Rowe calls survival name of game

by Art Baker
Staff Writer

Lt. Colonel Nick Rowe, the only American to successfully escape from a North Vietnamese prisoner-of-war camp, spoke to State students Monday night.

Lt. Colonel Rowe spoke of his experiences in the POW camp and of the changes in the armed services since the Vietnam war.

"Leaders in POW camps were not necessarily the highest ranking officers, but the ones who could take care of themselves and take care of those around them. Leaders were the ones who helped everybody survive. That was the name of the game—survival," Rowe said. "Rank in a crisis will break down. The troops will look to the natural leaders to take charge."

"The golden rule was 'I will do nothing or say nothing that will hurt another American,'" Rowe said. "Talking about his time in the POW camp Rowe stated, 'I was using a cover story toward my interrogator. I had to walk a fine line between being dumb enough to keep my interrogator off my back and being smart enough to let me continue to live. The only reason they kept me alive was because they thought I might be useful as propaganda. I knew information that would be perishable in six months, and I hoped my cover story would last at least that long. The story covered me for five and a half years. I told them I was an engineer. I ~~avoided~~ some engineering problems for them to prove I was not lying. My cover was blown by an American group called the National Liberation Front. They told the North Vietnamese who I was and that I was lying. Someday I will get a chance to thank those individuals, in the right time and setting. Anyway, the next three days after my cover was blown I was in a panic. I was praying to God to show me a way to escape."

"My interrogator committed suicide because he had lost face in not breaking me."

Then a sudden rush of mud and trees started blowing up everywhere. It was a B-52 strike. I got one of my guards to separate as we were all running for our lives. I took him out and started to run. A group of attack jets went over and fired over my head. I thought they were trying to get rid of any Vietnamese behind me. As it turned out, they thought I was the enemy, and they were shooting at me. The next pass recognized me as an American and sent in a Huey (a helicopter) to pick me up."

Rowe is currently in charge of the SERE program at Fort Bragg. SERE stands for survival, evasion, resistance, escape. The program is designed to help soldiers prepare for possible internment in POW camps. The program is under the JFK institute for military assistance.

"The best defense is the 'I don't know' story. Today we teach people to bend, but not break. When an individual reaches the point of breaking, he should release any perishable information. Then take a break and recharge his batteries. However, the 'I don't know' story is still the best. I have yet to see John Wayne in a prisoner of war camp. If an interrogator has heard 'I don't know' all morning, and suddenly in comes this guy with a sneer on his face saying 'I cannot answer that question,' the interrogator will paint a bullseye on this guy's chest and try to break him with everything the interrogator can do."

"The name of the game is survival," said Rowe.

Election registration opens

Student Government is currently accepting applications for government positions.

Anyone interested in running for the office of student body president, student body treasurer, Student Senate president, student center president, senator, member of the Judicial Board, member of the Publications Authority, or a position for the board of directors on the Union Activities Board, must sign up in the Student Government office which is on the fourth floor of the Student Center, according to Jeff Baker, Student Senate president.

"Anyone who would like to have input into the University should become involved now. Student viewpoints are vital to the administration to see each side of a question," Baker said.

Sign up books were opened Thursday and will remain open until March 3. Sign up time is 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., according to Baker.

Candidates running for student body president and student body treasurer must be in good academic standing, which means that they must not be on academic warning or probation. No previous experience is necessary, according to Jim Yocum, student body president.

Candidates running for Student Senate president must have served one year as a senator, according to Baker.

"It is vital for the Student Senate president to have a year of experience in the Senate because the person must know the procedure for running the meeting which only comes from this experience," Baker said.

In order to be a senator a student must sign up according to his school and class, according to the class he will be in for the fall of '83, according to Yocum.

Students wanting to run for the Judicial Board must sign up by class and must be in good academic standing, according to Yocum.

Students who want to join the Publications Authority need only sign up. Pub Board elections are independent of class and school, according to Yocum.

There will be a mandatory meeting for all candidates on March 3 at 10 p.m. in the Walnut Room located on the fourth floor of the Student Center. If a candidate cannot attend the meeting, then an alternate must be present or the candidate will be dropped from the ballot, according to Yocum.

Election dates are March 21 and 22. In case of a tie, run-off elections will be March 28 and 29.

There will also be two amendments to the Student Body Constitution that will be on the ballots for the student body to vote on.

The first amendment will be to split the position of the treasurer into two offices, a treasurer and a comptroller (an accounting position). The comptroller will be appointed by student body president and will be approved by the Student Senate. The comptroller will have to have had accounting 260 or 265 or will have to pass a competency test, according to Yocum.

The second amendment will be to add to the constitution a sheet of corrections, which will make certain duties of the president official. They will be duties such as sitting on Pub Board meetings and sitting on the advisory board to UNC system President William Friday, according to Yocum.

New program helps job hunters

by Pete Elmore
Staff Writer

Students in need of part-time or full-time work can be aided in their search by a student government program called the Student Employment Service, according to Rich Holloway, a member of the student body president's task force to combat student apathy.

"In this program we are using a computer to match students in search of part-time and full-time work with area employers who need their services," Holloway said.

"We need the student's name, available times for work and skills, such as carpentry and being a waiter, to give to prospective employers," Holloway said.

Several divisions on campus have been contacted by the service, according to Student Body President Jim Yocum. He expects the majority of jobs to come from off campus.

"We have been working on this project for about a year, and I am glad to see it is finally becoming a reality," Yocum said. "I anticipate matching the first names with jobs in about four days."

The Student Employment Service is set to go into operation Feb. 28, according to both Yocum and Holloway. The computer is set up to receive data on the students and the process of matching names with jobs will begin immediately.

"We still have not talked to area businesses yet, but we will very shortly, after we have some names to give them," Holloway said.

The service is free to students, and all students have to do to have their name placed on the job list is call the Student Government offices and ask for information on the service or by the Student Government offices on the fourth floor of the Student Center.

"We would like to encourage any student looking for a job to either call or come up to the Student Government office as soon as possible and join the program," Holloway said.

Green denies allegations, enters race for governor

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) - Lt. Gov. James C. Green predicts he will survive the latest controversy surrounding him and be elected governor next year. The Charlotte Observer reported Thursday.

"I'm going to hold my chin up and hold my head back and do the job that the majority of the people in this state elected me to do, and I'm going to do the next one which I think they're going to elect me to, too..." Green said. "At the right time, I'll make a formal announcement. But I don't think it's any secret that I'll be a candidate for governor."

Green was interviewed by Observer reporters Wednesday in Raleigh. He blamed his problems on jealous politicians and a press that has always been after him.

The latest controversy involving

Green surfaced last week when he called Attorney General Rufus Edmisten into his office and demanded to know why the SBI was investigating his office telephone records. Andrew Vanore, deputy state attorney general, said Green is under investigation in connection with corruption in southeastern North Carolina.

"Not a single allegation... has been proven," Green said.

Green, the only member of his 12-man Marine Corps squad to come out of Iwo Jima unscathed during World War II, said he has been treated unfairly by the press.

"Thirty-eight years ago today, I was on my belly with a .30-caliber machine gun on Iwo Jima," Green said. "I was real sure I knew why I was there. But when I see some of the things tried on me by the press and some of the others, I'm not sure that's the kind of freedom I thought I was fighting for."

Green refused to say whether he believes the current SBI investigation is politically motivated.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, who supervises the SBI and plans to run for governor himself, has said the investigation is not an attempt to discredit Green.

"It's just too bad somebody in state government is trying to impugn the integrity of state government," Green said. "To sit here and say all this is politically motivated - I'm not going to do that; I'm too smart for that."

Green said he has done nothing wrong and that allegations against him have only strengthened his resolve to run for governor.

"I'll put my character and integrity against anybody's in North Carolina... I'll take you into five states," he said. "You find anybody who tells you I was a crook, it's probably somebody who owes me some money and won't pay me. And I've got a few of those. But they were hungry or had a sick kid when they came to get the money."

Green said he plans to continue his efforts to make government more efficient despite the allegations against him.

"I'm told many times every day that I'm doing a good job in this office, and I am," he said. "As to what effect it will have on my chances to become governor, I don't know. I guess you can continue to print unfavorable and erroneous information until you run anybody into the ground."

"I'm not one of these white knights, but I know right from wrong."

State staffers among people taken hostage in Peru

LIMA, PERU (UPI) - Four North Carolina State University staff members and another American were among 50 people held hostage by a hundred striking agriculture ministry workers for six hours Wednesday.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the five people are on contract to the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The ministry workers took over a building and demanded the government hold wage negotiations with their unions.

Officials said it was only by chance the Americans were caught in the building at the time of the seizure and that the protest had no anti-American overtones.

Shortly after midday Wednesday, the workers seized the National Institute for Agricultural Promotion and Investigation, a ministry annex in downtown Lima. The demonstrators locked doors and barricaded exits.

The protestors refused to let between 30 and 50 people trapped inside the building leave until Agriculture Ministry officials agreed to meet with them.

The money will be used for nutrition research, including a day-care nutrition program.

The money is part of a $31 million antitrust settlement of claims against more than 30 chicken producers who Agriculture Vice Minister Alfredo Rabines talked to the workers, the siege ended, and all participants left the building peacefully.

"There at no time was violence or any danger," said James Burns, American Embassy press attaché.

State receives money from price-fixing settlement

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) - North Carolina State University has received $98,000 as the state's share of a nationwide price-fixing settlement allegedly fixed wholesale prices before 1973.

States were required to submit distribution plans to federal judges. At the request of Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, North Carolina State's Food Science Department developed the two projects approved by the courts.

Food distributors affected by the price fixing were awarded $26.6 million, with $4.4 million divided among states according to population.

Of North Carolina's share, $48,000 will be used for research into efficient analysis of sweet potato and carrot sugars for the presence of beta carotene, recently identified as having cancer-fighting characteristics.

The remaining $50,000 will be available to day-care centers for nutritional workshops.

Members of the team were identified as Pedro Sanchez, Dale Bandy, Arthur Coutou and Richard King. The fifth man was identified as David Flood, project manager for the Agency for International Development.

Opinion

A paper that is entirely the product of the student body becomes at once the official organ through which the thoughts, the activity and in fact the very life of the campus are registered. It is the mouthpiece through which the students themselves talk. College life without its journal is blank.

—Technician, vol. 1, no. 1, Feb. 1, 1920

Voice your opinion — run

Thursday marked the opening of the books for those who are interested in running for a seat in Student Government. All of the seats in the Student Senate — excluding those available for next fall's freshmen, of course — are open for prospective candidates. In addition, the position of Student Senate president, student body president and student body treasurer are open.

Any prospective candidate must be in academic good standing. With the exception of the position of Student Senate president, no previous experience is required for students. Candidates for Student Senate president must have at least one year's experience in the Student Senate.

Student Government needs enthusiastic, active people to ensure that State students receive solid leadership. Student Government has worked hard this year to solve problems constantly plaguing State students.

Unfortunately more problems continually arise which affect students. These problems need the attention of concerned students who are willing to work to improve State. The Student Senate is only as effective as its members. Without eager, energetic candidates seeking a seat in the Student Senate, students will not receive the leadership which they deserve.

The positions of student body president, Student Senate president and student body treasurer are even more important for students. The Student Senate president presides over the Senate and, in many respects, controls what actions the Senate takes. The student body president sits on several different boards, in addition to appointing approximately 200 people to various positions in the Student Government. The student body treasurer administers the bookkeeping and the Finance Committee.

Each of these positions is important to students since administrators frequently look to student leaders in order to get an understanding of how students feel about various issues. Students who complain that the administration is not responsive to their needs should get active in Student Government to voice their opinions.

State students have often been described as apathetic. This is unfortunate. Students should be more concerned about what happens at State and how changes at State will affect them. One of the best ways students can get involved is to become active in Student Government.

The books will remain open until March 3. Any student interested in helping to improve State should sign up to run for a seat in the Student Senate or one of the leadership positions within Student Government. The University will only improve when students start playing a more active role in making changes happen. Student Government needs the support of all students.

Sign up before March 3, and get involved.

Glenn's campaign could take off Mondale leads candidates

Former Vice President Walter Mondale says he is ready to be president, and it seems many other candidates for the Democratic nomination are also ready to be president. The Democratic race will be most interesting. Each candidate will not only be running against each other, but also against President Ronald Reagan.

The front runner at this point is Walter Mondale, who served 12 years in the U.S. Senate before becoming vice president. Mondale has recently emerged as the front runner due to Sen. Edward Kennedy's, D-Mass., withdrawal. Being in the lead has so far been a mixed blessing for Mondale. The front runner status gives Mondale the advantage of adding on to his already well-organized staff; the leader also attracts the big contributors.

The disadvantage of being the front runner is that Mondale is currently the man to beat. Almost every other candidate is going to plot some strategy to upset Mondale. The front runner also comes under closer scrutiny by the public and the media. One little slip by him could mean the end of his campaign.

However, at this point it seems that Mondale is unstoppable. He has the best organization and the most money. He has the support of many Democratic Party professionals and Democratic office holders. Plus, he has improved his oratorical skills to the point that he currently rivals Kennedy and could even take on the "Great Communicator," Reagan. In addition, even though Mondale is a tradiitional liberal, he is coalition builder and therefore could reach out to a wider public. The danger is that he may become too accommodating, and then no one could tell where he stands on the issues.

The person who is currently second to Mondale in the race is Sen. John Glenn of Ohio. Glenn is said to have a poor organization, but he does have plenty of recognition due to his former career as an astronaut. Glenn is an attractive candidate due to the glamour involved in being a former astronaut. What makes Glenn an even more attractive candidate is the fact that he is a moderate and could attract a wide range of people.

Glenn does however have a few disadvantages. One is that he is not a good speaker which could be a factor in a contest between him and Reagan. Another one is that as he is a moderate, he may appear as having no clear vision and therefore appear wishy-washy. Plus, if Glenn sticks too much with defense issues which he has an expertise in, he may appear to be a hawk and lose support.

forum Stallings should have been in Dr. Strangelove

Kenneth Stallings' attempt to justify the necessity of the arms race leaves much to be desired. He asserts that "The Soviets have abandoned the concept of a manned strategic bomber force," yet the Soviets have claimed that a new intercontinental bomber, the Tu-220M, is on the drawing board. In addition, the 300 Soviet Backfire bombers could be used on the U.S.

Stallings is also wrong about the need for the B-1 bomber. Since first deployed, eight versions of the B-52 have been built. The latest models, 160 B-52Gs and 100 B-52s, will remain effective delivery systems into the 1990s, at which time the Advanced Technology Bomber will be operational.

Stallings seems to be unaware of the dilemma with ICBMs. As missiles have become increasingly accurate, silo based ICBMs (all 2,452 of them) have become increasingly vulnerable. The real question is not whether to build the Peacekeeper, but how to securely base it.

Stallings' ludicrous belief that, after a successful Soviet first strike, "... the bulk of the U.S. population and industrial centers would be left comparatively intact" reminds me of Roger Molander's former White House nuclear strategist for the National Security Council's conversation with a Navy captain in the Pentagon. The captain, perplexed with the excitement generated by the possibility of nuclear war, argued that people were "talking as if nuclear war would be the end of the world when, in fact, only 500 million people would be killed." Stallings aims in the right direction when he maintains that other "aspects of the strategic balance need to be taken into account," yet he does not mention the nuclear capabilities of other nations, anti-satellite devices and futuristic space systems — particle beam weapons and lasers — as being aspects worthy of consideration. The factors involved in the "question of parity versus superiority" are numerous and complex enough to make us all into comparatively intact, pseudo-military analysts.

Forum letter evokes response

In response to Brian Henling's letter "Abortion basically medical issue," I can tell one thing — you are not female. Not all females believe in abortion, but most believe in the right to choose what happens to their bodies. It is hard for me to believe that anyone has the right to tell me I must carry, keep, rear and/or care for a child I don't want.

Have you ever considered what you would do if you were a 20-year-old female who suddenly found herself pregnant? What if you had not been careful and used a contraceptive, but you still got pregnant? It can happen and often does. It's not a pleasant thought.

Does anyone have the right to tell me I cannot have an abortion? Why is someone else allowed to decide for me that I must drop out of school? This is what usually happens. A large portion of all teenage mothers never received their high school diploma. How are they going to support themselves and their child?

Do they have to marry the father? What if they do not love him or do not know who he is? By the way, what if the woman was raped? Who would she turn to for support — her parents?

Statistically, children of immature parents and unwanted pregnancies are neglected and abused. Often, the children turn to crime. Most of them grow up with abuse and ultimately neglect their own children.

Have you ever considered the risk involved in carrying and bearing a child? What if the pregnancy is a risk to the mother's life? What if the child, you are talking another 18 plus years. ## Columnist needs to get facts

Kenneth Stallings' article on Feb. 23, "Abortion refutes Constitution," is a weak attempt at defending the "pro-life" position. The Constitution does not guarantee "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." The Declaration of Independence advocates these principles — the Constitution seeks to "promote the general welfare" of the country. You should read these documents some time, Stallings. You might be surprised at their liberalism.

Stallings questions whether "human life has a value that can be adequately related in human terms." By saying that abortion "can be performed for a right reason," he places a value on human life. Who, then, decides what a "right" reason is? What is a "right" reason? Stallings, enlighten us all! Stallings contends that "much of the evil in the modern world" comes from an inadequate value on human life. Geez, and I thought it was Adam and Eve! Seriously, each year thousands of Americans are killed by automobiles and alcohol, separately and in combination. Mind you, these are thinking, feeling, breathing and somewhat productive humans. Do you, Stallings, advocate a ban on personal automobiles and alcoholic beverages? I will not even press the issue that world population growth is threatening the earth's non-renewable resources. Stallings offers no challenge — he may not realize it. The population of the earth increases by one billion about every 10 years. If human life is to be "the most valuable entity on earth," should we not decrease the rate of growth so that future generations can survive and prosper? If you believe, Stallings, that legislation will sweep away the practice of abortion forever, then you are quite naive. Abortion has been around for centuries. Putting doctors in jail will not solve any problems.

If you insist on being a narrow ideologue, do your homework, get some facts and try again.

Teke's Pat Travers imitation wins air guitar contest

by Rick Allen
Assistant Entertainment
Editor

The place is The Bears' Den, the time is Tuesday night, the activity is WKNC Air Guitar Contest and the winners—the Teke's and an appreciative audience.

Tuesday night was definitely a great night for the fans of rock 'n' roll. Some dynamite talents in air guitar playing gave The Bears' Den crowd a night to remember.

After all the bands had given performances many more popular bands would envy, the judges announced the winners of the contest. Judges Sam Stowe, Kerry Wolfe, Don Dickinson, Mark Bridger and Tony Warren, all from WKNC, gave a case of beer to the third place band, The Ellwoods. Second place and $50 went to the Airheads and $100 went to the winning band, the Teke's.

on stage presence, originality, accuracy or mimicry, showmanship and audience response.

The first act of the evening was Phony Latch. The solo performer played lead, base and rhythm guitar to Cheap Trick's "My Baby Loves To Rock." Wearing only blue-jeans and dracula fangs, he proceeded to dance and cavort about the stage. Unfortunately, that's all he did. On to the second group, the Airheads.

The Airheads gave an excellent rendition of Judas Priest's "Napoleone." The band came on stage with realistic looking guitars made of wood. Tight leather pants and that rock "look" really excited the audience. The lead singer and lead guitar player were really into the music as was the rest of the band. They gave a rockin' performance.

Pat Travers' hit "Boom-Boom, Out Go The Lights" was the third tune presented. The Teke's

Staff photos by Jim Frei

Tuesday night was an entertaining evening for everyone that attended the WKNC Air Guitar Contest at the Bears' Den. The Teke's won the competition with a rousing rendition of Pat Travers' "Boom Boom, Out Go The Lights." The enthusiastic crowd agreed with the judges that the band deserved the $100 first prize.

made this difficult song look easy. The group had a great deal of stage presence and confidence. The audience definitely appreciated their sharp costumes and energetic presentation. Also, they had excellent props.

The crowd went wild when the all-girl group, The Ellwoods took to the stage. The band did the Go Go's smash hit "Vacation." Revealing costumes, good props and unbelievable energy were the hallmarks of The Ellwoods. The band gave a great performance and sent the audience into a frenzy upon finishing the song.

The fifth group borrowed the name of a Massachusetts band as its identifying name. Jon Butcher Axis performed a George Thorogood song. Although the group used minimal props, it had good accuracy and reasonable presence.

Up To Par was the last band on the program. Despite the fact that the lead singer was in Greensboro, the band gave an incredible performance. It staged an unbelievable version of AC/DC's, "A Whole Lot Of Rosy."

Energy was the key word throughout as the band accurately and professionally mimicked AC/DC. The lead singer really seemed to put his heart into the lyrics, and the lead guitarist spent more time in the air than in his shoes.

The work that the bands put into their performances was easy to see. Some spent over six hours practicing for Tuesday night.

When asked if the effort put into the show had been worth it, Randege Agee of The Ellwoods answered that it meant, "A lot of studying time given up."

Along the same lines, Katie Shepard stated that the contest had "been fun. It's fun getting up there." Yes it was fun.

Expert lectures on biomechanics and sports medicine

by Tom DeSchriver
Feature Writer

When Frank Shorter won the marathon in the 1972 Olympics at Munich, West Germany, few realized the consequences of the greatest moment in American distance running history.

After Shorter's victory, millions of Americans took to the roads in search of fitness and good health.

Runners spent millions of dollars on the newest warm-up suits and latest style of running shoes, and running took the place of the three martini lunch in some circles.

Running was the cure for all ailments, anyone of any age could do it, and it could be done anywhere.

Terms like "runners high" and "LSD" (long slow distance) came into the language, along with less used terms like "runner's knee" and "pronation."

The latter two terms, "runner's knee" and "pronation," while hated by runners, have opened up an entirely new field of medicine called Sports Medicine.

Injuries caused by running and other overuse activities are the concern of Dr. Allan M. Spencer, the chairman of the Department of Biomechanics and Sports Medicine at the Ohio College of Podiatric Medicine.

Spencer was on State's campus Tuesday night and spoke to a group on Sports Medicine and sports injuries.

"The largest percentage of injuries are runners," Spencer said. "I'd say 75 percent are runners, some are skiers; mostly from overuse, too much of a good thing."

While Spencer's specialty is feet, a majority of his patients come to him with knee problems.

"The largest percentage of the cases are knee problems," Spencer said. "The knee and the foot are interrelated in 40 percent of these cases."

When a runner goes to Spencer with an injury, he evaluates the foot to see if it is contributing to the injury.

"Eighty percent of the cases we have are from pronation," Spencer said.

Pronation is when a runner lands on the outside of his foot and rotates inward.

While half of the knee injuries are related to the foot, Spencer says that he must differentiate which injuries he can treat through foot care and which ones must be referred to a practitioner.

When a foot problem has been diagnosed, Spencer usually prescribes an orthotic for the athlete.

An orthotic is a plastic molding of the foot which is placed in the shoe and provides stability and support for the foot.

Spencer says he has had an 80 to 90 percent success rate with orthotics when used to treat pronation cases, but he still worries about the overuse of orthotics.

"I worry about the indiscriminate use of orthotics," Spencer said. "I spend as much time analyzing as I do prescribing the orthotics."

Injuries caused by overuse can only be prevented by the athlete, and Spencer appears to be fighting an uphill battle.

"People believe if they can do a certain amount then they can do more," Spencer said. "They'll start out running a mile, then two, then four and then eight. Their structures just are not made to handle jumps like that."

Spencer says that everyone has different body structures for running and that not everyone is made to run the high volume of miles that world class runners run.

"Some people just can't handle all those miles," Spencer said. "I've noticed that 40-50 miles a week seems to be the threshold for a lot of runners. When they exceed that amount of mileage, they begin to have injury problems."

Spencer would like to see the injuries that occur now prevented before they occur.

"Our closest allies are the physical therapists," Spencer said. "A good stretching and exercising program can eliminate a lot of the problems."

Spencer says that runners should stretch before and after they run, with the emphasis on after because "that's when the body is warmed up and responds the best to stretching."

"You should stretch the posterior group of muscles and strengthen the front muscles of the leg," Spencer said.

The muscles most commonly associated with the posterior group are the hamstrings, while the quadriceps represent the front muscles.

"The difficulty results in that running strengthens the hamstrings, so that a stretching program is needed to correct that imbalance," Spencer said.

Spencer would like to see Americans engage in a more rounded health program.

"The ideal program is to run one day and bicycle the next. Running and bicycling use different muscle groups so that would be the perfect fitness program," he said.

Spencer said that he has come across some runners who are actually addicted to the sport, and he feels that Americans have lost sight of the initial goal of running.

"I think we lost sight of the goal. It should be a healthful program; most runners are going too far too fast. They should not increase their mileage more than 10 to 20 percent a week, with the lower limit preferred."

Spencer believes that running should be a healthy activity and not one that causes the runner problems.

TRI-CON features games

On March 18, 19 and 20, State's Gaming Society will be hosting TRI-CON '83 in Poe Hall on State's campus. TRI-CON '83 is a science fiction/fantasy convention with tournament role-playing and war games offered. In addition, other attractions will include speakers, demonstrations, workshops, exhibits, free films and displays.

All profits from the convention will be donated to the local United Cerebral Palsy Center in Raleigh.

Admission to the three-day event is $4 to the general public and $3 to NCSGS club members. For more information concerning tickets or to pre-register for the tournament games, please contact: Jim Moylan, 832-1330.

Phi Beta Sigma fraternity recognizes Black History Month

by James Turnage
Feature Writer

Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity has a distinguished history. The fraternity adequately demonstrates the organization's desire to advance the cause of black Americans. So, in honor of Black History Month, Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity examines its role in society and black history.

Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity was founded in 1914 at Howard University. It is an international organization with over 100,000 members and over 400 chapters throughout the continental United States, Europe, Africa, the Virgin Islands and the Caribbean.

As both a service and social organization, Phi Beta Sigma has programs in the areas of education, social action and business. The education program strives to raise the educational standards of each community. This goal is accomplished by sponsoring scholarships, encouraging and assisting students and offering tutoring services. The fraternity's business program speaks out for blacks and disadvantaged business people in helping them to get their goals established.

Sigma's social action program is geared to support and work with all civil rights organizations to get and hold on to laws that make blacks free, equal and first class citizens.

The Xi Zeta chapter of Phi Beta Sigma shares these goals. We are currently involved in the Mentor Program to help black freshmen adjust to college life. We also aid students by offering tutorial services. To become more involved with campus decisions, we currently have a member of the Student Government in our chapter.

Several members of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity have made contributions to black culture in the areas of sports, business, politics and science. Some of these prominent brothers are:

- George Washington Carver: educator, scientist and inventor.

- A. Phillip Randolph: former International vice president of the AFL-CIO and active in the civil rights movement.

- Julian Bond: U.S. representative from South Carolina and a leading black spokesman.

- George Gervin: basketball star.

- Rinaldo "Skeets" Nehemiah: former track star and current football star.

Phi Beta Sigma is proud to have these men as members of its organization and salutes not only them, but also all people who helped black society and black history. They gave young blacks a goal to strive for and a history to cherish.

Clown couple travels with Greatest Show on Earth

The most distinguishing feature about clowns is their make-up. Circus clowns spend many hours putting on and removing make-up.

by Melanie Vick
Feature Writer

When childhood sweethearts Tom and Tammy planned to get married, what they didn't plan on was settling down, buying a house in the suburbs or working 9 to 5 jobs.

Deviating far from traditional married life, this couple makes their home in a train car, travels all over the country and works very unusual hours.

Tom and Tammy Parrish are clowns for Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey Circus, and their job is to make people laugh.

"I always enjoyed entertaining and clowning around," Tom said, but it was not until the age of 20 that he decided to go to Clown College in Florida to make it his profession.

Tom and Tammy grew up together in Nedesha, a small town in Kansas where they were the local clowns.

"We entertained at Rotary Clubs and ladies' clubs. It was just for fun then," Tom said.

It wasn't until Tom became a clown that Tammy began to think of clowning too. "I visited Tom at the circus," Tammy said. After seeing how life as a clown really was, she too applied to Clown College and was accepted.

Being accepted into Clown College is no easy task, according to Tammy. "We were very fortunate to both be accepted," she said. "Auditions are held in every city, and out of 3,000-5,000 applications, only 60 are accepted," she added.

Tom and Tammy married after she graduated from Clown College. Life on the road has no ill effects on their marriage, since, according to Tammy, "We don't know what it's like to be married and not be on the road."

Tom and Tammy may not have their own house, but they do have their own train car and a little dog that Tom said "keeps them pretty busy."

Although circus families are popular among circus employees, Tom and Tammy don't see any children in the near future. Tammy said that even if they did have children, they would not give up the circus.

"The circus is a great way for kids to see the United States," Tammy said. "If it wasn't for the circus, I'd probably still be in my hometown."

Tom said that due to the extensive travel involved in circus work, "clowning is not for everybody." This unusual lifestyle, however, seems to be what makes this couple happy.

"We can't think of doing anything else," Tammy and Tom said. "Anything else would be like work."

Mummenschanz mime troupe brings Swiss tradition to Stewart Theatre

by D. L. Flanagan
Feature Writer

Here's a riddle: A large bug bounds across the floor. A sculpture gets up and does an odd dance. Two clay-faced people rearrange and reshape their faces into bizarre forms. What is it? Mummenschanz.

The members of Mummenschanz are mimes or rather, masked mimes, not unlike the ancient Swiss theater tradition of "The Masks." Like all mimes, they never speak; they convey their meaning in action and movement. The similarity ends there as the audience never views the mimes' faces. Instead, Mummenschanz treats the audience to a whimsical fantasy that still reaches the heart.

The word Mummenschanz is German — "Mummen" meaning game or play and "Shanz" meaning chance. In the Middle Ages, masks were often worn during games of chance. Mummenschanz, the play of chance — the chance to see yourself and the world around you beyond the masks we all wear.

That is what Mummenschanz does through their actions and masks. The three current cast members of Mummenschanz are Lydia Biondi, Alajandro Moran and Peter Gerber. They were brought in when the originators of Mum-menschanz wanted to create another show. All three of them had years of experience in theater before joining the troupe, and then they received another 12 weeks of intensive training to do the show.

Mummenschanz is currently touring the United States. They have a grueling schedule, doing two or three shows in each city and leaving immediately after the shows for the next engagement. Despite this, Gerber seemed remarkably cheerful. "I like touring. I like meeting different people. I like seeing different places," he said. Joining the cast only a year ago, Gerber definitely enjoys his work. "I love it. I have a lot of fun doing it. It's something that reaches all audiences."

"It's a challenge with different audiences because some may laugh at one thing and then not laugh at another thing. We have to adapt to each different audience while we are doing the show," Gerber said.

Mummenschanz creates a backdrop of action, and "the audience fills in things that happen. It's like looking through the eyes of a child," adds Gerber. Mummenschanz is truly a fantastic fantasy of magical movement that captures your heart. As Larry Kapust, Mummenschanz manager, said, "They entertain all children whether they are three or 300 (years old)."

Dorms compete to collect food

by Mark Hackler
Contributing Writer

Help other people eat is the name of this year's canned food drive being directed by the Cooperative Campus Ministry Student Advisory Board with support from the IRC, the Lutheran Student Movement and the Cooperative Campus Ministry. The drive will run from Feb. 21 to March 2.

Through the IRC, $400 has been allocated for prize money for residence halls to be divided as follows: $150 for the greatest number of cans per resident, $100 for second and $50 for third. Also, $100 will be awarded to the residence hall collecting the greatest total amount of food.

All items received in residence halls by Feb. 25 will be counted and picked up that afternoon by representatives of the Cooperative member groups. The contest will officially end on March 2, at which time all remaining items will be brought to a central collection site for final counting and delivery.

Items of particular demand include vegetables, fruits, soups (particularly chunky varieties), meats (stew, etc.), peanut butter, juices and the like. Though any items will be gladly accepted, focusing on the above items would be greatly appreciated since they will be the most beneficial to those distributing the food.

The food collected will go to the Urban Ministry Center in Raleigh. The center is interdenominational supported and provides food, fuel, clothing, emergency shelter, etc. to those in need.

An information table will be set up on the first floor of the Student Center Feb. 21 through March 1. Information on the food drive as well as on the Urban Ministry Center will be available. Also, any individuals wishing to contribute food may do so there.

Though eligibility for prizes is limited to residence halls, any organization is more than welcome to participate. For further information, contact Mark Hackler at 834-8148, Karl Jensen at 781-4276, or chaplain Nelson at 828-1433.

Grapplers vie for 3rd league title

by Todd McGehee
Sports Writer

State's wrestling team will be looking for its third consecutive conference championship this weekend when it travels to Maryland to participate in the annual conference tournament.

Guzzo thinks four teams have a realistic chance at winning the tournament. Besides the Pack, he listed Clemson, Maryland and North Carolina as teams capable of taking home the trophy.

"I think if you had to make a favorite, it would be us, because we have won the last two," he said. "But North Carolina, Maryland and Clemson all have a shot."

Of the 10 individual champions from last year, six have graduated. Only Clemson's 118-pounder,

Todd Sherr, and a trio of State wrestlers return to defend their titles. Chris Mondragon, Craig Cox and Tab Thacker will look to capture back-to-back crowns in the 158-pound, 167-pound, and heavyweight classes, respectively.

Both Cox and Mondragon finished the regular season undefeated in the conference, while Thacker's only loss came in his last match against Clemson. Guzzo expects them all to be seeded No. 1 in their divisions.

A trio of other wrestlers for the Pack will have a better than average chance of winning conference titles. Junior Vince Bynum at 134 pounds, senior Steve Koob at 142 pounds, and junior John Connelly at 190 pounds, all have to be considered among the favorites in their respective weight classes.

Bynum suffered one loss and one tie in the regular conference season, while Koob wrestled for most of the year at 150 and did not build a record in the 142-pound class. Connelly injured his knee in the Tennessee bout two weeks ago and did not wrestle in the team's last two matches. Guzzo said Connelly will wrestle in the conference tourney, but it is not known if he will be 100 percent.

"It's hard to say right now," Guzzo said. "We hope he will be, but we're just not sure."

Other wrestlers competing for State in the tourney are freshman Billy Starke at 118 pounds, Ricky Negrete at 126 pounds, freshman Scott Skidmore at 150 pounds and Greg Fatool at 177.

Guzzo would like to see each of these wrestlers place in the top four in their respective weight classes. Starke and Skidmore both will suffer from a lack of experience as each missed at least half of the season.

Starke injured his knee in early December and missed almost two months of the season. He did not return to the lineup until the Duke match on Feb. 1 and has had little match experience.

Skidmore took Koob's place when Koob moved down to 142 pounds for the team's last four matches and also has little match experience.

After the conference tournament, there is only one tournament left, and that is the NCAA, which takes place March 10, 11 and 12 in Tulsa, Okla. Only 19 wrestlers from the ACC will be guaranteed slots in the tournament. The ten individual champions will automatically qualify, while the other nine berths will be decided by a vote of the coaches.

Vince Bynum's quickness and endurance have enabled him to earn a starting position on State's wrestling team.

Pack women shoot for higher goals

by Tom DeSchriver
Sports Writer

Every basketball team's goal is to capture the conference crown and win 20 games. The Wolfpack women wrapped up the first goal with a 102-81 win over Duke Tuesday night, assuring them the top seed in the upcoming ACC tournament.

Goal No. 2, 20 wins, can be achieved Saturday with a win over Virginia at Charlottesville.

The Wolfpack enters the contest 19-6 overall and 11-1 in the league.

In the first meeting between the two clubs, the Wolfpack held off a stubborn Wahoo team to win 67-55, Jan. 12, at Reynolds Coliseum.

"Virginia gave us a tough game when we played them at home," State coach Kay Yow said. "I expect another tough game this time."

Yow said the Cavaliers have plenty of incentive to knock off the Wolfpack.

"I'll be a feather in Virginia's cap if they can beat the No. 1 seed in the tournament," Yow said. "It would give them a lot of confidence going into the tournament."

The game will be televised regionally in the Charlottesville area, and Yow realizes what can happen when a team plays on television.

"I expect that the Virginia team will be fired up and well prepared," Yow said. "The game will be televised, and that shows that they are doing things to get ready for this game."

"It's gonna be tough playing at Charlottesville against a team that has never beaten us."

The Wolfpack is currently riding a five-game winning streak that has been marked by balanced scoring and tough defense.

As usual, Linda Fage has led the team at the offensive end, averaging 21.7 points per game. The bullseye shooting sophomore is coming off a career high 32 points against Duke.

The winning streak hasn't been all Fage, though. Inside players Priscilla Adams, Claudia Kreicker and Ronda Falkena have contributed to the cause, while lightning quick guards Angie Armstrong and Robyn Mayo have led a trapping defense that has forced numerous turnovers by opponents.

Against Duke, Adams and Falkena combined for 30 points, while Kreicker played her usual hard-nosed play at both ends of the floor.

In recent games, Mayo and Armstrong have been the catalyst as the Pack has demoralized teams in the second half with a trapping half-court zone press.

Virginia is 15-10 overall and 4-7 in the conference, which ties them with Clemson for fifth place.

"The Cavs are led by 5'10" forward Cathy Grimes. Grimes is averaging 16.6 points per game and 8.7 rebounds a contest.

Yow is weary of Grimes and knows she could cause problems for the Pack.

"They have some outstanding players," Yow said. "Cathy Grimes is one of the top scorers in the ACC and a very productive forward."

Joining Grimes in the front court is 6'2" sophomore Debbie Young. Young averages 10.2 points and 7.6 rebounds.

In recent games, the Pack has been averaging over 20 points per game from the center position and will try to exploit the Cavs there.

Lyn Anastasio and Kim Syllow round out the starting five in the backcourt for Virginia.

Saturday marks the final regular season game for seniors Sherry Lawson, Karen Brabson and Armstrong.

The three have been mainstays in the Wolfpack attack for four years, and a 20 win season would be a fond farewell present.

State 9 to open with Pesavento, Brinson on mound in doubleheader

by Bruce Winkworth
Assistant Sports Editor

Junior southpaw Mike Pesavento and sophomore right-hander Hugh Brinson have been slated by head baseball coach Sam Esposito to pitch State's opening-day double-header against Elon Sunday.

Pesavento was 2-3 last spring but went 8-1 in the North State League last summer. Brinson also pitched well during the summer league, posting a 5-2 mark as a starter after being used mainly in relief in the spring.

Elon coach Bob McBee is expected to tab David Osteen to start game one. Osteen, who went 4-1 for the Fighting Christians a year ago, is the son of former major league pitcher Claude Osteen. McBee probably start either Barry Culberson or John Driscoll in the second game.

Elon was 21-17 in 1992. Six starters return for the Christians, including first baseman Maurice Morton (400 in 82), Osteen, who also plays shortstop (311), and slugger Joel Weiss (6 HRs).

In five seasons at Elon, McBee has compiled a 159-96 record. His club split two games with the Wolfpack in 1991. The two clubs were scheduled to play last year but were rained out.

"I'm sure Elon will be

Spirited Bynum inspires matmen at 134

by Marian Marshall
Sports Writer

"You have to stick with it and learn to love it," says Vince Bynum.

Bynum, a junior humanities and social sciences major, is the 134-pound starter on State's wrestling team.

According to head coach Bob Guzzo, Bynum is an extremely hard worker.

Assistant coach Hachiro Oishi says Bynum is a very successful wrestler and has improved tremendously since last year.

Bynum loves the sport and admits that it takes dedication and determination to be successful.

He also attributes his success to team spirit. "Everybody pulls for everybody," he says. "They tell you to go out there and do your best."

Bynum wrestled at Beddingfield High School in Wilson under Coach Melvin Brasswell.

During his senior year, he was ranked third in the state.

His record this year is 14-5-3. He defeated the runner-up in the conference last year, 6-1.

Bynum lost a close match to nationally No. 2 ranked Schuyler of Lehigh University, 6-4.

Guzzo says Bynum has a natural ability for the sport, adding that he possesses all the attributes that a wrestler needs.

"He's quick, has good endurance and has developed good technique," says Guzzo.

He lacked mat experience when he came to State because of lack of competition in high school, according to Guzzo.

Guzzo is very pleased with Bynum's success and said that for a North Carolinian, he's an outstanding wrestler.

"He is an extremely hard worker, and that hard work has brought him to the point where he is," says Guzzo. "He has great potential, and he realizes that, which makes him very coachable."

Tab Thacker, heavyweight wrestler and Bynum's roommate, says Bynum gets along with everybody.

"He's easy-going and a great person to be around," says Thacker.

Thacker admits there's never a dull moment with him and that he's a real tough guy.

In practice, Thacker says that Bynum works hard and never misses a day, which is inspiring to Thacker.

Bynum challenges Thacker in practice sometimes.

"He challenges me because he knows I won't do anything to hurt him," Thacker says.

Thacker told of one day when a TV cameraman came to take some shots of him, Thacker told the cameraman he wanted him to get some shots of Bynum wrestling him.

"He told me to let him take me down, and I let him," said Thacker.

"Then he (Bynum) jumped up and said, 'I got him.'"

According to Thacker, Bynum is a great wrestler. Both Guzzo and Oishi agree.

"He's the most talented wrestler ever at State," says Guzzo.

Bynum has one loss in the conference, which puts him in good standing for a conference title.

The ACC Tournament will be held in College Park, Md., this weekend, Feb. 26-27.

According to Guzzo, the two top wrestlers in each weight class will qualify for the tournament, and he says that Bynum has an excellent opportunity to qualify.

To Bynum, school wouldn't be the same without wrestling.

"It's like part of school," he says, smiling.

Men cagers edge closer to berth with win at Duke

by Bruce Winkworth
Assistant Sports Editor

State's 98-79 win over Duke Wednesday night was senior night in Durham for the Wolfpack's Sidney Lowe and Thurl Bailey.

The Wolfpack's inside-outside combination combined for 49 points against the Blue Devils, but their real contribution in this game was leadership. Bailey scored 26 points, including two of two three-pointers, and pulled down nine rebounds. Lowe matched his career high of 23 points, but also handed off 12 assists, giving him 192 for the season, a new school record that surpasses by eight his old mark of 184.

"I feel that Sidney Lowe has deserved special note ever since Derek (Whittenburg) has been hurt," said State coach Jim Valvano. "He's been playing as well as I've ever seen a point guard play. Not only is he distributing the ball awfully well, but now he's scoring points."

In the first half, the Wolfpack jumped ahead by as many as 13 points behind the scoring and passing of Lowe, but the Blue Devils rallied to within seven at halftime and took a 51-50 lead in the first two-and-a-half minutes of the second half.

At this point, Thurl Bailey scored three consecutive baskets to put the Wolfpack up by five. The Blue Devils were not finished and took the lead two more times.

The last Duke lead was 64-63 with 10:38 left in the game, and at this point, the Pack went on a 15-2 run to put the game out of reach. Bailey scored five points in this run, including a three-pointer and a 15-footer from the baseline. Lowe and Gannon also hit three-pointers in the burst, but it was Bailey's overall play during this stretch helped subdue the Blue Devils.

"When the going got tough, when Duke took the lead, Thurl knocked in some crucial jump shots," Valvano said. "We wanted to get the ball to Thurl. He has such a height advantage."

Lowe's contributions weren't limited to the offensive end of the floor, either. Lowe had the difficult task of guarding Duke's high-scoring guard Johnny Dawkins when the Wolfpack was in its man-to-man defense.

Dawkins connected on only one of nine attempts from the floor, finishing with just four points. It was the first time this season that Dawkins has been held below double figures in scoring, and coming into the game, the Duke freshman was the only player in the ACC to have hit double figures in every game this season.

"We were trying to force Dawkins one way or another and then get help," Valvano said. "What Dawkins does so well is he races the ball up the court and catches you on his heels a little bit. Before you know it, bang, he's up for a jump shot."

"We realized we'd be leaving him open to pass off to the other guys, but we felt we had to control him. If he got rolling, they'd be that much tougher to beat."

For Lowe's part in stopping Dawkins, the key was keeping him away from the ball.

"I wanted to keep the ball out of his hands as much as possible," Lowe said. "When he had it, I wanted him to pass it off and before he'd get it back, be up on him. I wanted to keep him from getting on a tear. If you can stop him, you've stopped a lot of their offense."

The Wolfpack shot 56.7 percent from the floor for the game, including nine of 16 from the three-point area. Again, Gannon came off the bench, scored in double figures and took all four of his field goals from three-point range. He hit three of them.

"I can't say enough about Gannon," said Valvano. "He's our resident over-achiever. He just amazes me each time out. He's such a confident player."

Inside, the Pack's other 6-11 tower, Cozell McQueen, helped the Wolfpack control the offensive boards. McQueen finished with only six points, but pulled off 10 rebounds and helped the Wolfpack get numerous second shots.

"Cozell McQueen has played so much better each game," Valvano said. "It's nice to see him in there battling and rebounding."

Valvano also had praise for his other sophomore frontcourter, Lorenzo Charles, who was greeted by a shower of pizza boxes upon his introduction before the game. This was a reminder from the Duke students of Charles' arrest last summer for his part of an assault on a pizza delivery man.

Charles responded with his best game of the year, hitting six of eight shots from the floor for 13 points. He also pulled down five rebounds and blocked a shot.

The Wolfpack has now won eight of its last 10 games, upping its overall record to 16-8, 7-4 in the ACC. With Maryland's loss to Georgia Tech, the Pack now holds sole possession of fourth place in the conference, and the players believe they have a legitimate shot to move up.

"Looking at the other teams in the conference, North Carolina's gonna play Wake, and one of them is going to lose," said Bailey. "That's gonna pull us that much closer. We have the chance to move up to third place."

Bailey also said the Wolfpack can still earn an NCAA bid, depending on how they play in the three games remaining on the schedule.

"We're at the NIT point right now," Bailey said. "I know that all the guys see the opportunity that we have. The (North) Carolina game gave us a big lift. We're really looking forward to going to Virginia."

If the Pack can keep playing as it has, Lowe doesn't see how the Wolfpack can be kept out of the NCAA.

"I think we have a great chance," Lowe said of a possible NCAA bid. "I think this win (Duke) guarantees us at least an NIT bid. I think if we win two out of these last three games plus the first round of the ACC Tournament, that should get us an NCAA bid."

"I don't know how they (NCAA selection committee members) pick them, so we're gonna try and win all three of them. If we can win all three of these, I don't see how they can keep us out of it."

By Valvano's standards, this Wolfpack team is accomplishing all that can be hoped of it at this point.

"I think we're really playing about as well as this team can play," Valvano said. "After losing a player the caliber of Whit, I'm very proud of what they've accomplished."

Reed announces grid signees

by Scott Kiepler
Sports Writer

It typically goes without saying that when a college football program undergoes a major coaching change, its recruiting for the following season is severely hindered. But such has not been the case here at State.

New head coach Tom Reed announced a list of 23 signees last week, and it seems that he, along with newly appointed recruiting coordinator Bobby Purcell, somehow beat the odds and managed to ink a number of impressive athletes.

"I am very pleased with our recruiting class," Purcell said. "I feel that every one of them will really contribute to our football program."

Of the 23, 13 played high school ball in North Carolina. Four of these participated in last year's annual Shrine Bowl game in Charlotte.

An outstanding local signee is 6-2, 205-pound Larry Dodd. Dodd starred as a fullback and linebacker at Raleigh's Millbrook High School.

"Larry was a very important local player," Purcell said, "and we really wanted him."

Another area player Purcell really wanted was 6-3, 250-pound Sandy Kea. Kea is one of two big tackles signed by the Wolfpack. The other is Allen Hartley, an all-Ohio lineman who measures up at 6-4, 285 pounds.

Coincidentally, Hartley hails from coach Reed's hometown of Delaware, Ohio, while Kea is from Clinton, N.C. — Purcell's hometown — which goes to show that a little hometown hospitality doesn't hurt recruiting.

In addition, State signed a number of quarterbacks, including Mark Smith, a standout from a powerhouse Kannapolis, and Bob Guidice, a junior-college transfer who threw for over 2,300 yards and 19 touchdowns last season.

Smith's high school coach, Bob Boswell — himself an ex-Wolfpack coach — likens Smith to a couple of his earlier products: former State quarterback Johnny Evans, and North Carolina's Ethan Horton. Guidice, a 6-1, 200-pounder, played at Phoenix, Arizona Community College last year.

The Wolfpack will also be welcoming a stable full of powerful running backs. One of the best is Bobby Crumpler, a 6-0, 190-pound fullback from Hobpton.

Overall, the recruiting season turned out to be very productive. Although not too many have great size, Purcell rates this class as extremely quick.

"We didn't get as many big people as we wanted," Purcell said, "but I am very happy with the people we signed. We got a lot of good athletes with a lot of speed."

1983 Wolfpack Signees

- Scott Baldwin (FB, 5-10, 205, Phoenix, Ariz., CC), Ralph Britt (LB-TE, 6-3, 210, Mt. Olive, North Duplin), Brian Bullock (DL, 6-4, 220, Fayetteville), E.C. Smith (QB), Bobby Crumpler (FB, 6-0, 188, Hobpton), Ken Dickens (RB, 6-1, 192, Virginia Beach, Va., Wheat), Larry Dodd (FB-LB, 6-2, 205, Raleigh, Millbrook), Martin Fitzgerald (LB, 6-1, 210, Sellersville, Pa., Pennsylvania), Bob Guidice (QB, 6-1, 200, Phoenix, Ariz., CC), Allen Hartley (T, 6-4, 285, Delaware, Ohio), Hayes Doug Hinson (LB, 6-4, 228, Galva's Ferry, S.C., Aynor), Hayward Jeffries (DB, 6-3, 178, Greensboro), Page Kevin Johnson (DB, 6-2, 175, Norfolk, Va., Lake Taylor), Mack Jones (WR, 6-11, 170, Greensboro), Page Sandy Kea (T, 6-3, 250, Clinton), Eric Kling (DB, 6-4, 215, Havelock), Jerry Page (G, 6-3, 297, Wilson, Fib), Bruce Porter (QB, 6-1, 188, Findlay, Ohio), Lenny Schultz (DL, 6-2, 220, Vienna, Va., Madison), Mark Smith (QB, 6-3, 190, Kannapolis, Rowan), Jeff Strum (OL, 6-4, 215, Charlotte, Independence), Ellis Williams (LB-RB, 6-1, 228, Clarkston), Greg Williams (RB, 6-0, 190, Fayetteville, Seventy-First), Scott Wilson (QB, 6-4, 242, Amherst, Mass., Northfield Mt. Hermon).

THE LITE BEER ALL-STARS STRIKE AGAIN.

When famous bowler Don Carter invited 23 Kingpins to the First Lite Beer Bowling Tournament, it seemed like a great idea.

It was the guys who drink Lite Beer from Miller because it tastes great, against the guys who drink it because it's less filling. And once again, the All-Stars proved they form a league by themselves.

After a lot of pins (and quite a few Lite Beers) went down and the smoke finally cleared, the score was tied, with only one man left to go: Rodney Dangerfield.

All he needed to win it was one pin. A klutz situation! Rodney, in top form, got the same amount of pins as he gets respect. None.

So the First Lite Beer Bowling Tournament ended in a draw. And the argument over the best thing about Lite was left unsettled.

But there was one thing everyone agreed on. It was truly everything you always wanted in a bowling tournament. And less.

Parity in today's collegiate hoopball game sends home upsets way of buffalo

If Mr. Webster were a half-court hoops fan, he wouldn't just define parity as "equality in power." He'd also say it describes very accurately what's happening in the game of college basketball today.

Look at the polls. The norm today seems to be a new No. 1 team every week. Being No. 1 in the polls is like a hot potato. Nobody seems to want it. Knocking at the door have Indiana, Kentucky, St. John's, Mississippi, UCLA, Virginia, plus a flotilla of others.

The reasons for this are many. The most obvious one is the freshman rule, which does not allow the dynasty colleges to stockpile the blue-chippers like they did years ago. What you used to do was bring in a great freshman team, break 'em in as sophomores and play 'em as juniors and seniors. Today, a blue-chip freshman wants to play right away, or he'll go somewhere else where he will, because most keepers have their eyes on the pros down the road. And, unlike in football, turning a program around and taking a trip Uptown costs only a couple of blue-chippers and the right complementary players.

What all this has done is spread the high school blue-chippers throughout 50 to 60 schools in Division 1 which is a first big step toward equality.

Another thing, the NCAA has lowered the amount of scholarships you can give. At no time can you have more than 15 basketball players on scholarship. They can bring in 15 in one year or spread it over four years, but at no time can there be more than 15 on scholarship.

That's step No. 2. Third, with the exception of states like Indiana —

College Basketball Review

AL MCGUIRE

WELCOME to Miller Time

Sports Columnist

Branch McCracken and Bobby Knight country — and Kentucky, where the late Adolph Rupp and now Joe Hall are making it routine to go Uptown and almost common to make the Final Four, basketball for years has been a city game. An overwhelming majority of thoroughbreds came out of Chi, the Big Apple, L.A. and D.C. But today, there's great ballplayers in states like Montana, Louisiana and Maine.

This has come about because basketball has come center ring, made the spotlight, gone SRO. It has you've got the time, we've got the camp.

In addition, basketball coaches have finally left the shadows of the goalposts. It used to be, at many schools, they were also assistant coaches in football, but now basketball coaches are extremely well paid, have competent staffs and the schools have provided them the money to promote, recruit and scout.

Most coaches, too, try to help themselves by trying to keep their schedule relatively soft. That's because most teams go to the NCAA on their record. Some bids are based on conferences, but the rest on record. So today, outside of a regional hook-up, non-conference bookings are usually weak sisters. That's why so many schools today start their conferences with 10-0 records.

Finally, televised regional or national games provide a big payoff and have spawned larger recruiting budgets and bigger facilities — some of them mammoth in size. Syracuse is touching close to 30,000 at tip-off time, and the University of Tennessee is building a new arena to seat 25,000.

So, college basketball, welcome to the major leagues, the heavyweight division, the eighth race, the super bowl of college sports. But forget about any consistency in individual schools any more, the fabric has been irretrievably changed. And parity will be the word for whatever college basketball is for the next century.

Parity has already sent the word "upset" the way of the buffalo. Today you can never count a game an "upset" unless it's on the road. Even Chaminade beating Virginia is not that much of an upset, because it was at Chaminade. There is no upset on the road. Only if you beat 'em on their turf.

Plesac chosen pre-season all-America

by Bruce Winkworth
Assistant Sports Editor

State left-handed pitcher Dan Plesac has been selected pre-season all-America by Baseball America, a Durham-based publication that specializes in coverage of minor league and college baseball.

Baseball America bases its all-America team on a poll of major league scouting directors. Plesac's older brother Joe was a first-team pre-season selection for the Wolfpack a year ago and was selected in the second round of the June free-agent draft.

The younger Plesac, a second-round St. Louis Cardinals draft choice out of high school, was the only first-team selection from the ACC. Shortstop Bill Merrifield and outfielder Tommy Gregg, both of Wake Forest, were named as honorable mentions.

"This is a great honor for Dan, coming from the scouts," said State baseball coach Sam Esposito. "I have a great deal of respect for the scouts. I hope Dan can live up to their estimation of him. This doesn't guarantee him a great year."

Esposito said the extra attention from scouts can have either a positive or negative effect on college players.

"These kids aren't blind," Esposito said. "They can see the scouts in the stands at the games. The scouts obviously see in Dan what we do. He's a big, strong kid with a great arm. I hope he has an all-America year."

Lo answers Duke antics with career best

by Bray Teet
Sports Writer

The lights were out, and the spotlight was focused on center court as the names of the players were announced. As Lorenzo Charles' name was called, pizza boxes and lids flew on to the court.

Duke students are known for coming up with ideas to get on player's and coach's nerves. Before the game, it was rumored there were pizza deliveries for the State players.

All this came about because of a mistake that Charles made this summer. He was arrested and convicted of stealing a pizza from a delivery man. That moment in Charles' life helped turn around the way he thinks about life in general and basketball in particular.

When it occurred, Coach Jim Valvano told Charles he could work to overcome this and become a better person and player. The Duke crowd saw how much it affected him. He had one of the best games of his career.

"I tried not to let it bother me," said Charles. "It didn't bother me that much. I just came up here to play a game."

And play a game he did, scoring 13 points — a career high — pulling down five rebounds and blocking two shots. Charles hit six of eight shots from the field and was one for one from the charity stripe.

The Brooklyn native's point total could have been 14 or 15, but for teammate Cozell McQueen's lane violation on the front end of a Charles' one-and-one opportunity.

On the season, Charles has made 40 of 60 free throws. A majority of those 40 have come near the end of the season. Charles has lately become the player everyone thought he could be.

Even though Charles had a good game, he was saddled with foul trouble early in the second half. He picked up his fourth foul about four minutes into the second half, but he returned for the play that finally broke Duke's back.

At the beginning of the second half, Duke came out on the floor ready to play. Duke took the lead at 17:30, and the game saw-sawed back and forth until the 9:36 mark when Sidney Lowe made a perfect pass in a difficult situation.

Both the ball and Lowe were headed out of bounds when he passed the ball to Charles for a wide open slam dunk. Charles made the shot, was fouled and made the following freethrow.

"I knew he was going to give it to me," Charles said. "When I saw him going out of bounds, I saw him looking at me while he was in the air. I tried to get as close to the basket as I could. He was giving me the eye."

"All the Duke players were looking at Sid because they didn't think he was going to save it. That left me wide open."

"That play was the turning point in the game," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski. "Up to that point, we were in the game, but that three-point play put them up by two and got them rolling."

Charles came to State out of high school averaging 20 points and 14 rebounds per game. He hasn't quite matched those stats in college, but he is working on it. This season he is averaging 6.1 points and 4.5 rebounds per game.

Also out of high school, he was considered the "sleeper of the year in East." In his first year at State, he saw limited play in 24 games. This year he has started every game.

The sleeper looks as if he is beginning to awaken. Charles has all the tools to make him an excellent power forward. All he has to do is learn to use them better. If he does, look out ACC, because there will be a Lorrila on the loose.

Pack meets Ralph, 'Hoos one last time

Out of Bounds

Now that Jim Valvano has finally defeated his No. 1 nemesis, North Carolina, there still remains one more ACC rival the State coach has failed to defeat — yes, Virginia. Valvano and his Wolfpack, 0-5 against the Cavaliers, will get the chance to change that trend Sunday in Charlottesville, Va. The State-UVA game, set for 2 p.m., will be broadcast by Raycom TV.

The game also affords State the chance to avenge some oh-so-close losses since Valvano took the reins. The latest and most upsetting was the 88-80 setback to the Cavs in an earlier meeting.

In the last regularly-scheduled game between the two teams this season, State would like to stop the Wahoons and Ralph Sampson before he ventures the NBA way. Defeating another top five team within nine days is a challenge in itself, but defeating the Cavaliers in Ralph's House is a near improbability. They just don't lose there often. The Tar Heels are the only team to have beaten the Cavs there this season, snapping a 34-game home winning streak for Virginia.

But the Pack, hopefully, won't be thinking about what it can't do. The North Carolina victory has seemingly instilled in State the confidence it will need the rest of the season. "Virginia will not have a late-season letdown now with the regular-season conference championship still to be decided," said Valvano.

A win would nearly assure the Wolfpack, with two big upsets under its belt, a post-season bid. After winning seven of its last eight games, including a key 96-79 victory at Duke, State stands at 16-8 overall and 7-4 in the ACC for fourth place in the league.

The Pack's starting seniors, Sidney Lowe and Thurl Bailey, are playing the best basketball of their illustrious careers. Against the Blue Devils, Bailey dumped in 26 points and Lowe scored a career-high 23, while parcelling out 12 assists.

The Cavaliers, 9-2 in league play and 22-3 overall, are coming off a near-upset at the hands of cellar-dwelling Clemson at Death Valley Wednesday night. Othell Wilson's basket with two seconds left lifted the 'Hoos to a 85-83 win in overtime. Virginia, which got a 29-point, 13-rebound effort by Sampson, trailed by as much as nine points in the second half. The Tigers' forte was their three-point proficiency as they connected 12 of 18.

In the earlier loss to the Cavaliers, State managed a 16-point lead in the first half as Derek Whittenburg canned 27 points during that frame. The second half, as you know, Whit came down on Othell Wilson's foot and broke his own.

The Pack was totally dominated inside as Sampson gave a 33-point, 21-rebound show, and forwards Wilson and Rick Carlisle combined for 24 points. Guards Craig Robinson and Tim Mullen were held to a 10-point total, however.

State may hold its own in the lanes a little better this time. Lorenzo Charles and Cozell McQueen have put on strong performances of late and are beginning to show signs of maturation. Against Duke, Charles scored a career-high 13 points and claimed five rebounds, while McQueen accounted for six points and 10 boards.

Sampson leads Virginia with an 18.7 scoring average and a 12.1 rebound mark per game. Wilson (14.4) and Carlisle (10.0) are the only other double-figure scorers. Jim Miller hits at a 9.5 clip, Robinson 7.9, Mullen 7.7 and top reserve Ricky Stokes 6.6.

The Pack has the tools for an upset, as it has always shown; let's hope it can utilize them to give Jimmy V. another first.

Indoor tracksters to compete

by Scott Keepler
Sports Writer

State's indoor track team will be taking its act — or as much of it as possible — to Fairfax, Va., Sunday, for a 2 p.m. tri-meet with George Mason and East Carolina. The host Patriots, members of the East Coast Athletic Conference, feature a very talented team and should offer the Wolfpack quite a challenge.

Coach Tom Jones' squad has been wiped thin by a multitude of recent injuries, but Jones is hoping that the ones who do make the trip will perform well.

"We're banged up, no doubt about that," Jones said. "But we'll still be taking about 20 people, and I'd like to get some qualified for the NCAAs."

Three of State's tracksters have already qualified, but Jones hopes a few more will be going to Detroit, Mich., for the March 11-12 championships.

"Simon Ware could qualify for us in the triple jump," Jones said. "And Harvey McSwain has a good shot in the 60-yard dash. He has run a 6.25 (.03 seconds off NCAA time)."

Dee Dee Hoggard, who qualified with a hand-timed 6.0, 60-yard dash earlier in the season, will be striving for a qualifying electronic time.

State will also be relying on Wilbert Carter and Than Emery in the shot put. Carter, whose personal best is a 60'3" effort, has been next to unbeatable this year.

Sooner Or Later You'll Get Responsibility Like This. In The Navy It's Sooner.

You're maneuvering 445 feet of guided missile frigate through the navigational hazards and non-stop traffic of one of the world's busiest ports.

But you'll dock safely. Because you know your equipment. You know your men. And even when the responsibility weighs in at 3,600 tons... you're ready.

After 4 years of college, you're ready for more responsibility than most civilian jobs offer. Navy officers get the kind of job and responsibility they want, and they get it sooner.

Navy officers are part of the management team after 16 weeks. Instead of boot camp, officer candidates receive four months of leadership training. It's professional schooling designed to sharpen their technical and management skills.

Then, in their first assignment, Navy officers get management experience that could take years in private industry. And they earn the decision-making authority it takes to make that responsibility pay off.

As their management abilities grow, Navy officers can take advantage of advanced education and training in fields as varied as operations management, electronics, and systems analysis. In graduate school it would cost you thousands; in the Navy we pay you.

And the Navy pays well. The starting salary is $17,000 (more than most companies pay). And that's on top of a comprehensive benefits program that can include special duty pay. After four years, with regular promotions and pay increases, the salary is up to as much as $31,000.

If you qualify to be an officer in the Navy, chances are you have what it takes to succeed. The Navy just makes it happen faster.
