IRC Vice President Bill Peery makes a point at last night's open meeting where about 40 students expressed concerns about the upcoming mandatory meal plan and raised questions to Charles Oglesby, director of Residence Life.

IRC slights frosh meal plan but will provide assistance

by Mike Mahan
News Editor

Voting members of the Inter-Residence Council, the governing body and spokesman for dormitories, voted last night to create a transition committee to help alleviate problems that may develop when several west campus dormitories become freshman dormitories in the 1982 meal plan.

About 40 students attended the public meeting last night, held in the Student Senate chambers. Charles Oglesby, director of Residence Life, answered questions from residents and IRC members.

"The purpose of the meeting was that in the past certain high-level decisions have been made just like that," Bill Peery, vice president of IRC, said after the meeting. "What we're trying to do with the help of Mr. Oglesby, is to be more of a liaison between residents and Residence Life."

Although IRC is against the mandatory meal plan, the transition committee will deal with implementing the program only — trying to provide input into the transition process.

Anyone living on campus can be a member by contacting the Student Government office.

Among the concerns presented to Oglesby, which will be looked into by the committee, were:

•The many residence hall parking places located at west campus. Residence parking stickers are not available to freshmen.

•The number of upperclass resident advisers in Metcalf, the model for the new freshman dormitories. The number of upperclass resident advisers is expected to decrease dramatically when the plan is instituted. Students at the meeting expressed concern as to what will happen to the present program at Metcalf once the plan is instituted.

•What degree of cooking inside dormitories will be allowed. Students at the meeting suggested refrigerators and popcorn poppers be allowed in the dormitory rooms.

•Dormitory unity and pride. Several students expressed concern about dormitory unity and pride, afraid it would decrease when the meal plan is put into effect.

•The distance freshman Design School students would have to travel at night in order to get across campus.

In other action, IRC tabled a motion made by Mike Adderton, a Bragaw representative for IRC, to publicly condemn the meal plan, but "do everything in our power to make it work."

Ten IRC members voted to table the motion. Four voted not to table the motion. Two abstained.

The motion will be voted on at the next IRC meeting, Sept. 24. That meeting is also open to the public, and will be held in the Brown Room, fourth floor Student Center.

Dwayne McCraw, a sophomore and resident of Lee Dormitory.

Some students felt they would miss out on the lottery so the freshmen can be housed in the allotted dorms.

"I don't think it is fair for the administration to come up with a plan that will result in upperclassmen losing their rooms," Patt Pearsall, a junior and resident of Bowen Dormitory, said.

Several resident advisers and students suggested alternative proposals to the dining hall plans, but when contacted after the meeting resident advisers refused to give their names for fear of losing their jobs. The proposals were:

•Give freshmen priority but do not make it mandatory.

•Find out how many freshmen and upperclassmen would be interested in eating on the meal plan.

•Designate specific floors as freshman floors instead of the entire dormitory.

"The plan should be available to anyone who wishes to be on the meal plan; it should be anyone's alternative, because it is wrong to segregate the

Homecoming events begin soon

by Karen Freitas
Staff Writer

Saturday at 1 p.m., on Oct. 3, the Wolfpack will be challenging the University of Virginia in State's annual homecoming game.

Homecoming activities are still in the making. The following is a list of activities planned:

•The homecoming parade line-up will start Saturday, Oct. 3, at 9 a.m., with the parade beginning at 9:30 a.m.

The parade route will form in Riddick Lot and proceed down Pullen Road, and continue through Dan Allen and Cates Avenue. It will conclude at the parking deck.

The musical aspect of the parade will consist of the State, Shaw University and St. Augustine's College bands. There will also be three high school bands participating.

To form variety, there will be a number of baton twirlers, various queens and clowns.

Also in the line-up will be Raleigh Mayor Smedes York. State's athletic coaching staff will also be involved with the parade, along with the 1981-82 basketball team.

"It is going to be the best parade ever," said Kathy Jeffries, member of the parade committee.

•The Union Activities Board, Student Government, Inter-Residence Council and the NCSU Alumni Association will be sponsoring this year's homecoming ball.

It will be held at the Jane S. McKimmon Center, Oct. 3, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Tickets are now being sold at the Stewart Theatre box office for $5.50. They will also be available at the door for $7.50.

The semi-formal dance will be featuring "Leon Jordan and the Continentals" for the entertainment.

Current music and pop tunes will be played by "Sound Approach" in between sets.

The homecoming committee is requesting $1,500 from the Student Senate finance committee in order to pay for the band and disco.

Also being featured will be the Homecoming Queen and her court.

"I feel like last year's dance was a success, and we had more alumni which was good," said Michael Covington, Student Center president.

"We hope that more alumni will participate this year, and at all cost, we want more students.

"I feel that the homecoming dance has something to offer for every student."

•A homecoming pep rally is being planned, but details are unavailable at this time.

"The cheerleaders ask that students still come out in their red and white to support the team," said Gary McKoy, a State cheerleader. "The more support the team has, the better they play. And they play even better when the fans are up on their feet in a completely filled stadium."

"We are also coming up with some new chants, and the word is being spread around. So get fired up."

UNC institutions shall recruit undergrads; board shall provide aid

by Sam Hays
Staff Writer

Editor's Note: This is the fourth article in a series devoted to the consent decree entered in the lawsuit between the state of North Carolina and the federal government over the extent of racial discrimination in the University of North Carolina system. A news analysis of the consent decree will follow this series.

The president of the University of North Carolina shall monitor each institution in the UNC system for its compliance with the racial desegregation efforts required by the consent decree.

The requirements of the consent decree relate to commitments of the board of governors of the UNC system "to preserve, alter, modernize and improve a great educational institution," as set forth in the 34-page decree filed July 17, 1981.

The consent decree states: "This decree is based upon a recognition by the University and the Government that each is committed to providing black North Carolinians an equal opportunity for higher education."

The decree states it is based upon a recognition "that the University has engaged in extensive voluntary affirmative action efforts. Since 1972, the enrollment of black students in predominantly white institutions increased from 3.1 percent of their total enrollment to 7.4 percent. The proportion of total university black enrollment located in the predominantly white institutions more than doubled, increasing from 16.3 percent in 1972 to 34.3 percent in 1980. In this same period, the enrollment of white students in the predominantly black institutions increased from 5 percent of their total enrollment to 11.2 percent."

The compliance standard required on the part of the board of governors "shall be measured solely by a standard of good faith efforts to achieve and implement the goals and commitments of this Decree."

Minority presence enrollment is defined in the decree as

"white student enrollment in predominantly black institutions and black student enrollment in predominantly white institutions." The undergraduate recruitment of minority presence students shall be conducted by each UNC institution, according to the decree.

The decree is specific in that "none of the activities or programs described in this Decree requires any constituent institution to modify its admission policies or its policies concerning academic eligibility for retention of students."

The specific requirements for undergraduate recruitment in the decree are:

•Each predominantly black institution shall make an effort to employ one or more admissions officers who are white. Each predominantly white institution shall make an effort to employ one or more admissions officers who are black.

•Each UNC institution shall continue to make visits to high schools. Wherever practicable the institution visitor shall be a minority staff or faculty member.

•The UNC institutions shall visit a number of high schools at least equal to the number visited in 1980-81, which was 4,282.

•Each predominantly white institution having a budgeted enrollment of 4,000 or more regular-session, Full Time Equivalent students shall visit at least 100 of the public senior high schools having more than 15 percent black enrollment.

•The office of the president of the university shall provide each predominantly white institution each fall with a complete list of all N.C. students enrolled in high school, identified by race, who took the Scholastic Aptitude Test, and who agreed to have their names released.

•Each institution shall elicit from its enrolled minority presence students and alumni the names of prospective applicants to the institution.

•Each institution shall make annual visits to each two-year college or institute in the county in which it is located and in adjoining counties. Each public community college shall be visited annually by the nearest predominantly white institution and by at least one predominantly black institution.

The office of the president shall provide each predominantly white institution with the Talent Roster of outstanding minority community college graduates to assist in identifying prospective minority students.

The board of governors shall continue to help produce and distribute the publications of the Joint Committee on College Transfer Students, with the intent of easing the transfer problems of prospective UNC students.

•All minority presence students admitted to a UNC institution shall be contacted by mail, telephone or personal visit to encourage their enrollment in the institution.

•Each predominantly white institution shall invite a number of prospective minority students from high schools and two-year institutions to visit the institution.

The recruitment visits to encourage the enrollment of black students in UNC institutions at Chapel Hill, Raleigh and Greensboro shall be arranged by the deans of the graduate schools in each institution. These visits shall be to each predominantly black institution and to at least three of the predominantly black private colleges in the state.

The deans of the schools of medicine, dentistry and public health shall annually send representatives to each predominantly black institution and to at least three predominantly black private schools.

Each other UNC institution that offers graduate or first professional-degree programs shall send informational publications to other schools in the UNC system with a majority undergraduate enrollment different in racial composition from its own.

The board of governors is committed to provide special student financial aid programs in support of its efforts to increase minority presence enrollments and the participation of black students in graduate and first-professional schools. The board shall:

—Continue to fund $720,000 or more per year for the general minority presence grant program to aid in recruiting financially needy N.C. minority students in UNC predominantly white and predominantly black institutions.

—Continue to fund $280,000 or more per year for the doctoral study, law and veterinary medicine minority presence grant program. This program will help financially needy full-time graduate black students by granting up to $4,000 for the academic year, and $500 for the summer session.

—Give priority to students in fields in which black participation has been historically low, such as engineering and the physical sciences.

—Continue to fund, at the current level or higher, the board of governors medical scholars program in which each scholarship pays for full tuition and fees, plus $4,000 per year for sixty minority and disadvantaged full-time N.C. students.

—Continue to fund at the current level or higher the

Finance committee offers students money

by Gina Blackwood
Staff Writer

There is roughly $47,000 available to student organizations this semester, according to Sandi Long, student body treasurer.

"We just want students to know that this money is available," she said. "Each student at the University pays $2.65 to Student Government in the form of tuition and fees. Therefore it belongs to the students and we would like for them to come forth and ask for it."

Examples of what these funds have been appropriated for in the past are:

- Partial funding of trips
- Money for a special speaker
- Partial funding for Zoo Day
- Partial funding for the homecoming dance
- Funding for professional trips abroad.

"We do not usually pay full expenses for any student group, because we expect them to get some funding on their own," Long said. "They can get other funding through the Alumni Association, school councils, dues, fund raisers and individuals may pay small parts."

The amount of money given to each association is usually determined by the number of students it will benefit, Long said.

All groups, no matter how small, are urged to submit bills to the Senate. This should be done five to six weeks prior to the time the money is needed to allow processing.

Groups that are interested should pick up a Senate Finance Package in the Student Government office. It will explain the procedures to request funds.

"I have instituted a lot of new procedures that should make it easier for organizations to ask for money," Long said.

After the Student Finance Package is picked up the organization will need to write a bill and itemize its expenses. Next the organization will have to get a senator, preferably from its school if it is academically oriented, to sponsor the bill.

The organization's bill must be submitted to the Student Government secretary no later than 10 a.m. on the Monday before the next Senate meeting.

Before the bill goes to the Senate floor it must go through the finance committee. This committee is composed of 10 senators and the student body treasurer who serves as chairman.

At the finance committee meeting a speaker representing the student organization will present the bill and answer any questions that may arise.

Most of the bills are amended to a lower amount of money before they are passed on to the Senate floor. After these amendments are made the bill is sent before the Senate.

When the bill comes before the Senate a representative from the group gives a speech and answers questions. Following this is a debate within the Senate. The senators then cast their votes for or against the bill.

"I would like to see a large number of groups ask for this money," Long said. "Since these are student fees they should reach as many students as possible."

Coming before the finance committee Sept. 20 is a bill asking for $1,500 to help fund the homecoming dance. The Grad Student Association will be asking for $2,500 for travel expenses for this semester.

There is an emergency legislation bill from the University Horse Judging Team for the sum of $712.50. This money will be used to pay for hotel accommodations at a horse judging contest.

The Finance Committee meets every other Sunday at 7 p.m. in the Student Center board room. Time and location sometime vary.

How to rip off students, part two

The plan is to turn five dormitories, located on west and central campus, into primarily freshman dormitories. Only the presence of resident and upperclassman advisers will prevent these dormitories

Once again the superhuman administrators think they can defy history.

British student exchanges ideas and information during American visit

by Liz Blum
Features Writer

The last thing one expects to hear in a summer resort area like Nagshead, N.C., is a British accent. But when you ordered a brew from the bar at the Foothill Palace, a local arcade, you would have been served with perfect English courtesy and a British clip in reply.

Most Americans are extremely curious about "different people" and the guy was constantly being questioned with "Why are you here?" "What's it like in England?" and "Do you know the Queen?"

Kevin Bean, part-time bartender and full-time student at Leeds University, always answered as politely as possible even if his answers sounded a trifle pat. BUNAC (British Universities North American Club) brought him and numerous other British students to the United States for an extended "holiday."

British student exchange

BUNAC is a form of student exchange that allows British students to work in America for a three-month interim between school sessions. About one half become summer camp counselors and the others — "the lucky ones," according to Kevin — obtain work permits. To obtain work permits the student either must have a job waiting for him or her or have relatives in the States. Kevin falls into the latter category.

He arrived at John F. Kennedy airport in New York City near the end of June. Everyone in the BUNAC group was required to stay at the YMCA for orientation classes. Group members were given various kinds of information, ranging from what to do in an emergency to avoiding certain areas, i.e., areas of high unemployment.

Most left for jobs or summer camps after two days. Kevin and two Scotsmen, Archie and Ian (whose nickname is "Chug") decided to stay for a few days to see the sights.

At first, they went the typical tourist route: going to the Empire State Building, the World Trade Center and the United Nations building. Then they hit the bars and got to know New York on its own level. "Irish bars were the best," he said. "They gave us free drinks and one offered me a job."

And what would a trip to New York be without getting propositioned? At Times Square, all three were simultaneously solicited via a brochure being handed out by representatives of a local brothel. Kevin summed it up as, "New York is a nice place to visit but I wouldn't want to live there."

After four days and an enormous amount of money, Kevin, Archie and Chug decided to head south. After almost deciding to hitch, four other BUNAC students offered them a share in a rented car as far as Petersburg, Va.

"Seven people and their luggage in a rented sedan was better than hitchhiking," Kevin said, "but not by much."

At a rest stop on the New Jersey Turnpike, Kevin ran into the word "restroom." He had asked a man where the toilets were and the man told him the restrooms were "that way." Kevin thought the man was talking about something else and replied, "Thank you but where are the toilets?"

Another first was having free refills on coffee and tea. This floored the trio when a waitress refilled their cups and didn't add it to the bill. Some things are taken for granted here.

The trio was dropped off at an interstate intersection outside Petersburg at 6 a.m. Kevin almost got run over crossing two four-lane highways to reach a truck stop. They asked around for a good resort area and were told to go to Nagshead, N.C. Our, by now, exhausted threesome caught a bus to Nagshead via Richmond and slept most of the trip.

The bus pulled into Miller's Drugstore, Nagshead's main bus stop, and let off three grubby and tired men. But at the sight of the sand and the sea, Kevin fell in love with the beach and the rest of the summer was decided: working in Nagshead.

Kevin said his holiday was made up of "sleeping, working, getting drunk and ... that's about it."

Personally he came to the States for vacation purposes and to visit his relatives. After graduation at the end of this school term, he plans on applying his double major of physics and computer science at a job with IBM United Kingdom Ltd. (limited is equivalent to the American incorporated.)

Once he begins his job, a spare week, much less three months, would be difficult to come by for a vacation. So he felt he should take advantage of the situation when it presented itself.

Besides the United States, Kevin has travelled in Wales, France, Spain, Belgium, Holland, West Germany, Scotland and Romania. The most valuable asset of his visit has been "learning the slang. 'Really' and 'Have a nice day' — no, don't put that down. The experience. Experience is the best benefit in the world."

As to his impression of Americans, he had already formed one at Leeds with the American students he had contact with. Kevin said they vary; the tourists and locals in Nagshead are two dissimilar groups. Clothing is the most distinct difference from Britain. The blue-and-green plaids and so-called golf slacks would be something he would wear to be considered outrageous at home.

Another outrageous thing we Americans do is ruin tea. Kevin was horrified at the way tea was made and then, of all things, iced!

The majority have been very friendly, especially the student age.

"And then there are these women journalists," he said, "who come up and ask you about America." The major difference is that American women, besides being more straightforward, "love me accent."

Strong political beliefs

Kevin also holds definite political views. He is strongly opposed to the Irish Republican Army, socialism, communism, terrorist groups and left-wingers. He is pro-nuclear, likes England's Prime Minister, Margaret Thatcher, and wholeheartedly approves of Reagan's stand on the air controllers' strike.

"Wish Thatcher would do that with the coal miners," he said.

Kevin describes himself as very conservative, very right-wingish. Leeds, he said, is full of liberals who keep sending money to the IRA, which he feels should be spent on Leeds' students.

Kevin Bean is a prime example of what work and study exchange programs can do to stimulate our own customs and ideas by experiencing those of different people.

And, by the way, he doesn't know the Queen.

Kevin Bean is a member of the British Universities North American Club, which brought him and other British students to America this past summer. After hitchhiking from New York City to Virginia, he and two other friends caught a bus to Nagshead, N.C., where he spent the rest of the summer bartending at an arcade.

Pirates bring act to State, hope to top performance

Sideline Insights

Terry Kelley

East Carolina will not have much trouble following up its own act.

The Pirates only have to score one point and hold the Wolfpack to under 56 points to beat their performance of last Saturday when State and ECU meet for the 12th time at Carter-Finley Stadium Saturday at 7 p.m. The Pirates lost to North Carolina 56-0 last week at Chapel Hill and will definitely be out to avoid a second embarrassment this week.

"If you were a player at East Carolina would you be fired up if you were going to be coming over to play State?" State head football coach Monte Kiffin said. "You can't go one bit on what happened to East Carolina last week. They are a much better football team than they showed at Chapel Hill. The thing we do know is that they will try to take out their frustrations against us and we'd better be ready."

"They're going to take North Carolina State week and it's going to make their season. They're going to sell their players on it and they should. And they're going to come over here and if they beat North Carolina State then people will forget about the Carolina game."

"That's what they're going to base the whole thing on. They've got pride. They've got a lot of good football players. It snowballed over at Carolina the other day. It can happen. It happens every week in some part of the country."

On the other hand State, which has eked out a pair of close wins in its first two weeks, has been piling up some statistics of its own which may be hard to follow.

While defeating Wake Forest 28-23 Saturday, State rolled up its second-straight week of total offense over 440 yards and at the same time has been able to gain over 370 yards a game rushing. The biggest reason for the massive rushing yardage has been the success of the Pack's I-backs, Joe McIntosh and Larmount Lawson, who have averaged 175.5 and 79.5 yards rushing per game.

State holds an 8-3 edge in the series against the 1-1 Pirates and will be trying to keep the Pirates from winning their first game against the Pack since a 28-23 win in 1977. State beat ECU in the final game of the season last year in 36-14 victory after being behind 14-10 at halftime.

State-East Carolina has become a heated intrastate rivalry and usually results in a high-scoring game. In the 11-game series the two teams have averaged 46 points a game.

Chances are this week's game could follow in the same pattern if State continues to show the powerful offense it has the past couple of weeks and if ECU returns to the form it maintained in a 42-6 housecleaning of Western Carolina. State's defense of course will also be a key factor on whether the game is high scoring.

The Pack defense, which was highly touted before the season, has not played up to its potential as of yet and although the Pack 'D' showed some improvement last week it will have to watch for the highly skilled quarterback of the Pirates, Carlton Nelson.

The Pack will have to be ready for Nelson as he is able to pass and run the ball in the Pirates' wishbone offense. Although Nelson is only seven of 16 in passing for 129 yards in two games, he makes ECU fans reminisce of former Pirate great Leander Green as he has rushed for 143 yards to lead the Pirates in total offense. The Pack secondary, which has given up 184.5 yards per game in passing, will have some adjustments to make for the wishbone.

"They're a lot better football team than they were a year ago," Kiffin said. "Carlton Nelson is the big difference in their football team; because he can throw the football he's a good option quarterback. Any wishbone team, if you've noticed over the years, if they get something going they can get the hot hand."

"Defensively we've been playing the pass since August 17th. That's all we've seen in pass, pass, pass. Our defensive backs, our cornerbacks line up about 35 yards deep. When we play them only five yards deep to stop the wishbone they're going to want to know what's going on. So it's just a big adjustment defensively from one extreme to the other as far as the pass position."

State will be showing the Pirates a new starting backfield this week when McIntosh will be called on to start his first game at I-back and senior Dwight Sullivan, whom Kiffin says is "a senior and deserves a start," will start at fullback. Kiffin points out that fullback John Peterson and Lawson are not being demoted and will both see plenty of action Saturday night.

"Peterson has really played well," Kiffin said. "Dwight is a senior and he's earned his way back up. But we're going to play Peterson and Sullivan both and Lawson and McIntosh, too."

"It's a promotion for McIntosh rather than a demotion for Lawson. Larmount played better last week than he did against Richmond. Joe kind of ignites our football team. I think the players realize he's got a lot of talent and they get kind of excited when he's in there."

The Pack may have to get some kind of ignition against the Pirates' wishbone if the defense does not stop Nelson's option. The Pack offense meanwhile will be looking for its third-straight week of 440 plus yards a game.

East Carolina will no doubt have little trouble in bettering last week's performance but if State's offense continues to improve and its defense does likewise, the Pirates could be in for another long afternoon.

State booters wallop Pfeiffer behind Ogu, face Tigers

by Devin Steele
Sports Writer

Chris Ogu seems to be back on track after State's 8-0 rout of Pfeiffer Wednesday in Misenheimer, which upped the Pack's record to 4-0, while dropping its host's to 1-2.

Sophomore Ogu, who seemed to have shooting problems in State's first three games, scored the Wolfpack's first two goals and accounted for three assists. Sophomore Prince Afejuku tallied two goals and handed out an assist.

"We really played great," said State coach Larry Gross, whose nationally 16th-ranked booters meet 5th-ranked Clemson in an early-season showdown on Lee Field Sunday at 2 p.m. "It was an excellent game on our part. I can't single out any one player. The ball moved all over the field. It was very, very beautiful as far as we're concerned."

State's dominance showed in virtually every statistical department, including 45 scoring opportunities, 15 of which were stopped by Pfeiffer goalkeeper Don Winkle. Pack keepers Chris Hutson and Brooks Holley split time in the goal, blocking one shot apiece of Pfeiffer's eight shots.

Ogu opened the scoring quickly on a penalty kick at 43:48, then on an Afejuku assist, connected again at 35:14. But greedy he wasn't. He assisted on State's next two goals by freshman Sam Okpodu at 17:02 and Jimmy Burman at 14:46. Gerry McKeon also assisted on the second tally.

The second half opened in the same manner when Afejuku made the count 5-0 at 35:15 on an assist from Burman. Less than a minute later sophomore Francis Moniedafe booted an unassisted goal.

A freshman pair scored the Pack's final point at 15:31. Terry Hughes got the goal, while Bakty Barber was credited with the assist.

—Larry Gross
State soccer coach

The highly billed showdown with Clemson contains all the ingredients for a close matchup: undefeated records and ACC premier players, along with the national rankings.

The Tigers are currently ranked first in the South, while the Wolfpack is the third-ranked southern team.

Gross, whose team's leading patrons next to the students are the area soccer players. "When we played Clemson two years ago we had between 5 and 6,000 on our home field, and it rained then."

Thus far in the season, Clemson has defeated Georgia State, USC, Spartanburg, Wake Forest and edged strong Appalachian, 2-1.

The Tigers return 10 starters from last year's 12-3-2 team that failed to make the NCAA playoffs for the first time in nine years.

Junior Nnamdi Nwokocho, from Onitsha, Nigeria, is Clemson's feature player. The 6-2 Nwokocho led the Clemson attack last season, scoring 21 goals to lead the ACC, and needs less than 10 more scores to set the all-time ACC record, held by his brother Chris.

"We're expecting Clemson to look to its two bread-and-butter players, Nwokocho and Mo Tinsly," said Gross, whose team bowed to the Tigers last season 3-1 at Clemson. "Last year they were very opportunistic in the goals. Nwokocho was open a lot. We hope to prevent that kind of thing from happening this season."

Midfielders Vincent Chika and Arthur Ebumam, a pair of All-ACC performers a year ago, also return to Clemson coach I.M. Ibrahim's team. Defensive duties will be taken on by three-year letterman Bobby Lue and Nigerian freshman Aduabare Otorobio. Also a three-year letterman, Dennis Nash will not participate due to a broken arm.

Sophomore Sean Burke, who set a Clemson record with 103 saves last season, returns in the goal. "Burke's 6-7. He's a big 'un," Gross said. "He punts tremendously. We don't expect many goals."

Ibrahim said his squad has been plagued with injuries to five starters and doesn't know if the team will be at full strength.

It'll definitely be a barn-burner, folks.

Spikers will rely on tradition in tourney

by Devin Steele
Sports Writer

State volleyball coach Pat Hielscher is hoping tradition will prevail in one instance and detain itself in another as her team contends in the first of this season's six tournaments — the George Washington Invitational — today and Saturday in Washington, D.C.

On the two occasions that State and George Washington met in their respective host tournaments, the visitor knocked off the host en route to capturing the event. The Wolfpack did it first by defeating George Washington in the finals of this same tournament last year, 15-1, 15-6. But George Washington turned the tide the following weekend by upsetting State 15-12, 15-11 in the NCSU Invitational. So if tradition prevails, the Pack will emerge as winner of the eight-team tournament.

But if State should cross courses with George Washington — which is highly possible — tradition may function against the Wolfpack's favor. In the five previous meetings between the two teams, the wins and losses have alternated. The Wolfpack triumphed in the last game between the two schools, by the counts of 15-5, 15-5 and 15-6, so George Washington's turn to win is due.

"I think George Washington is the team to beat mainly because it's their home court advantage," Hielscher said. "They'll be after us, though, because we're defending champions."

The tournament is composed of two pools. Pool A is made up of American University, Temple, George Washington and Virginia Commonwealth. Two ACC schools, Maryland and State, help comprise Pool B which also includes William & Mary and James Madison.

Although last season's tournament final was a blowout in State's favor, the Pack's performance was a rarity.

"We played our best match of the whole year last year in the finals," fourth-year coach Hielscher said. "We played a perfect match. It was the kind of match where everything we did was right. It was an unbelievable feeling on the court. Every ball we hit went down, every serve, every pass ... you don't have everything like that fall into place too often."

But Hielscher thinks their phenomenal showing had a negative effect on the team.

"It turned out to be a very frustrating match later in the season because it was such a rare match," Hielscher said. "It just happened to be that first tournament and the team learned what it felt like when a team plays like that. It probably frustrated the team later in the season because we didn't play that well anymore. I don't want to say it was a fluke but very rarely a team clicks like we did at George Washington."

Each team will play the other teams of its pool Friday and Saturday mornings to determine the seeds in the single-elimination portion of the tournament Saturday afternoon. State is slated to face William & Mary and Maryland today and James Madison tomorrow morning.

The Wolfpack, which carries a 1-0 record into the tourney after a close win over Appalachian State, appears to be physically prepared, other than a mild injury to Kelly Halligan.

"The team, I'm hoping at this point, is the healthiest they've been all season," Hielscher said. "Kelly had a back strain yesterday (Tuesday), and we weren't quite sure why. Sheryl (Santos) is rehabilitating her injury and I think will be able to play this weekend. Susan (Schafer) is feeling better and is ready to play. So, I'm expecting to use all 11 players."

State's serve reception appeared to be the underlying weakness against the Mountaineers, but extensive practice has hopefully corrected the frailty, according to Hielscher.

"We've been focusing on serve reception in practice," she said. "That was a piece of our game that gave us trouble at Appalachian. If you can't pass the serve you can never get into your offensive game plan."

Athlete of the Week

State tailback Joe McIntosh is this week's Technician Athlete of the Week. McIntosh led State to a 28-23 victory over Wake Forest last Saturday.

The 5-11, 181-pound freshman from Lexington racked up 220 yards rushing on 25 carries in only his second game as a collegian. McIntosh, who is averaging 175.5 yards rushing per game and is second in the ACC in that category, scored two touchdowns for the Pack against the Deacons.

McIntosh, last year's Associated Press High School Player-of-the-Year in the Carolinas, led his Lexington High School team to a second-place finish in the state at the AAA level.

A business-management major, McIntosh tallied the first 200-yard game for a State player since Ted Brown set a school rushing record of 251 yards against Penn State in 1977.

Men's, women's cross-country teams open slates

by Todd McGee
Sports Writer

This weekend marks the beginning of another cross-country season at State. The defending national champion women's team travels to Chapel Hill today to face North Carolina and the men go to Virginia to meet Virginia and North Carolina.

Coach Rollie Geiger said he "expects the women to win" against the Tar Heels, but isn't so sure about the men's chances.

The loss of co-captain John George to a knee injury will be a severe handicap.

Geiger must now find a fourth man in addition to the already-pressing need for a fifth man. He expects Jeff Hutchinson and Bobby Jones to be the two, but said he won't be surprised if another runner comes up and finishes in one of the two positions.

Though Geiger "would definitely like to win the meet," he admits that it is not a necessity for the team to be victorious. Since a national championship is decided in the last meet of the year, that is the meet the team is training for the entire season.

Wolfpack women netters open season with ECU

State will unveil its 1981-82 women's tennis team today at 12:30 p.m. on the Lee Courts against East Carolina. The match, which was originally scheduled to be played Wednesday, was postponed because the Pirate team encountered transportation problems.

The Wolfpack downed ECU last spring 7-2, but is not taking the Pirates lightly.

Head coach Chuck Fahrer said he expects a "tough match" from ECU as they should be a much-improved team.

Neither team knows what to expect from the other since this is the opening match of the season for both. Overall, the Wolfpack should have more depth than the Pirates and is favored to win.

Seeger can still crank out those tunes

by Sean Dail
Entertainment Writer

Anyone who has ever been thrilled at the excellence of Bob Seger's 1976 release, Live Bullet, would probably agree that Seger and his Silver Bullet Band would have a tough time surpassing it's quality with a second live album. Some critics consider Live Bullet one of the best live recordings ever put to vinyl, and they'll get no argument from this reviewer.

Collection of recent recordings

Nine Tonight, Seger's latest release, is a collection of recordings from his 1980 concerts at the Boston Garden and Cobo Hall in Detroit, Seger's home town. While it doesn't possess the sheer excitement of Live Bullet, the new album will probably be better accepted by the record buying public, simply because it contains material from Seger's recent rise to widespread popularity. With the exception of three songs, the double album consists of tunes from Night Moves, Stranger in Town, and Against the Wind. The title cut, of course, is from the Urban Cowboy soundtrack.

Like many of the records currently being released, Nine Tonight frequently sounds forced and somewhat mechanical. However, when Seger does get rolling, especially on the album's final side, he can capture the heart of even the most critical listener. In fact, "Let It Rock," the finale and only song common to both Live Bullet and Nine Tonight, may well be more exciting on the latter.

Seger's live arrangements are enriched by the qualified work of saxophonist Alto Reed (whose name has always seemed appropriate). Reed's sax provides "Night Moves" with a fascinating touch that is absent on the studio version, and the haunting main riff of "Main Street" is done by sax instead of the original's guitar.

One of the better performances here finds Seger reaching back to the old "Memphis Sound" with a rendition of "Tryin' to Live My Life Without You." Seger's appreciation for the roots of modern-day rock is evident in many of his own compositions, and his believable performance of this Eugene Williams tune gives one the impression that he would have been just as comfortable as a performer fifteen years ago. Reed plays both alto and tenor saxes simultaneously on this one, creating the effect of a miniaturized horn section.

A little mellow music

The only real ballad included is the Springsteen-influenced "We've Got Tonight," and Seger proves that his once-popular nickname, the "Motor City Minstrel," still applies. He does a good job of bearing his soul, and his emotion has a chilling impact; the audience brings out the conviction that cannot be accomplished on a studio recording.

The biggest disappointment, however, is "Old Time Rock and Roll." This song, which is one of the strongest cuts on Stranger in Town, is almost boring here. Seger seldom plays lead guitar in concert, saying that he would rather give more attention to his vocals. With that in mind, there is no excuse for his lackluster performance on this song.

Several other portions of the album leave something to be desired, and one often gets the impression that Seger isn't giving his audience all the enthusiasm he's capable of. Despite this, he has probably just released one of the better live albums of the last few years. That isn't saying much, but Nine Tonight is nevertheless a worthwhile purchase for Seger fans.

Bob Seger's new live album, Nine Tonight, encompasses music from his entire career.
