Candidates express ideas, opinions during debate

by Gina Blackwood
Staff Writer

Candidates running for Student Government offices aired their opinions, ideas and policies at a debate held in the Student Center Board room March 18.

The panel for the debate consisted of Tucker Johnson, Technician editor in chief; Ron Spivey, student body president; Michael Covington, Union Activities Board president; and Jesse Dillard, president of the Society of Afro-American Culture. The debate was coordinated and arranged by Linda Bradford, head of the elections board.

All candidates for the office of student body president — Jim Yocum, David Hartley and John Howard — attended the debate. Stan Gallagher and Jeff Baker, candidates for Student Senate president, were also present.

Marie Flow, candidate for student body treasurer, was present but her opponent, Mark Crisco, did not participate in the debate.

When asked about their qualifications for the job of student body president, each candidate listed several reasons why he felt he was qualified for the job.

Howard said that when he attended State from 1971 to 1975, he was a student senator, a member of the liberal arts council, worked for WKNC, and worked for the Technician.

"I feel that I have a very well-rounded political experience, both from a leftist point of view and also from a very much conservative point of view," he said.

Yocum said that he has three years of Student Government experience. He was an engineering senator for two years and chaired the Student Senate's general assembly liaison committee for both of these years.

He was elected president pro tempore of the Senate by his fellow senators and this past year he was elected to the position of Student Senate president by the student body.

Yocum has had statewide student government experience in the University of North Carolina Association of Student Governments. In UNCASG, he has been general assembly adviser and has chaired the programs and policies committee.

"This year I would like to run for student body president because I feel that these three years of student service in Student Government gives me an insight into how Student Government operates and what its precepts and ideals are," Yocum said.

Hartley, when speaking of his qualifications, said his most valid qualification is he has a desire to represent the students.

He said he has worked with the Wake County district attorney's office, several law firms, as a resident adviser at State and with public relations while in the U.S. Army.

"The main qualification that I think is really needed in order to present yourself as a good student body president is to represent the needs of the students," Hartley said.

When asked what issue Baker feels is a must for him to work on if elected as Student Senate president, he said the proposed expansion of Carmichael Gymnasium is the issue that will be of the most concern next year.

In response to the same question, Gallagher said he would like to establish more communication between the school councils and Student Government.

When asked to describe his leadership style, Baker said, "I think I'm a strong leader. I'm laid back when I know that people will get the job done, but I also feel that some people need to be prodded a little. I am basically laid back, but I can be forceful if I need to."

Gallagher described his leadership style as meticulous. "I like to write things down and set some guidelines, always remembering that there is going to be something, according to Murphy's Law, that is going to enter in there and change the whole thing around," he said.

Baker's experience in Student Government includes work on the elections board, one year as a senator, Student Senate representative to the Faculty Senate, the Student Senate finance committee, the sports club, authority and the Faculty Senate student affairs committee.

Gallagher's qualifications include two years as a student senator, chairman of the Student Senate academics committee and one year as Senate president pro tempore.

When questioned about ways to make students more aware of the workings of the Senate finance committee, Flow said he would like to see meetings set up where representatives from interested clubs could find out how to correctly prepare a finance bill and what to expect at the finance committee meeting.

"I would like to see meetings set up where we go through mock bills, showing them how to set up a bill and where to go first before coming to the Senate," Flow said.

Another question directed to the student body presidential candidates concerned what methods they would use, excluding the Technician, to let the student body know what they were doing and find out the students' needs.

"I would use polls and try to get a random sampling from the students," Hartley said.

Howard said he is not completely sure polls reflect the needs of the entire student body.

"I think referendums would be effective in getting student opinion," Howard said. "I also think having an office where people can come in to see me would be very important. But it is much more important to go after them and see what the students really need."

Speaking of his experience as Student Senate president, Yocum said the Senate was in the process of becoming more responsive to the needs of the students.

"This year is the first year that student senators could stand up and speak on any issue besides what is being debated upon," Yocum said. "I like to think that this is part of what I am trying to accomplish with Student Government — letting the Student Senate be more responsive and, through them, the student body."

When asked how to get more minority students involved in Student Government, Baker said, "We need more black involvement in every aspect of Student Government and the one way to do that would be to talk to black fraternities and black student leaders and try to get them to urge their groups to become more involved."

In response to the same question, Gallagher said he really would not know how to start "right now from scratch" in getting more black students involved but he is open to suggestions and will try to work on this problem.

The Senate presidential candidates were also asked what their most significant limitation is.

"One limitation I might have would be the fact that I have a tendency to get over-involved. I know I need to keep a broader scope and not get so involved in one thing," Baker said.

Gallagher said his limitation is, "I sometimes dive head first into a situation without knowing some of the problems."

The student body president candidates were questioned as to how they would choose their appointed assistants if elected and how they would go about choosing students to sit on university committees.

The student body president can have as many assistants as he feels he needs. Also, there are over 100 university committee appointments to be made.

In answering this question, Howard and Hartley dealt specifically with the appointment of minority students instead of dealing with the appointments of all assistants.

"I have already been doing a lot of thinking about who I want. The group that is going to be least represented is going to be white males. I already know what white males think," Howard said.

Howard said he wants to have his own inner council if elected and he plans to have it consist predominantly of minority students.

Hartley said that he has been working closely with a black member of the faculty to help him choose minority students that would work well for him.

"I need somebody, if elected, to do a good job for," Hartley said.

In answering the same question, Yocum said he has already had to deal with such duties in his position of Student Senate president. He said he investigates all possibilities and the specific interests of each person before appointing them.

"I don't see appointing anyone without sitting down and talking to them a great deal about the job I want to give them," Yocum said.

All of the candidates were then asked to give a reason why the student body should elect them to the position for which they are running. They had to pick the one thing they felt made them better for the job than their opponent.

"I feel like I am a very aggressive type of individual, a very open individual. I am honest and straight with people. I think that attracts people a lot of times," Howard said.

"I feel like one of my best attributes that is portrayed to people is my sincerity. They know that I'm after their best interests," Hartley said.

"Students are going to look and see that I have spent three years in Student Government and that is three years of service to the students. I like to think that students will see this dedication," Yocum said.

"I'll have to say that my major advantage is my personal contact with people," Gallagher said.

Baker said, "I think there are two sides to communication. I think conveying messages to the students is very important. But I think that the other side of that point is listening to students. I also feel that my enthusiasm is good to get people involved."

"I think the key to the treasurer position is experience. I've served on the council of humanities and social sciences, served as a senator and spent time with Sandi (Long, incumbent student body treasurer) trying to learn the job and see what it entails," Flow said.

The next question concerned funding specific groups. It dealt with hypothetical bills requesting funds to hold a Black Awareness Week, a Women's Awareness Week and a Gay Awareness Week.

In dealing with this question, all of the candidates agreed that they would support the funding of all three activities provided the activities were properly presented and written and that the groups represented the ideals of their specific community.

State gets Zoo Day ...

by Kathy Clary
Staff Writer

Zoo Day will be replaced this year by a smaller event sponsored by the Union Activities Board and the Inter-Fraternity Council, according to Ellen Pfirrmann, a member of the UAB entertainment committee.

Pfirrmann said the new event will be held on April 25. The Inter-Residence Council, who has co-sponsored Zoo Day with the UAB previously, is not sponsoring this new event, IRC President Chad Hefner said.

The IRC did not feel the students would be satisfied with a "smaller substitute for Zoo Day," Hefner said. The new event does not have a name, according to Michael Covington, UAB president.

"Ooz Day has been mentioned as a possibility," Covington said.

At least two bands will play on the Owen-Tucker beach, Pfirrmann said. The types of bands have not been decided.

Concessions, a tug-of-war contest and other activities will be held on Harris field, she said.

An organizational meeting of the IRC and UAB will be held on Monday or Tuesday.

Zoo Day will not be held because the crowd (approximately 8,000 people) was too large to control last year, Hefner said.

... or Ooz Day ? ? ? ? ?

Many people who attended Zoo Day were not State students, he said.

Hefner said approximately $2,000 damage was caused on campus during last year's Zoo Day, especially in Tucker Dormitory's bathrooms.

Cost too high

"Costs for cleaning the campus were about $1,900," he said. "A contracted group was hired to clean up, but the litter was so great that people from Physical Plant had to clean up as well."

Wake County parents complained to the Department of Residence Life that their children attended Zoo Day and became drunk, according to Hefner.

"The quality of sound at Zoo Day is another reason for its cancellation. The crowd that attends Zoo Day is so large that many people cannot hear the bands playing," Hefner said.

Hefner said, "Zoo Day costs between $12,000 and $15,000 to hold. This year, costs would be unaffordably greater. More than the usual number of Public Safety officers and eight student patrol officers would have to be hired. A $2,500 deposit for the use of Harris field would also be required."

Off-campus housing fair could lift lottery blues

by Elizabeth Hust
Staff Writer

Raleigh area housing complex representatives will be at State's Housing Fair on April 6 from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The fair will be held in the University Student Center, according to Don Kenny, off-campus housing coordinator.

Some of the area complexes that will be represented at the Housing Fair are:

- Sherman Arms
- Wakefield (Brookhill)
- Tryon Village
- Spanish Trace (Wilmington)
- Valentine Realtors
- Orchards (possibly)

Interested students will receive information about different complexes and the aspects of off-campus housing, Kenny said.

Some of the things students should check when searching for apartments are sturdy walkways, floors and windows.

Owners are responsible for extermination in the buildings and residents are responsible for extermination in the individual apartments.

Residents are responsible for payment of rent until the lease has ended or until they are released from the contract. Residents must submit a written notice to the landlord to be released from the contract.

As dormitories fill, vacant housing becomes more and more scarce. The State housing fair is designed to help alleviate Raleigh's tight housing problem.

A week-to-week leasing agreement can be terminated with a two-day notice and a month-to-month lease may be terminated with a seven-day notice unless otherwise stipulated in the lease.

The landlord cannot change any of the lease terms without the resident's consent at any time.

"Students should ask the landlord or present tenants about the type of heating used and the average cost of heat and electricity," Kenny said.

Before signing anything, the premises should be inspected by the prospective tenant along with the landlord and/or witness. Inventory sheets can be obtained at the off-campus housing office, located in Harris Hall.

Transportation to and from school is another aspect of living off campus that must be looked into. Maps, bus routes and schedules, and on-campus parking information is also available for students at the off-campus housing office.

The off-campus housing office would like to reorganize the Association for Off-Campus Students, Kenny and Stan Simmerson, State's head of the Association of Student Consumers, are working together to start the Association for Off-Campus Students by next fall. The association is now defunct due to lack of members.

Some students are unaware of the legal responsibilities involved in living off campus. Any questions can be answered at the off-campus housing office.

"I will be glad to answer any questions that students have," Kenny said.

Opinion

When I say that a thing is true, I mean that I cannot help believing it. I am stating an experience as to which there is no choice.
— Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., The Mind and Faith of Justice Holmes edited by Max Lerner

Our justification...

Every year around the time of Student Government elections, the Technician must decide whether to endorse certain candidates. This year the Technician will endorse candidates for two out of three Student Government races and for the one Student Center race. Those endorsements are listed below in addition to a discussion of the candidates' qualifications in the race that is not endorsed.

If the reader decides to consult the Technician's endorsements before casting his vote, he should first be aware of the argument many have presented who oppose the paper's policy of endorsing candidates. The argument is as follows:

Each student pays student fees, part of which goes to help support the Technician. If a student does not agree with the editorial views of the Technician concerning endorsements, then that student should not be forced to contribute money to a paper that expresses views in opposition to his own. A candidate who is not endorsed might be especially opposed to helping with the financial support of a paper that backs his opponent.

This argument is a very powerful one, and those readers who agree with it should not consult the endorsements printed below. Before doing so, however, the reader is encouraged to give consideration to the Technician's arguments in favor of the endorsement policy.

No student is going to agree with all the editorial views that fall under the heading of "Technician opinion." The endorsements are also considered to be "Technician opinion." If students should not be forced to support a paper expressing endorsements contrary to their opinion, then students should not be forced to financially support a paper that expresses any editorial view that does not agree with their own.

If the Technician decided that it was not qualified to endorse candidates, then by implication it is also not qualified to express views on other matters. What are those matters? How will the Technician decide whether it is qualified to speak on any issue?

The endorsements represent a stand on an issue, the issue of which candidates are qualified to represent the students. The Technician takes a stand on a different issue in every edition, and the endorsements are just one issue. If students disagree with the opinions expressed in the paper, they are free to write letters to the "forum" section of the opinion pages. The same is true for the endorsements; students wishing to support any candidate are free to do so in a letter to the editor. All letters of this nature will be printed in the Wednesday edition and must be submitted by 3 p.m. today.

A newsletter is a publication that prints only news. A newspaper by definition contains news as well as opinion sections. The Technician falls into the latter category.

Because the campus newspaper is partially supported by student fees, every student pays between 3 cents and 4 cents for each issue of the paper. Every student will, at one time or another, find himself in disagreement with the views expressed by the paper. But each student should remember that he pays fees for many things, a few of which he may not use or wish to support. Some students rarely use the infirmary or the library or Carmichael Gymnasium; some students use these facilities frequently. The University's fee structure is not based on individual use; it is based on group use.

Those of you who choose not to consult the endorsements are encouraged to read the page 1 news story and the candidates' position papers on page 4 before casting your vote in the elections Tuesday and Wednesday.

Those who decide to review the endorsements are asked to do so with care. They are intended as an aid only; no student should rely solely on the endorsements before casting his vote. The Technician feels qualified to endorse candidates because of its close monitoring of the recent election process and of Student Government throughout the year.

Regardless of whether the reader makes use of the endorsements, he should make his choices known by voting either Tuesday or Wednesday. Polls are located at the free-expression tunnel, the Reynolds Coliseum tunnel, the Student Center and D.H. Hill Library.

'forum' policy

The Technician welcomes "forum" letters. They are likely to be printed if they:

- deal with significant issues, breaking news or public interest.
- are typed or prepared legibly and double-spaced.
- are limited to 300 words.
- are signed with writer's address, phone number and, if writer is a student, his classification and curriculum.

The Technician reserves the right not to publish any letter which does not comply with the above rules or which is deemed inappropriate for printing by the editor in chief.

Letters are subject to editing for style, brevity and taste. In no case will the writer be informed beforehand that his letter has been edited for printing.

The Technician will withhold an author's name only if failure to do so would result in a "star" and present danger to the writer. Rare exceptions to this policy will be made at the discretion of the editor in chief.

All letters submitted become the property of the Technician and will not be returned to the author. Letters should be brought to Student Center suite 1120 or mailed to Technician, Letters to the Editor, P.O. Box 98 College St. Station, Raleigh, N.C. 27698 5882

... for endorsements

From the amount of campaigning that has been going on recently, it seems that most of the candidates running for Student Government offices say they want to represent the students but really are not willing to work hard enough to get elected. Compared to recent years, the amount of campaigning this year is appallingly little.

This really makes little sense, because there are many highly qualified candidates running and at least one race promises to be a very close one. When students have little campaign information on which to base their votes, they are likely to rely more heavily on the material printed in today's edition, including the page 1 news story, the position papers and the endorsements.

This is definitely an undesirable situation, but the Technician feels the blame for it must rest solely with the candidates, few of whom have taken the initiative to run anything resembling a campaign. But because the Technician realizes that students may be forced to place more emphasis than in past years on the material in today's issue, it has given special care in designing its endorsements.

The endorsements are based on several things: a March 16 interview with student body presidential candidates aired over WKNC-FM, a March 18 debate which included most of the Student Government candidates, the position papers printed in today's issue, information provided by various current Student Government officials, and the Technician's own knowledge of Student Government gained through close monitoring of its affairs this year.

Student Body President

The person elected as student body president will be responsible for the following: appointment of chairmen and members of more than 60 University committees; appointment of the student attorney general and his aides, the aides to the student body president, and the president of the Association of Student Consumers; membership on more than 15 University committees; membership on the board of trustees, representation of State at the meetings of the University of North Carolina Association of Student Governments, bi-monthly reporting to the Student Senate, and a close monitoring of the activities of the Faculty Senate.

Besides these "paper" duties, the student body president must always be prepared to represent the student viewpoint to the faculty and administration at State; often this viewpoint must also be expressed to administrative officials within the University of North Carolina system and to N.C. legislative officials. In addition, the student body president is asked to represent the University at countless numbers of meetings and conferences.

And then, if he is a good student body president, he is found frequently on the brickyard or other places on campus talking to students, trying to find out their opinions on the issues.

The job is not an easy one, but Jim Yocum can do it.

The Technician endorses Yocum with full confidence that he could perform well as State's student body president. Because the post of student body president is the most important one in Student Government, and because it requires performance of a myriad of duties, it is especially important that the person holding this position have a wealth of experience.

Yocum has spent three years involved in the activities of Student Government. This year he has served as State's Student Senate president, and he has already proved his willingness and ability to work for the students on a variety of issues.

One issue on which he has concentrated is the cuts in student financial aid, an issue of extreme importance facing today's students. As student body president Yocum would be able to continue his efforts against the cuts. He says that he would also work to bring Student Government closer to the students, and he has already carried out several projects in this direction.

The other candidates for student body president, John Howard and David Hartley, lack the experience that is so vitally needed in a person running for this office. Howard seems very optimistic — he says there is no student apathy on this campus — and he has some good ideas, but, again, his experience in Student Government is very little.

Hartley also has little experience in Student Government, and he was asked to resign in 1978 from the one position he did hold in Student Government as executive assistant to the attorney general. In addition, Hartley's views of Student Government represent a wide departure from the ones most students would desire in a student body president: Hartley says the only thing students are interested in is graduating as "quickly and cheaply" as possible and that students are not qualified to deal in the administrative matters of this University.

Yocum, unlike these two gentlemen, represents realism in his outlook on Student Government and, because of his experience, knows the procedures for getting things done. Election of Yocum will represent a smooth transition from this year's Student Government administration to the next, and a smoother transition means that Student Government can begin working for the students that much faster.

Student Senate President

The duties of the Student Senate president are: coordination of the committee activity in the Senate and appointment of the committee chairmen; conducting the Senate meetings; close work with the Faculty Senate; representation of the student body president if he is unable to attend a meeting; and membership on many University committees.

Like the student body president, the Senate president must also be able to act as a student liaison with the faculty and administration. He is often asked to represent the student body at various functions, and he should also be visible on campus among the students. In addition, the Senate president's attitude and enthusiasm in the Senate may in many cases be a determining factor in the effectiveness of the Senate throughout the year.

The Technician wishes to stress that either one of the candidates, Stan Gallagher or Jeff Baker, could do an excellent job as Student Senate president. Both are highly qualified, and both have high motivation and desire to work.

The Technician, in its endorsement, will back the candidate with the most experience: Stan Gallagher. Since the job of Student Senate president is the second most important one in Student Government — and since the Senate president would be required to take over as chief executive should something happen to the student body president — experience is a critical quality in the Senate president.

While Baker has spent a full year in the Senate and during that time has become involved in several different issues, Gallagher has two years of experience in the Senate, including a year as Senate president pro tempore.

In addition, there is one quality about Gallagher that sets him apart from all the other candidates running for Student Government offices and, in fact, from most other politicians in the United States.

He says, "I don't know" when he does not know. He does not attempt to answer a question that he has not thought about or researched. When asked a question, he does not equivocate rather than admit that he needs more information before answering.

Gallagher is an unusual politician in this respect, and he is an honest one.

Student Body Treasurer

The student body treasurer, in addition to administering the funds of Student Government, has the additional duties of chairing the Senate finance committee, reporting its activities to the Senate and acting as treasurer of other organizations, including the sports club authority and the Legal Defense Corp. The student body treasurer should also become involved in other issues besides financial ones and should attempt to assist the student body president and the Student Senate president in their activities.

The Technician does not choose to endorse for this race because one of the candidates has not had the same opportunity for exposure as the other. Mark Crisco does not have a position paper in today's issue and he was not present at the March 18 debate. Part of Crisco's lack of exposure is his fault and part of it is due to a breakdown in communication between him and the elections board; however, this lack of exposure has prevented the Technician from comparing the candidates on many criteria. However, we can make a few comparisons, from which the voter can draw his own conclusions:

— Marie Flow, Crisco's opponent in the treasurer's race, has a year of experience in the Student Senate as a member of the General Assembly liaison committee. Crisco has no experience in Student Government at all.

— Flow is aware of all the duties that she would have to perform as treasurer. Crisco is not.

— Flow has attended Senate finance committee meetings, of which she would be chair if she were elected. Crisco has not attended any finance committee meetings.

Crisco appears enthusiastic about the treasurer's job, but he does not seem to have based that enthusiasm on very much knowledge. Flow, on the other hand, is very cognizant of the treasurer's responsibilities. In addition, her knowledge has led her to propose a change in the atmosphere of the finance-committee meetings. Such a change is much needed.

Student Center President

The duties of the Student Center president include coordination of the 12 Union Activities Board committees and appointment of their chairmen; chairing the Student Center board of directors; and membership on various campus committees.

The enthusiasm of the Student Center president can determine the effectiveness of the center in much the same way as the Student Senate president's motivation can determine the effectiveness of the Senate.

The student body is fortunate that in every Student Government race, it has more than one candidate from whom to choose. However, this is not the case with the Student Center presidential race.

But somehow the student body lucked out. Barring a write-in election, a very qualified candidate will be elected to the post of center president.

Belva Parker has been a member of the Union Activities Board for three years, and two of those years were spent as chairman of the entertainment committee. She has also gained experience on the Student Center board of directors by serving as its UAB representative.

Parker has another qualification besides her experience: she cares enough to run for center president. Vote for her.

What to know about the candidates

Jim Yocum

● Qualifications for student body president that Yocum lists include three years of experience in Student Government; two years as an engineering senator and as chairman of the Student Senate's General Assembly liaison committee, one year as Senate president pro tempore and as General Assembly adviser for the University of North Carolina Association of Student Governments, one year as Student Senate president and as chairman of the UNCASG programs and policy committee.

● One area in which Yocum says he would concentrate heavily is disseminating information to students. He says that he would rely on "going out and talking to people." He has worked this year to have a Student Government information booth installed in the Student Center. This installation has finally been OKed. He has also worked to make the Senate more informal, allowing more freedom to senators wishing to speak. He says that this has been an important step in making the Senate more responsive to the student body.

● Yocum has done extensive lobbying in the N.C. Congress concerning the proposed cuts in student financial aid. He says he would continue efforts to prevent further cuts in student aid.

● Yocum says that in dealing with the administration he prefers the personal approach rather than the use of letters or telephones.

● Yocum says he would work with minority-student senators in an effort to get more minority students involved in Student Government.

Stan Gallagher

● The qualifications for Student Senate president that Gallagher lists include two years as an engineering senator and one year as chairman of the academics committee and as Senate president pro tempore.

● Gallagher has done extensive work in the academic area. In the Senate academics committee, he helped design a proposal for new graduation requirements and suspension/retention policies and a revised drop period. Gallagher has also participated in conducting a Pack Poll of students' opinions on academic issues. He has also provided student input on teaching effectiveness to a committee designed to study this issue. Gallagher says that as Student Senate president he would continue his efforts in the academic area.

● As Senate president pro tempore, Gallagher was required to conduct two Senate meetings this year.

● Two areas in which Gallagher says he would concentrate next year are establishing a strong relationship between Student Government and the new chancellor, and between Student Government and the school councils.

● Gallagher says he would work with the student body president in lobbying against the proposed financial-aid cuts.

John Howard

● Qualifications for student body president that Howard lists are experience between 1971-75 as a student senator, member of the liberal arts council and various entertainment boards, and work at WKNC-FM and on the Technician.

● Howard says he would make use of student body referendums to assess student opinion on important issues. He would also like to set up a program on WKNC that would allow students to call in and question him on issues and policies. He says that he prefers "going after people" rather than "relying totally on an open-door policy."

● He says he would be very reluctant to support any increase in student fees proposed by the administration.

● He says he would organize voter drives on the University campuses in North Carolina in an effort to let legislators know that students are opposed to further cuts in financial aid.

● He says his most important qualities are honesty and aggression.

● He says issues he would concentrate on next year are reduction of excessive parking fines and towing, elimination of physical-education requirements, and opposition to a hike in student fees to finance Carmichael Gymnasium expansion.

● He says there is no student apathy on State's campus. The responsibility of Student Government, according to Howard, is giving the students a Student Government worth voting for.

● Students are qualified to participate in administrative decisions, Howard says, because they are adults first, students second.

● Howard says the least represented group in his presidential cabinet would be white males.

Jeff Baker

● The qualifications for Student Senate president that Baker lists are one year in the Student Senate working on the finance committee and sports club authority and as the Student Senate's representative in the Faculty Senate. He has also worked on the elections board and on the Faculty Senate student affairs committee.

● Baker says that he would concentrate on establishing a strong committee structure in the Senate.

● Baker has worked to successfully push through a policy requiring faculty members to obtain department-head approval before giving major tests the week before final exams.

● Important issues for next year, according to Baker, include extending the drop period, obtaining more computer terminals and implementation of the freshman meal plan.

● Baker says an important aspect of Student Government is getting information out to students. He would use a booth in the Student Center next year as a method of obtaining student input.

● Baker has worked this year to extend the four-week drop period and create a new suspension/retention policy.

● Baker says he would approach black leaders on campus and the heads of black fraternities in an effort to recruit black students in Student Government.

● Expansion of Carmichael Gymnasium is an important issue, Baker says, and he supports such expansion. However, he has not indicated whether he supports a hike in student fees to fund the expansion.

● Baker says workshops would be one solution to the problem of getting information out to club representatives about obtaining money from the Student Senate.

● One of his most important qualities, Baker says, is his ability to listen to students and to convey information to them.

Bela Parker

● Parker lists experience as her main qualification for Student Center president: she has been a member of the Union Activities Board for three years and has chaired the UAB entertainment committee for two years. She is the UAB representative to the Student Center board of directors.

● Parker says her main priority as Student Center president would be to make the University community more aware of the available entertainment programs. She would also seek to involve more students in the process of selecting entertainment events.

● Initiation of "new and creative" programs would be emphasized, according to Parker, if she were elected Student Center president.

David Hartley

● His qualifications for student body president that Hartley lists as being most important are his sincerely and desire to pursue the students' best interests. He has prior experience in Student Government as executive assistant to the attorney general. He has worked with law firms in Raleigh and with the Wake County district attorney's office. While in the U.S. Army, he worked with public relations between the Germans and Americans.

● In April of 1978, Hartley was asked by the attorney general to resign from his position as executive aid. Hartley was quoted in the Technician as saying that he was asked to resign "due to a conflict in personalities." The attorney general did not specify why Hartley was asked to resign, except for a statement that Hartley's actions were "damaging to the integrity of the University judicial system."

● Hartley says he is interested in reducing the campus parking and towing fines and University Food Services' prices. He is also interested in becoming involved in the entertainment on campus.

● He says he is not sure that anything can be done to lower the cost of books and tuition.

● He says the administration is more qualified to deal with some matters than students are and that students should have very little input into University administration. As an example, he says that students should not be involved in the selection of a new chancellor.

● Hartley says he would "go out and ask people" as his method of assessing students' opinions on issues.

● Hartley says he is not sure anything can be done to fight the proposed cuts in student financial aid. He says the government is already aware of the opposition to the cuts.

● He says that students are mostly interested in "getting in school and getting the h--- out" and in graduating "as quickly and cheaply as possible."

● One of his most important responsibilities as student body president, says Hartley, is representing the students' viewpoint to the faculty and administration. Students are the most important part of the University, he says.

Marie Flow

● The qualifications for student body treasurer that Flow lists are study of accounting, experience as high-school treasurer, work for two summers in the accounting office of a corporation, and a year in the Student Senate as a member of the General Assembly liaison committee.

● She says that, in an effort to maintain involvement with students, she would periodically attend the meetings of certain campus organizations, including the Inter-Residence Council, the Inter-Fraternity Council and the Off-Campus Students' Association. She would also attend various school-council meetings.

● Flow says she is willing "to go beyond the assigned duties" of the treasurer and assist the student body president.

● If she were elected treasurer, Flow says, the atmosphere of the Senate's finance committee meetings would be changed to ensure that club representatives seeking funds are not intimidated when appearing before the committee.

● Flow says that she would do several things to improve communication between the finance committee and club representatives concerning the procedures for obtaining money from the Student Senate. She says she would establish workshops designed to educate the club representatives.

Mark Crisco

● Crisco lists enthusiasm and desire to work as his qualifications for student body treasurer.

● Crisco is running for treasurer, he says, because there is a real need for students to be aware of where their funds are going. He says he would encourage more student participation in the distribution of funds.

● Crisco says he will initiate a program to solve the problem of club representatives' lack of awareness of procedures for obtaining funds. He said this program would involve some periodic reminders of the procedures.

● Some students are not receiving maximum benefit from their student fees, Crisco says, because the Senate has too often allocated funds to organizations that only benefit a minority of students. Crisco says that as treasurer he would make clear to the Student Senate that funds should be allocated to organizations that benefit a large number of students.

● Because he did not submit a position paper to the Technician for printing in today's issue, he invites any students wishing to question him about his platform to call him at his dormitory room. Crisco's number may be obtained from the information desk of the Student Center.

Student body presidential candidates: Howard, Hartley, Yocum

Who is John Howard?

A student, among thousands on this campus, who grew tired of our administration and Student Government not responding to the needs and concerns of the student body.

A person who feels that the administration, has exploited students through excessive parking fines and towing.

A person who believes that increasing tuition fees for Carmichael Gym construction is unjustifiable and ill-timed in light of the continuing cuts in student loans and grants.

A person who believes that paternalistic policies such as physical-education requirements belong in elementary schools and not adult-oriented universities.

A person who believes that many sectors of our campus — such as blacks, foreign students, married students, off-campus students, graduate students and veterans — have never had a real voice in campus affairs and have had their needs ignored for too long.

A person who believes that a federal administration that puts a greater value on bombs rather than brains needs re-educating and that this student body can be a real force in the re-education.

A person who believes that no student-government program can achieve student support without the close cooperation of the Technician and WKNC-FM in disseminating information.

— John Howard

A person who believes that ALL STUDENTS on this campus are important and that every input from any student is an invaluable asset to the campus community.

A person who believes that the cure for "student apathy" on this campus is giving people a government worth voting for!

John Howard is running for student body president because he felt that he could no longer complain about conditions on this campus without making an honest personal effort to help change those conditions. This student body has a great potential for creating an atmosphere of student solidarity and, with this potential, it can influence policy changes that benefit everyone who attends State.

It is only with your support, not only at the polls but all year, that John Howard can hope to institute changes that serve the best interests of all who go here.

Without your help and support the student government we get is the one we deserve.

'Most of the Student Senate's time is spent debating over the allocations of funds for different organizations; I feel that the students of this school have other interests. I intend to direct my attention to areas that will directly affect us and benefit us as students.'

— David Hartley

Before I decided to run for the office of student body president, I gave serious thought as to what my responsibilities would be if I were elected. The one responsibility that caught my attention was that in which I would represent you before the administration and faculty.

You see, I feel that most of you are like me in the sense that all you are concerned with is to graduate as quickly and as cheaply as possible, and you are just not concerned with all the administrative dealings that go on in the Student Government. Most of the Student Senate's time is spent debating over the allocations of funds for different organizations; I feel that the students of this school have other interests. I intend to direct my attention to areas that will directly affect us and benefit us as students.

There are only a few things that come to my mind that have really helped us as students; they are the 5-cent Xerox machine and the free telephone use. These are things that we as students appreciate and can use.

My proposals are numerous. I am interested in reducing the fines on campus for ticketing and towing. This University made more than $80,000 last year from tickets. This does not include the towing costs. I realize that parking is a problem and there is no easy solution, but it is just not fair for the administration to capitalize on the problem at our expense. It offers us nothing but a hunting license. This is just not fair, and I want the parking situation investigated thoroughly from our interest!

University Food Services claims that it is not making a profit! Something is wrong somewhere! Having talked to many restaurant owners in Raleigh, I just cannot accept this. My gosh, with more than 22,000 people on this campus Food Services has more walk-in business in one day than any restaurant in the country, and restaurants can be a very profitable business.

I want these prices lowered. If I could do nothing but lower the price of coffee to 10 cents, then I feel that I would have accomplished something.

Entertainment: You don't have to spend $5,000 on a band to satisfy us! There are many bands that can be brought here for far less and serve the same purpose.

These are just a few of the areas that I am concerned with, but I assure you that I will settle for nothing less than that which is in our best interest while attending this University.

I have served in Student Government as an administrative aid and have worked with the Wake County district attorney's office and with several law firms in Raleigh. I spent almost four years in the U.S. Army. I was stationed in Germany and worked in the public-relations area dealing with the German and American armies and city officials. I feel that this experience would be useful in accomplishing my proposals but do not feel that it is necessary — impressive, but certainly not necessary. All one has to do is have the desire to represent the students' interest and settle for nothing less.

Each of you had the opportunity to run for this office, but you didn't and I did. I took the initiative and time and had the ambition to run. Please give me a chance to work for you and show you that I have and will protect your interest.

To agree with me and my proposals is fine, but if you don't vote for me then I can't win. There are more than 20,000 students on this campus and about 2,000 vote.

Please give me your support and vote, and I promise you that you will not regret it.

Over the past three years, the name JIM YOCUM has figured heavily in the operation of Student Government at State. In my years of service to the student body, I have held many elected and appointed positions in order to represent my constituency.

As a freshman, I was elected as a student senator for the School of Engineering and served as the chairman of the General Assembly Liaison committee in the Senate. My sophomore year I was re-elected as an engineering senator and retained my post as the chair of the GAL committee.

In addition to these offices, I was voted into the office of president pro tempore of the Senate by my fellow senators and served as the General Assembly adviser for the University of North Carolina Association of Student Governments, a group composed of representatives from the 16 public universities in North Carolina. This past year you have, as the student body, elected me to the office of Student Senate president. Also this past year, I have served as the chairman of the programs and policy committee of the UNCASG.

During these three years many issues have come up and have been dealt with by me, either individually or through the Student Senate. These include but aren't limited to: the Students' Supply Store snack bar closing, the statewide tuition increase, the cuts in financial aid on the state and national levels, the new dining hall/freshman dorm plan, the night parking on north campus, and others too numerous to mention. These issues were dealt with over and above the duty I have to administer the 60-plus member Student Senate and to chair its meetings.

During my administration, the Student Senate has undergone the most extensive statute revision since Student Government has been in existence. More reform pertaining to the operation of the Senate and its relations to the student body has occurred in this year than in all other years combined. More money has been appropriated to student groups than in any other year, and there have been more groups funded through the Senate than in any other year. The Senate has become a more open forum and is more representative of the student body at large in this administration than in previous ones.

This brings me to my proposals for next year. As Student Senate president, my first responsibility is to the Student Senate and to represent its opinion before the administration. What I have attempted to do this year is to make the Senate a place where the opinions of each and every count.

For the first time, a senator can speak on any subject he or she wishes to without having to debate a resolution. This statute change is the first step toward making Student Government more responsive to student comment. The next step is right now coming into being. A Student Government/association of student consumers booth is going to be in the Student Center. This will be a place where students can give suggestions and where they can complain about things on campus. There will be a number of informative brochures in a rack similar to the rack being constructed in the D.H. Hill Library Annex. This is only one of the many programs that are coming into being after a year of hard work.

Before this campaign got started, I went back to the Technician position paper I wrote last year for Senate president. I did this to ensure that I had accomplished everything that I said that I would, and I found that I had. The association of student consumers is back on its feet, the entire N.C. congressional delegation has been lobbied about financial aid, and there is a lean, hard-working Senate running more efficiently than ever.

At this point in North Carolina State's development as a university, there is a need for an experienced, innovative student leader to represent the student's views to the incoming administration. It is my hope that my Student Government organization will be able to attain more for the students with our new chancellor than any other Student Government has in the past. I have to ask you, the student body, to vote for experience and integrity in the office of student body president. Vote for Jim Yocum in this election.

Senate presidential candidates: Baker, Gallagher

'I also feel that a strong committee structure is needed next year and I will work to appoint qualified committee chairmen. Strong leadership is needed next year to have an effective Student Government, and I can provide this leadership.'

— Jeff Baker

When I sat down to write this, I thought of a lot of catchy phrases and long words to represent what I would like to do if I am elected. Instead, I will try to cut the bull and tell you about my experience in Student Government and some of the new ideas I have for next year. These ideas will only be possible if I am elected your Student Senate president.

The office of Student Senate president requires knowledge of Student Government and how it works. In the past, I have served as a Student senator working on the finance committee and the sports club authority, and as the Student Senate's representative to the Faculty Senate. I have also worked for the elections board.

By far, the major work of the Student Senate is to appropriate money to different clubs and organizations at State. My experience on the finance committee and on the sports club authority will be a big asset next year if I am elected. I also feel that a strong committee structure is needed next year and I will work to appoint qualified committee chairmen. Strong leadership is needed next year to have an effective Student Government, and I can provide this leadership.

Student Government must also deal with the administration when representing student views. As Faculty Senate liaison, I represented student views on such issues as extending the four-week drop period, devising the proposed suspension-retention policy, and revising the policy of giving tests the week before final exams, among many other issues.

Just recently the Faculty Senate accepted a resolution requiring department-head approval before giving a major test the week before exams. In the past there were no restrictions. Working with the Faculty Senate student affairs committee, I helped draft this resolution.

I would like to see more students become involved at State next year.

I think a major part of getting more people involved is providing information. The library will have an information booth in the near future with descriptions of the organizations' activities and how to become involved. I would like to see a directory printed for students to find information about organizations that might interest them.

Student Government is an area in which student involvement is greatly needed. By next year, there will be a Student Government information booth in the Student Center and I plan to use this as a source of student input. If I am elected, I will have an open door to all student ideas concerning this University.

State is an excellent University but there is always room for improvement. I hope to help make these improvements in the coming year. To do this, I need your support. VOTE FOR JEFF BAKER FOR STUDENT SENATE PRESIDENT.

'Now, as my platform stands, my first and foremost concern will be that of establishing strong relations with the new chancellor. I cannot emphasize the importance of gaining a favorable attitude from the chancellor of State.'

— Stan Gallagher

As this year's academic committee chairman and president pro tempore of the Student Senate, I have come a long way since I was a freshman two years ago. I am Stan Gallagher, and since my first semester at State I have served as an active member of the Student Senate, representing the School of Engineering.

My work during these two years of service has ranged from conducting a Pack Poll to better know students' opinions with regard to academic issues; to coordinating a proposal presented to the Faculty Senate and provost concerning graduation requirements, suspension-retention policies and the drop period; to meeting with a member of the teaching effectiveness and evaluation committee to provide student input on setting future guidelines for dealing with the inadequacies of teaching on all levels.

Although my duties as Senate academic committee chairman occupy much of my time, I also must uphold my job as president pro tempore. Twice this year it has been necessary for me to conduct meetings of the Student Senate.

Now, as my platform stands, my first and foremost concern will be that of establishing strong relations with the new chancellor. I cannot emphasize the importance of gaining a favorable attitude from the chancellor of State. My next supporting concern will be to work with the student body president in voicing the concerns of students regarding drastic cuts in the financial-aid budget and to help lobby for stronger financial resources.

My next support originates from a concern with the need for closer communication between school councils, Student Government and the students in general. I intend to establish a bi-monthly session for student leaders and students for the purpose of expressing concerns, ideas and solutions.

The remaining supports to my platform include continued work in evaluating and correcting teaching inadequacies; maintaining a close monitor on relative campus issues — i.e. the freshman meal plan, the implementation of the graduation requirement and suspension-retention policy, and the fee increase for the expansion of gymnasium facilities; and in responding and effectively dealing with new developments that may adversely affect students by keeping the students' best interest in mind.

Treasurer candidate

'I feel that my experience in the Student Senate and my enthusiasm and work for the General Assembly Liaison committee and other Senate committees will help me to give you the kind of representation that you deserve in the office of treasurer.'

— Marie Flow

Accountability and consistency are the two qualifications that I know that all of you expect of your student body treasurer for 1982-83. The job requires both EXPERIENCE AND DEDICATION. I have studied accounting, served as high-school treasurer and worked for two summers in the accounting office of a corporation. I feel that my experience in the Student Senate and my enthusiasm and work for the General Assembly Liaison committee and other Senate committees will help me to give you the kind of representation that you deserve in the office of treasurer.

The student body treasurer should be someone who is an enthusiastic, active, giving and DEDICATED leader. The office should also be filled with someone willing to not only work for the students but with the students. I know that it is not enough to be involved with the students during campaign time — this practice must continue throughout the year.

This can be accomplished by periodically attending certain campus organizations' meetings, such as the Inter-Residence Council, the Inter-Fraternity Council, Off-Campus Students' Association, and school council meetings. Also, the student body treasurer should be willing to go beyond the assigned duties and help the student body president. I can fill these qualifications and give you the extra effort it takes to be an effective LEADER and TREASURER.

Thank you for your support. VOTE MARIE FLOW FOR STUDENT BODY TREASURER.

Student Center presidential candidate

I feel that the greatest job facing me in the upcoming year would be that of getting the students of this University more involved and aware of programs than they have been in the past. More student input is drastically needed in our programs which range from art and entertainment to lecture series. I hope to open the channels of communication between the students and the chairpeople of the committees, and also the administration.

Some people may not be aware of the duties of the Student Center president. The president appoints chairmen to the 12 Union Activities Board committees and oversees the activities for which the committees are responsible. The president also has the delicate job of being the liaison between the Student Union and the administration as well as all student organizations.

In addition, the president serves as chairman of the board of directors of the Student Center, has seats on various campus committees, and directs initiation of new activities. The magnitude of this responsibility makes it necessary for the president to be familiar with all functions of the UAB and the board of directors.

— Belva Parker

I feel that my experience qualifies me for this position. I have been a member of the UAB for three years and during that time I chaired the entertainment committee for two years and I am currently the UAB representative to the board of directors

As your Student Center president I will initiate new and creative programs and bring the Union to its rightful place as the center of activity for this campus. Competent chairpeople will be chosen to head each committee and greater student involvement will be sought. I urge you, the student, to become more involved and let your interests be known.

'Awareness' week shows public agricultural growth

by Hal Queen
Features Writer

On the brickyard a baby pig squeals indignantly upon being presented for inspection to amused onlookers. Several huge farm machines, venerable representatives of agriculture's heavy artillery in the continual struggles with Mother Earth, tower nearby.

These are just small glimpses which you may have had in the past, during Agriculture Awareness Week, which started last Wednesday. Agriculture Awareness Week is sponsored by Alpha Zeta Fraternity and is supported by many clubs of different fields within the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences, and the School of Forest Resources.

Founded in 1978 by AZ members and agriculture-related clubs, Ag Awareness Week provides the non-agriculture community with an overview of agriculture, as well as to give agriculture students a look at job opportunities within their chosen fields. "AZ felt that State was moving away from its roots — or its agriculture foundation," Don Herring, organizer of this year's event, said. "State's so big now. There are many departments here that have outgrown agriculture. It seems that agriculture is not as out front as it was before."

"Agriculture Awareness Week started out as Agriculture Day," Bruce Hodgkin, an Alpha Zeta member said. "It has expanded each year to involve more activities. Agriculture day is a nationwide program of education and a celebration of agriculture's contribution to American life."

"We expect thousands of students, not just of agriculture, but of all curricula, to be exposed to our programming this year in order to become more agriculturally aware."

"This is an occasion to remind other North Carolinians of the strength of agriculture's heartbeat and of its needs."

Herring said that last year's and this year's Ag Week have been the most educative thus far.

"For the first two years we were just getting the ball rolling and the week really didn't serve as much of an educational purpose," he said. "We mainly had the farm equipment exhibits, animals, milking contests and things like that."

Since most of the activity is on the brickyard, we are able to reach more people, he said. "It is a real crowd pleaser. It is really one of the most unique events held on the brickyard."

Ag week involves so many people from many different fields.

Wednesday, former Gov. Bob Scott, a 1952 graduate of State in Dairy Husbandry and AZ alumnus, spoke on the topic of changes in the use of farmland.

Owner and general manager of Melville Farms, a commercial dairy operation, Scott fielded questions concerning the utilization of farmland in the future.

Thursday, the Animal Science Club walked away with first place in the invitational cow milking contest which was followed by a celebrity milking contest.

Thursday, the Animal Science Club won first place in the invitational cow milking contest which was followed by a celebrity milking contest.

This year, the celebrity milking contest featured Don Shea of WTVD, Hap Hansen of WPTF and N.C. Agricultural Commissioner Jim Graham. Legates won the hotly contested event.

"Ag Week captures the spirit of a small county fair with all the activities," Herring said.

A lot of work has gone into the week since its planning stages last September. AZ coordinates the week, but a lot of clubs support it and participate in it.

"No one club takes full credit or top billing in that respect," Herring said.

"I'm sure alot of groups realize the need for Ag Awareness Week. It is now an established event. It becomes easier to add more and more to it each year."

"Some facts which serve to dramatize the leadership role of agriculture in the U.S. economy are for one," Hodgkin said, "agriculture is our nation's number one industry and has assets equal to 88 percent of the capital assets of all manufacturing corporations in the U.S."

Agriculture is also our nation's number one employer, he said. Over 25 million people are employed in the U.S. food and fiber system. Agriculture is the nation's best inflation fighter, with each farmer producing enough food and fiber for 78 persons.

"The National Agriculture Day slogan is 'Agriculture: it's your heartbeat, America'."

"The fact that the United States is a country that feeds itself as well as other nations makes people take agriculture for granted," Herring said. "There's generally no big 'hoo-hah' about it, whereas in another situation, there might be more of a general feel of a need for celebrating agriculture."

"People don't worry about where supper's coming from tonight."

Tar Heels run over Wildcats enroute to Bourbon St.

by William Terry Kelley
Sports Editor

As the Beatles might have said, it's a "long and winding road" to New Orleans. But four teams will make that trip next weekend. Bourbon Street awaits for Houston, Georgetown, Louisville and North Carolina.

The Tar Heels confirmed their reservations Sunday afternoon with a 70-80 annihilation of Villanova in Reynolds Coliseum in the finals of the East Regional. The Houston downed Boston College in the other Sunday game at St. Louis while Georgetown belted Oregon State and Louisville stepped past Alabama-Birmingham in Saturday contests.

Carolina and Houston while the Hoyas will take on the Cardinals.

James Worthy led his team to the East Regional finals Sunday as he garnered most outstanding player honors as well as joining teammates Sam Perkins and Jimmy Black on the All-Tournament teams. Ed Pickey and John Pinone made the teams for the Wildcats.

A five-minute dry spell in the first half slowed the Wildcats up; bid as the Tar Heels were able to build a substantial lead and hold on from that point. During the drought the Heels built a 10-point margin and although Villanova threatened several times it could never close to any closer than four in the first half from then on.

"We're extremely glad to have won the regional championship," Tar Heel head coach Dean Smith said. "The team did a marvelous job of getting ready to play. I think Villanova bothered us defensively in the first half and we weathered them."

"The reason the shooting percentage was so low in the first half was defense. It's funny, the only thing we practiced yesterday was the 1-3-1 defense and then we had trouble against it in the first half. Villanova was well prepared. I thought they were one of the best teams we have played all season."

The Wildcats could never really make a game out of it in the second half as North Carolina used a balanced attack and a 75 percent field goal performance to break the game open. The Wildcats pulled to within five on several occasions but never seriously threatened the Tar Heel lead.

Pickey led all scorers with 18 points while freshman guard Michael Jordan led the Tar Heels with 15 for the game.

North Carolina placed four other players in double figures having Worthy with 14 and Perkins and Matt Doherty with 13 each. Black added 11 while Buzz Peterson and Jeb Barlow added two apiece.

"First I would like to congratulate Dean and his team. They are a class team and they have a class coach," Villanova head coach Rollie Massimino said. "They showed us today why they are the number one team in the nation. Again, we are very proud of our team. I can't say enough about our guys effort. Both teams played extremely well. We were just a little short when we needed a basket."

"We played eight or nine different defenses in the game. We played the man-to-man fairly well. We are not really quick or really strong. But we work hard on our concepts. Playing at North Carolina had no effect. They are great fans. It is good for college basketball. I am not going to criticize that. You should come to the Cat house some time."

The Tar Heels went to a slowdown before the game was through and used their four-corner offense to break the game open.

"It is tough to play behind against North Carolina," said Villanova center John Pinone who had 14 points. "It is just difficult to come back on them because they run that four corners so well. They are well trained in the offense and have smart players to run it."

"You have to double team them and hope they make some mistakes. The big men are quick inside; they have quick hands and hurt your passing lanes. I would not say their quickness at every position was the key. We have some quick players."

"It was tough to reverse the ball against their defense though. I would say North Carolina is one of the best three teams we have played this year. I would say they may be the best. The top three we have played against would be North Carolina, Georgetown and Boston College."

With 8:25 left in the game, Wildcat guard Frank Dobbs hit two free throws to cut the margin to 43-38 but from that point the Heels used several defensive moves and backdoor plays to open the game up.

The Tar Heels took their largest lead of 16 points twice late in the game before the Wildcats scored the last six points of the game against the North Carolina bench players to trim the final margin.

The game was laced with good defense by both clubs with a balance of inside and perimeter play.

Before Smith knew the outcome of the Houston-Louisville contest, he praised the possible field in New Orleans.

"I don't know who we will be playing in New Orleans, but when you get that far all four teams are going to be very good," said Smith who will be taking his seventh Tar Heel team into the Final Four although the Heels have never won an NCAA Championship under him. "I thought we played our best basketball of the year in the Final Four last year. I hope we will do the same this season. Some years you are just absolutely thrilled to make the Final Four. I think we felt that way in 1977. This year, I feel maybe we deserve to be there."

And then there were four.

Eastern Regionals make Reynolds rock

Sideline

William Terry Kelley Sports Editor

Insights

Not since the days of David Thompson and Tommy Burleson has Reynolds Coliseum seen so much hype and pomp for a weekend of basketball.

Program peddlers and souvenir sellers started the fanfare while people with extra tickets stood in the wings ready to make a buck or loose a buck depending on the demand for tickets.

The major difference was that instead of being lined with the traditional red, Reynolds Coliseum was laced with the blue of North Carolina. And in the end it was the Tar Heels who reigned supreme and stepped out of Raleigh with the East Regional Championship that was held at Reynolds Coliseum this weekend.

Bumper stickers claiming "NCAAAction" could be seen around and about. Indeed the NCAA was a prominent sight on State's campus this weekend for on Thursday and Saturday it was the women who held their first East Regional meeting at the same site. Cheyney State came out on top in that one. The Wolves knocked off State and Kansas State to take that title. The Heels bounced Alabama and Villanova for their title. Memphis State in the men's and Old Dominion in the women's Regionals were the other participants.

Dignitaries of all sorts were in the multitude from all parts of the South. Gov. Hunt exchanged his Wolfpack jacket for a powder blue blazer this time and none other than Joab Thomas returned to Raleigh to see his Tide take on the Heels.

Sports Illustrated and The Sporting News were well represented as well as the likes of the Washington Post, the New York Times and CBS Sports. Gary Bender and Billy Packer travelled between Raleigh and Birmingham to broadcast the events nationally and the eye of CBS surrounded the Coliseum.

The network people worked several days to work on ancient but still barely adequate Reynolds to upgrade the lighting and create a picturesque broadcast for the viewers. The halogen lights installed temporarily by the network reflected a daylight brightness off the NCAA seals pasted to Reynolds' floor.

Certainly the Tar Heels were the closest team to the sight and had the largest following at the games. North Carolina blue lined all sides and made Wolfpack fans cringe at the thought of Wolfpack country looking like Carmichael Auditorium.

From half way across campus Reynolds could be heard erupting in a Mount St. Helens type explosion. If for just a few hours only 12,400 people packed the Coliseum for one purpose — to aid their teams bid for the Final Four.

Pep bands and cheerleaders in their normal capacities added to the fantasia that makes college basketball the sport it is. On the alternating nights the die-hard fans of women's basketball turned out in their usual but unfortunate small numbers to watch a fast-paced game for a change.

A joyous moment occurs for North Carolina's nationally top-ranked Tar Heels, who realize New Orleans is just seconds away. In the waning moments of Sunday's Eastern Regionals Championship in Reynolds Coliseum, All-America James Worthy, the Most Outstanding Player of the tournament, and Matt Doherty show blissful expressions as they watch the Tar Heel reserves ice a 70-60 victory over Villanova. Worthy scored 14 points and Doherty added 13 to propel North Carolina into the Final Four event for the seventh time under Coach Dean Smith. However, North Carolina has never won the national title under Smith.

Reynolds rocked and rocked and rocked. For four days the home of the Wolfpack became the center of attention in the East for college basketball, both men's and women's — an experiment by the NCAA. Although the Wolfpack wasn't there and most of the fans were imported, Raleigh was once again the mecca of college basketball as Packer has alluded to several times in his career. Then, with the same flurry that it started, it all ended and attention shifted to New Orleans and Norfolk, the site of the men's and women's championships, respectively.

During the weekend of college roundball, spring slipped in the backdoor officially. With spring comes the leisure-time sports of the outdoors. Those times when one kicks back with a drink and a bag of peanuts for a look at a lacrosse game or a tennis match and of course the beginning of the greatest sport season of all — baseball.

For college basketball, it's on to New Orleans and so ends the season for the sport in this area. Although the Wolfpack women's team ended the final round of basketball for the Wolfpack Saturday night, Wolfpack fans were fortunate to have two more days of games within a stone's throw.

But for now. Buy me some peanuts and crackerjacks.

Wolves romp Cats for Eastern crown

by Devin Steele
Assistant Sports Editor

For the first time ever, Cheyney State advanced to the final four round of the national tournament by recording a convincing 93-71 victory over Kansas State in the finals of the women's Eastern Regional Saturday night in Reynolds Coliseum.

The Wolves after defeating State 75-61 Thursday night will play Sunday's Maryland-Drake winner Friday in Norfolk, Va.

"I would just like to thank God for this team," said Cheyney State head coach Vivian Stringer, whose team went to 26-2. "To have made it as far as they have speaks of the character, determination and faith they have."

All-Tournament team selection Yolanda Laney and most outstanding player Val Walker scored 26 and 24 points, respectively, to lead Cheyney State, a non-scholarship team from outside Philadelphia. The Wolves have won 21 straight games since losing back-to-back games to Old Dominion and Rutgers.

Other All-Tournament selections were Cheyney State's Rosetta Guilford, Walker, Kansas State's Priscilla Gary and State's Ginger Rouse.

"Val Walker has made a dream come true for us," said Stringer of her 6-1 forward, who is one of the three finalists in the voting for the coveted Wade Trophy. "She has led this team for four years by setting and reaching her personal goals."

"First, she wanted to be a Kodak All-America, and she did. She wanted to have a high academic average, and she does. Then, she wanted to compete on the international level, and she did. Now, she wants to play on a national championship team. She is the caliber player we need to lead us to that title. She deserves the Wade Trophy."

Walker was an intimidating force on both ends of the court. In addition to her scoring output, she brought down nine rebounds, parceled a trio of assists and blocked four shots.

But for now. Buy me some peanuts and crackerjacks.

The game was a runaway from the start, for Cheyney State as Walker tallied nine of her team's first 19 points to race the score to 19-12 in the first eight minutes.

The Wildcats began defending with a zone, but reverted to a man-to-man. The strategy backfired, though, as Cheyney took its power inside to the likes of Sharon Taylor and Guilford, who stretched the margin realistically out of reach by the half.

"We love to see the man-to-man. I don't know why they went to that defense," Stringer said. "Perhaps because we have people who can knock it in from outside."

Taylor and Guilford contributed six apiece in the final seven minutes of first-half action to balloon the spread to 45-32 by intermission. Gary, who finished with 22, swished eight straight points late in that opening period to keep Kansas State in the thick of the battle.

In the first four minutes of the next half, the Wolves continued its dominance as they scored 11 points to the Wildcats' two to make it 56-34.

Laney came on strong during one stretch, dumping in seven straight points to give Cheyney State its biggest advantage of 74-50 with 9:52 to go.

From there, the Cats squeezed no closer than 18 points.

"I'm disappointed that we didn't play as well as we did Thursday night (in an upset of No. 3 Old Dominion)," said Kansas head coach Lynn Hickey whose team ended its season 26-5. "But we have no excuses. We were just beat on the floor."

Cheyney hit at a 54.5 percent from the field to Kansas State's 45 percent. The Wolves also won the battle of the boards holding a 40-27 advantage.

Guilford finished with 18 points, and Debra Walker added 14 for Cheyney State.

Angie Bonner went seven of nine from the floor and eight of 14 from the line for 22 points for Kansas State. Barbara Gilmore and Tamie Romstadt had 12 and 11, respectively.

Stickmen bow

by Devin Steele

State's nationally ninth-ranked lacrosse team suffered its second tough-luck loss in as many weekends as 12th-ranked Washington & Lee cracked a third-quarter 9-9 deadlock and went on to post a 13-10 victory in Lexington, Va. Saturday.

"The kids played well," State head coach Larry Gross said. "The biggest key seemed to be the fact Washington & Lee outlasted us in the middle quarters. Just like the Maryland game, it was close after three and they won it in the last quarter. It now puts more pressure on us to beat Virginia (this Saturday) and perhaps Carolina at the end of the year to get a playoff bid."

The Wolfpack, currently 2-2, trailed 5-3 at halftime and fell behind 7-3 early in the third quarter. The Pack attack exploded in that period for six points to knot the count, 9-9, heading into the decisive fourth quarter.

Kevin Sullivan led State with three goals, while Bill Tierney and Scott Nelson added two each. Frosh Tim Nelson dished out three assists.

"Tim and Scott Nelson are doing well on the attack," Gross said. "We still haven't decided who to use in the other attack slot between John Poggio and Bob Geotteman."

The Generals upped their mark to 3-1.

Wojkovich, Baird cap 10th-inning rally as Wolfpack 9 knocks off Tar Heels

by Devin Steele
Assistant Sports Editor

Ray Wojkovich singled to break a 2-2 tie and Chris Baird followed with a two-run single in the top of the 10th inning as State's baseball team captured the first State-North Carolina battle of the year, a 5-2 victory at the Tar Heels' Boshamer Stadium Saturday.

The Wolfpack's Doug Davis knocked in Tracy Black in the ninth inning to produce a 2-2 standoff and force extra innings.

In the 10th, Wojkovich singled in Michael Sprouse to put the Wolfpack up, 3-2, then Baird singled to drive in two more runs.

The ACC win was State's first of the season. It has suffered losses to Virginia and Clemson.

Hepburn captures audience's attention

Entertainment Briefs

by Karl Samson
Entertainment Writer

Katharine Hepburn began her Broadway acting career on November 12, 1928. One week and 53 years later The West Side Waltz, a play by Ernest Thompson, opened at the Barrymore Theatre in New York City. At age 74, Hepburn still managed to steal the show just as she has done for her entire stage and film career.

For Hepburn it is easy to become the focal point of any scene. Her indomitable spirit and unflagging energy inject life into even the poorest of scripts. Throughout her career she has fought with critics over her right to play characters in her own unique style. The rebellious lady of stage and screen has, however, always relished a good battle.

Her peculiar facial features — not the accepted Hollywood beauty queen — and rough voice along with her firm stance on women's rights made her a Hollywood misfit. However, when the public received its first taste of this strong-willed woman, it was the beginning of a love affair that has lasted for over 50 years.

With the release of her third film, Morning Glory, Hepburn became one of the few women to receive an Academy Award on her first nomination. Since then she has been nominated ten times for the Best Actress award and received it twice.

In Morning Glory, her intuitive performance stemmed from the close parallels between her own life and the film.

The Hepburn brashness which is inherent in any of her performances grated on the critics and studio heads alike. That same strong will in time allowed her to choose what films and plays she would perform in and who would act with her or direct her.

In her early years, her style may not have fit the characters she was portraying, but later she was able to fit the characters to her own style.

Through this control over her own career, Hepburn was able to give the performances which have endeared her to the hearts of millions; Rose Sayer in The African Queen, Amanda Bonner in Adam's Rib, Tracy Lord in The Philadelphia Story and Eleanor of Aquitaine in The Lion in Winter, among many others.

It is when she finds an actor, director or writer who is able to accentuate her performance that Hepburn seems most at ease in her characters. Thus her films with Spencer Tracy and director George Cukor are considered her finest works.

Ernest Thompson, who scripted both On Golden Pond and The West Side Waltz, seems to be a person with whom Hepburn feels comfortable.

Both On Golden Pond and The West Side Waltz address similar themes, that of the elderly interacting with young people. Thompson's attitudes toward these meetings of different generations are very positive. Instead of pointing out the irreconcilable differences between young and old, Thompson highlights the limitless knowledge that can be gained by teenager and octogenarian alike through mutual respect.

It is this upbeat and understanding treatment of the two generations that seems to draw Hepburn to Thompson's scripts. On both stage and screen Hepburn embodies the spirit of youth and the wisdom of maturity trapped within an aging body. Through constant interaction with healthy young people she obviously receives a wealth of vitality.

In The West Side Waltz, Hepburn portrays an older woman living alone in a slowly decaying apartment building. Within this building, Margaret Mary Elderdice (Hepburn) maintains her active lifestyle much as Hepburn's active mind continues as it always has in spite of being afflicted with Parkinson's disease.

With each of the six scene changes Hepburn's physical appearance ages through the use of canes, a walker and finally a wheel chair. However, her mental faculties and sense of individuality never falter. It is her strong self-confidence that keeps her from reaching for emotional crutches.

Margaret Mary's strengths are contrasted by the weakness of Cara Varnum portrayed by Broadway Veteran Dorothy Loudon. Loudon's performance along with those of David Margulies and Regina Baff is merely a caricature in this play which is little more than a comic soap opera.

Varnum is a woman who has never lived alone. Thus she adores and idolizes Elderdice who can be happy living alone. It hurts Varnum deeply when Elderdice takes in a young roommate, an aspiring actress whose husband has left her for another man. What Varnum is unable to see is that Elderdice needs the companionship of someone full of life not someone wallowing in their old age.

The West Side Waltz is not a great play. It suffers from character stereotyping. Yet these easily identifiable characters are what make the play accessible. Although the play is theatrical fluff, it gains immensely from Hepburn's touch and vivacious performance.

The characters are not very well-developed and seem shallow, but the script contains both hilarious and poignant moments. Gazing into Hepburn's twinkling blue eyes as the tears flow down her cheeks leaves one with the knowledge that this actress has given acting her all.

With the play now touring three cities, one memorable line may have to be changed. If not, it stands to lose its impact.

When asked if she feels that the theatre is dead, Hepburn replies, "It wasn't the last time I went, but neither was Ethel Barrymore." These words, spoken from the stage of the Ethel Barrymore Theatre hold added poignancy and humor that will be lost on any other stage.

Loudon summed up the feelings of the audience with a line directed to Hepburn. "I've always liked you. You have gusto and life, you know."

It is this gusto and life that makes The West Side Waltz such a pleasure to experience.

Tony Bennett, an internationally known singer, will stage a benefit concert March 26, at Raleigh Memorial Auditorium for ArtsPloasure, the capital city's arts festival.

The Raleigh Little Theatre will hold auditions for the musical, Gypsy, on Mar. 22 and 29 at 7:30 p.m. The musical comedy saga derived from the best selling memoirs of show business personality Gypsy Rose Lee will require a large cast. Those wishing to audition should be prepared to sing a song, preferably from Gypsy. For information, call 821-4579.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the Academy Foundation and the Bell System take pleasure in announcing the ninth annual student film awards competition open to all State student filmmakers. Win a trip to Hollywood plus a cash grant. For more information contact Paul Nagel, at 305-284-2265.

Patrick Hamilton's thriller, Angel Street will play at the Raleigh Little Theatre Friday through Sunday, March 23-27, 31, April 3, at 8 p.m.; and March 28 and April 4 at 3 p.m. For reservations, call 821-311 between noon and 6 p.m.

In Sidney Lumet's adaptation of Eugene O'Neill's play, Katherine Hepburn gives one of her finest and most difficult performances. As Mary Tyrone, an anguished drug-addict mother, she is intensely tragic. Ralph Richardson and Jason Robards also contributed their talents to this unusual film. It is unique in that the film recorded the play in its entirety and in sequence.

Morrison's music receives high ratings

by Beverly Elm
Entertainment Writer

Once again, Van Morrison continues his successes and endeavors in the area of music. Morrison's latest release, Beautiful Vision is destined for some amount of success as it combines his own passion for the English landscape as well as a certain amount of spiritual sensitivity.

Morrison's list of musical endeavors is incredibly long and impressive. His first attempts at fame and success in the musical industry started 16 years ago with the formation of an Irish group — Them. As a lead singer for Them, he obtained success in the musical industry while the group recorded such hits as "Don't Stop Now," "Here Comes The Night" and the ever-famous "Gloria." The latter has been remade by such artists as the Shadows of Knight and Patti Smith.

Them disbanded shortly after an American tour in 1965 upon their return to England. After this, Morrison returned to the United States and began his solo career with the help of producer Bert Berns on Berns' own Band Records label.

The first U.S. top five hit for Morrison was "Brown Eyed Girl." In 1968, he signed with Warner Brother's Records and after this, he continued releasing records at the rate of about one album per year.

Following the release of St. Dominic's Preview in 1972 and Hard Nose The Highway in 1973, Morrison had become a very powerful influence in the musical industry. He experimented with many musical styles and eventually his influence was noticed in the work of other artists.

After the release of Hard Nose The Highway, he organized the Caledonia Soul Orchestra which was used in recording the live double album, It's Too Late To Stop Now.

Following these excursions, Morrison slowed the pace down somewhat by performing in smaller night clubs. It was almost three years before another Van Morrison album was released — Veedon Fleece.

Three years after the release of Veedon Fleece, he released Period of Transition in 1977. The musical endeavors after this included the release of from the heart. The first side of Beautiful Vision contains an array of contemporary songs. The listener is first exposed to "Celtic Ray" which is a slow contemporary song with good potential for success on the pop charts.

The songs following "Celtic Ray" are of the same classification — contemporary. However, all of the songs on the first side are different in mood and theme.

The second side is a little disappointing in the beginning with the first two songs "Cleaning Windows" and "Vanlose Stairway." The listener is soon overpowered though, by "Aryan Mist," "Across The Bridge," and "Scandinavia."

This LP has potential with songs like "Celtic Ray," "Dweller On The Mist," and "Across The Bridge." Morrison has put many of his own feelings and ideas into the songs on Beautiful Vision as he wrote each song on the album.

In essence, the album is a reflection of Morrison and his love for the English landscape. Beautiful Vision has definite potential among the contemporary listening audience and should do quite well.

In all, Van Morrison is still in high ratings after a long career in the music industry.

Wavelength, Into The Music, and Common One.

Finally, in 1981, Morrison recorded Beautiful Vision. His longevity in the musical industry is attributed to his changing views and feelings. In essence, he will continue to record and release albums as long as this process of change continues.

Beautiful Vision is a unique combination of songs

1982 PREREGISTRATION FALL AND SUMMER

The official preregistration period for 1982 summer sessions and the fall semester begins March 29 and extends through April 9. See the green bulletin for more details.

Dates to Remember

March 26 - Schedule of courses available at D.H. Hill Library and University Student Center.

March 29 - Departmental advising begins.

April 5-9 - Preregistration schedule request forms to be turned in between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. in the upper west concourse of Reynolds Coliseum. Students are encouraged to process their summer school preregistration schedule forms at this time, but are reminded to mark the appropriate session on the forms.

FINAL EXAMINATIONS FOR GRADUATE STUDENTS: ALL GRADES FOR GRADUATING STUDENTS MUST BE REPORTED ON THE GRADUATION GRADE ROLLS TO THE DEPARTMENT OF REGISTRATION AND RECORDS, 100 HARRIS HALL, BY 12:00 NOON, TUESDAY, MAY 11, 1982. (Exception: Examinations for graduating students scheduled for May 10 and 11 should be scheduled on an earlier date convenient to the instructor and student so that the grades may be reported by 12:00 noon Tuesday, May 11, 1982.)

2. Examinations will be held only between the hours indicated. Exceptions must be approved by the Dean of the School concerned.

3. Courses having both recitation and laboratory hours should use the class hours for determining when the examinations will be given.

4. In the schedule, the term "Monday" applies to classes having their first meeting of the week on Monday, Wednesday or Friday; the term "Tuesday" applies to classes having their first meeting of the week on Tuesday, Thursday or Saturday (i.e., a class holding its first meeting of the week on Wednesday at 10 o'clock will take the examination as a Monday 10 o'clock class provided no student in the group has a regular class on Monday at that hour. If so, the examination will be an "arranged" examination).

5. Except for research, seminar, tutorial or studio courses, final examinations should be given in all courses. Exemptions may be granted by the faculty member responsible for a particular course or section provided prior approval is obtained from the department head. Exemptions may be applied to whole courses, sections, groups of students or individual students provided that these exemptions are applied equitably to the students in a particular course or section and comparable procedures are applied to all sections of multiple-sectioned courses.

6. Examinations for evening classes may be held at the regular class meeting time during the examination period or may be given at one of the arranged times.

7. Students are not required to take three consecutively-scheduled final examinations within a 24-hour period. If students find that they have three consecutively scheduled exams, they should report to the Department of Registration and Records before the exams are to be given, to have their schedule verified and to obtain a form approving their request to change the date of one of the examinations. They will take the form to one of their instructors and arrange for a new examination date. The instructor will enter the new date on the form and sign it. Either the instructor or the student must return the form to the Department of Registration and Records, 100 Harris Hall.

Note: Instructors giving examinations on Saturday, May 8, must make prior arrangements with the department that controls the room in which the examination is scheduled in order that the room may be open on that day.

REGULATIONS

1. No examinations may be given before May 3.

MAKE A WORLD OF DIFFERENCE

There's an endless frontier of need out there, stretching from the Sahara to the Andes to the Atolls of the South Pacific. In 20 years, 80,000 Peace Corps volunteers have traveled to all of them, to work with people in over 60 countries. They've done everything from helping villagers dig wells and build houses, to teaching them languages and skilled trades, to giving advice on farming and health care. Join a phenomenal tradition. The difference is a better world, and a better you.
