Raleigh, N.C. (UPI) — Gov. James Hunt previewed his proposals to cut federal government overspending Thursday after chiding President Ronald Reagan for not attacking growing budget deficits head-on.

In his weekly news conference, Hunt said Reagan's Wednesday State of the Union address did not provide any substantial solutions for curbing deficits. He said although Reagan's proposal for a bipartisan committee to study the deficit was a good idea, the president has a duty to come up with his own answers to the problem.

"I think that's something the president should be dealing with and I'm very disappointed the president is not doing something about it," Hunt said.

The mounting deficit threatens to sour the current economic recovery, Hunt said, and unless it is reduced the country is likely to face another recession. Hunt said he is preparing a budget position paper as part of his senatorial bid that will outline a program for reducing overspending and ensuring economic recovery will last.

Hunt's proposal centers on cutting wasteful spending and closing "non-productive" tax loopholes. "I do not propose a tax increase," he said.

Hunt also criticized Reagan's treatment of farmers. He said although the economy appears to be improving, farmers still are in financial trouble because of high interest rates and the strength of the dollar, which makes American produce less competitive on overseas markets. He said Reagan avoided that problem altogether in his State of the Union address.

"I think the president as usual did a good job with his speech...but frankly, I did not notice any mention of agriculture," Hunt said.

Reagan's policies have been particularly hard on tobacco farmers, Hunt said.

"We know the Reagan administration has cut the heck out of the tobacco program," he said.

Hunt, a Democrat, predicted Reagan's popularity and improving unemployment and interest rates would balance the cards in favor of Republican Sen. Jesse Helms if the men face off in the race for Helms' Senate seat. Hunt said his own record on North Carolina's economy will offset any national trend in favor of Republican candidates.

"Obviously to have the economy in pretty good shape... will be of some advantage" to Republicans, Hunt said. "But the people of North Carolina will choose whoever will best represent them in the U.S. Senate."

In another matter, Hunt predicted travel and tourism will bring a record amount of money into North Carolina in 1984.

Hunt said travellers spent a record $3.4 billion in the state last year, 11 percent more than the previous high in 1982 when the World's Fair in Knoxville funnelled tourists through western North Carolina.

Hunt said activities planned around the 400th anniversary of the English colonization of North Carolina will boost tourism spending this year.

Senate enacts parking, flagpole resolutions

J. Veris Williams
Co-News Editor

The Student Senate enacted four resolutions in its first meeting of this semester Wednesday night.

The Student Senate recommended in the first resolution to the Transportation Department that parking ticketing be stopped at 2 p.m. on Fridays, except in "N" and "S" (faculty) lots, due to Friday ticketing of people picking up students before 5 p.m.

The Senate passed the parking ticket resolution unanimously.

A resolution concerning the sign marking of buildings on campus was also passed unanimously by the Senate. The Senate requested that the university administration expand a pilot program that marks selected buildings surrounding the Brickyard with rectangular red on white building designation signs. The goal of the resolution is to help students and visitors find particular buildings.

The third resolution passed by the senators concerning the increase in student fees outlines where the additional funds received from the increase will be used and recommends that Student Government fees be raised from $2.65 per year to $4 per year.

"We (the Student Senate) didn't have a definite idea, to begin with, how much money we needed and could use," Rich Holloway, Student Senate President, said in reference to the initial proposal of raising the fee to $5 per year.

During a meeting of the Student Government officers, "we had to take a long hard look at it (the increase) and see what we wanted to do. If we had asked for less we might have come up short in the next few years," Holloway stated.

The last resolution enacted by the senators involves recognition for the 1983 National Championship Basketball Team. The resolution calls for Student Government to sponsor a project in which a flag pole with a brick base and a plaque will be erected on the Brickyard in recognition of the State Basketball Team's "never say die spirit" on their way to the 1983 National Championship. The resolution states that the funds for the project will be raised through the student body and that a special session of the Student Senate be held on the Brickyard on April 4 to raise the flag for the first time and that coach Jim Valvano and the Wolfpack basketball team be asked to do the honors (raise the flag).

"I think the flagpole is a great idea," Holloway said. "I think it's a chance to get some of the spirit from last spring stirred up again. Also, ten years down the road, we can come back to State and be reminded of the great event (the National Championship)," Holloway stated.

In other business the Senate granted $1,020 to State's Dance Visions, a dance organization for students, for an educational field trip to New York over spring break.

Professors study women in courts, prisons

Angela Platt
Staff Writer

Kathy Jones, a convicted murderer who escaped from Women's Correctional Center, is just one of 500 women of 1,600 prisoners in the North Carolina prison system.

Why is the number so small? Could an offender's sex have anything to do with it? Matthew Zingraff and Randall Thomson, associate professors in State's department of sociology and anthropology, said they think it does.

Zingraff and Thomson, after analyzing nine years of court records, found that women receive much lighter prison sentences. "Women are less culpable than men," said Zingraff.

graff, "and the court has always been paternalistic."

"It's like the judge comes up and says, 'I normally give you 10 years for this offense; I'm going to give you 12 years less because you're a woman,'" Thomson said. This treatment is "partially the result of a kind of stereotype we have of criminals," said Zingraff.

Zingraff and Thomson studied 9,464 felony and misdemeanor sentences from 1969 through 1977. Though felony charges, in most cases, received preferential treatment, misdemeanors did not. "If it's a felony offense, then the possible range of sentences is much larger than if it's a misdemeanor... sentencing in misdemeanor cases is just kind of routine," Zingraff said. Despite this, women guilty of child abandonment were given harsher sentences.

The paternalism theory is not the only thing responsible for sentencing differences. Women's expected roles also effect sentencing. "Women are not typical murderers," Zingraff said. Women who abandon their children may possibly violate a judge's expectations and be dealt with more harshly.

Zingraff and Thomson's results show a 4,583 day difference in sentencing between men and women charged with second-degree murder. Manslaughter had a difference of 870 days; larceny, 583 days; and forgery, 156 days.

These differences are big, and Thomson said "women should be upset about it." Zingraff and Thomson said they agree that changes in judges' practices usually lag behind public opinion.

What effect North Carolina's Fair Sentencing Act will have is unknown. However, Zingraff and Thomson said they don't think this will eliminate discrimination in the courts. Still Zingraff said, "If equality is in fact demanded, women will start receiving harsher treatment."

Student Health Service sponsors smoking clinic

Keith Tranoou
Staff Writer

A Quit Smoking Clinic is being sponsored by the Student Health Service in conjunction with the American Cancer Society, according to Gene Holmes, a volunteer with the American Cancer Society and facilitator of the clinic.

"The program is called 'Fresh Start' and is designed to help people stop smoking and stay off cigarettes, said Holmes. The program consists of four small-group sessions. The program's focus is to make quitting smoking a positive and successful experience.

The clinic gives participants a chance to ask questions concerning smoking, said Holmes. "We will discuss three approaches to quitting smoking," said Toni Clay, co-facilitator of the clinic. One method is the "cold turkey approach" — one stops smoking on the dime, said Clay. This approach has the highest success rate. The second is the "tapering approach" — simply cutting back gradually (not longer than a week). The third approach is postponing which requires you to begin smoking at a later time each day.

Dr. Elliot Cobb will be speaking to the group in one of the sessions. He should be able to answer any medical-related questions the group has about cigarette smoking, said Clay.

The three main reasons people smoke, said Clay, are physical addiction to nicotine, habit or psychological dependence. People smoke to reduce stress, in relation to other events and peer pressure, said Holmes.

Holmes said, "Ask yourself three questions: Why do you smoke, how much do you smoke and what is your greatest difficulty in quitting (if you have tried)?" Clay said one of the best aspects of the clinic is that you have the support of your peers who are experiencing the same problems which you are.

Pack holds off late rally

Durham — The Cardiac Pack's '84 visit to Cardiac Cameron was just that — a Cardiac affair. But when all pacemakers were restored it was State's well-posed Wolfpack which escaped with victory, a 79-76 decision over Duke Thursday night.

It was freshman Bennie Bolton who quieted 8,564 noisy Blue Devil fans by sinking a one-and-one to complete a three point play with 73 seconds left. That gave State a 77-72 lead, but the Wolfpack also needed a shot deflection by reserve "defensive specialist" Harold Thompson with 31 seconds left to come away with its 13th win in 20 starts and its third straight. Gaudry Terry Gannon sank two free throws to seal the victory with 28 seconds left.

"I was able to come in and play as hard as I could," Thompson said. "All I ask of myself to give an honest effort."

State sank 11 of 12 free throws in the final 5:45 and 19 of 22 for the game, while Duke could manage only 12 of 25 for the game. The Wolfpack was nearly as hot from the field, hitting 30 of 49 shots (61.0% and 72% in the first half).

The Wolfpack, 2-5 in the ACC, relied on the inside-outside punch of forward Lorenzo Charles (27 points, 8 rebounds) and point guard Spud Webb (19 points) to gain as much as a 13 point lead in the second half.

"The team and coach believe in me now," said Webb who out-quickened the Blue Devils and even awed their fans with a breakout dunk in the second half. "He told us just to go out, relax and have fun. We feel like we are playing like we were at the beginning of the season. It's time for us to start winning."

Forward Mark Alarie kept life in the sluggish, slow-starting Blue Devils, scoring 17 of their first 24 points. He led the Devils with a career-high 27 on a 12 for 16 accuracy from the floor.

The Wolfpack gained as much as a 12 point lead in the first half behind Webb's outside shooting and Charles' inside maneuvers. It lead 38-31 at halftime.

The Pack was able to stave off the Devils' late charge, despite having three starters — Russell Pierre, Ernie Meyers and Webb — benched with five fouls.

Gannon added 12 points and lead State with six assists. Cozell McQueen and Pierre each grabbed 13 rebounds as State dominated the boards, 40 to 25.

"I was pleased with our board work," said State coach Jim Valvano. "When Pierre, Lorenzo and Cozell are in there we seem to board very well."

The Blue Devils, 14-5 overall 1-4 in the league, also got 11 points from guard Johnny Dawkins, who was well below his number two ACC average of 20.0. Dan Meagher and David Henderson each added 10.

Budget needs balancing

In his State of the Union address to a joint session of Congress Wednesday night, President Ronald Reagan proposed a bipartisan panel designed to come up with a plan to reduce the federal deficit. We think that this is an idea long overdue.

The reduction of the federal deficit should be a top priority in the upcoming year and in years to come. In fact, it is an issue that should have been addressed long ago.

The deficit puts the United States in a precarious position economically. Being in the "red" to the amount of billions of dollars means that the government has to borrow money to stay in operation. This puts the government in competition with the private sector for the monies available, causing increased interest rates. This is bad for private business because it makes capital harder to get and more expensive.

Certainly this is a simplified explanation of one of the problems caused by the enormous deficit; however, this may be the greatest problem with it because this characteristic of a deficit can stifle private business. Without a healthy private sector, our economy is obviously in trouble.

The point to keep in mind now is how to reduce the deficit. Reagan campaigned in 1980 on a platform that included supporting a balancing of the budget. He chided then-President Jimmy Carter for his large deficits. Now, three years later, Reagan is the owner of the largest deficit in our nation's history. Apparently balancing the budget took a back seat to some of the other aspects of the Republican platform, primarily military spending.

Early in his term, Reagan undertook an effort to cut federal spending with the goal of balancing the budget in mind, or at least reducing it. However, since then something else in the budget has gobbled up the gains made in reduced spending.

Close advisers to Reagan have emphasized the necessity to reduce the deficit. This need has been documented. The only question is how, and there is no clear answer without making some cuts in military spending.

Reagan has indicated that building and strengthening the national defense is a primary goal of his administration. It appears to be almost the sole goal. Reagan should try to tell an unemployed worker, put out of work by the strain on the private sector caused by the deficit, what is most important. Granted, a strong national defense is necessary; a national defense that is capable of starting and winning a war is not necessary.

Reagan needs to reevaluate his desire to massively increase defense spending. Possibly after reducing the deficit, when the economy may be stronger and able to handle some of the costs that the government now handles (i.e. employing unemployed workers) military spending could be reevaluated.

Certainly we are not advocating weakening the national defense. We do believe, however, that the same goals could be accomplished while spending less. Let's take care of our problems at home first while keeping an eye on problems abroad, not vice versa.

Texas restricts education

According to the Bible, evolution never took place. At least that's what most fundamentalists believe. Recently the Texas board of education agreed with them by not requiring Darwin's theory of evolution in text books. And that is only the beginning.

Let's think for a minute what this means for academic freedom. Could you imagine a biology instructor covering up a picture of human genitals? Could you imagine a religion course that excludes almost every religion except Christianity?

And let's also think what it could mean for various publications. Some schools have banned Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" for being racist. Newsweek has been banned for being too liberal. It's surprising that the Bible has not been banned for the sex and violence in it.

There is nothing wrong with offering other theories or opinions. What is wrong is excluding them. Public schools — primary, secondary, colleges and universities — should reflect the diversity within society. And that includes diversity in what is taught.

HENRY JARRETT
Editorial Columnist

If a group starts gaining control of what is taught, then it can shape the knowledge of those being taught. Suppose the postulated theory that blacks are genetically inferior to whites was taught to elementary school students. At that age many students would believe it.

The act of censoring could gain appeal. If you can ban books then you ban the press. President Ronald Reagan had no regrets banning the press in the invasion Grenada. A federal judge in Winston-Salem had no regrets banning the press from its selection at the Klan-Nazi trial.

And if this trend continues, then let's scr the Constitution. What good are a constitutional guarantees if they are followed?

The fundamentalists in Texas did directly violate the constitution. But they distort it for their own interest. They could have compromised with the Texas board of education. They could have allowed Darwin's theory of evolution and alternative theory to be taught.

No group should have veto power or expression of thought. Once it happens it can censor the press and speech. And if those freedoms are gone all others are worthless.

You didn't hear it here first

Here are some of the things I doubt you'll hear said in 1984.

From John McEnroe: "Sir, my ball was out, and you called it in. Jimmy Connors deserves the point."

From Jesse Jackson: "I have no intention of making waves in the Democratic Party. The system as it operates is fair to all the candidates."

President Ronald Reagan: "I received a touching letter from a little girl in Madison, Wis., but I have no desire to read it to you."

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger: "We overestimated our defense needs, and we're asking Congress to cut our budget in half."

An IRS agent (any IRS agent): "You're right, and we're wrong."

Frank Sinatra: "Look at all the photographers. Let's go over and have our picture taken."

John DeLoe: "I believe we have the finest Drug Enforcement Agency in the world."

Yuri Andropov: "I think I'll jog around the Kremlin for a few hours."

ART BUCHWALD
Editorial Columnist

Henry Kissinger: "I have no comment."

Nancy Reagan: "What's that little kid doing in the White House?"

Secretary of State George Shultz: "See that the press gets a copy of everything we discussed here today."

Vice President George Bush: "I hope President Reagan isn't going to run because I'd like to go for it myself."

Rev. Jerry Falwell: "If there is a God, and I'm not saying there is..."

Fritz Mondale: "If I am elected I will continue the policies and philosophy of President Jimmy Carter."

David Stockman: "Mr. President, I think there should be a little more fat in our social programs."

The editor of Pravda: "When we're wrong we're wrong, and we should admit it. The Soviets overreacted when the United States placed Pershing 2 missiles in Europe. They're not the threat to the Warsaw Pact nations that we thought they would be, and we would like to return to Geneva as quick as possible."

James Watt: "If I had it to do all over again, I would have kept my mouth shut and taken time to smell the flowers."

Anne Gorsuch Burford: "We all make mistakes, but the EPA was my department and I take full blame for the chaos."

Jerry Carson: "I believe a wife deserve every penny she can get when she feels she's been wronged."

A power company executive: "We have just discovered that our new nuclear plan was built with cheap materials and shoddy labor. This is no fault of our customers, and therefore we intend to pay for our mistake without passing on any cost to the consumer."

Sex preoccupies Technician

Personal relationship with God breeds true happiness

Once again, Technician has made another unsuccessful attempt to convince the average student that he is incomplete and, in some way, inferior if he refrains from sexual promiscuity.

First, in Wednesday's main feature article, "New Year's resolutions made to be broken," I was particularly interested to find that, as a sophomore, two of "my" resolutions should be to 1. Make love to my girlfriend and 2. try to have sex with every girl I meet.

In "Double standard still exists," an editorial column, I was informed that if I was successful in going to bed with a female professor for an "A" in her class, I would be slapped on the back by my friends for a job well done. Secondly, I discovered that only a man that conquers women is macho, and is, in fact, "the epitome of the male race."

Alas, I suppose I am a failure. Nonsense! If sex determines one's manhood, let's find some loose girl or even a prostitute, and all become men. That is absurd.

The point is this: today's society places both too much, and at the same time, too little emphasis on sex. A contradiction of terms, you say. Let me explain.

First, sex is made to seem so vastly important, a major goal of sorts, and a key to full happiness; this is so far from the truth. Society has a preoccupation with sex and neglects the true keys to happiness such as building a personal and loving relationship with God and those around us.

In the same manner, however, we also put too little emphasis on what sex really is. It is seen as a means of conquest, a gadget to play with as much as we can. From this attitude stems the seeds of guilt, frustration and slavery.

We need to open our eyes and face reality. If sex is really as important as society has tried to make it, then life is indeed futile. "There is a way that seems right to a man, but the end thereof, are the ways of death." Proverbs 14:12.

Salvadoran government represses human rights

Reagan's pocket veto provides for murder of opposition leaders with American dollars

Not long after Congress adjourned for the holidays, President Ronald Reagan quietly slipped an important piece of legislation in his desk drawer and let it sit the required number of days before moving it to the round file. This "pocket veto" of the law requiring the certification of improvements in human rights in El Salvador was shrewdly timed. Had Congress been in session, it most certainly could have mustered a two-thirds majority willing to oppose U.S. sponsored terrorism by the Salvadoran government.

Reagan has argued that the law was ineffectual and overlooked the progress made and "reforms" instituted since the 1982 elections. In reality, this law was one of the few restraints on Reagan's support of the repressive government of El Salvador. Its veto represents a major defeat for those Americans unwilling to have their tax dollars spent killing opposition political leaders, social workers and American church women.

The record of the Salvadoran government is clear. Small wonder the rebel leaders have so far refused to come down from the mountains and participate in "free election" when they can see leaders of even the moderate opposition murdered by death squads under the direction of the personal body guard of the President of El Salvador. Terror in El Salvador is countenanced by its highest government officials and financed by the American public. It is the responsibility of every one of us who pays taxes to hold our leaders accountable for the way they are spent. Will we let Reagan include in this year's budget the cost of murder in El Salvador?

Recognition means work

Spud Webb started playing basketball in the sixth grade and was able to dunk the ball before his senior year in high school.

Jack Reynolds
Feature Writer

A pair of hands place a basketball on the floor of the court about five or six feet in front of the basket. The hands withdraw, and the basketball remains still. In the blink of an eye, the ball is whisked into the air and slammed home, dunked with immaculate precision. The pair of hands hang onto the rim briefly. And Spud Webb lets go of the rim and falls four feet to the floor, landing cat-like on his feet, ready to steal it away and dunk it again.

"I started playing basketball in the sixth grade at a boys' club, mainly because my friends played," said Webb, State's 5-6 point guard. "When it came time for our first game, we needed physicals. Only a few of us had them, so we got to play. I started and scored 20 points."

Webb said establishing himself will be no easy task. "There are so many great players in the ACC that are already established," he said. "(Michael) Jordan established himself his freshman year, and now he's getting everything. People are just starting to take me seriously."

Webb didn't find it hard to transfer from a junior college to a major university. "I just had to get used to the big campus and the ACC - larger crowds and bigger teams. I just play like I always have."

"The team's great. There's no animosity," he said. "Everybody gets along."

Spud's given name is Anthony, although he doesn't necessarily prefer one over the other. When he was young, he had a big head and was nicknamed after the Russian satellite

Webb was able to dunk the ball before his senior year in high school. "People ask me if I have a trick to jump so high. I don't have a trick. I just take it in and do it. The first one gives me more juice to get another one."

Webb was named ACC rookie basketball player of the week after scoring 18 points against Wake Forest Saturday, but his contribution doesn't stop there. He had 13 assists and five rebounds and only committed one turnover in 39 minutes of action.

"The (lack of) recognition doesn't bother me. After the Houston game, the media talked about the scoring," said Webb, who led Midland Junior College (Tx.) to the national title last season. "I had a lot of assists, and they didn't cover that. So, mainly, I have to establish myself this year. Then, they'll start to respect me."

Spud Webb

"Sputnik" or "Spud" for short. "I've been called Spud for as long as I can remember. I think I might've been nine or 10 before I knew my name was Anthony."

Spud's future plans include graduating with a degree in political science, specifically criminology. After college, he leans toward teaching political science or coaching basketball, although playing in the NBA has been a childhood dream.

And you've got to dream.

Leg length not factor in workout

Wolf Wellness

Have you got a Wolf Wellness question? Send it to us at Technician.

A. Generally, no, but if someone is a "compulsive" knuckle popper it could cause future problems.

Q. CAN A WOMAN GET PREGNANT DURING HER PERIOD?

A. Although it is highly unlikely and theoretically not possible, some women have reported they have conceived during their period. The problem with saying one cannot get pregnant during one's period boils down to the problem of irregularity in a monthly cycle length which can be 28 to 40 days, more or less. One cannot judge just when their ovulation will occur, nor can one without a doubt count on any bleeding being their menstrual bleeding.

Q. I'M 5'3" AND RUN WITH A 6'1" FRIEND. WITH MY SHORT LEGS, I HAVE TO TAKE ALMOST TWICE AS MANY STEPS AS HE. DOESN'T THIS MAKE MY WORKOUT MUCH MORE VIGOROUS AND BENEFICIAL THAN HIS?

A. The answer given by Dr. Kenneth Cooper, author of Aerobics, may disappoint you. He says it may sound unfair, but the energy expenditure of tall and short people running on the treadmill has been measured, and there is no significant difference once you compensate for body weight. Only the very short one - below five feet in height - have to work harder to keep up.

Q. DOES SNEEZING MAKE THE HEART STOP?

A. The heart has a regular relaxation phase (diastolic) when it allows itself to fill up with blood. There is nothing pathological or dangerous about this temporary rest phase. Whether or not a sneeze makes the heart stop is questionable. But this concern probably was responsible for the saying of "God bless you" when someone sneezes!

Q. DO I GET MORE AEROBIC FITNESS BENEFIT FROM RUNNING THREE CONTINUOUS MILES IN 24 MINUTES THAN FOR THREE SEPARATE MILES, EACH ONE IN LESS THAN 8 MINUTES?

A. The training effect is the same in both cases (from The New Aerobics, Dr. Kenneth H. Cooper).

Q. DOES KNUCKLE POPPING CAUSE JOINT PROBLEMS?

EVEN STRAIGHT A'S CAN'T HELP IF YOU FLUNK TUITION.

ARMY ROTC. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Today, the toughest thing about going to college is finding the money to pay for it. But Army ROTC can help - two ways! First, you can apply for an Army ROTC scholarship. It covers tuition, books, and supplies, and pays you up to $1,000 each school year it's in effect. But even if you're not a scholarship recipient, ROTC can still help with financial assistance - up to $1,000 a year for your last two years in the program. For more information contact Cpt. Dan Thomas at 737-2428 or come to our information session on Tuesday, Jan. 31 from 4-6 p.m. in the Blue Room, University Student Center.

Pack vs. Heels: big-time wrestling hits Reynolds

Derec Johnson
Sports Writer

Reynolds Coliseum, not Dorton Arena, will be the site of a big-time wrestling event tonight, and the performers will not be Ricky Steamboat and Greg Valentine.

But the competition will be as intense as Mid-Atlantic Championship wrestling when State takes on arch-rival North Carolina at 7:30.

The rivalry traditionally produces a great turnout and probably outdraws any other collegiate wrestling meet in the state other than the ACC Tournament.

The defending ACC champion Wolfpack puts a three-year, six-match winning streak on the line. The Tar Heels finished second to the Pack in the conference tournament the past two years.

"A meet like this is a very emotional situation," Wolfpack coach Bob Guzzo said. "I don't know what the outcome will be, but I know one thing - we will give our best effort."

The Wolfpack is 9-4 and ranked 9th nationally, while Carolina is 7-4 and ranked 16th.

The ratings, Guzzo said, does not make State the favorite, despite the assumption.

"Carolina beat Navy rather soundly (23-13), and Navy beat us soundly (27-15)," he said, "so what looked like a favorable situation at the beginning of the year doesn't look as good now."

"We've had as many as six wrestlers out of the lineup at one time, and a few are doubtful at this time, so really Carolina has to be considered the favorite."

Billy Starke, State's 118-pound starter, and 158-pounder Chris Mondragon, an all-America and ACC champ, are questionable. Starke has been slowed with the flu, and Mondragon has been sidelined for several matches with a rotator cuff injury. Mondragon may return to the lineup against the Tar Heels, according to Guzzo.

Guzzo said the match should be exciting because there will be as many as five national-calibre wrestlers involved.

Carolina's 118-pounder Chip McCardie, 20-7, is ranked 6th in the country as is Bill Gaffney in the 167-pound class. Gaffney, 7-0-1, has been selected to represent the east in the prestigious East-West All-Star meet in Iowa City, Iowa.

Other key performers for the Heels include John Aumiller, 12-2 at 126; Tim Platt, a newcomer at 142 where he is replacing injured Matt King; and Robert Shriner, 14-3-1 in the 170-pound division.

Heavyweight Tab Thacker, ranked No. 1 at 16-0, also has been picked to represent the east in the East-West event for the second consecutive year.

Vince Bynum, a 134-pound senior, is 14-2 and ranked 5th.

Guzzo said that Mondragon, 8-1-1, would be ranked if he had not been injured. If the score is close, Guzzo contended, Thacker should get to wrestle.

In the past two matches the opposing teams have forfeited to Thacker because the bout would not make a difference in the outcome.

Thacker has beaten Carolina's heavyweight Tommy Gerry, 8-6, several times in the past.

Last season, State defeated Carolina 25-16 in Chapel Hill and 24-14 in Raleigh.

"Although we are not at our best our kids hope to keep up this tradition," Guzzo said of his team's winning streak over the Heels.

State is coming off three consecutive losses against nationally-ranked teams Missouri, Maryland and the Naval Academy. Carolina is coming off a 45-0 blowout over Duke.

Guzzo said Duke was not that strong but "you still have to consider us the underdog because of our injuries."

"I'm really proud of the people we are putting in. They are putting forth their best effort. I think our kids will respond well. They have in the past, and I'm sure they will do it again."

Tankers entertain Tigers, Gamecocks

Phil Pitchford
Sports Writer

This weekend promises to be a busy one for both of State's swim teams as they host Clemson and South Carolina, in addition to holding their annual Parents Weekend.

For the men, the two meets offer an opportunity to preserve a glittering record and also avenge a 69-44 loss to the Tigers last year. The setback was one of only two Wolfpack defeats last year.

The Pack, 7-0, will probably dominate all the distance events, according to State coach Don Easterling. An ACC rival, the Tigers are coached by Bob Boettner, a former assistant to Easterling.

"Getting beat by them last year is definitely an added incentive, since it was the first time we had lost to (Clemson)," Easterling said. "They just won all the close races."

For State, points will have to come in the sprint events and the diving competition. Clemson will probably dominate all the distance events, according to Easterling.

One bright spot for the Pack will be the return of several swimmers, notably sophomore Eric Wagner and freshman Simon Driscoll. They, along with several other members of the squad, are recovering from illnesses.

In assessing the weekend's events, Easterling displayed a sense of guarded optimism. "We've done a tremendous amount of quality work since Christmas," Easterling said. "However, we can't think past (Clemson). That would be foolish."

The Gamecocks, like the Tigers, are ranked nationally in several events. They are led by senior Chris Berry, the team's MVP last year, and sophomore Soren Ostberg, a butterflyer from Nauskov, Denmark.

In women's action, State coach Bob Wiencken is faced with a puzzling dilemma. Each of this weekend's opponents presents a different challenge for his squad. Clemson excels in the distance events, while South Carolina is better in sprint competition.

No matter where the emphasis is placed, however, both contests should be close ones.

"There won't be any event that you could call a

Women's ranking on line against Terps

Todd McGee
Sports Writer

When Maryland rolls into Raleigh Saturday to take on State's women's basketball team, history could be in the making. The game taps off at 7:30 p.m. in Reynolds Coliseum.

Besides being the only two teams to win an ACC championship, these bitter rivals also own the two longest current streaks of appearances in the top 20. The 14th-ranked Terrapins have been ranked since the women's polls began in the 1976-77 season, 121 weeks ago. State, meanwhile, missed the first two weeks of the rankings in the initial year, but has stayed among the elite ever since.

This week, however, the Pack has dropped to the lowest possible spot in the poll, a tie for 20th with Vanderbilt. With a tough schedule in the weeks ahead, State is in danger of slipping out.

Traditionally, the matchup has been for first place in the ACC, but this year is different. The Terrapins, 4-2 in league play, and the Wolfpack, 3-3, both trail Virginia (6-1), Clemson (5-2) and undefeated North Carolina (5-0). Assistant State coach Trudi Lacey said the parity in the league is not unexpected.

"We're not really surprised," she said. "We anticipated the league being a lot like the men's league this year."

The conference's balance is evidenced by the latest top 20 rankings. Five ACC schools - State, Clemson, Virginia, North Carolina and Maryland - are in the polls. Maryland, fourth in the league, is ironically the highest-ranked of the five. Lacey is expecting the game to be similar to State-Maryland shootouts of the past.

"We're expecting them to be a very physical and well-balanced team," she said. "It is a real important game for us. We need a big win against a big team."

The Terps are led by

lock," Wiencken said. "We'll just have to count on everybody, since we only have 11 swimmers (as opposed to 22 for Clemson and 24 for South Carolina)."

Against Clemson, especially tough races are expected in the 1000-yard freestyle and in the butterfly events. Sophomore Tricia Butcher has consistently won the 1000 in past meets and will try to continue the streak against Clemson. In the butterfly, Wiencken will count on sophomore Hope Williams, another consistent winner this season.

As for South Carolina, in Wiencken's opinion, the crucial event will be the relays, since all of the other events should be close.

A talented field is expected in the diving events, as Pack coach John Candler's group faces several opponents who qualified for regional competition last year.

After a discouraging debacle at Virginia last weekend, Candler's club is in a good position to bounce back from adversity.

Junior Tom Neussinger and sophomore Glen Barncini will lead a strong State men's squad. For the women, sophomore Susan Gornak and freshmen Helen Antonelle and Sandy Metko have all placed first several times on each board. Also, all the divers have now qualified for regional competition on both boards, a Pack first.

Ticket Pickup

Ticket pickup for Monday night's men's basketball game against Missouri will run again Tuesday after a slow day of distribution Thursday.

Students can pick up their tickets from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. An I.D. and current registration card is required.

Gymnasts teams in weekend tilts

Mike Grizzara
Sports Writer

State's gymnastics facility has resembled an infirmary rather than an athletic center this week. A case of the flu slowed several members of the two squads, and injuries continued to plague the preparation for this weekend's competition.

However, the Wolfpack teams must regroup as they venture to Athens, Ga. for the Bulldog Invitational Sunday at 4 p.m. State's women tune up for Georgia tonight in Chapel Hill with their second of five showdowns against the Tar Heels.

Coach Mark Stevenson will be depending on the scarce number of healthy members on the State squad.

"We're gonna have to have good performances out of the people that are healthy," Stevenson said. "Annette (Evans), Karen (Nagle) and Ann (Gibson) will be really important. If they have good meets, then we will be in good shape."

Colleen Bosnic, Leah Ranney and Angela Regan have battled the flu throughout the week. Regan also suffered a slight foot injury which could hinder her performance. An infection prohibited Vicki Kreider from practicing Wednesday, but all members of the team are expected to compete in both meets.

There are some bright spots for the State women, despite the aforementioned ailments. Tonight marks the return of senior Jenny Ladner, who has recovered from a calf pull.

The most important matter for the Pack is an extended break following the trip to Georgia, according to Stevenson.

"What we are really looking forward to right now is a week-and-a-half off after (the two meets)," Stevenson said. "We're gonna try to get healthy and get ready for the second half of the season."

The State men enter the Bulldog Invitational with a 7-5 mark. The weekend stint marks State's midway point of a demanding road schedule which extends until Feb. 11.

State coach Sam Shuh will once again send his troops in without the services of Joey Saccio.

The talented freshman is nursing a sprained ankle, which has sidelined him for three meets. Gregory Blanchard will provide some assistance in two events, while Doug Ernst and Scott Mackall share duties in the four remaining events. Jamie Carr and Rick Crescini must maintain their consistency if the Pack is to remain above the .500 level. Crescini has turned in three consecutive 50-plus performances and Carr solidifies the duo with a 50.65 average.

Part Time Opportunity With Career Potential

There is a difference between a job and a business opportunity. We are actively seeking those people looking for an opportunity to be in business for themselves. We are one of the nation's oldest and largest financial institutions, and are offering careers that are totally unencumbered by salary and seniority structures. Our business, which some call the best paid hard work around, is pervaded by a spirit of entrepreneurship limited only by one's creativity and ambition. If you are a confident individual willing to aggressively pursue what you want in life, we want to talk to you about an executive sales career in the research triangle area. We will meet with candidates from any degree or academic program. Call Pam Fleming at 782-9530 for an interview opportunity.

Before We Put You In Charge Of The World's Most Sophisticated Nuclear Equipment, We Put You Through The World's Most Sophisticated Nuclear Training.

It takes more than 16 months of intensive training to become a fully qualified officer in the Nuclear Navy. You begin with four months of leadership training. Then as a Navy officer you get a full year of graduate-level training unavailable anywhere else at any price.

Navy training is based on more than 1900 reactor-years of experience. Right now the Navy operates over half the nuclear reactors in America. And the Navy's nuclear equipment is the most sophisticated in the world. That's why your Navy training is and must be the most sophisticated in the world.

As an officer in the Nuclear Navy, you have decision-making authority immediately. You get important management responsibility fast. Because in the Navy, as your knowledge grows, so does your responsibility.

Your training and experience place you among the country's most qualified professionals. (No surprise that most of the men who operate the reactors in private industry started in the Nuclear Navy.)

It takes more time and more effort to become an officer in the Nuclear Navy. But the rewards are greater, too.

The rewards can begin as early as your junior year in college. Qualify, and the Navy will pay you approximately $1000/month while you finish school.

After four years, with regular promotions and salary increases, you can be earning as much as $40,500. That's on top of a benefits package that includes medical and dental care, and 30 days' vacation earned every year. More responsibility, more money, more future. So, if you're majoring in math, engineering or the physical sciences, and you want to know more about a future in nuclear power, fill in the coupon.

Today's Nuclear Navy is an opportunity like no other in the world.
