Kremlin causes world war

by Wing Wang
United Plus International

World War III started in Israel after the Soviet Union invaded at 5 p.m. with massive forces from their basketball team.

"We the people of the Soviet Union wish to extend deepest sympathy to the Israelis, but our great team intends to stay in Israel for quite some time because of the nice climate," Premier And-drop-off said.

President Raygun regarded the move by the Kremlin as "one that the world will never forget and we will fight until the United States takes a break for the NCAA Championship."

"Basketball in America is our favorite past-time and no World War is going to stop us from having the NCAA Championship," Raygun said.

Israelis leaders made preparations to counter-attack with another Lebanese masquerade in Moscow. In the meantime, former defense minister Shell-Rome is attempting to be the leader of the "Pack" in an attempt to take the NCAA crown.

Many of the U.S. officials declined comment on the action by Shell-Rome and his cohorts. But, one official said, "Begun and Shell-Rome are definitely the right men for the job."

"Any help from the Israelis is all right by me. I just hope the guys know where the hell Albuquerque is," Coach Jim Valvejob said. Wolfpack fans are commending the Israelis for attempting to help in the Pack's drive for the coveted NCAA crown.

"I'm all for contributions from the world, as long as they can speak plain English. We don't need a bunch of foreigners over in New Mexico yelling out all kinds of jibberish during the game," Joe Blow said.

Basketball fans from every part of the world will be in Albuquerque for the NCAA finals. Most residents of Albuquerque are ready for the onslaught.

One innovative person has decided to rent his entire house, family and friends to the highest bidder. He believes that his deal can offer the Pack crowd support and a place to stay for some lucky individuals during the games.

U.S. officials determined that the city of Albuquerque will sink approximately three inches due to the weight from the large numbers of people. This NCAA championship will have the largest contribution from people all over the world.

"The people of America must stay the course for this NCAA tournament because of the never-ending upsets by the cinderella teams," President Raygun said.

Technician political columnist Thomas Paul Dewitt announced today that he is running for the Democratic nomination for governor of North Carolina.

It is believed that Bill Coby will be the Republican nominee.

"When I heard that they were planning on running Bill again, I knew it was a message from God," Dewitt said.

Department of Health closes University Dining Service stores

by Frank Dudley II
Staff Writer

University Dining Services must close because every store on campus failed a recent state inspection that discovered unsanitary conditions.

On Thursday the North Carolina Department of Health conducted a spot inspection of State's food services because of numerous complaints by students, according to R.U. Kleen, director of the Department of Health.

"Since the beginning of the school year we've been receiving calls from students," Kleen said, "but we didn't do anything in the fall semester because we figured it was due to students adjusting their taste buds from home cooking to cafeteria cooking."

Kleen's office has received 19,000 calls from students. The large amount of complaints influenced Kleen's decision to conduct the inspection.

"I started to get suspicious after the 16,998 call, so then I thought that I better check into it," Kleen said.

On Thursday, the department sent undercover inspectors to taste the food to test the quality of it.

"We sent two inspectors, Rosamaria LaCorta and Kenny Henry, into the new Dining Hall to test the quality of the food. They came back with low scores as well as indigestion," Kleen said.

"To double check the test, we sent another two, Terri Lynn and Kyril Robin. They also came back with indigestion," Kleen said.

Raleigh Area Forecast:

Saturday: It will be raining heavily in Georgia Saturday as the Dawgs drown in their own tears. Weather for the flight to Albuquerque will be perfect, and TV reception to Albuquerque will be excellent in Charlottesville and Chapel Hill.

Sunday: The Easter Bunny will bring a National Championship egg which UVA, UNLV, UNC and Utah (all where u come first) could not find but at NCSU (where u come last and wait for the Thurlly exciting weather on Monday) the egg will be found.

(Forecast provided by Denny Crum, Hugh Durham, Guy Lewis and Jim Valvano.)

Thought for the Day: Sex, violence, drugs and insanity — really, I wouldn't recommend them, but they've always worked for me.

— Gerri Fallbetter

"Then, to see if it was an isolated case, we sent the same detectives into the other campus stores. Again they returned with digestive problems," Kleen said.

LaCorta, who tested the Italian cuisine, said the pasta was not up to par.

"The spaghetti was a disgusting! It tasted like a garbage," LaCorta said. "And my goodness, it was so overcooked it was a like eating worms."

Henny was responsible for testing the meat dishes at the Dining Hall. "They sucked, man. I couldn't believe how much they sucked. They tasted like tires that have run over cow shit," Henny said.

Lynn's tests were parallel to the results of LaCorta's and Henny's. "That food was like barf-out stuff. It was just, like, gross," Lynn said.

Robin's report was the only one in favor of the Dining Hall.

"It really wasn't all that bad," Robin said. "Sure, I needed my stomach pumped after I ate there, but oh, heck, give them a break, how can you expect them to create masterpieces in an atmosphere like the one they have in that pit."

Kleen said that even with the food sickness they would have just sent a "pass inspection" sticker, except they sent someone to check out the kitchens.

"We sent Tiffany Tiff out to check the kitchens," Kleen said. "We figured that Tiff has pretty low standards, and if anyone could pass an inspection they could pass Tiff's. Tiff's not the type of person who's afraid of moles, mice, rats and filth in general, but when she came back from the stores she was almost in shock."

Tiff reported on her findings. "I couldn't believe my eyes," Tiff said. "There were rats everywhere, running all over everything. They were in pots and pans, in cupboards, in the food that was sitting on the floor. They were just everywhere. Everytime I took a step, I'd wind up kicking a bunch out in front of me."

You know, I don't mind moles, mice, rats or filth in general, but this was disgusting. "And what was even worse was the eating utensils," Tiff said. "The dishes weren't being put into dishwashers, they were being licked clean by the friggings rats."

"Food was crusted on the pots and pans and mold and mildew was running rampant."

"When I first walked in I noticed a greenish hue to the area. I thought it was the paint on the walls. Boy, I was wrong. It was the mold and mildew build up in the area."

Technician tried to contact Ida Advance, director of University Dining, but all she would say was, "I knew we couldn't get away with it forever."

Kleen was asked where students would eat if they closed the stores. "Heck," he said, "if they put up with this garbage for so long they can surely go out and eat some place like the Golden Arches."

waging a war on area evoiders.

Sgt. Lorne Order of the RPD said, "We don't know where they've been coming from, but they keep on coming. It's like somebody opened a door at the Haha Hotel and all the fruitcakes walked out."

Although no innocent bystanders have been injured by the alleged heroes, several alleged criminals have been severely battered and have required weeks of hospital care. "There was one guy," said Order, "who was brought in here by some clowns masquerading as The Green Hornet and Kato. The Hornet fellow said the guy was the ringleader of a massive dope ring and I should lock him up. They had beaten the poor guy to pudding. That Kato must have steel on his shoes. His footprints were all over the guy's face."

Order did not arrest the alleged ringleader because no conclusive evidence had been produced and the Hornet was not a duly deputized officer of the law.

"I appreciate their civic duty and all," Order said, "and the crime rate has dropped 55 percent, but these people are terrorizing the community."

Some Raleigh citizens have reported stories of their encounters with the costumed do-gooders. "I was standing on the Pullen Road bridge, ready to jump onto the tracks in front of a train to end my sorry existence," said Lou Lipschitz, 39, an unemployed Maytag repairman. "When, all of a sudden, like, I heard a voice say 'Stop!' and I looked up and saw what I thought was a bird. But it was flying too fast for a bird, so I thought it was a plane. But it was flying too low for a plane. And then, it flew right toward me and I saw it was a man dressed in blue leotards, like the dancers wear, a red cape and a big red 'S' on his chest.

"He flew right toward me, picked me up like I was an empty bag of peanuts and dropped me about 20 feet in front of an ABC store. He musta had a jet pack or something under his cape."

Another story of the Caped Wonder comes from Lois Lane, a second-string reporter for The News and Disturber, a local grocery-store tabloid.

"I was walking home late from work," said Lane, "and four young men jumped out of an alley and pulled out some wicked-looking knives. I thought I was a goner until a man in blue tights and a red cape suddenly fell from the sky.

"The kids rushed him with the

Yocum cries foul play on Technician, Baker

by "Crash"
Ex-Ed

Student Body President Jim Yocum had harsh words Thursday for Technician and Student Senate President Jeff Baker because of the guest opinion running on the opinion page of today's paper.

"I can't believe what (Jeff) said," Yocum said.

"Technician is a discredit to journalism. Any paper that would print something like that about its leaders, true or not, is not worth the paper it's printed on," Yocum said.

"Jeff really has no room to talk. The things I know about his campaign last year... Well let's just say that I wouldn't want the student body to know about them," Yocum said.

Yocum was interviewed at a press conference after news of Baker's article became public. In a defiant gesture, Yocum extended his middle finger into the air when he was asked what he thought should be done about Baker's article.

"Baker can put his article where the sun don't shine," Yocum said. "As far as I'm concerned, Jeff Baker never deserved to be elected in the first place. I always have been a strong supporter of Stan Gallagher and I just can't understand how the student body would be duped into voting for a person like Baker. I mean what a loser."

Yocum was apparently shocked by Baker's attitude about the basketball team.

"I thought Jeff liked basketball," Yocum said, "Especially the way he tried every trick in the book just to get those tickets to the game this weekend."

"I should have expected this out of Jeff. He's been hanging around Technician offices a lot, so I guess I know where his attitude came from," Yocum said.

North Hall missing

by I. Claudius
Staff Writer

Public Safety officers and the Raleigh Police Department are investigating the theft of North Hall, according to Raleigh Police Sgt. Lorne Order.

The theft of the building was reported Tuesday morning by students who at first thought they were too drunk to miss something so "frigging huge," said Clark Barr, 20, a sophomore in misreading design. "I mean, me and my roommates had partied hearty most of the night after Monday's pep rally," said Barr, "and we were so toasted we had to crawl on the ground to keep from falling, if you know what I mean."

"When we got to North Hall all we saw was some cinder blocks, a few grinders and a great big hole in the ground. We first thought, 'Where the hell did we wind up?' and then decided just to sleep on the grass.

"The next morning, when we were sure we were awake and saw for certain that the building was gone, we called Public Safety. They thought it was a prank and told us to go throw up in our shoes. We were kind of hurt by that."

"We did send a car round to check on the boys," said Public Safety Capt. Larry Vile to make sure they wouldn't hurt themselves, but by God, they were right. The officers on the scene confirmed that the building had indeed been stolen.

Police are unsure about how exactly North Hall was spirited away without anyone seeing it.

"Near as I can tell," said Order, "the police were so busy controlling the traffic and the crowds that they just didn't have the time or attention to notice it was gone. What can I say? We're lousy human."

Chancellor Bruce Poulton said he was holding the Raleigh Police personally responsible for the theft.

"I am also authorizing a reward of $100 for information leading to the location of the missing dormitory," said Poulton. "We'll show whoever did this heinous act that N.C. State plays for keeps."

According to police, some clues have been found indicating what may have happened to the building.

"We found evidence of tire tracks near the scene," Order said, "and we think that some person or persons unknown sawed the building loose from its foundations, chained it to one of them really hefty four-wheel pickup jobbers and just gunned it. It wouldn't be a difficult job if the person knew what he was doing."

Police have found traces of the building in the ashes of the brickyard bonfire and in a trail winding from the site on Hillsborough Street all through the campus.

"We found traces of the building and of people all over the place," Gordon said. "Geez, it's a mess."

Speculation is rampant concerning who may have perpetrated the crime. "I personally think it was some engineering students who got high blowing a J," Order said. "Or it may have been a prank done by those arm pits over at Chapel Hill. Crazy kids."

Opinion

A paper that is entirely the product of the student body becomes at once the official organ through which the thoughts, the activity and in fact the very life of the campus are registered. It is the mouthpiece through which the students themselves talk. College life without its journal is blank.

Cancel classes for party

Win or lose this weekend, next Tuesday's classes must be cancelled.

Let's face it; students need at least one day to recover from the massive parties which are going to take place. Does anyone really think that students are going to go to any classes on Tuesday?

Students are going to do what students do best — PARTY. No one is going to even consider studying or preparing for exams. Students are going to drink, drink, drink and we're not talking about sodas and Kool-Aid.

What is the purpose of going to school? Everyone readily admits that the main reason for attending State is to be an athletic supporter for the Cardiac Pack. State students have been waiting for another chance to take a bite at the big one for some time.

Classes should not only be cancelled on Tuesday, but Food Services should serve free beer to every student who has spent all of his money at the beach during Easter weekend.

Extra toilet paper should be donated to all of the residence halls so that students will find it easy to have something to throw after the games. Have the local beer distributors been asked to install beer taps in all of the water fountains? At the very least, students are going to need extra beer just to survive another close game.

Even if classes are held on Tuesday, are any of the professors going to be there? Of course not.

They are going to be more hungover than the students. The students will not be hungover. They will still be drinking on Tuesday morning. State students are going to be partying from the airport to the Capitol. Classes will be the furthest thing from the dead brain cells in students' minds.

All of the administrators who have gone to the game this weekend will not be back in time to work on Tuesday, so why should students be forced to work if the administration is not going to.

Cancel classes and give away beer. That seems like the only solution that will really make students happy. Remember, a happy student is a student drinking a beer when classes have been cancelled. Isn't that what we want to do all of the time, anyway?

'Doesn't give a damn' attitude

Yocum's campaign offensive

RE-ELECT JIM YOCUM

Concerning the recent elections and the tactics used by certain candidates running for office, the morally offensive campaigns waged by some students were disgusting in their disregard for the students here at State.

In particular, Student Body President Jim Yocum has shown a complete disregard for ethics and the entire student body. His arm gesture on his campaign poster indicates his lack of knowledge and care for the issues plaguing State students; rather, he demonstrates only scorn for the issues.

What does this raised arm mean? Is it a racial slur of some kind?

Does he address any pertinent issues in his campaign poster? No. He even says this is the last time he's running for office.

Thank goodness. This technique of running unopposed for office is commonly used in the Soviet Union. We must protect the impressionable youth of this country from these sorts of people. I am calling for a recall election so that we can get rid of this immoral, unethical, communist practice of running unopposed for office.

Was Yocum sworn into office by placing his hand on the Bible and swearing allegiance to

AS STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT THIS IS THE LAST TIME, REALLY IT IS.

Jim Yocum's infamous defiant gesture towards the student body in his campaign poster. A picture is worth a thousand words.

and not gone to church? And the basketball games are sponsored by beer companies, too. The evils of alcohol are too easily seen on college campuses now without the media encouraging students to drink more beer.

Rumors circulating around campus say that Yocum was seen drinking at a recent basketball game between Student Government and the student publications. Where does it say in the Student Government documents that the student body president — the highest elected official on this campus (much less important than the Student Senate president) has the right to drink a beer and play basketball.

Either Yocum should resign from office or face the wrath of the student body if he ever seeks any other public office. It is hoped that he speaketh the truth on his campaign poster when he claims that this is the last time that he'll run for office. The student body will hold him to that campaign promise.

Editor's note: Jeff Baker is the Student Senate president and is currently in Albuquerque, N.M. The Lord only knows what he is doing there.

A Guest Opinion

JEFF BAKER

Student Senate President

God, Country and Campus? Did he make a statement to indicate that he is in favor of a strong national defense complete with the strongest nuclear arsenal, the strongest technology can produce? He has refrained from making a statement concerning the really important issues.

Where does Yocum stand on school prayer? What about busing? Was it Yocum who started the forced Wolfline-busing scheme? Is he for or against abortion? If he is "pro-choice," then why didn't he give the student body a choice for student body president. Where was the student body president when State students acted like a bunch of immature, atheistic delinquents and mobbed onto Hillsborough Street because of a silly 'ol basketball game?

Speaking of basketball, no one from Student Government has spoken out against the idol worship which is taking place over a bunch of basketball players. How many times have these boys played basketball on Sunday

Fly to New Mexico

We think it is disgusting that all of the airlines joined together to quadruple the price of tickets to Albuquerque, N.M. Thank goodness that an independent airline such as Sunlight Airlines has stepped forward in the nick of time to offer students a reasonable package which can be purchased to make the trip to Albuquerque.

Sunlight has an ad for the trip, which is open only to students, on the back page of Technician which explains to students the total costs ($100) and what the package includes. The price includes the price of airfare, one ticket to each game in N.M., and three nights lodging in a cheap motel.

If State wins the whole shooting match, Sunlight has agreed to donate one bottle of champagne to be split among the student body. That's generosity. Have any of the other airlines offered to cut fares for students and give them free champagne if we win?

Sunlight has said that only the first 112 students who sign up for the flight can take advantage of this great offer, but they are recommending that students bring along a short length of rope because the Sunlight planes don't have any seat belts.

The plane will be leaving from the Greater Garner Airport because the major airlines and the Wolfpack Club have booked every runway at the Raleigh-

Durham Airport. Sunlight says that the Garner Airport is better because its dirt runway has some ruts and bumps in just the right places which makes takeoff easier.

We wish some other area businesses would try to help students as much as Sunlight Airlines has. When was the last time students were offered an all-you-can-eat meal for only 99 cents? Have students been able to buy a new car for only $2,000 lately? When have any textbooks been priced in single digits? When was the last time that the administration asked for a fee decrease? When has tuition been lowered?

Let's face, Students are getting the shaft from everybody. No one cares if students can afford to go to Albuquerque. If more groups like Sunlight Airlines would try to help students maybe college life would be more bearable.

Granted that Sunlight's offer has some drawbacks though. It would be better if the plane had a pressurized cabin and the fact that it has to hire an out-of-work crop duster to fly its plane seems a bit risky, but we're sure that the pilot knows where all of the tree tops are. At least students will get a good view of the ground since they will be flying low to avoid radar.

We hope that all of the students who take Sunlight Airlines up on this bargain offer will have a good time cheering for the team if they get to Albuquerque.

Stan bitches again

This letter is just to say "thanks" to Technician for not endorsing me this year while I was running for Student Center president.

Last year, Technician endorsed me, and I lost in a runoff to Jeff Baker. This year, they endorsed Steve Duncan, and I won the first time around.

When I read that Technician had endorsed my opponent, I told Steve that he might as well not even campaign because it was a lost cause.

He wouldn't listen, though, so he put in a lot of work that was futile from the start. I tried to tell him, Technician endorsement is the kiss of death for a candidate.

Look at the record. Rich won in a runoff after a close regular election in which he could have lost. Technician endorsed him. Jim Yocum was running alone and still didn't get all the votes after Technician endorsed him.

Once again, I would like to thank Technician for not helping me. I couldn't have done it with you.

Weekly striptease begins tonight

Girls bare skin in honor of April

by The Heat
Entertaining Editor

Looking for entertainment? You don't have to go far to get it. As a matter of fact, you don't have to venture any farther than this campus. Interested?

As part of the UAB's (Undivided Attention Billboard) activities for April, a weekly striptease contest between all students fitting the qualifications of female and creative is going to be held in the Blue Room Fridays beginning today at 9 p.m. Harris Wholesale is going to have Coors draft available to the audience at five cents a mug.

The stage has been set already for tonight and what a doosey! Candy Newfunfun will feature her juggling oranges accompanied by the Whatsuptop Girls and their heavy coconuts. Following this fruity act, there will be a five-minute intermission where Newfunfun and the Girls will bring their talents closer for the audience's examination.

It gets better! A trio calling themselves Buttermore, are going to fashion the latest suntan lotions — on skin only. The group doesn't believe in wearing bathing suits because as one member put it, "The lotion isn't put to the true test, unless you bare it all."

I'm afraid the next act is not going bare as much to the audience, but it should be equally enjoyable. Shelli Enhance, A'll Sparks, Sue Holdtight and Fellow Steelyourheart have put together a show straight from material out of Penthouse. So this act can be performed to its fullest potential, all males in the audience will be invited on stage to participate.

And now for halftime... A chorus line of Payboy bunnies costumed only in rabbit ears and fluffy tails are going to dance away to the sounds of Herb Alpert's "Rise." Sloe Comfortable Screw Against The Wall drinks will be served to put the audience's view in correct perspective.

Afterward, more provocative action will be brought on stage. The second half line-up is just as satisfying or better than the first half. What is it? Well, that's a secret, but take the gamble and come see. Tickets are only $25 for this premiere performance. Come on and have an enlightening experience — one you will not forget for a long, long time.

Ronnie returns to acting career

by Rickums
Editor In Charge Of Deviance

In our wide and changing world it is so very difficult to keep up with the developments and changes in all phases of our lives. Some sort of clearing house of information is needed. It is to this end that this column is provided to enlighten you to the latest "happenings" in the entertainment world.

After over a dozen unhappy and unsuccessful marriages Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor are going to give matrimony one more try. The couple stated that one evening while dining together at a Chinese restaurant both of their fortune cookies read, "You have within your grasp the answer to your dreams." Neither one of the two realized that the floral arrangement on the table was one of poppies.

Ex-teen idol Shaun Cassidy, in an effort to once again be popular and have a job, will be broadcasting live from the cargo bay of the Space Shuttle Columbia. The concert will be transmitted, via satellite, from an altitude of over 200 miles above the earth. Astronaut John Glenn will give a cameo performance as lead guitarist for Cassidy's band.

Backwards masking is a subject that has religious leaders and entertainment industry experts up in arms. In a surprise news conference Jerry Falwell, leader of the Moral Majority, blasted The Osmonds, The Statler Brothers and Perry Como for putting devilish messages on their albums. Falwell stated that when one records Donny Osmond's name and birthdate backwards in Swahili the message, "Kool-Aid is better," can be clearly heard.

The television industry was shocked yesterday to learn that the cast and crew of "Saturday Night Live" and "Mr. Rogers" voted to consolidate the two hit shows into one hour-long program. NBC spokesman I. M. Deviante claimed the shows were combined to appeal "to a broader and more intellectual audience." The hybrid program hopes to reach the age 1 to 25 audience.

Rumors that James Worthy has gone to Broadway are true. Worthy is said to have given a sterling performance as Othello in Shakespeare's classic of the same name. The ex-basketball star turned thespian refuses to play short parts. Worthy's on-stage presence is something to experience. He shows a great deal of energy and rhythm but suffers from occasional mental lapses and has been reprimanded for slam-dunking small children and props through an off-stage hoop.

During a news conference Thursday, President Ronald Reagan and an emotional Nancy Reagan, announced that he would be resigning from his post within the week. He said he wished to return to acting and had received a wonderful offer to run his own "neighborhood." Reagan went on to say that it would be real joy to teach children about nuclear warfare. Can you say "holocaust"?

Ron Howard of "Happy Days," "The Andy Griffith Show" and American Graffiti fame outlined a major new movie project he is considering. Howard claims that Aunt Bee came to him in a dream riding a new, black Harley and advised him to sell all his worldly possessions and buy a 4-wheel drive Ford pickup. Howard plans to shoot a film about a city boy who leaves his Atari game cartridges and upper-middle class, suburban home for a life on the road. Gary Coleman will have the starring role, and Deborah Harry will play his worldly girlfriend.

Valley girl Moon Unit Zappa decided early this morning to accompany Shaun Cassidy on his orbital concert. She hopes to further the cause of the val, to spread ignorance and bliss throughout the universe and to start her own line of Val Dolls. When asked to comment on her upcoming trip into the upper atmosphere with Cassidy she said, "For sure, like it's so tubular and, like, well da doo ron ron."

I hope this glimpse into the crazy world of entertainment has been of interest to you. See you next year.

Technician writers obtain career with Playboy

Remember those two Technician reporters who brought you all those interesting interviews with all those interesting people? Well, they finally got their big break.

When Tim Ellington and Craig Dean ran their stories about Al Goldstein — the publisher of Screw magazine — and David Chan — the Playboy photographer who is shooting the "Girls of the Atlantic Coast Conference" spread, Hugh Hefner, the owner of Playboy got interested in the two reporters.

"I got news of all the stories about pornography that they were doing, so I decided to look into it," said Hefner in a telephone interview from his Los Angeles home. "I was so impressed that I gave them jobs as corresponding reporters."

What that means to Ellington and Dean is that they will be able to continue working on their degrees at State, while traveling across the country on weekends and holidays to work for Playboy.

"I was so surprised when I heard," said an excited

Dean, "that I called Tim immediately and told him the good news."

"When I heard from Craig, it was like a dream come true," said Ellington. "It's the kind of thing that you lie in bed and dream about."

In addition to working with Dean in their normal interviews, Hefner said that Ellington will continue to write his Trying To acts in the country, as well as give previews to all of the newly released albums by all of the top groups.

This is definitely a big break for the two State students. But will their success affect their studies?

"No, I don't think so," Ellington said. "Craig and I talked it over before accepting the offer, and decided that if it began to have any negative effects on our see, Hefner said that he will be assigning them such things as interviews with famous celebrities and big events in the world of entertainment.

When asked how they felt about being involved with Playboy's beautiful women, they said it wouldn't affect them because "the most beautiful girls in the world are at State anyway."

The two men were recently flown to a party at the Playboy Hotel in Atlantic City, N.J., where a party was given in their honor. They were surrounded by beautiful women in bathing suits and asked to pose for some pictures. "We agreed with no hesitation," Dean said.

The two will be given a private jet, along with a pilot and Playboy bunny waitresses to conduct their business with. They are reported to have left early this morning for Albuquerque to watch the State-Georgia ball game.

We at Technician wish to extend best wishes to these young men as they embark on their new careers. We will certainly miss them and their work at Technician.

Make It column for Playboy.

"His column was so sexually oriented anyway that I told him to keep writing it, with a little more flair, of course," Hefner said.

Not only will Ellington write independently, but Dean will also. He will be the new Playboy music critic. He will attend opening shows across the country to review the biggest scholastic achievement, that we would quit."

"I think that it will help actually," Dean said. "It will make us work harder to get our school work done so that we will have time to pursue our new interests."

What kind of work can we be expecting from these two newcomers to the world of international entertainment? Well we will just have to wait and

Plowboy Magazine recruits beefy females for September special

by I. Claudius
Feature Writer

Warm breath. Firm thighs. Soft, downy hair. Good teeth. Strong hooves. Requirements for any young heifer who wants to be selected as Bovine Beautiful for the controversial Plowboy magazine.

Over the next week, Plowboy photographers will be scouring the southeast for candidates who fit the magazine's checklist of "Big, Beefy and Bossie." The subjects who caress the lucky camera's eye hope to be tapped as Beautiful Beef of the Month for the centerfold.

The search is part of an annual pictorial saluting various livestock animals across this country. In previous years, Plowboy has shot pictorials on subjects like Swine of the Southwest, Poultry of the Pac 10 and A Smelly Look at the Ivy League.

The theme for the September issue of the magazine is "Beautiful Bovines of the ACC," according to Plowboy founder and publisher Moo Heifner.

"We wanted to show the rest of the country that the South has plenty of pretty things to be proud of," said Heifner in a telephone interview from his California ranch. "Your cows are just one of them."

But not everything has gone smoothly. Many animal-rights groups have come down hard on the one-time manure-spreader-turned-publisher, contending that his magazine exploits the animals, paying them substandard feeds and portraying livestock in an unappetizing light.

Heifner vehemently denies the charges.

"Hey, look, at least we're not as bad as Rustler magazine," he said. "Have you seen that stuff? I mean, I like titillation as much as the next ranchhand, but tying up animals and branding them? That goes beyond good, clean, healthy fantasy right into some pretty twisted B&D. It's sick. Those guys are crippled."

"Now, just take a look at our latest issue. We've got a very tasteful pictorial on leg art in livestock advertising, a tender and loving look at The Plowboy Chicken Coop, where some of our models — and I do mean — hang out and a hard-hitting report on illegal mud-wrestling in non-NCAA sanctioned pigpens. This is high-class, yet neglected, stuff we feel the public has a right to know. And we don't need that tasteless 'cow-patty' humor to beef up our circulation."

"Time and Esquire steal story ideas right from the pages of our magazine, and I am not joking. Seriously."

Although his magazine has clearly been a success, Heifner's private life has been marred by one scandal after another. He has been accused of selling underage heifers to stud farms at an enormous profit, and also of corrupting other animals at his 1,300-acre estate "The Come-Blow-Your-Horn Ranch," so named because of the large numbers of bulls and roosters housed on the grounds.

One particularly nasty rumor was that Heifner was filming underground "corno" movies, showing cow-eyed you-g heifers being brutally milked by long-fingered farmboys with cold hands. There has also been talk of Heifner producing "snuff" movies, where cows and bulls are shown chewing their cud.

"They're absolutely dithguthing thingths," said Ann Arbor, president of the international Animal Savers Society. "There are jutht thome thingths that mutht remain private. They're filthy, ekthploitative and jutht plain icky! All the filth dithplay are hairy legh and bloated udderth. And what happenth to the poor cownth who think they're going to be made inthant tharth or high-prithed modeth? Nothing, that't what. Nothing but heartbreak and, later, a frozhen meat thection at the A&P."

Heifner denies the charges.

"No one has ever been able to prove any of those things and that's the way I intend to keep it," he said. "We're not going to cow-low to a bunch of blue-haired hens who are too old to cackle. Apart from the magazine, the only thing Plowboy Enterprises is interested in is a chain of milk & egg bars. That's all."

Despite the uproar raised by the pro-animal groups, a large turnout is expected for the "audition" sessions. The cattle call will commence on Saturday. Interested models should bring one profile and one body shot (preferably from a flank or hind angle). Lingerie and leashes will be provided.

Lock In cover for closeted women

by Leslie Bein
Feature Writer

A lot of the local bars have a weekly special just for the ladies. This once a week event, better known as 'Ladies Lock In' or 'Ladies Night', is a popular night out with a large majority of the college crowd. It is especially popular with the bar owners because it draws a good proportion of beer-thirsty, women-hungry men to a crowd of pleasantly intoxicated, equally eager females.

But sometimes things don't go as planned. Recently while enjoying a few cold beers at a local college establishment, I noticed that things aren't quite like they used to be.

A friend and I had gone out to celebrate Wednesday night and scope out some of the male coeds that frequent the Ladies Night parties when I realized that something different was going on.

Maybe it was just the beer getting to the girls, or maybe it was just their mid-week frustrations coming out, but these girls were acting strange, for sure. It wasn't quite time for the guys to come in and maybe the music was just too rowdy to sit still, but two or three groups of girls got up and started dancing together. They looked like they were having a good time, and before long, the dance floor was full of female bodies gyrating to the beat.

The arrival of more girl friends brought on shrieks of excitement and warm hugs of welcome. The beer flowed nonstop. The girls continued their "Soul Train" moves with each other. I then began to notice that the crowd would thin out in groups of two or three, and then return in five to 10 minutes. I watched one of these female excursions and realized that they were going to the bathroom. Laughing, and holding each other's arms, they sweetly strolled to the facilities. After they got inside, I have no idea what went on. What puzzles me though, is the fact that it doesn't take that long...

This whole situation was beginning to get to me, and I was ready to leave. Since I had stayed this long, I decided to stay and see what choice of beefcake would arrive at 10. I was hoping that this would remedy the situation with the other females in the bar. Instead of the girls dancing with the guys, they (the dancers) began to walk out as the anticipating men made their way from the bar to the dance floor.

I guess this just goes to show that times are changing. Maybe there was another bar special elsewhere. I don't know. It still beats me how and why girls want to be so friendly with other girls when there are so many gorgeous men that come out looking for a good time at these Ladies Night specials. Oh well, I guess that I should be glad — that cuts down on the competition and leaves that many more men for me to choose from. And you better believe that I had a good time that night.

Runners give city bad image

Raleigh mayor cancels Road Race

by Melon Kelly

Raleigh runners will have to hang up their running shoes for another year, according to the Raleigh City Council. The Great Raleigh Road Race scheduled for April 10 has been cancelled.

Raleigh Mayor Speeds Dork met with city officials Monday night to discuss cancellation of this year's race and possible future abolishment of the race.

"I'm thoroughly disgusted with the whole thing," Dork said. "I'm sick of having thousands of sweaty people running around our town."

Dork told city officials that this race was giving outsiders a bad impression of Raleigh.

"Visitors come to Raleigh and see these looneys running around panting and spitting all over the streets. They must think the whole town is mad."

"We had originally planned to change this year's race course," said another city council member anonymously.

The race has been run down Hillsborough Street and to the fairgrounds. The course was rerouted to start and end at the Civic Center.

"Our purpose in changing the course was to prevent beltline traffic from seeing the runners and causing Raleigh further embarrassment," the councilman said.

The council decided that even this move would not be sufficient to protect Raleigh's image.

Dork admitted that he once ran the race himself. "It was a bad experience," he said. "After I ran myself, I discovered how ridiculous the whole thing is," he said. "I hope the people of Raleigh will come to their senses also." Dork said.

Bowen tributes Pack

NOTE: This song was written by the girls in Suite 303, Bowen Dorm, as a tribute to Jim Valvano and his Cardiac Kids. The words fit the music first written for the Cleveland Browns, who are also known as the "Cardiac Kids."

Saturday morning, and I'm all psyched up
It's quarter till three and I gotta get up
Tip-off time in fifteen bells
And the State Wolfpack is gonna give 'em hell
With Thurl all over and Charles on the line
Derek and Sidney doing real fine —
Offense, defense doing their thing,
When Gannon shoots — you'll swear it has wings —

It's the State WOLFPACK
When they're psyched up — you can't shut 'em down —

Take your tranquilizers
Pop your beer can lids —
IT'S THE CARDIAC KIDS...
Now, Jim and the team got together one day —
And put plutonium in the Gatorade
Said NCAA is coming up fast
Let's hit Albuquerque like an atomic blast
We shot Cavaliers, and we tarred them Heels —
We ran those Rebels, and we made Daugs squeal
We rode on Waves, and the Deacons fell
We're from N.C. State, and we gave 'em hell!

It's the State WOLFPACK
When they're psyched up — you can't shut 'em down —
Take your tranquilizers
Pop your beer can lids —

Heaving heavy balls wasn't Wilfred Carteret's lifetime ambition...

Lose shotputter, gain distanceman

by Bud Weaser
Sprints Riter

Once gargantuan State shotputter Wilfred Carteret has been diagnosed to have anorexia nervosa vosa which will end his career putting the steel ball. State athletics physician I. M. Quack said Thursday.

Carteret, who competed in the NCAA Indoor Championships mysteriously lost over 100 pounds last week and managed to throw a meager 39 feet in his last competition.

Carteret holds a personal record of 60'5".

State coach Don Bones doesn't think that Carteret's illness will end his athletic career though.

"We've started Wilfred running with the distance runners and we think that he has the potential to be one of the greatest distance runners in the history of the school," Bones said.

Wilfred will be making his debut on the track this Saturday at the Duke Invitational, and Bones is looking forward to seeing his newest human toothpick in action.

"We're expecting BIG things from Wilfred on the track," Bones said. "By not eating, Wilfred has been training while the other distance runners have been chowing down. That will be a definite advantage for Wilfred."

Rumors coming out of the track circle are that Carteret's disease has not affected his thirst though, and the born again roadster can keep his own with the best of Gatorade drinkers.

Reynolds flying

by Tony Coselli

Citing the Wolfpack's excellent performance in the NCAA Tournament, State officials have announced major renovations for Reynolds Coliseum in 1983-84. Hank Needon, assistant athletic director at State, said one change in particular would be of great comfort to Wolfpack fans attending Reynolds next year.

"We're tearing out the old wooden seats and installing the same kind you see on airliners," Needon said. "They're comfortable, convenient and look great. We're buying them from one of the airlines, and they'll have the Wolfpack logo on them."

Needon also said the new seats will also serve the same practical functions they do on airliners.

"They'll recline for fans wishing to take a nap," he said, "and they will have the same little dinner table that will fold out of the seat in front. As for front row ticket holders, tough beans. We can't please everyone."

The seats will also be of aid to those in discomfort during Wolfpack home games next season.

"During close games, oxygen masks will come out of the seat in front, just like an airline," said Needon. "Also, if the Wolfpack isn't playing too well, we're leaving the airsickness bags for those who wish to indulge."

Fans can also use the barf bags, to be called "Jimmy V-bags," to cover their heads, just in case they can't give it the old Jimmy V, but still feel sick on their stomachs and don't want to watch the game.

Laxman upset No. 1 Heels, coeds lend helping hand

by Rob Roy
Sprints Riter

State's lacrosse team used a goal by Billy Turnoff with 0:59 remaining to knock off No. 2 North Carolina at Lee Fields, Thursday.

Controversy surrounded the game as North Carolina played the final minute of the game under protest.

The protest was lodged because North Carolina claimed interference on Turnoff's goal.

As Turnoff raced down the field with the score tied at 14, three female students from State ran out on the field and kidnapped North Carolina goalie, Hans Blondie.

The coeds took Blondie off for over two hours, while the two coaches bickered back and forth about the goal.

The referees allowed Turnoff's goal and State held North Carolina scoreless in the final minute to pull the biggest upset in the long-standing history of State lacrosse.

The State coeds returned Blondie shortly after the game had concluded, and the tall, lanky Swede appeared dazed, but unharmed.

Asked about the incident, Blondie replied meekly. "It was awful. I... I... I don't want to talk about it."

North Carolina coach Gus Hussey wanted to talk about the incident though. "I think it's terrible what those girls did to Hans."

Hussey said. "You wouldn't see girls from Carolina doing that. This could affect Hans for the rest of the season."

State coach Harry Puke was thrilled after the win.

"This is the greatest win in the history of this school," Puke said. "We kicked their butts. I'm really proud of these guys."

Over a few cisterns of suds following the game, Turnoff still couldn't believe that State had beat the Tar Heels.

"I think that we proved we can play with anybody," Turnoff said. "This team is a team of Destiny. I think we can go all the way now." The Pack's next game is against Wake Forest, and an intense exciting battle is expected.

MAKING A WORLD OF DIFFERENCE

Intramurals hold major events, big things promised

As the Big Four Day approaches, intramural-intercollegiate teams from the Big Four schools are gearing up for a day of blood, sweat and tears. Well, hopefully just blood and sweat. All of the participants are too big to cry now, except maybe for those limpwrists from Chapel Hill and the Dukies from Dur-hambone.

The events are shaping up almost as good as a tough-man contest. The top seed in the Texas Death Match and Ball and Chain events are the Demonic Devils led by Bertha "Boom Boom" Marconi from Weber-Two asylum of the Wake Woods campus.

Those gals really know how to hurt a guy. Why one time, I hear that uh... I'll save that one for another day when less exciting things are the norm. Second-seeded Tub Tanker of State's Carroll Penitentiary for Sexual Deviates is expected to play a heavy roll in both of the lightweight events.

Other deviations from the norm include mudrasslin' and gauntlets galore. Favorites for these events are the squads from More-som(?) Youth Center and Stacies Brothel of Chapel Thrill. Both groups field mean and nasty tag teams and either could take the individual titles. Mascots from these organizations won't be left out of these perverted acts. During halftime, cockfights and pit bulldogs will duke it out for the title of "Baddest Pet Alive" (or dead) because awards often are given posthumously. Smaller pets will also share the limelight as tarantulas and scorpions will battle for "Deadliest Pet" between events and while coroners check vital signs.

For those of stronger disposition and stronger stomachs, the highlight of the day will be the traditional drawing and quartering of a virgin. If one can be found on any of the four institutions of higher perversions.

If none can be found, Cellulose Bullshit will have to suffice er... sacrifice. If he can be forcibly removed from the Press Room of the little boys' room.

For my predictions I must go with the Demonic Devils. The Pack should finish a strong second and could pull it out if Tanker can remain conscious. Battling for last place as usual will be the limpwrists and the Nukes.

Nevertheless, from dusk 'til dawn, the day should be filled with blood and sweat and maybe a few tears, but mostly blood.

State's head baseball coach Sam Espochico has been named to the Baseball Hall of Fame's new Eddie Miksis-Wayne Terwilliger Utility Infielder Obscurity Wing. Espochico was named on well over the minimum 75 percent of the ballots needed by the Hall's Veterans Committee, which established the Miksis-Terwilliger Wing last fall to honor the game's forgotten heroes, the utility infielders.

"This is quite an honor," Espochico said when told of his election. "Especially to be named into a wing of the Hall named after two greats like Miksis and Terwilliger. Like most people in this country, I've always held those guys in the highest esteem."

The Miksis-Terwilliger Wing, affectionately nicknamed "the Cad-dyback," is named after two of baseball's most obscure utility infielders of the 1950s. Miksis sat on major league benches from 1944-1958 for the Brooklyn Dodgers, Chicago Cubs, St. Louis Cardinals and Baltimore Orioles. Terwilliger, like Espochico, spent most of his major

State baseball coach Sam Espochico has been under cover since his recent induction into the Hall of Fame's new Eddie Miksis-Wayne Terwilliger Utility Infielder Obscurity Wing, and batted .207. He walloped eight major league homers, and his career slugging percentage is .277.

The official wording on Espochico's plaque at Cooperstown reads, "Sam Espochico, utility infielder with the Chicago White Sox and Kansas City A's. In 10 major league seasons, he played behind the best double-play combination of his era — Luis Aparicio and Nellie Fox.

"Espochico earned his spot on the White Sox roster with his durability (184 at bats in 1956), his power (three home runs in '56) and his ability to hit in the clutch ('73 lifetime RBIs)."

Athlete of the Week

North Carolina forward Sam "Jam Bones" Perquin is this week's Technician Athlete-of-the-Week for his pregame comments and so-so performance Sunday in the Tar Heels' 82-77 loss to Georgia in the East Regional final.

The 6-9 junior center from Latham, N.Y., scored just 14 points and had 11 rebounds, but it was his earlier comments which actually caused the loss.

Spurred by Perquin's quote, "I don't even know which conference they're (Georgia's) in," the Bulldog players took heart and showed Perquin and the Tar Heels that the SEC is for real. The Dawgs' quick offense was flawless the second half. Perquin, despite being taller than all of the Georgia players, was totally boxed out inside.

Swimmers drown, coach says bye

by Wilbur Mills
Sports Riter at large

A tragic, freak accident occurred in Carmichael Natatorium Monday when two members of the State men's swimming team drowned in what authorities called a "weird accident."

Timmy Hydrogen and Steve Oxygen were pronounced dead on arrival at Rex Hospital, the cause of death being their lungs were filled with water and foreign materials, doctors said.

Reports have it that the two swimmers were doing laps in the pool, when Hydrogen inadvertently changed lanes and the two swimmers collided.

No one on the swim team realized that the two swimmers were knocked unconscious because the team was watching a training film of swimmers from Columbia doing their thing.

When reached for comment, coach Fred Hipp said that he was saddened by the loss of one of his pupils. "The loss of Hydrogen really hurts," Hipp said. "He was swimming great."

Final Four, I'm gonna try out for the track team," McQuad said. "I think I have a good chance to be a javelin for the team. I know I can help out."

Track coach Don Bones was glad to hear of the addition of the hoopster to his squad.

"Co's got great size, and he's built for flight," Bones said. "He'll be a great addition to the program."

State javelin thrower, Bark Flyan was suspicious about McQuad's announcement.

"I'm looking forward to working with Co," Flyan said. "I just hope that he can put basketball aside because we have a lot of work to do with the conference meet only two weeks away."

State basketball coach Kim Valcano thinks that track will be a good experience for the young sophomore.

"I'm glad to hear that Co is gonna do something in the spring and not sit around on his hind drinking brews," Valcano said.

With the big meets just around the corner, McQuad's announcement may be what the track team needs to gain that slight edge over the competition.

Pedestrians see danger from speeding bikers

by Buster Hyman
Staff Writer

For quite some time now, State students have been walking to classes with the fear of being hit by other students riding bicycles.

The problem is especially bad at intersections where bikers tend to neglect stop signs, and hundreds of pedestrians have been struck crossing the street at such places.

Although severe injuries are rare, they do occur.

One student who prefers to remain anonymous recounted his close brush with death, saying "Man, it's like I was just walkin' down the street minding my own business, and like all of the sudden, this dude on this bike — like he was really bookin' — comes from nowhere. I guess he was just planning on running the stop sign, but he knocked the shit out of me. I kinda busted my head open, but I did make him stop at the stop sign, which makes me feel kinda glad it all happened."

Injuries from pedestrian-biker collisions have included broken limbs, severe and minor abrasions, and concussions.

Some students have also complained of damage to private property.

Captain Larry Vile of Public Safety said of the negligent bikers, "I want to personally break each one of 'em's neck. This has really gotten out of hand. I mean, everyday we get at least five complaints from people who have been struck.

"If I had to walk around instead of riding in my patrol car, I think I'd carry around a stick or steel rod to jam in between the spokes of every damn biker I saw," Viles said. "And I suggest any pedestrian who feels the same do just that!"

Some cautious students are doing just that. Others prefer baseball bats because they can also be used to beat on careless bikers.

After regaining his composure, though, Vile said, "Well, I don't really know about students doing that (spoke-jamming and biker beating). It's almost like taking the law into your own hands. Leave it to the pros, your Public Safety officers."

Pedestrian activism against such carelessness is growing.

There is a group that calls itself Walkers Against Dumb Driving being organized on campus. The group, as its name applies is critical of automobile as well as bicycle drivers. The group advocates nonviolent activities such as road block sit-ins to stop traffic and removing the seats of callous bike riders.

News editor weary of back pages

by Me
the News Editor

Editor's note: I'm sick and tired of getting these friggin' back pages. I know that no one reads them and you know no one reads them. But anyway, the page is here and I have to fill it, so here it goes.

Once upon a time there was a non-conforming robin who declared not to fly south for the winter.

However, soon the weather turned so cold he reluctantly stated to fly south.

In a short time, ice began to form on his wings, and he fell to earth in a barnyard, almost frozen.

A cow passed by and crapped on the little bird.

The robin thought that that was the end, but the manure warmed him and defrosted his little body.

Warm and happy, able to breathe he started to sing.

Just then a large tom cat came by and hearing the chirping, investigated the sound.

Old Tom cleared away the manure, found the chirping bird and promptly ate him.

Morals of the story: Everyone who shits on you is not necessarily your enemy.

Everyone who gets you out of shit is not necessarily your friend.

And, if you're warm and happy in a pile of shit, keep your mouth shut.

with the blades, but he just stood there. And when the knives hit him, they broke! I couldn't believe it. Then, one of the kids pulled out a sawed-off shotgun, and I really started praying then. But that huge hunk of man just stood there and the bullets bounced off the big red 'S' on his chest, ricocheted off a wall and killed two of those masers before they could blink. It was fantastic. I think I'm in love."

Sgt. Order has also had run-ins with some of the vigilantes.

"Yeah, I chased some kook calling himself 'The Batman' who was carting around some runny-nosed sidekick," said Order. "They had dropped some unsavory characters, who had been roughed up pretty bad, in front of the station. Those guys were trussed up pretty tight in some kind of nylon cord."

"Well, this nutbar running around in a ragged cape said, 'Sargeant, book these miscreants on charges of burglary and aggravated assault.' I started to tell him to stuff the charges in C sharp and that I needed proof and not the word of some lunatic in a fright mask, but he just dropped into his car — a real low, black, sleek machine he called a Crapmobile or something — and started melting concrete toward the north part of the city. "As he had already broken three laws of traffic, I hopped in a patrol car and took off after them. I chased them for a couple of blocks until some kind of flame came out of the Rammobile's exhaust and he jetted off at a couple of thousand miles an hour. And just before he got out of sight, I swear I saw that delinquent in the red vest stick his tongue out at me. Rotten punk."

Other masked, colorfully costumed vigilantes sighted in the area include a wall-crawling blue-and-red figure haunting the downtown area and calling himself Spider-Man; a lasso-carrying female dressed in red, white and blue, calling herself Wonder Woman; and, perhaps strangest of all, an eight-foot tall green monstrosity, reputed to be terrifically strong and described by police as "an incredible hulk."

"There's also been a report over at N.C. State," said Order, "about some character running around in a sweatshirt and calling himself 'The Duke.' Crazy kids."

No one seems to know when this rash of costumed do-gooders will leave the area, but Order said he hopes it is soon.

"They've certainly made our job easier," Order said, "but they're backing up the courts. The judges can't handle the overflow. However, even though they are responsible for a lower crime rate, I still think they're a bunch of fruitcakes."
