Tulip gardening in winter?

How to keep your bulbs blooming year after year

If you want to tiptoe through your tulips spring after spring, you must first drag your feet away from the fire in February and tramp outdoors to fertilize the developing bulbs, according to a State horticultural nutritionist.

Paul Nelson, who for seven years has experimented with ways to grow tulips as perennials, has plants that come up sgain year after year.

Southern gardeners have long thought that tulips do well in warm elimates for only one season of intoom, but researchers at State have developed a three-point formula for producing perennial

Investigators watched the tulip bulb through its whole life cycle of planting, dormancy, growth, flow-ering and the final state of trans-ferring nutrients from the roots, stalk and leaves to build a new

They found that within 48 hours ter the roots come out, the bulb gins to take up nutrients and ver stops until after flowering.

never stops until after flowering.

To maintain the same number of bioms the second year, Nelson sad, the bulb must replace itself with one equal rize. Additionally, the original bulb must produce several daughter bulbs of smaller size. This bulb bullding requires an increased accumulation of nutrients.

Although phosphorous, potassion and calcium are necessary patrients, nitrogen is the most important nutrient gardeners must supply. Fertilizing at planting lusing a common fertilizer such as 8-88 will nourish the bulb until its stalk breaks through the ground.

This usually occurs in February the Raleigh area, a time when no is thinking about the garden, ison said. The second application tertilizer will earry the bulb until tulip blooms.

The gardener who wants to critize only once can use a suggerlasting fertilizer such as lab Booster, a product developed by commercial firms from data sollected from this project at State. Lath. Booster is a slow-release critizer that can be used only in as fall.

After the tulip blooms, it is apportant not to fertilize again sati fall. The bulk does not take up antrients in the summer between lowering and planting time. Nurogen can build up in the soil which increases disease. Major bulb loss is a the result of insease, not high temperatures." Nelson said. He opposes digging bulbs during for their dormant period for this reason. Digging, he and, spreads fungus spores in the soil storage often mixes healthy bulbs with diseased ones.

Nelson's research, which was financed by Dutch bulb companies oncerned about the problems their bulbs were having in the Southeast, has challenged tradi-tional tulip lore.

Applying the right kind and amount of fertilizer at the right time is only one of the three requirements for growing tulips and perennials in this area. The other two are site preparation and cultivar, or variety selection.

Nelson grew tulips in open plots of 25 bulbs to simulate home gardening conditions. His first research was destroyed because of poor drainage. Treparing the site is the single most important factor in getting bulbs to survive the climate, 'he said.

Because drainage is critical,

Nelson suggests planting on a slope it possible. Without adequate drainage and aeration, water builds ap around the roots and blocks the build's oxygen consumption and carbon dioxide escape.

Nelson recommends a deep, well-drained loam or sandy soil that requires no alteration. Poorly drained elay soils require the addition of compost, composted bork, peat moss or other material to make the soil more porous.

Nelson suggests adding organic materials in amounts up to one-third the volume of soil in the bed, which should be dug 12 inches deep, "Remember, the roots grow down from a build planted six unches deep," Nelson said. If the thought of this makes your back ache, the answer may be raised bed.

rhought of this makes your back ache, the answer may be raised bed, on experimented with tulip nativars in Wilmington, Raleigh and Asheville. By crossing the state, he was able to duplicate climatic zones from New Jersey to Florida.

Three trial plantings tested 159 small respectively. The continuars of tulips, Soil was mechanically tilled, and all bedswere mulched year round with pine needles. Bulbs were fertilized, and plants were sprayed as needed.

Of the 159 varieties tested, only about a third were considered suitable for this area. Bulbs were rated according to the size and number of plants renewed from each original bulb as well as the average number of flowers permaning bulb cluster. Recommended cultivars are classified by color, height and time of bloom.

Some of Nelson's favorite varieties, found to be good in all three plant hardiness zones, are Red Oxford and Golden Oxford, the Apeldorn series (yellow, red., and striped). Parade (red with yellow clover, and Spring-Song fred with white edge). These cultivars flower at mid-season. The early-flowering Emperor series is also good in all three zones.

Student activists who fight for changes in their own community are often overshadowed by the work of national organizations. The Coalition for Alternatives to Shearon Harris (CASH), however, is attempting to incorporate student power in its cause.

Although Campus CASH is only a few months old, CASH is only a few months old, CASH has been in existence on the statewide level for 10 years. Campus CASH resulted from a meeting in Harrelson Hall concerning the controversial nuclear power plant located southwest of Raleigh. Twelve students were inspired to form a campus chapter after hearing presentations by a physicist, a lawyer and a sociologist. The group now meets every Monday at 7 p.m. in Room 147 Harrelson.

One original goal of the group was to prevent the loading of nuclear fuel into the plant's reactors.

CASH had hoped to pressure Carolina Power & Light CP&L), the utility company that built Shearon Harris, to convert it to a non nuclear facility such as a coal-fired plant or close the plant. In their effort, the group lobbied the Wake County Board of Commissioners and other local government bodies to withdraw from the evacuation plan until a safer alternative source of energy could be studied.

Plans have changed, however, now that the fuel has been loaded in the plant. This has caused the group to redouble its efforts to stress energy efficiency, hoping that lower power usage will show the industry that the plant is not needed.

Fleischmann says he resents the fact that North Carolinians "have to swallow a plant now because of a decision made 10 to 15 years ago."

He also notes that electrical engineers and scientists have come together and found new methods of energy efficiency.

"One study done by Elon College professors has found that CP&L can make more money with an aggressive energy effi-ciency policy than through the nuclear facility." Fleischmann said.

CASH is pushing for a public hearing on energy efficiency. They call this tactic one of using "nega-watts" instead of "mega-watts."

The album has already produced several hits, including "Modern Woman," which is about today's liberated woman as viewed by an "old fasioned guy."

Another hit off the album, "A Matter of Trust," is slightly closer to the older Billy Joel music. It is a well-written song about the relationship between two people and how their relationship will survive because of the trust involved.

Also on the album are several slower ballads, such as "This is the Time" and "Temptation". In "Temptation" the singer deals with his obsession with his girlfriend.

There are also two duets with other noted musicians. The first is "Baby Grand" in which Joel shares vocal time with another piano man, Ray Charles.

The other duet is with pop's punkish princess Cyndi Lauper in "Code of Silence." This song has nothing to do with the Chuck Norris movie of the same name.

Joel also makes several comments about society. In "Running on Ice," Joel talks about the frustration involved in today's society and how people are always in such a rush but hardly seem to go anywhere in this materialistic society.

Another social commentary can be seen in "Getting Closer." Joel criticizes the record industry in a manner similar to that used in his old song. "The final song on the album is "Big Man on Mulberry Street," which was recently featured in an episode of "Moonlighting".

All in all, the album is good, but not great. Some of the songs live up to Joel's potential, while others just seem to lack that spark to make them stand on their own.

Residence hall rooms need maintenance

Students can expect to pay a higher price for the privilege of living on campus next year.

The State fiscal year '87 proposed budget for housing operations and the physical plant calls for an increase of $28 in double com rates.

This doesn't sound like much, but coupled with actual and projected increases up until 1987, housing fees will have increased $117 in three short years. That's 23.4 percent, an average annual increase of 7.8 percent per person. Inflation has been running at less than five percent a year for a good while now.

Single-room rates will have increased $126, with a yearly increase averaging a little over 7 percent per person.

Why does the Department of Housing and Residence Life need all this money?
According to the proposal, increases are justified in terms of "wages, utilities, and fixed costs. Additionally, student requests for improved maintenance and facilities require modest increases in residence halls' rates."

Tomorrow we will celebrate Thanksgiving, one of the three American holidays that is celebrated by all the public. But what other observance carries the same emotional appeal, the same customs and traditions that is found with Thanksgiving?

same emotions that is found with Thanksgiving?

Memorial and Labor days are looked upon more as the start and end of summer vacation than any honorary significance. And any person who has slaved for a department store can tell stories about the "holiday" sales that are an entrenched tradition at these times.

Veteran's Day is another day with little appeal. Formerly known as Armistice Day, marking the end of WWI, now has been designated as a national observance of what else — veterans. No denigration is meant here, only that this day has considerably less public appeal compared to Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving is different. It has become one of those select few holidays that

The customs and traditions of Thanksgiving are rooted in our childhood.
Everyone can recall the elementary school

Most everyone has fond personal memories associated with Thanksgiving. All of this is a result of one group of men and women. English settlers intent solely on finding a new place to worship as they wished.

Sure there were other colonists who came before them. But would the average person know that the Lost Colony of Roanoke Island was the first attempt to colonize America? Or that Jamestown, Va. was the first permanent English settlement?

But people could tell you that the Mayllower was the ship which carried the Polgrims across the Atlantic and that they first set foot on America at Plymouth Rock. The reason is that Thanksgiving stirs these kinds of memories in everyone's mind.

Even now, a significant percentage of the students have left school already. They've started their vacations earlier today or last night. But unlike spring break or Labor Day weekend, everyone will be heading back to their families. So kiss school goodbye and saddle up

Analytic vs. relational education

WASHINGTON — A number of school systems, reluctantly conceding a consistent achievement gap between black and-white students, have committed themselves (and, in some cases, significant dollars) to closing the gap. It is a commendable attitude, an example of America's can-do spirit. But is it likely to produce results?

A good deal depends on the nature of the racial gap. Is it really a socio-economic gap revealing only the unsurprising factors that predispose white children toward academic, secretion? Or are their early learning style is the key, a theory she explores in her book Black Children: Their Roots, Culture, and Learning Styles. She key, a theory she explores in her book Black Children: Their Roots, Culture, and Learning Styles is the key, a theory she explores in her book Black Children: Their Roots, Culture, and Learning Styles. And although she freely acknowledges that she has not discovered final answers, she believes that enough is known to warrant serious research into the question.

"I have written a book," she says, "to stimulate a different conversation and. I hope, a different research orientation toward the education of black children."

She begins with two assumptions, one unarguable and one certain to prove controversial. The first is that black children whatever their cultural differences, "must achieve competency in mastering the tools of this culture if they are to survive." The second is that there survives in melting-pot America a distinct Africa-rooted black culture whose neglect by educators steeped in the European traditions predisposes black youngsters to academic underachievement.

Hale-Benson, an associate professor of early childhood education at Cleveland State University, contends (she cites and "woofing," a vacually reduce the life work of Rosalie Cohen) that the African tradition, with its stress on family and other personal relationships, produces a "relational" style of processing information, a style that features approximation, a style that features approximation, a sty

"The most intelligent relational pupils score the worst of all. Their ability to reach higher levels of abstraction through relational pathways takes them farther away from the higher levels of abstraction reached through analytic pathwavas.

"Highly intelligent high-relational pupils were found, in fact, to communicate best with the demands of the school on the concrete level. It appears, thorefore, that given concrete settings with intelligence held constant, high-relational pupils can compete with analytic ones. It is only when high levels of analytic abstraction are required that their ability to compete is inhibited.

Nor is it only in learning and testing that Compete is inhibited.

Nor is it only in learning and testing that the cultural differences work to the disadvantage of blacks, Hale-Benson believes. Black children, boys in particular, are more likely than whites to be labeled "hyperactive" or "aggressive" because white teachers don't understand the difference between verbal "fighting" and "woofing," a verbal ritual that may actually reduce the likelihood of a fight.

In adultion, teachers may un-

In addition, teachers may un-derestimate the need for young black children to be touched and held and given frequent compliments and praise, all features of the African child-rearing style.

Hale-Benson, who is black, argues that nee black children grow up in a distinct culture, they require "an educational system that recognizes their strengths, their abilities and their culture, and that incorporates them into the learning process." It all sounds reasonable.

But even if the research she urges proves her correct, prodigious problems will remain. Surely a white-dominant society (or school system) cannot be expected to shift to a teaching style that favors black children at the expense of whites. Is it possible for a teacher to employ both styles in a single classroom? Should black children — be assigned to separate classrooms, perhaps with black teachers?

In short, is the logical outcome of her heads the strengths and the strengths are similar to the strengths and the strengths are strengths.

In short, is the logical outcome of her theory a return to separate-but-equal education?

Men harriers place twelfth in NCAA meet

The State men's cross country cam placed 12th in the NCAA Cross Country Championships held it the University of Arizona in Luson. Az. on Monday.

Arkansas won the men's national title with a total of 69 points, well ahead of runner-up darmouth at 141. State, the ACC champion, finished with 299.

Senior Andy Herr led the Wolf-pack, which finished ninth in last year's national championships, with a time of 31:49 and a 39th place finish over the 10,000-meter course. Other top finishers for State included sophomore Steve Brown at 32:07 and 53rd place, freshman Bob Henes at 32:44 and 95th place, and 96th place and senior Ricky Wallace at 32:57 and 111th place.

Aaron Ramirez of host Arizona won the individual championship with a time of 30:28. Ramirez raced to the title when Arkansas' Joe revent.

The Wolfpack women finished third in the nation last year, with then-freshman Suzie Tuffey winning the individual national title.

Texas defeated defending champion Wisconsin for the women's team title. Texas finished just two points ahead of the Badgers, 82-64.

Angela Chalmers of Northern Arizona took the individual women's title in a time of 16:53 for 5,000 meters.

Clemson placed fifth in the women's competition with 17; points, and the Tigers' Uts Jamrozy finished fourth individually with a time of 17:11. Virginia' Patty Matava finished 18th at 12:27, and Wake Forest's Karer Dunn was 38th at 18:20.

Men cagers return to Alaskan Shootout

Wolfpack basketball coach Jim Valvano began this season by noticing how much his current, team resembles teams past. He hopes to keep that resemblance intact when he and his 17th-ranked Wolfpack travel to Anchorage. Alaska, Friday for the Great Haska Shootout.

The Wolfpack will face Texas in the first round of the tourney. Other teams participating are derinding national champion Louisville, Washington, Iowa, Northeastern, Utah State, Texas and host Alaska-Anchorage.
State's first game will begin at 7 p.m. EST and will be carried nationally on ESPN.

"This tournament is always a challenge because of the long travel time and the fact that you have to play on three successive days," said Valvano, whose team is 1-0 after upsetting inth-ranked Navy in the Tip-off Classic. "Fatigue can be a real factor. As a coach, you go in expecting to play more people so

Sheridan, players earn all-conference honors

The Wolfpack football team and its coach are getting recognition for this season's accomplishments.

Monday, first-year coach Dick Sheridan was named ACC Coach-of-the-Year by The Associated Press. Sheridan was named national Division I-AA Coach-of-the-Year while at Furman last year.

Sheridan turned a three-time 3-8 team into bowl contenders with an 8-21 record. Under Sheridan's guidance, State finished second in the ACC, gained a berth in the Peach Bowl on New Year's Eve in Atlanta and is currently ranked 19th in the AP poll.

"Twelve weeks ago, I guess we wouldn't have believed we'd be in this position." Sheridan said: "We're not a physically overwhelming team, but we have a great amount of intensity and always get a tremendous effort from our players. We have a special togetherness, which makes up for our lack of size and strength." "It's obvious that Coach Sheridan is the reason for our success," said quarterback Erik Kramer, who was also recognized for his accomplishments. "Hopefully, we've started something at State by going to a bowl, showing good sportsmanship and being a class organization."

This year's squad was only the eighth team in Wolfpack history to mark up eight or more wins State finished in the ACC's top two for the first time since 1979, when the Pack shared the conference title.

Tuesday, Kramer was named player-of-the-year by the Atlantic Coast Sportswriters Association and all-ACC by AP.

and all ACC by AP.

Kramer broke 11 school records this year, including a career total of 4,602 yards and 30 touchdown passes after playing only two years for the Wolfpack. He holds the school record for touchdown responsibility with 19, including the 33 yard touchdown pass to Lamy Peebles after the time had expired to give the Wolfpack a 23-22 win over South Carolina.

"I'm not the cause of us going to a bowl," Kramer said. "I was here last year and we didn't come near to getting a bid."

Wide receiver Nasrallah

Wide receiver Nasrallah Worthen, place kicker Mike Cofer and punter Kelly Hollodick were also honored as all-conference players by both the ACSWA and the AP.

Worthen led the team in pass receptions with 41 and in receiving yardage with 688. He also had four touchdown receptions, including a game-winning 37-yarder against North Carolina. He broke a school record for receiving yardage with 187 yards in State's 28-16 win over Maryland.

Cofer led the team in scoring

Maryland.

Cofer led the team in scoring with 72 points this season. He converted 33 of 35 PAT attempts and made 13 of 17 field goal tries.

Cofer kicked a 49-yard field goal with 155 remaining to tie Pitt and virginia.

12th-ranked Wrestlers host Oregon State

Usually Coach Bob Guzzo likes his undefeated 2-0 Wolfpack wrestling squad to get a few more matches under its belt before it gets into the tougher part of the schedule.

Guzzo's young team, ranked 12th nationally by the Amateur Wrestling News, must :rature in a hurry this season. With the season barely underway, State is already preparing to face perennial Top 20 contender Oregon State in Reynolds Coliseum Sunday at 1 p.m. Guzzo said he likes to use the that against the Beavers.

"Usually, we don't get into the stronger part of our schedule until later in December," Guzzo said.
"This is what we really consider kind of a preseason match where we usually like to use a lot of freshmen.
"Dregon State is an accellant.

"Oregon State is an excellent team. Although they aren't in the top 20 now, they'll be there by season's end."

season's end."

The Wolfpack is coming off a third-place finish in a field of nine in last Saturday's Navy Invitational Meet in Annapolis. Md. Although Navy placed first in the meet, Guzzo said State's finish in the tournament wasn't indicative of his squad's talent.

Because of the number of teams in the tournament and his desire to let his freshmen gain experience. Guzzo said there was no way he could wrestle his best athletes against every squad State faced. Guzzo said the Navy Invitational had no bearing on the Pack's overall record and that he and the NCAA place more emphasis on the team's performance in dual meets.

The Wolfpack was missing perhaps its best athlete during the Navy Invitational — Scott Turner, nationally second-ranked and all-America at 158 pounds. Turner was held out last Saturday due to a knee problem but will be available against the Beavers Sunday in what Guzzo believes will be the headliner matchup.

Sate's starting lineup will con-sist of David Cummings (118 lbs.), Marc Sodano (126), David Schneiderman or Darrin Farrow (134), Steve Cesari (142), Bill Hershey (150), Turner (158, Mike Lantz (167), Norm Corkhill (177), Mike Baker (199) and Mike Lom-bardo (HWT). That probably will be the opening lineup for most of the season.

The Beavers open their season Friday against 19th ranked Maryland before coming to Raleigh on Sunday. The Wolfpack has defeated Oregon State the past two seasons in Reynolds Coliseum by 23-14 and 23-17 scores.

ACC honors Spikers

Coach and three players named all-conference

After suffering a disappointing loss to the Duke Blue Devils in Saturday night's semifinal rou. of the ACC Tournament, the Wolfpack volleyball team received some good news.

received some good news.

Three Wolfpack players were selected to the 12 member all conference team by the ACC coaches. State's only two seniors. Johanna Fry and Stephanie Taylor, were selected to the first team, while sophomore Patty Lake was placed on the second team. Wolfpack head coach Judy Martino was also selected as ACC Coach of the Year for the second year in a row.

Taylor was a first-team selection last year and Fry was on the second team.

Fry, a 5-8 senior from Raleigh, led the league in serving with 101 aces. She also was second in the ACC with a hitting percentage of .302 and sixth in digs. with 366.

with 366.

"Johanna is just a total, all-around player," Martino said. "She's quick as a cat, and her serve is devastating, She's just very competitive."

Taylor, a 61- offensive hitter from Silver Springs, Md., led the conference with 430 kills.

"Stephanie did just a great job blocking and worked extremely hard on defense," Martino said. "She also exemplified great leadership for us."

Lake, a 6-0 sophomore from St. Paul, Minnesota, was second in the ACC with 90 aces.

"For Patty, it was exceptional getting voted to the all-conference team as a sophomore," Martino said. "She's just a very good player. We'll look forward to a lot good things coming from her in the future."

Martino, in her fourth year at the helm of the Wolfpack volleyball program, was surprised at being selected coach of the year for the second time in as many years.

Martino led the Pack to a second-place finish in the egular season ACC chase with a 6-1 league mark. Her eam finished the season with a 19-12 record.

Martino said her staff and team should get just as much credit for the honor as she did.

"We have a great staff here," she said. "They make me look good, as well as the team. We had a great season and I appreciate the effort from everybody who contributed."

Women cagers travel to Central Florida

The Wolfpack women's basket-ball team opens its season this weekend in the Central Florida Tournament, held in Orlando, Fla. The two-day tournament begins when Central Florida squares off against Fairfield Friday night at 7 n m. Coach Kay Yow will then lead her Wolfpack against Western Michigan in the 9 p.m. contest. The two winners will play Saturday for the championship and the two losers will play the consolation vame.

two losers will play the consolation game.

This will be the first time State has competed against any of these opponents. Michigan returns all live starters from a team that went 12-15 last year. The Broncos are led by a pair of senior guards, Shelly Kiare and Tracey Wells. The tandem combined for nearly 30 points a game last year.

Klare led the team in scoring with 16.8 points a game and Wells averaged over 12 points a game.

Host Central Florida returns only one starter from last year's 13-15 squad, guard Julie Cardinale, who averaged 13 points a game.

For Fairfield, another team that returns all five of its starters from the 1985-86 club, Dana Pellegrano is the top player. The 5-6 guard scored 15 points a game last year for the 15-14 Lady Stags.

For Yow's Wolfpack, all-ACC center Trena Trice returns, along with two starters from last year. State collected an 18-11 slate in 1985-86 and was invited to the NCAA tournament. The Pack lost in the first round to Penn State, 63-59.

63.59. Trice firmly establishes the Wolfpack's pivot, averaging almost 19 points and 10 rebounds a game last year. The 6-3 senior from Chesapeake, Va., also scored over 20 points in 13 of the Wolfpack's contests.

Yow is most concerned about her point guard position. Carla Hillman and Debbie Bertrand, who both got lots of action last year, return to the point, but both need improvement.

"Neither produced consistently last year," Yow said. "Both had flashes of brilliance, but they just weren't as consistent as we'd like for our point guard to be."

Other positions are still up in the air.

At forward, Yow has the services of seniors Angela Daye and Anmarie Treadway. Daye started in 25 games last year and averaged 9.9 points and 6.7 rebounds per outing.

outing.

Treadway was the first player off the bench and dished in nearly seven points a gam.

The Wolfpack opens its home season next Thursday night against South Carolina at 7:30 p.m. in Reynolds Coliseum.
