "Actually, we had a pretty outstanding meet in some places..."

Heading the individual performances for State was Ron Foreman, a junior from Virginia Beach...

Marcus Smith, Ed McIntyre and Brian Burns ran the first three legs of...

the relay team that etched its names into the record book. "They just ran super..."

As it turned out, Clemson was second in the event and Maryland didn't even finish because it was disqualified...

Foreman returned to the track an hour later and blitzed a world-class field in his specialty, the 400-meter intermediate hurdles...

"I felt pretty good," Foreman smiled. "My transitions went well and I think that was the key..."

"I wanted to run 50.7 at least and I did it. I'm very happy..."

The record Foreman smashed was set last year by Maryland's Chris Person, who was way back in the field...

The star sprinter's cohorts in the relays also piled up points in the individual sprints...

The Pack got its other first place Friday when Dean Leavitt overwhelmed the rest of the field...

"The fact that I buried Carlos Tandon in the ground was the most pleasing thing about winning..."

Leavitt had hoped to score another win in Saturday's discus competition, but Maryland freshman Alan Baginski's last throw was four one-hundredths of a meter...

State got two places in the decathlon with Vince Hatcher's 6,435 points...

The Pack's Arnold Bell took a pair of fourths with a 23-6 1/2 effort in the long jump and a 48-8 1/2 jump in the triple...

Clemson's Julius Ogaro picked up the Robert A. Fetzer award, signifying him as the meet's outstanding performer...

Lacrosse team evens record with win over Towson

by Gary Hanrahan Sports Writer

When Towson State visited State's lacrosse team Saturday, it probably didn't expect to end up in the zoo.

After all, the Tigers had been on the prowl of late, with a pair of finely executed victories over Delaware and Maryland-Baltimore County...

Towson State also had the painful memories of last season's struggle with State, a 21-20 defeat in overtime...

Towson State's strength was believed to lie in its defense, but in the face of the Pack attack, that defense collapsed like a bamboo tiger trap...

In previous games, the first period has been the most difficult for State—by far...

But against Towson State, the Pack broke its tendency to be a slow starter and went for the throat early...

Cockerton scored a little more than a minute later, and then assisted Ben...

State's senior goalie Bob Flintoff snares one of the 23 saves he got in the Pack's win over Towson State Saturday.

Onorato with a goal about four minutes after that.

Those three goals served only to whet the appetite of the Pack, as others joined in the hunt...

Swordloff scored a pair of goals three minutes apart on assists from Ben Lamon and Lance Johnson...

"Wasting Hastings;" it seemed like everyone wanted a crack at the shell-shocked Tiger goalie...

State's defense was as solid as its offense was aggressive. There were really only two times during the game...

Pack continued its onslaught in the second half, Hastings finished the game watching it from the bench.

State's defense was as solid as its offense was aggressive. There were really only two times during the game...

when one could say it faltered, with 30 seconds left in first quarter when Towson State scored three goals...

That score was as close as Towson State would come. Four different players put it in the nets for State during the final 14 minutes of the game...

"Now we're at the big .500 level. We beat a really good team today. You know UMBC beat Carolina 18-9...

Cockerton was the high scorer for the Pack with five goals and five assists...

Cockerton's five goals gave him a total of 178 for his career, 13 short of the NCAA all-time record of 191 held by Mike French of Cornell...

While Hastings was having his problems, State netminder Bob Flintoff was causing problems for the Towson State attack...

Pack's Monte Kiffin gets itchy feet sitting in press box

by Stu Hall
Assistant Sports Editor

Anyone of the estimated 9,400 people in attendance at State's Red-White spring football game Saturday looking to see coach Monte Kiffin on the sidelines should have looked up into the press box.

Perched high in Carter-Finley Stadium's press box, Kiffin watched as rising sophomore quarterback Tol Avery engineered the Red to five touchdowns and a 37-34 win over the White.

Kiffin, alias Lone Ranger, traded in the hectic pacing up and down the sidelines and nerve racking play-calling for the comfort of sitting back and watching his assistants do the "hard stuff." Yet for Kiffin, it just didn't seem right.

"This is the first time I've ever been in a press box," quipped Kiffin, who had just come up from the field after greeting the crowd. "I never even saw the box at Arkansas and it's just as well."

The first-year mentor quickly put his hands on the table and leaned more toward the window, the strain in his eyes getting more intense.

"I don't see how you guys (sportswriters) can see anything up here; you're just too far up," he said.

The Red went on top early, after only one minute elapsed. After recovering an opening-kickoff fumble by the White at the 13, Avery led the Red to the one before Eddie Jackson powered over for the Red's first score.

"Now that's the kind of football I like to see," said Kiffin, who kept immediate contact with both benches via walkie-talkie.

Halfway into the first quarter, Avery once again displayed savvy as he led the Red's 59 yards in 14 plays for the second score and putting the favored team up 14-0.

"Going into the fall, Tol Avery will be our No. 1 quarterback," Kiffin said. "I like the way he stands in the pocket. Avery has been the most pleasant surprise of the whole spring practice."

Avery finished the game with some rather impressive statistics. In the passing department, the Four Oaks native was 16 of 21 for 181 yards and no interceptions, while using Dee Whitley as the target for the majority of his aerials. Whitley totaled nine receptions for 114 yards.

Tol Avery moves down the line ready to make the pitch in the Red's 37-34 win.

"All the receivers looked good—Whitley, (Curtis) Rein, (Mike) Quick," Kiffin said. "Everybody was catching the ball really well."

When the White started its drive from the 26 late in the first quarter, Kiffin started running up and down the press box steps to the water fountain.

"I don't know if I like sitting up here all that much," he said. "After a while you start getting nervous, because there's not much you can do."

The White team finally scored after 11 plays as Andre Marks hit the right side of the line and banged over from the five. Nathan Ritter converted the extra point to make the score 14-7.

Kiffin, who was defensive coordinator at both Nebraska and Arkansas, became rather jubilant in the second quarter when both teams' scoring was halted by outstanding defensive efforts.

"That's the way they're supposed to play defense, aren't they, Buck (Red team assistant coach Dave Buckley)?" Kiffin acknowledged with an air of pleasing approval.

The only scoring in the second stanza was when the Red's Todd Auten booted a 31-yard field goal, while the White scored on Wayne McLean's eight-yard jaunt, with less than two minutes remaining in the half.

Things began to heat up with 48 seconds left. On fourth and 10 from the Red's 36, Auten drilled a 47-yard punt that Curtis Rein fair caught at the 10. A personal foul on the Red squad brought the kicking team out again for the Red.

Auten then launched a 51 yard spiraling kick that Rein called for a fair catch at the 21. This time a personal foul on the White team was assessed, moving the ball back to the 10-yard line. Kiffin became incensed by his team's lack of concentration.

"Buck, what the hell is going on down there?" Kiffin demanded.

"Just a lack of concentration, I guess coach," Buckley replied.

The Red went into the locker room holding a slim 17-14 lead.

At halftime, Kiffin met with area sportswriters and Chancellor Job Thomas, using the wit and charm that won the hearts of State loyalists at the Dec. 5 press conference announcing him as the successor to the late Bo Rein.

First-year basketball coach Jim Valvano also made an appearance and remarked on Kiffin's teams' first-half success.

"We're going to be 11-0 next year, aren't we coach?" Valvano said.

"Yeah, if all our games are spring games," Kiffin joked.

The second half was all of offense as running backs Jackson and Chris Brown spearheaded the Red's 20 second-half points. The White matched that with 20 of its own on the passing of Ron Laraway.

The White took the lead, for the only time in the game, with 6:27 to go, when Calvin Warren bounced the ensuing kickoff at the two-yard line. Brown watched it roll to the one, then tried to pick it up, but fumbled into the end zone. A flood of White jerseys pounced upon Brown with Steve Jones coming away with the ball and a White touchdown.

"Who recovered that football? They need to know up here in the box," Kiffin questioned.

"I don't know," was the answer at the other end of the walkie-talkie. "That's the way football should be played, though."

Kiffin rolled his eyes, as if the turn of events might be an omen of what is to come next fall.

With a 34-31 White lead, Avery had just over six minutes to mount a Red attack. He reeled off four minutes with slants and pitches to Jackson, Brown and Dwight Sullivan. The 74-yard drive was culminated when Jackson dove over from the three to make the final score 37-34.

"Overall, I thought both teams played well. The defense needs some more depth. I think that the incoming freshmen will play a big part in filling some of those holes in the defense. I was especially pleased with the kicking game. Todd Auten did an outstanding job."

Louie Meadows beats the throw home from Wake Forest's shortstop to score Friday.

Larceny is name of game for State's Sears

by Stu Hall
Assistant Sports Editor

His name won't be found on any FBI 10-most-wanted lists. He's a prowler who strikes with the utmost precision and when it's most expected, but he still can't be caught.

His name—Ken Sears. His game—centerfielder and ace larcenist for State's baseball team.

Sears, a sophomore from New Wheeland, Ind., is the Wolfpack's leading base stealer with 16 steals in 17 attempts, a percentage that comes to an amazing .941.

"Last year I didn't have a clue what to look for," said Sears, who went one for four with a double and two RBI in State's 7-5 win over Wake Forest Friday on Doak Field. "This year the coaches helped me out a lot, with my base stealing, and now I watch for what the pitchers are going to do. I don't steal off the catcher, I steal off the pitcher."

In his freshman campaign, Sears was only 10 for 15 in the base-stealing department, which can be attributed to his lack of experience. At the plate, he batted .289 with three triples and 28 RBI. This year, Sears has upped his average to a hefty .363, with a lot of help from his speed on infield hits.

"I have had an awful lot of infield hits this year," Sears said. "In the off season I concentrated on my bunting and I have gotten more opportunities to bunt, so that has helped my average. I can also go to the opposite field, which helps any hitter."

Stealing bases isn't the only thing Sears has done this year. In addition to his .363 average, the slender, six-foot, 176-pound outfielder has rapped five triples, which is the most by a Wolfpack player since Dudley Whitley had five in 1965. His 59 total bases ranks second only to all-ACC teammate Chuckie Canady and Sears' 28 runs are a team high.

"Again, a lot of those extra base hits have come on my speed," Sears said. "If I was bigger, I don't think I would have so many triples."

His speed has also helped in an area that many observers overlook—defense. As the Pack's centerfielder, Sears is the league leader in fielding average with a perfect 1.000, his 60 put outs and three assists are also team highs in the outfield.

"I love to play center-field," Sears said. "As a centerfielder you always have control of the outfield. You tell the left and right fielder who has what when it's hit to the alleys."

A perfect example of Sears' leadership was displayed when the Deacs' Brick Smith belted a high fly to the gap in left-center. Sears took a few steps to his right, just as Canady was charging hard from his position in leftfield. Sears, avoiding a possible injury-causing collision, called for Canady to make the catch.

"On those high flies you have a lot of time to talk to State's softball team picked up a couple of narrow wins Sunday, 4-3 and 5-3, over North Carolina on Red Diamond, upping the Pack's record to 21-8.

State softball team sweeps Spartans

by Terry Kelley
Sports Writer

State's women's softball team broke a three-game losing streak Thursday at UNC-Greensboro by taking a pair from the Spartans with identical 9-3 scores.

Diane Snook, Jan Willis and Sharon Ayscue were each three for four in the first game as the Pack banged out 19 hits. Ayscue and Karen Brabson, who was playing for leading-hitter Gwyn Moseley after Moseley turned her ankle in practice Wednesday, each collected two RBI as State scored three runs in the second and five in the third to take control of the game.

"We hit the ball well," State coach Nora Lynn Finch said. "We worked on our offense a good bit on Wednesday and I think it helped us on Thursday. Diane Snook responded to the loss of Moseley well. She went six for eight for the day and hit the ball great.

"Jan Willis hit the ball really well. She's running the bases really well. We didn't make any errors. We were, of course, playing with Brabson in left. We made that adjustment well."

In the second game, Snook and Willis were three for four and Brabson and Ann Keith were two for four to account for 10 of State's 13 hits. State put a 3-0 game out of reach in the top of the seventh by scoring six runs, although UNC-G notched three in the last inning.

"We were up for these games," Finch said. "That really makes a difference in a game like softball. Both Gina Miller and Ann Keith robbed them of some hits. Diane Snook is strong up the middle. We made some heads-up plays, both on offense and defense."

The Pack resumes action Tuesday in a 2 p.m. double header at UNC-Wilmington.

"Anytime we play a sister institution, that institution is up for playing N.C. State," Finch said. "Division II schools get real motivated. Both teams are in their home stretches. I'm not looking for a lot of errors like early in the season.

"Wilmington has sandy fields and a lot of wind. You have to be on your toes when that happens. We could look for some weather conditions to make the games unpredictable. I hope we hit the ball as well as we did against Greensboro."

This State student gets paid to play — and well

A $10,800 purse. That's what Ed Haggerty won in the soon-to-be nationally televised Super Putters Series April 10 in Dallas.

Haggerty, a sophomore speech major at State, has been playing putt-putt professionally for three years. He was invited to play in the Super Putters Series as the second-leading money winner for last year with $3,395. Invitations for the tournament were sent to the top five money winners from last year, the Male and Female players of the Decade, and one open pro who qualified the day before actual tournament play.

"We were paired up and seeded," Haggerty said. "I was seeded second."

Haggerty defeated John Connor 3-2 in the first match; Evelyn Flower, the Female Putter of the Decade, 5-4 in the second match; and Dick Floren, the Male Putter of the Decade, 2-0 in the third match for the win.

"It was 39 degrees in Dallas," Haggerty said, "with 40 mile winds, and rain. It was even snowing just-eight miles away. But they never call them (tournaments) off for weather."

"Putt-putt is more than a game of luck; it's a game of skill," he explained. "The course is all obstacles and hills. All the courses are set up the same way but no two holes play the same. You have to adjust your shot to the way you play."

Putt-putt requires both diligent concentration and experience, according to Haggerty, who feels tournament experience develops a putter's composure.

"You just can't get upset about a bad hole," he said.

Ed Haggerty

"You must keep on going." Strategy is also important.

"You have to play smart or you can't win," Haggerty said. "You've got to know which ones (holes) to charge and which ones to lay up. I keep shot cards on every course."

Haggerty attributes his success in the game to an innate ability and years of practice.

"In '71 they built a course in Charlotte two blocks away from my house," he said. "Every Monday they had Dollar Day Championships. You could play all day for a dollar and the high scorer won a small trophy. I won the first time I ever went over there."

"After that I started playing every day. I just really like playing a lot. We'd do odd jobs for the manager so we could play for free all day. My parents took me to my first away tournament in '78 at Decatur, Ga."

After six highly successful years as an amateur, winning 12 world-qualifying tournaments, Haggerty turned pro and joined the Professional Putters Association.

Haggerty's list of professional accomplishments includes being a quarter-finalist in the World Amateur Putting Championships, winning the Fayetteville Open in '77, Rookie of the Year in '78, semifinalist in the World Putting Championships also in '78 and winning the North Carolina Putting Championship in '77 and '79.

The $10,800 purse for winning the Super Putters Series is the largest Haggerty has ever won.

"After I won, I took about 15 people from the tournament out to dinner," Haggerty said. "That cost about $250. I'm going to send my parents on a vacation to anywhere they want to go. I think it's going to be to Hawaii. It's the least I can do. After all, they've supported me all my life. The rest of the money has already been put in the bank."

"I've made a lot of contacts playing that should help me in broadcasting, and I've gotten to meet a lot of friends this way."

"And I just love the game," he added with a shy grin.

THE ZOO DAY...

BIRDS(?)

Cellist performs with Symphony this week

The "Dvorak Concerto in b minor," performed by cellist Michele Djokic, will highlight the North Carolina Symphony concerts in Raleigh on Tuesday, April 22 and Wednesday, April 23, artistic director and conductor John Gosling recently announced. The concerts will be held in Memorial Auditorium at 8 p.m.

The remainder of the program will feature Handel's "Royal Fireworks Music" and Brahms' Symphony No. 4 in e minor.

Djokic, at 18, has become something of a marvel. The Joseph M. Bryan Young Artists Competition in January 1979 was the sixth consecutive contest Djokic has won. She has also won competitions at the New Jersey Symphony in 1977, the Juilliard Competition in December of 1978, the Aspen Music Festival in the summer of 1978, and a Trenton Symphony competition she entered while a pre-college student at Juilliard.

Djokic has studied with Joseph Druihan of the Philadelphia Orchestra and is currently studying with Leonard Rose and Channing Robbins at the Juilliard School.

This will be the ninth of 10 subscription programs in Raleigh this year by the North Carolina Symphony.

Admission is by season or single ticket. Single tickets are $7, $6, $5 and $4 for adults and $3 for students, senior citizens and Symphony Society members.

For more information, call the symphony office at 783-2750.
