Students bring morals back to America

For many students, the mention of student activism brings to mind students protesting for causes generally perceived as liberal by today's standards. Today the diversity of the issues confronting college students is tremendous. Student activist groups range from liberal to conservative, with many groups oriented toward single issues. They present their case to the student community using tactics that range from emotional demonstrations to intellectual snob appeal and resort to legal tactics to achieve their goals. The editorial pages of Technician have seen in recent years frequent complaints that State is an apathetic campus whose students care only about landing high-paying jobs.

Starting with today's issue, Technician presents a series of articles that will explore the nature and extent of student activism in the 1980's in some of State's active student organizations.

By Kirk Jones
Staff Writer

Students for America (SFA) made its first appearance in the spring of 1984 as a result of a conference of College Republican chapters and various national campus Christian ministries around the nation. Seeing potential for a student role in the upcoming elections, the conference attendees organized SFA to marshal the student vote for the specific purposes of re-electing President Ronald Reagan and ensuring that conservatives kept key Senate seats. A former national head of College Republicans was chosen to lead the organization.

According to Jeff Carter, chairman of the State chapter of SFA, the U.S. Senate race in North Carolina between conservative incumbent Senator Jesse Helms and Governor James Hunt was "second only to the presidential race" in the minds of those involved. National SFA headquarters is still located here in Raleigh instead of in Washington, D.C., a legacy of that bitterly fought Senate campaign won by Helms.

SFA currently claims to have 7,000 members nationwide, and the chapter at State has about 35 members. According to its literature, the organization supports the free market system, equality before the law, a return to Judeo-Christian values and the fight against communism.

America has a duty, says the literature, "to extend the boundaries of liberty and righteousness throughout the world and has a moral obligation to maintain a defense posture sufficient to execute this mission."

Other principles espoused by

SFA, according to Carter, are a commitment to a balanced federal budget, support for the Strategic Defense Initiative, legality for school prayer through allowance for a moment of silence, equal billing in the classroom for teaching of creationism and evolution, and opposition to abortion.

Carter states that the group must take a moral and ethical stance because "the day we get the Judeo-Christian ethic out of our government is the day we are in bad shape."

SFA is busiest during election campaigns; one of the group's highest priorities is helping to elect candidates who take stands on issues that are close or identical to SFA's position.

If an opportunity for SFA to throw its weight behind a specific issue presents itself, then the group mobilizes, said Carter. In order to maximize the impact of its efforts, group leaders keep an eye on polls to determine which issues are on the minds of the American people. For instance, Carter points out that a year ago, abortion was an issue on the minds of the public. Now, however, while still an issue, abortion is taking a back seat to the Strategic Defense Initiative and other issues.

On Halloween, in response to this shift in attention, the chapters from State and UNC joined on the UNC campus to hold a program in which members simulated a nuclear attack, and then raised umbrellas afterwards to symbolize a successful SDI system.

Another event that made headlines just last week was the anti-apartheid protests on the UNC campus, where a shanty town was created to help demand disinvestment by the UNC Board of Governors. In response, the SFA chapter at UNC built a mock Berlin Wall out of wood and white sheets next to the shanty town to demonstrate its opinion that there are atrocities in other countries and that South Africa should not be singled out.

SFA prefers to go through such legally accepted channels to accomplish its goals.

"The most effective way to obtain our goals is to work within the system," Carter states. "We have done things like picket abortion clinics, but we made sure we went through legal channels to do so," he said.

Carter sees State as a "conservatively apathetic" campus, but where more students would support President Reagan when faced with a choice. As a non-partisan conservative organization, SFA seeks to divert this passive conservatism on campus into more active channels.

The Martha Graham Dance Company presented three concerts during the weekend. "Temptations of the Moon" was one of the new dances the company presented during their stay at Reynolds Coliseum. The show was part of the Friends of the College series.

Opinion

A paper that is entirely the product of the student body, becomes at once the official organ through which the thoughts, the activity and in fact the very life of the campus are registered. It is the mouthpiece through which the students themselves talk. College life without its journal is blank.

Technician, vol. 1, no. 1 Feb. 1, 1920

AT NCSU
WE'LL BE CELEBRATING
THANKSGIVING LATE
THIS YEAR.

ETHOMAS

Don't deny student's accomplishments

Technician has recently run two editorials criticizing the tendency to put appearance over reality in judging educational quality.

In-depth education, gained for its own intrinsic worth, is better than cramming for the sake of a GPA and then forgetting much of the material.

It would be great if such a view were held by all.

We have found a place, however, where GPA and educational quality are at odds. Unfortunately, this place involves the job search.

Some students know upon entering college, or before, exactly what they want from education. Often they zoom through college in four years with a top GPA, earning a top job opportunity.

Other students enter college, usually right out of high school, and find they are unsure about their careers. They may leave after several semesters that, due to a lack of motivation, have not resulted in an admirable GPA.

After working for a few years, however, they discover what they want from education.

When these students return to school they then do very well and earn a top GPA from that point on.

Unfortunately, potential employers sometimes are unaware of the student's improvement and are reluctant to grant interviews. After combining the higher achievements with the previous GPA, the numerical value does not reflect their recent work.

It is not fair to penalize a student who has greatly improved because of earlier failures. When screening candidates, employers must not ignore a student's accomplishments since returning to school.

Instead, students who have clearly shown excellence and motivation after some major change of path should be recognized.

Perhaps both GPAs could be listed when setting up an interview to allow companies to consider the total student. This may prevent employers from turning away qualified prospects because of an over-emphasis on the cumulative GPA.

The Placement Center should become more conscious of circumstances such as these and begin assisting students to overcome a low GPA by focusing on student improvement when organizing job interviews.

"Peachy keen" bowl bid

Peachy keen.

That's how we feel about State's bid to the Peach Bowl in Atlanta. Since State has not had a bowl bid for eight years, we are not complaining.

Granted, it can be argued that the football team deserves to play in a more prestigious bowl. Clemson, whom State beat 27-3, is going to the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville. North Carolina, whom State beat 35-34, is going to the Aloha Bowl in Hawaii. But we aren't looking a gift horse in the mouth.

The Peach Bowl will give State's football program more credibility and more exposure. Nationally, State is known as having a great basketball tradition. Now, State can claim that it is building a formidable football tradition, thanks to Dick Sheridan.

Coach Sheridan certainly deserves the ACC Coach of the Year award, if not the National Coach of the Year Award. He has given the team the courage and will power to win. Instead of playing not to lose, the team is playing to win.

Sheridan has taken a team that was 3-8 for three consecutive years and transformed it into a squad with an 8-2-1 season.

We want to send our best to the team and Coach Sheridan for the fantastic season they have given to the State community. We couldn't be happier.

We'll see you in Atlanta on New Year's Eve.

American media fails to inform Arm shipments to Iran have been 'the' topic in the news lately. Like a bombshell the news arrived that the United States is not only dealing with one of its most hated enemies, but it is bowing under terrorist pressure. This time, however, there is a surprise factor: The people of the United States have obviously been completely taken by surprise.

Why were the American media and people not aware of these facts earlier? Almost one year ago a Dutch newspaper reported that grave suspicion existed that Israel was supplying arms to Iran. At that time a simple mental exercise would have told people that no arms shipments would occur from Israel to Iran without American approval. Especially considering the tremendous military aid package that Israel receives from the United States, Dutch newspapers were almost one year ahead of American newspapers. The same had occurred with the famine in East Africa: Almost a year before being mentioned on the television here, it had been reported in European newspapers.

This past summer, the media in the Netherlands reported increased fighting between Frelimo and Renamo armies in Mozambique, with the anti-communists winning steadily. However, Zimbabwe has sent between 1500 and 2000 paratroopers to support the communist regime which has barely been able to maintain control around the capital Maputo. When will the U.S. media again be 'surprised' when the communists are overthrown in Mozambique?

ROBERT DURIEX

So why is our media always behind? Because no international news is presented unless Americans are involved. The only international news for the last months has been South Africa; before that, for months, the Philippines; before that - for months - Ethiopia. In short, the amount of real international news presented is negligible.

And this keeps the people of the United States very uninformed. For example, after the truck with ammunition exploded in the marine camp in Lebanon, the media needed weeks to inform the people about the sequence of events that led up to the attack. The same happened when the famine in East Africa was covered in the news for the first time. The media themselves seemed embarrassed to explain that people had been starving to death in this region more than two years earlier.

More than one international news item is seldom offered.

News is treated like a fad: Every few months a new topic is found and all other news is ignored. A new news item, more 'important' than previous stories, will immediately and completely replace other items.

A car accident on Route 96 or a fire in an empty barn of farmer Jenkins takes more time in the news than fighting in Afghanistan or a coup in Kenya. Our media could learn a lot from a station like the BBC where news is presented in sequence of importance and not closeness of the event.

Americans have the right to be informed on international events. They should demand that their news media does so.

Divestment a goal of University

About a century ago the United States Congress voted to pass the Morrill Land Grant Act, a piece of legislation which was the foundation for State's origination and development as an institution of higher learning. Our elected leaders in 1887 were not at all short-sighted in their vision or thought. Indeed, they realized that the future of our country and its democracy were totally dependent on the freedom of the people within it. Understanding the significance of this precept, our leaders recognized early the vital role of the University in perpetuating the essence of freedom in America. The University stands as a symbolic beacon, shedding light upon the contents of our constitutional rights. Inherent in the role of a university is its obligation to protect and cultivate the knowledge which makes freedom a reality. Freedoms we often take for granted, of speech, press, assembly and the right to vote are inextricably intertwined with the mission of this, and any other, true university.

Committed as we are to the furtherance of these goals, it would appear that by virtue of the University's financial holdings in South Africa, we are helping to strengthen the economic and military self sufficiency of the apartheid regime. Needless to say, the educational mission of State is totally contrary to the practice and policy of the laws of apartheid.

Across the United States, numerous universities and governmental entities have affirmed their abhorrence of South Africa's policies through the divestiture of financial holdings from companies engaged in business there. Our elected leaders in Congress have signalled their moral resistance through the implementation of strong economic sanctions as well. To uphold this University's mission and charge, it should also begin to undertake all necessary action to divorce itself from direct or indirect support of the South African Government through investment.

Placing the moral questions aside temporarily, it is important to note that divestiture can occur without damage to State's economic welfare or the productivity of its endowment portfolios. According to Massachusetts Governor

GARY MAUNEY

Guest Columnist

Michael Dukakis, "Timely and careful divestiture can result in net increases... in earnings." The experience of Massachusetts has been repeated by other states and universities as well. For example, the University of Wisconsin Trust Fund found that "divestment of South African related stocks has not hampered or limited our ability to find suitable resources of investment." This experience has been born out by studies conducted by Chemical Bank, the U.S. Trust Company, and Trinity Investment Management Corporation. Given these considerations, the evidence demonstrates that financial performance is not necessarily diminished by limiting the range of State's investments.

One concern about divestiture often expressed involves blacks who will be potentially unemployed as a result of the withdrawal of U.S. multinationals from South Africa. This argument, simply put, does not hold water. According to statistics compiled by an objective research company, only 0.8 percent of the economically active black South African work force is employed by U.S. firms. Out of that 0.8 percent, only 2 percent are in management level positions. The other 98 percent are in labor-intensive, low-paying jobs. Thus, corporate withdrawal would have little real impact on the vast majority of black South Africans.

We also have a historic example within our own country that might make this clearer. Remember, about 120 years ago when slaves in America were liberated? Almost all were left with questions regarding their livelihood and sustenance. This sacrifice was secondary to those who were freed, as they preferred even death to their previous bonded condition. Indeed, the nature of the human spirit has changed little in 120 years.

Hopefully, the goals of the University are equally steadfast. The voice of the student body, the Student Senate, has echoed these sentiments through its Nov. 12 call for full divestiture of State's holdings from South Africa. The University's chief governing body, the Board of Trustees, has agreed to take the matter under careful consideration. It is my hope that as State moves to reaffirm a commitment to its educational mission in the Centennial year, it will agree that supporting South Africa, in any respect, is totally contrary to all the principles it embodies.

Thanks for return of credit cards

When my husband and I spent last weekend with our son Paul at State, I lost my credit cards, and in between my frantic calls to cancel them, the phone rang. The caller was a graduate student who had found them at a flea market that afternoon. He checked the phone book to no avail, then checked the student directory and found my son's name. We set a meeting place, and within 15 minutes, my cards were returned to me. This young man would not accept a reward. I was overjoyed at his perseverance in trying to contact me, since my address was nowhere on the cards.

I wish to publicly thank Joe Romero of McMullan Circle in Raleigh for his honesty, integrity and kindness.

Wolfpack celebrates 'peachy' weekend

State ends regular season with win over Catamounts

By Katrina Waugh
Assistant Sports Editor

The Wolfpack seniors led their team to a 31-18 win over Western Carolina Saturday in their final game at Carter-Finley Stadium. Shortly after the game in the locker room, Coach Dick Sheridan and the team accepted a bid to the Peach Bowl, to be played Dec. 31 in Atlanta against Virginia Tech.

Senior Derrick Taylor ended the Catamounts' first scoring opportunity by picking off his sixth interception of the season on the Wolfpack's goal line.

State then opened the scoring, taking a three-point lead in the first quarter on a 35-yard field goal by senior Mike Cofer.

Western Carolina drove to State's 19-yard line, but was held to a 37-yard field goal by Kirk Roach. The score was tied 3-3 after one quarter.

The Catamounts returned to State territory again early in the second quarter, this time getting to the nine-yard line before settling for a field goal and a 6-3 lead with 4:30 remaining in the half.

Senior quarterback Erik Kramer then shot a 52-yard pass to Haywood Jeffires, also a senior, to spark a drive that ended with a two-yard touchdown run by Bobby Crumpler in the second quarter.

Outside linebacker Mark Smith intercepted a pass on State's 6-yard line to end Western Carolina's last drive of the half.

The Pack was up 10-6 at the half and never gave up the lead.

State scored three touchdowns in the second half to counter the Catamounts' second-half touchdown and two field goals.

State's first second-half score was a 27-yard shot to Jeffires late in the third quarter, which gave the Wolfpack a 17-9 lead.

State caught seven passes for a game leading 164 yards.

"Haywood had another outstanding game," coach Dick Sheridan said.

State's second score was a one-yard run by Crumpler, who had 77 yards rushing and two touchdowns at the beginning of the fourth quarter.

The third Wolfpack score of the half was a 12-yard pass to Danny Peebles, which gave Kramer two more school records. He now owns the single-season touchdown responsibility record with 19 and the career pass completion record.

Pack wins Tip-off on a Kenny Drummond longshot

By Tim Peeler
Sports Editor

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — With three regulars hampered by injuries, 17th-ranked State was considered a long shot going into Saturday's 86-84 win over ninth-ranked Navy in the Peachbasket Tip-off Classic at the Springfield Civic Center.

And that's exactly what the Wolfpack became — a bunch of long shots.

Taking advantage of NCAA's new three-point rule, coach Jim Valvano had his players gunning from beyond the 19-foot-9 inch line all day.

Valvano, an outspoken opponent of the new rule, manipulated it to perfection.

"We're always going to utilize the rules to the best of our ability," he said. "I can dislike a rule, but I'm still going to utilize it."

State made 10 of 20 three-point attempts, while Navy tried the shot only four times, hitting three.

One Wolfpacker who doesn't dislike the rule is senior forward Bennie Bolton, whose first three shots were from beyond the circle.

"Bennie's been waiting for this rule all his life," Valvano said.

Bolton made four of his 10 three-point attempts. Bolton and point guard Kenny Drummond led all Wolfpack scorers with 20 points each.

Drummond, a transfer from Sacramento (Calif.) Junior College continued to look a lot like Spud Webb, who keyed State's 12-point victory over Houston three years ago in the Wolfpack's first trip to the Tip-off Classic.

Drummond, who wears Webb's old jersey No. 4, made four of six three-pointers, including one with 14 remaining to win the game.

Drummond also is quite fond of the bonus field goal.

"I can hit that shot," the 5-10 guard said. "It's an easy shot to make. I mean, I'm wide open. It's just like hitting a layup."

Navy's coach Pete Herrman agreed, though he thought the shot was a little too easy.

"The three-point rule will make a big difference in college basketball this year," the first-year Navy coach said. "Five times on a three point goal I looked over and said, 'That was three points.'"

Home-town hero Vinny Del Negro, who grew up in Springfield and went to high school at nearby Suffield (Conn.) Academy, tossed in two of three three-pointers and added a career high 17 points to the Wolfpack effort.

State's "anytime offense" — Kenny, Bennie and Vinny — offset a record-setting performance by Navy's consensus All-America, David Robinson.

After being held to only 10 first-half points and three rebounds, Robinson took control in the second half, leading the Midshipmen back from a 16-point deficit to as much as a seven-point lead. During one stretch, Robinson scored 12 of 14 Navy points. He finished the game with a Tip-off record 36 points and 10 rebounds and was named the game's Most Valuable Player.

But Robinson wasn't around to work his miracles in the last minute and a half. He got his fifth foul with 1:23 remaining when he set a moving pick on State's Quentin Jackson.

After Jackson missed the front end of the one-and-one, Del Negro fouled Navy's Carey Manheart. He hit the first, but missed the second.

Wolfpack sophomore Chucky Brown grabbed the rebound, and State raced upcourt and called timeout with 36 left.

After working the ball around the perimeter, Drummond hit the game-winning shot with :13 left. Although both his feet were extremely close to the line, the officials signaled for a field goal and three points were tallied on the scoreboard.

Navy had a chance to win with :09 to go, but Charles Shackelford tipped and intercepted a Doug Wojcik pass and was intentionally fouled by Manheart.

Shackelford, who was used sparingly during the game because of a wrist injury, hit one of two free throws for the game's final margin, 86-84.

Shackelford started the game and was shuffled in and out of the lineup, alternating with freshman Avie Lester. The 6-10 sophomore center scored seven points and collected six rebounds, but hit only three of 12 shots.

"Certainly we were hampered by his inability to shoot," Valvano said. "It's kinda hard to play this game when you can't shoot."

Valvano played 12 different players during the game and only Bolton logged all 40 minutes.

The Pack, 1-0, now prepares to go to the Great Alaska Shoot-out at the end of the week.

Peach Bowl-bound Pack

By Katrina Waugh
Assistant Sports Editor

State's football players went into their Carter-Finley Stadium locker room Saturday with more on their minds than their 31-18 victory over Western Carolina.

In the locker room, they were greeted by representatives from the Peach Bowl, who offered the Wolfpack, now 8-21 on the season, an invitation to play in the Atlanta bowl against Virginia Tech, also 8-21, on Dec. 31 at 1 p.m.

The invitation was accepted by a chorus of wild cheers and the celebration began with a peach cake.

"A bowl game is a reward for a successful season," coach Dick Sheridan said. "I'm proud that we have something to show for our efforts."

"It gives you a sense of accomplishment, a good feeling," quarterback Erik Kramer said.

State hasn't been to a bowl game since 1978, when it defeated Pittsburgh, 30-17, in the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Fla.

This will be State's fourth Peach Bowl appearance. The Wolfpack defeated West Virginia 49-13 in 1972, but lost to the Mountaineers 13-10 three years later. State defeated Iowa State 24-14 in its last Peach Bowl appearance in 1977.

State's last visit to Atlanta was the scene of a 59-21 disaster at the hands of Georgia Tech.

"We're due in Atlanta," coach Dick Sheridan said. "We certainly hope we do better than we did last time."

The Wolfpack has not played Virginia Tech since 1964, when it lost to the Hokies, 28-19. Tech leads the overall series, 20-16-3.

"We are not a physically overwhelming team, so we must rely on the intangibles — closeness and togetherness," Sheridan said.

Avie Lester tries to block a shot in State's victory over Navy in the Tip-off Classic.

Wrestlers win third-place in Naval Academy Invitational

By Scott Deuel
Staff Writer

State's 12th ranked wrestling team traveled to Annapolis, Md., Saturday to compete in the Navy Invitational; the squad returned with both a third-place finish and a happy coach.

"Overall, I'm extremely pleased with the individual performances contributed by team members at this event," coach Bob Guzzo said.

Joe Cesari, who competes in the 142 lbs. class, led the way for the Wolfpack. He was named outstanding wrestler of the tournament after defeating nationally ranked Tom Dellorso of Navy in the semifinals. After a 3-3 regulation finish, Cesari won by criteria in overtime.

Cesari went on to defeat Tom Linginfeller of Lockhaven State, 5-0.

Guzzo said Cesari has a promising future in national competition. "I think Joey will definitely move up in the national rankings after his performance on Saturday," Guzzo said.

State placed two of its own in the 134 lbs. finals, with Deron Farrow defeating David Schneidermann. Schneidermann, ranked 10th nationally, defeated Navy's nationally ranked Bill Frasier in the semifinals and should move up in the rankings.

At 126 lbs., State's Mark Sadano defeated Joe Hoiss, 12-4, in the finals.

In the heavyweight division, Mike Lombardo lost to nationally fifth-ranked Roger Mellow, 5-3, but coach Guzzo praised his efforts. At the 118 lbs. class, David Cummings lost to John Hallow, 5-3, in the semis, but defeated Jeff Zapf of William and Mary, 5-2, to take third place in his field.

Guzzo said the Wolfpack performed well, but its placement in field does not indicate how State would do head-to-head with any of the teams.

"The format of taking two people up for a tournament like this can be misleading as far as team finishes go," Guzzo said.

The Pack was without the services of nationally second ranked Scott Turner and Norman Corkhill.

Dave Schneidermann

Duke downs Spikers Season ends in semifinals

By Chris Wilson
Staff Writer

Despite showing great determination and courage, the 1986 Wolfpack volleyball team ended its season Saturday night with a heartbreaking defeat at the hands of Duke.

Saturday night's semifinal match between the No. 2 seeded Wolfpack and the No. 3 seeded Blue Devils was exciting beyond all expectations.

Not only did the rivalry make this match special, the enthusiasm overall impression that these two ACC schools were not enemies but friendly rivals sharing a common goal — to win.

The match started with some great volleys between the two teams, but State took the early advantage in game one, 8-3.

Led by strong play from the only two seniors on the team, Johanna Fry and Stephanie Taylor, State went on to win the first game, 15-6.

The second game was a carbon copy of the first, except this time State and Duke played opposite roles. The Blue Devils jumped out early, taking a 9-3 lead. With Wolfpack errors and the Blue Devils hitting some nice shots, Duke went on to win 15-7.

In the third game, State regained the momentum. After falling behind, 6-3, Fry served four straight points for an 8-6 Wolfpack lead. Both teams played good, aggressive volleyball, and the rest of the game was close. Then with the Blue Devils ahead, 14-12, Melinda Dudley served four straight points for State. The Wolfpack won 16-14.

State ran out of steam in the fourth game. Playing an active game, the Devils stormed to an early 12-0 lead.

"It seemed we were extremely tired after the third game," State assistant coach Charlene Faglier said. "Our heads never quite seemed to be in the game after that."

The Blue Devils took the fourth game, 15-5.

The fifth game was a great one, especially from the fans' perspective. Duke came out quickly and went up 4-0, but a couple of Taylor slams for the Wolfpack cut the lead to 4-2. Duke scored the next four points and the count was 8-2 when the teams switched ends of the court. Not to be denied, State fought back to take a 9-8 lead. Duke then got some breaks and momentum switched back to the Blue Devils in the final moments of the match, enabling Duke to take a 15-12 win.

Despite the loss, Faglier was by no means disappointed with her team's play. "The girls played their hearts out," Faglier said. "You've got to credit Duke for having a great game."

"The Pack played extremely well at times, but at other times made crucial errors."

"We started out really strong, but we just made too many errors at critical points in the match," Faglier said. "Duke hit and blocked a little better, so it wasn't that we played bad. Duke just had a great match."

State was led by Fry and Taylor. Fry played exceptional defense with 30 digs. Taylor led the Pack with 25 kills.

The Wolfpack advanced to the semifinal round by defeating Wake Forest in straight games Friday night.

Even though State still has a chance for an at-large bid for the NCAA tournament, its chances for continuing to play this season are slim.

State will probably end its season with its current 19-12 record.
